The Government and Churches vs. the Lottery.

The infamous proceedings in the North Dakota Senate over the lottery question has aroused deeper feelings on the subject than ever before, and will result in improved anti-lottery laws. Senator Sawyer has introduced a bill in the United States Senate to amend the revised statutes regarding lotteries. It provides that no letter or circular advertising lotteries and so-called gift enterprises, for the distribution of money by chance, shall be sent through the mails. Persons guilty of using the mails for this purpose are subject to fine. The postmaster-general is charged to use his influence by instructing the postmasters at the towns to which registered letters are sent in answer to such advertisements to return them marked "fraudulent." This is well, but it hardly goes to the heart of the evil. Our churches are largely responsible for the growth of the gambling spirit. The effort to raise money for church and benevolent purposes by fairs and various kinds of entertainments has lowered the tone of Christian giving and cultivated the spirit which finds scope in lottery and gift enterprises. The pastors and no others can put an end to this evil.—Advance.

We call special attention to that last sentence. It is the echo of what a prominent man in Louisiana said not long since. His words were: "The churches alone can save us from the Lottery." If that is true, the churches have a fearful task. Will they perform it? It depends upon the pastors.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

The only reliable vegetable substitute for calomel, which acts on the liver, blood, kidneys and stomach, and best anti-bilious purgative is Maguire's Cundurango. Endorsed by Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia; Rev. McNally, of St. Louis, and a host of prominent people.

Children always Enjoy It.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk. Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season.

Beware of substitutions and imitations.

LIFE'S HISTORY

Its Smiles and Tears. Such is the course of life, made up of sunshine and gloom, gladness and sorrow, riches and poverty, health and disease. We may dispel the gloom, banish the sorrow and gain riches; but sickness will overtake us, sooner or later. Yet, happily, that enemy can be vanquished; pains and aches can be relieved; there is a balm for every wound, and solence has placed it within the reach of all. There is no discovery that has proven so great a blessing as Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills. In malarial regions, where Fever and Ague, Bilious Diseases and ailments incident to a deranged liver prevail, they have proven an ineatimable boon, as a hundred thousand living witnesses testify.

"GRACE FOR GRACE."
(John i, 16.)

Lord, thou hast promised grace for grace
To all who daily seek thy face:
To them who have, thou givest more
Out of thy vast, exhaustless store.

Each step we take but gathers strength
For further progress, till, at length,
With ease the highest steeps we gain,
And count the mountain but a plain.

Who watch, and pray, and work each hour
Receive new life and added power—
Power fresh victories to win
Over the world, and self, and sin.

Help us, O Lord, that we may grow
In grace as thou dost grace bestow;
And still thy richer gifts repeat
Till grace in glory is complete.

Lay Representation.

BY REV. S. S. KEENER.

The General Conference of 1890 will be the sixth in which laymen have participated, and the church has been strangely silent on lay representation ever since its inauguration. There has been some praise of this advance movement, but it has not been an unparalleled success. It has done the laymen good, as many as would avail themselves of the opportunities thus opened to them. The law has rushed much raw material into our legislative Conference, and usually these untried laymen are a dead weight for two weeks of the General Conference session. The third week they begin to learn the duties devolving upon them, and leave for home at the opening of the fourth week. The lay delegates vary more than the clerical. The members of the General Conference of 1890 will have fully two-thirds new laymen who have never attended the General Conference. Lay representation has come to stay; but should it, in justice to the church, to the ministry, be always continued upon its present basis, and be operated as at present? Is there any equity in 1,088 members of an Annual Conference electing as many delegates in our General Conference as 4,000 ministers?—or should one thousand and eighty-eight members be allowed the same power in legislation as four thousand nine hundred? As it now is, every lay member of an Annual Conference is equal to four ministerial votes. Sometimes it is worse than even this, when but few laymen attend the session when the delegates are elected to the General Conference. In the South Carolina Conference twenty-one laymen elected six delegates on the first ballot, and one hundred and fifty-seven ministers elected six clerical delegates; hence each layman was equal to seven preachers and a half, or every layman's vote is equal to seven clerical votes. If the lay representation at our Annual Conferences were punctual in attendance, and all came, then even the system would be unfair; but to have half absent, then those who do come fix up a ticket outside and then come in and vote it through, is doubly unjust. In some Conferences the electioneering among the laymen is just shameful. In a certain Conference one man openly asked a majority of those present to vote for him. In most cases you will find that none are elected except those present at the Conference when the vote is taken. If a good man is absent, his election is hopeless. Not only is this electioneering visible in the Annual Conferences; but in the General Conference the same is true; and one layman will work through the whole Conference for a certain man for Bishop. These tricks of the politician and the caucus are deplorable in a body who are purely ecclesiastical. Bishops can be elected on mere location or pet hobbies, such as woman suffrage, temperance, "second blessing," or some other issue that should not be a controlling reason. So soon as our church begins to elect men to her high offices because they are the exponents of certain views or certain sections of our Methodism, then disintegration commences, and her power will pass away. The election of a vast number of untried laymen to the General Conference, by from fifteen to thirty laymen at our Annual Conferences, weakens that body and makes its work very immature. There are hobby-riders in every General Conference who are very dangerous. Then those who think the church is deteriorating, and something radical must be done to save it, for both of these classes the raw laymen, full of their ability, is an available force easily captured and wielded. All class legislation is very attractive to the uninitiated, and seems to be the only successful way of attacking sin; but is the most dangerous to any ecclesiastical body. To this species of work how easily this body of laymen can be drawn! But the most dangerous legislation is that which is territorial, has only one portion of the wide field in view, and can not be advantageous to another portion of our broad parish. Who more readily acquiesce in this legislation than the men who frequently do not know the wants of their own Conferences—who are unacquainted with the needs of Methodism in their own State? The basis of the representation, as it now exists, is irregular and variable. Of the nine Conferences which elect five delegates, four are supposed to select these from thirty-six lay members; three are chosen from 32, one from 44, one from 40. The two Conferences which elect 7 delegates have each 40 laymen; the two which elect 8 delegates have 48 and 52 lay members. One Conference elects 4 out of 28 lay members, another 4 out of 32, and another 4 out of 24. There are four Conferences which elect 2 delegates from 20 lay members, three elect 2 from 24, and one 2 from 16. All those which send 3 delegates elect them from 24 lay members. Montana Conference alone has equal representation, as 8 preachers elect one clerical delegate, and 8 laymen elect one lay delegate.

If the laymen represent anything, it is the church membership, not the members of the Annual Conferences; hence the basis of representation should be the church members in each Annual Conference. If such was the law, the Tennessee Conference would not have the same voice in the General Conference as South Carolina, as there is over nine thousand more members in the latter Conference. So with the Texas Conference. It is six thousand less than the Arkansas and Louisiana Conferences; yet has the same representation in the General Conference. The basis of all lay representation should be the membership; say one lay delegate for every twelve thousand members. Let them be elected as at present, but upon the above basis. The clerical delegates are the representatives and exponents of the members of each Annual Conference; hence should be elected on the basis of the members of that body; but the laymen are in no sense such representatives, and only represent the membership in the churches. Laymen should represent the membership, the people, not the preachers; hence the basis of the representation should be the church membership, not the clerical members of a Conference. Then let the paragraph 33 be changed so as to read:

ART. 1. The General Conference shall be composed of one clerical member for every thirty-six members of each Annual Conference, and one lay member for every twelve thousand members of each Annual Conference.

The Annual Conference is a very strange body, neither a composite, nor yet two separate bodies sitting together, for the vote is separate on several things; yet the basis of representation is the same in the General Conference, though the vote is separate and the minority has equal power with the majority—two distinct and separate and widely different elements representing the same thing. Either let all the delegates be elected by laymen and ministers voting together as a single body, and electing a certain man from each class, or change the basis of representation for the laymen. Either would be a vast improvement on the present unfair law.

Permanent Possessions.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

Only that is ours, truly, which is utilized by us in service of our kind. The highest profit ever reaped by one on his own behalf is through that expended, in effort or in means, from motive highest, in aid of those who need; and it is by thus expending what is ours that it becomes our own forever. This is the philosophy and the method of "laying up for ourselves treasures in heaven," beyond the reach of rot or rust. Just upon this single pivot of ultimate benevolence may we be balanced—may we poise—the centre of our conscious being resting upon the perpendicular principle of love to others, which is the equivalent of our love to self. There is no command to love another better than we love ourself, as there is no possibility of any such performance. We may not love God better than we love ourself; and self-love, which is innate, constitutional and indestructible, is interpretation to us of the all-obliging principle upon which, or according to which, we are to regulate ourselves in our relations to those objective from us, finite and infinite. Self-love is the initial of all other loves; it is, potentially or genuinely, the qualification for religious obedience and consequent religious experience. It is a love-life to which we are ordained, and for which we are organically constituted and relationally incorporate with that kingdom, in the unity of which there is infinite variety of personality; innumerable personal phenomena varying the expression of the divine thought—varying the articulation of the divine love. It is all concrete!—all phenomenal! There isn't an abstraction in the universe. No one can love a principle as an abstraction. No; nor a mere quality. He can alone love persons. I do not love justice, or mercy, or charity. I love the just, the merciful, the charitable.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son," etc. Did he love the world better than he did his Son? Hardly; for in giving his Son he did as much for him as he did for and to those upon whom his Son was bestowed. That realization Christ had of the Father having "committed all things unto him, and that he came from God and went to God" (John xiii. 3), was qualification for endurance in Gethsemane and on Calvary. Christ "saw of the travail of his soul, and was satisfied." It was "for the joy that was set before him he endured the cross, despising the shame." So, in his case there was no super-sublimated, transcendental somewhat, out of all measures and modes of meaning apprehensible by us, that even his love operated. In degree it was transcendently above ours; but it was identically the same in kind; or, rather, should I put it, it was the one all-qualifying love he had in common with the Father, and that we have in common with him and with one another.

What I've said with regard to making our own the material means we have, suggests the reverse of this. If we do not thus wield it in promotion, benevolently, of the welfare and happiness of those to whom we are obliged through their dependence or necessity, we become dominated by it; so that, instead of our having fortune, misfortune has us. How many are slaves to what they fancy theirs! Yea, and how they are hardened! How they become soured! They are invariably tyrannical over such as are in their power, and they are, in the same degree, pusillanimously obsequious toward those above them; supercilious toward those from whom no gain or advantage may be had, and servilantly sycophantic in attentions to those whose patronage they court. Despicable is the word descriptive of such a conditioning of mind and heart and spirit. There is no other alternative; we must make ours what we win, by wielding it wisely toward the welfare of others, or it reacts by inevitable recoil upon our own being, dwarfing and deforming us so as to make our life and character a travesty upon the manhood or womanhood God's law of life, liberty and love develops in such as own its sway. One or other of the two results transpires; there ensues a rust or a rot. Those who yield to pleasure in indulgences, licentious, become putrid; those who make a practice of the moralities, in cunning of cupidity, cumulating capital by craft, crystallize in encompassment of what is as foul as manner and word and deed of the profligate and debauched. When the fires of judgments thaw the icebergs, there is then evidence as strong of putrefaction as in case of those whose "sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment." "Go to, ye rich men!—weep and howl for the miseries that are coming upon you! Your gold and silver is cankered: . . . the rust of them shall eat your flesh as it were fire!" (James v, 2.) So the figure of rust in the case of the wrongfully rich is scriptural. What rot is to flesh, rust is to metal. Natures in which mingle the choicest elements, and that are most delicately wrought and finely strung; in order to yielding ravishingly to the ear of humanity tones in melody and harmony that would inspire and invigorate, are eaten into stealthily by this rust—the finest springs of thought and sentiment destroyed; so that a mechanism intended to mark off to the eye of an inquiring world progressive degrees in evolution of that wisdom which is to ultimate in man's complete affranchisement, fail to vulgar uses or misuses in pitiable disgrace. And what is true of lust for gold is true of passion for renown, applause, preferment and control. When another's legitimately conferred honor is not realized by me to be my honor, I am abnormal from good and truth, from the love which alone lifts us above the coarser converse and commerce of the world into communion with those who are of the kingdom. Those of whom Paul wrote, "And they glorified God in me" (Gal. i, 24), attested therein that they themselves were partners, equal with the apostle, in the glory thus reflected. The waters that mirror the moon or rainbow clearly are as clean as is the firmament through which they shine. Then is there a law of life available to us, and to which we are available—yea, a law of life with which we are incorporate, which is a power that makes not only all we own to become ours perpetually, but which possesses us of others, so that we realize them as variations in objective form of our own being, heightening to us and intensifying the consciousness wherehy we know we are. As there is multiplied to us thus—recapitulated by cognizance of others—varied realizations of our own selves, the horizon of experience widens, and we feel the life we have to be the equivalent of all life. Through experience of this life, which is love, we are enriched with all treasure of the universe, becoming, in ourselves, riches. Said the man of purest thought and life America has known, "I love the man who is riches." He spoke of some men who were as a shower of stars. And, again, of men whose arrival alters the face of affairs.

Into the holy of holies we are brought by this law, this life, this love! It is not the cemeteries, but it is the heavens that yield to us those who are ours all the more, and increasingly, because of what men call death. It is marvelous how we can love! What beauty! what perfect purity and gentleness and benevolence can mingle in expression of a countenance! The eyes are closed! the lips are sealed! repose is perfect! When we love beyond and above desire, as also above all possibility of telling it, silence and solitude are grateful! But if we couldn't weep, we would die. This experience of love, mingled with mental images of the sepulchre and casket and all that enwraps the form—yea, and the form itself, and the sleep that dropped from heaven upon it; does not this all help us into fellowship with those who came to another sepulchre on occasion of a grief as great? (It could not be greater.) What must have been the sorrow of the soul of her who plaintively said, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him!" Sorrow becomes so sweet itself it is painful to know that it will subside. In some way or other it yields us power to resolve on a more perfect way. It brings the thought of others—be they the elect ones of our soul, or be they such as have wounded us with indifference or by wrong—more kindly into mind. Even they, through the weakness and dependence they have in common with us, become ours. Yes, all are ours! And it is, "Our Father who art in heaven!"

BY D. W. FOSTER, M. D.

A representative of the secular press once stated in a convention that they undertook to lead the people, but found so few following them they changed their tactics; and, instead of trying to build up public sentiment, "they contented themselves" with expressing public opinions as they find them existing. They became, he said, simply "mirrors" to reflect the people back to themselves just as they find them; and then, he added with apparent satisfaction, the people rallied to their support liberally. And might he not have truthfully added further: then, too many of the secular press "contented themselves" with pandering to all—even the worst kind of opinions; and catering to all—even the worst kind of passions; and aiding and abetting all—even the very worst things of every kind that afflict the world to day? Don't everybody know that that is all wrong, and destructive to the best interests of society, and ruinous to the world at large? And yet it is being done every day all over the country; and even good people are not only tolerating such corrupting and damaging newspapers, but are actually patronizing them liberally, and many of them seem to be scarcely taking any thought of the ruinous influences they are exerting, much less trying to counteract them by protest and opposition. They even introduce the demoralizing things into their families! The secular press, as it is now conducted, can not be depended upon for the information and influence needed to promote intelligence and morality and usefulness in the family, and to build up good, sound public sentiment.

The public welfare needs newspapers that will give all suitable information, but exclude all indecent articles and obscene pictures—everything that is demoralizing; and that will earnestly set forth and defend the right in all cases on all occasions, and condemn and oppose the wrong, undaunted by opposition or unbiased by bribery. And there is enough of virtue, intelligence, enterprise and capital among the good people, who have the well-being and happiness of mankind at heart, to successfully conduct such newspapers. But the good people, who ought to be engaged in this good work, are not only silently tolerating these secular papers, that are positively corrupting the morals, obstructing the prosperity, and subverting the well-being and happiness of society; but they are actually contributing liberally to the support of that same secular press!

The several denominations have their respective church papers, which, of course, are striving to instruct the people in morality and religion. That is all right and proper, and every member ought to read it and pay for it, or be turned out for inconsistency, unless he be a suitable subject for the lunatic asylum—that is, if his pastor has done his duty towards him, and failed to make anything of him; for anybody, except a poor, unfortunate lunatic sure enough, ought to know, or be taught, that his chances to get to heaven, without reading the church literature, will be as doubtful as a farmer's would be to make a crop without farming implements. "What must the harvest be" in either case? For no member can be so poor that he can't pay for his church paper. If it seems to be "dip and tuck" whether he can live or must starve, still he had better pay for his church paper, on the same principle as a wise farmer pays for fertilizers to put on his poor land. The investment will be as much better, as his soul and the souls of his family are worth more than the whole world. The principle involved is of as much importance in the one case as in the other. He need not delude himself, and try to "fool God" with the flimsy pretext that he can get along with his Bible (if he has one), for, if he will read the Bible, he will then take the church paper, and read it, too, with relish and profit.

But the people need, in addition to their church papers, newspapers that furnish all the general news and information proper and useful. And these newspapers should be, in all cases, conducted by intelligent Christians, who will send out just such reading matter as the public ought to have, and none other. The fountain must be pure and good, or the stream can not be. And all well-meaning people, who believe, in fact, that there is a God and a devil, a heaven and a hell, and that "godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come," and that "God will cause all things to work together for good to those who love him and keep his commandments," ought to support liberally such papers exclusively, and thus build up intelligent, righteous public opinions, and the general prosperity and happiness of the people. And, now, let noble-hearted and public-spirited people inaugurate such a grand enterprise, which can be made a gratifying success, and a blessing to society and the country generally.

Millsaps College—Location, etc.

MR. EDITOR: Several communications having appeared in the ADVOCATE recently, making suggestions concerning the location of Millsaps College, I desire space in your columns for a few words on the subject. In the first place, I wish to make a suggestion to "Sigma," "Tau," and all others who have written anonymously on this subject. It is this. Write over your own signatures. If you desire your suggestions to have any weight with the Board. Of the seventy-five thousand Methodists in the State of Mississippi, it is barely possible that, at least, a few, besides the sixteen men who compose this Board, are influenced in their wishes as to the location of the college by personal or local considerations. Now, if a communication, making suggestions on this subject, appears in the ADVOCATE unaccompanied by a responsible name, how are the Board to know but that the writer has good reasons to hide his personality behind a Greek letter? If it is true, as some have intimated, that there are in the State persons who are biased in favor of some particular locality, or section, or against some particular locality, or section, how are we to know but that these anonymous counselors belong to the tribe? I am not saying that this is the case, but simply that there is a possibility of its being the case, and that suggestions on this subject will have far more weight with the Board, if made over a responsible signature. The brethren referred to will, of course, be willing to take advice in a homeopathic dose after having given it in allopathic quantities.

In the next place, I wish to say that the question of location will receive very careful consideration at the hands of the Board at the proper time. That time, however, has not yet arrived. Endowment must precede location. We must have $25,000 in cash, and $25,000 more in endowment notes, before we can consider the question of location at all. How soon we will reach the question of location depends upon the exertions of the friends of the college. Unless we increase our speed Millsaps College will not have a local habitation for mouths to come. Are there not hundreds of readers of the ADVOCATE who are well wishers to this enterprise, who have never given anything to this fund? Let these persons, if such there are, send their contributions without waiting to be called on by an agent. W. C. BLACK.

STRONG PREACHERS.—Strong preachers have ever been Bible preachers. The old reformers drew their weapons from the heavenly armory. The sermons of Bunyan, and Baxter, and Flavel, and men of their stamp, were full of God—instinct with living doctrines. Their very garb was after the Scripture pattern. Whitefield, as a custom, read the Bible with "Henry's Commentary" day by day on his knees, praying over every sentence, line, and word. Edwards and Davies were mighty in the Scriptures. Of Chalmers it has been said that his sermons "held the Bible in solution." Preachers who saturate their sermons with the Word of God never wear out. The manna which they bring is pure, and sweet, and freshly gathered. It never cloys. God's Word is deep, and he who studies it will ever have something new. He will never be dull, for the words of the Bible are strong, living words, and its images and descriptions are flowers of eloquence.—Work at Home.

AT NIGHT.

BY EMMA C. ABBOTT.

Sometimes when the business of the day
Have crowded me more than I could bear,
And I think to my welcome rest at night,
Almost too tired for prayer,
There comes to my soul the restful thrill
And rapture of God's full care.

I hear a whisper in my heart,
Bidding my striving cease,
And the touch of his hand on my forehead brings
From all worldly cares release;
And my spirit is wrapped and baptized in God's own infinite peace.

What am I, Lord, that thou bidd'st me rest,
When others must wake and weep?
And O! will our toiling end like this
When death's shadows 'round us creep?
Yea, Lord; for thou lov'st us, and thou givest
To thy beloved—sleep.

Help the Advocates.

I notice several pieces in the Advocates relative to the disposition that should be made of the surplus that lies in the Book Concern at Nashville. The two prevailing opinions appear to be so far as I have seen: 1. To give it the direction as indicated in the Discipline of our church. 2. To apply it in cheapening the publications of the Publishing House; and thereby competing with other publishers, both of a religious and secular character. I have thought some little on this subject; and, by your permission, I will give a few of my thoughts for the ADVOCATE:

1. I am not afraid that the money to be distributed among the Conference claimants from year to year is likely to lift the burden from the church (if burden it be) of the support of these worthy men and women who have so long been our leaders (under Christ) of the hosts of Israel? But, at the same time, we can and will support these claimants independently of this aid.

Again: While it is true we do need, and that badly, our Publishing House productions, in the way of religious books, hymns, and Sunday-school literature, etc., cheapened, in order to circulate at a nominal cost throughout the whole country, as a means of reaching thousands that we can not otherwise reach, and also to counteract the cheap, poisonous, trashy literature that floods our country, yet I will point out a more excellent way, at least, for the present, until this fund becomes so weighty that it can supply the demands in more than one given direction.

1. I would place every Advocate in the whole connection at one dollar or less. It, by turning this fund in that direction, it could be done. And if done, it would yield thirty, sixty, or one hundredfold in the way of increased subscriptions to our Advocates. While our Advocates are worth all they cost, yet it is a lamentable fact, some people, and many who are friendly to the church, will not take them while they can get other leading papers of the secular press for half the money. This is the objection the agent meets with everywhere. Last, but not least, if our papers were thus assisted, then the editors could and would forever expunge from the Advocates those spurious, obnoxious advertisements that do not belong to a religious journalistic life. I find this policy to be the most fatal of all others against the general circulation of our papers. We meet this objection at every turn. It does no good to tell them that these are essential to the life of the paper—so they may be, and are, under the present system of sustaining them—but let enough be donated to each paper (for twelve months) to run them independently of advertisements; then you will have your subscription list more than doubled, and in a few years all the papers will be more self-sustaining at one dollar each than they are today at two. As little as we may think of it, we must compete with these other publications sooner or later; and in order to do it our papers must be placed at one-half the present cost, and kept free from all illegitimate advertisements. Growth in North Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: I call your attention to the following figures, showing the growth of the North Mississippi Conference in ten years in membership, churches and parsonages. We give also the increase for 1889, in order to show the increased activity in church building.

	Increase in 10 yrs.	Average annual increase	Increase in 1889
Membership	3,713	371	1,534
Churches	84	8½	35
Parsonages	61	6	9

You see we built one new church for every thousand members in our Conference in 1889. If this ratio of church building was general throughout the connection, we built something over 1,100 churches last year—more than three for every day. If not, has the church "done what she could" "along this line?" J. A RANDOLPH.

Storm at Aden, Miss.

About three o'clock, P. M., February 27, this vicinity was visited by the most terrific tornado ever known in the annals of this country. The cloud came from the southwest, and, as far as it has been heard from, deviated very little either to right or left from a due northeasterly course. The track is from one-fourth to one-half mile wide. Very few trees six inches in diameter are left standing in its track, and many that are smaller are uprooted or twisted off near the ground. Fences are blown down, houses are unroofed, and many are blown down. Only one person (a lady) has been heard from who was seriously hurt. She is badly bruised, and has a broken limb.

Accounts of marvelous escapes are numerous; but the most marvelous escape that has come to this writer's knowledge was the escape of the neighborhood school and the teacher. The school was being taught at Mount Pisgah, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the first intimation of a storm, the teacher dismissed the school, and sent most of the pupils due north to a neighbor's house, less than half a mile away, while she and the other pupils went south, less than a quarter of a mile. They were in the storm, and narrowly escaped death from the falling timbers. Before they reached their destination, and in less than five minutes after they left the church, it was utterly demolished. The timbers are scattered in every direction. The sills are blown off and the blocks are turned over. The stove was crushed. We are without a church, and need help to rebuild. The damage done to property in this immediate community will render it impossible to rebuild without help from other sources. Who will help? Any amount will be thankfully received. We are anxious to rebuild as soon as possible. If there is anyone whose heart stirs them up to help us, we ask that they remit to Rev. W. R. Graves, P. C., Plattsburg, Winston county, Miss.

S. S. SHIELDS.

Too Large.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Our Annual Conferences are much too large, for the following reasons:

1. We have no time scarcely to give to religious services. It takes about all the time during the day to go through the regular business and the committee meeting, and then at night to hold the missionary, church extension and educational meetings. So you see we only have one or two nights and Sunday for regular religious services; and, after it is over, the people where it is held feel that they are not benefited much after all, for it is only a business meeting.

2. We can only find a few towns and cities in the bounds of an Annual Conference able to entertain one alone; hence they can only be held in some of the larger towns, and they have to call on other churches or denominations to help entertain them—going a-begging again, and also pay large hotel bills, and then the preacher's wife, after enduring the hardships and loneliness of a preacher's wife, can't attend the session without feeling that she is a burden to somebody. Then a good many of our local preachers and leading laymen would like to attend; but they are informed that the probability is that there will be no place for them to stay, not even hotel accommodations; and hence they have to forego the pleasure and benefit of attending. I think it would be a great benefit to our local preachers and laymen to attend, see and hear the business transacted.

3. The Annual Conferences are so large, and only a few towns in the bounds able to entertain the Conference. A large part of the territory never has an Annual Conference; so a great many of our people never attend a session or see a Bishop.

Now, the remedy: Divide up the Conferences, and only have fifty or—at the outside—sixty circuits and stations in a Conference; say about seventy-five clerical members—superannuated, supernumerary and efficient—altogether, which will give one clerical and one layman to the General Conference. However, the Discipline provides for each Conference to have one clerical and one lay delegate; so if we lack a little of numbering seventy-two, we would have our delegation anyway. Say we take the Mississippi Conference as a criterion, and we have about one hundred and thirty appointments—circuits, stations, and missions. Say we divide and just make two Conferences, with about sixty or sixty-five appointments. Maybe that would not be too large. And then, almost any town could entertain the Conference without having to call on anyone to help. If our brethren of other churches want to help, all right—let them do the proposing, not us. Let's arrange to be self-sustaining. Cut down the delegation to the General Conference, and cut down the Annual Conferences, so our people can take care of them. Let's not be intruders on other people.

But you say that will give us another trouble. Our Bishops could not hold all the Annual Conferences in the proper time. Well, let the General Conference elect six or seven more Bishops, and double the assessments for the Bishops, and have enough Bishops to travel all over our work. Take my circuit, for instance; and it is only assessed seven dollars for the Bishops, and it could pay fourteen just as easy. I have seven churches, and that would only be two dollars apiece—just a trifle—the easiest money we have to raise. Then our Bishops could hold nearly, if not all the District Conferences, and that would be so much better. A Bishop in every district once a year to inspect the presiding elder's work, and a presiding elder four times a year to look into the preacher's work, and the preacher twelve times a year in all the churches to feed the people with the pure Word, and surely we would have great prosperity. More anon.

The Tree-Planting at Raymond.

MR. EDITOR: In a letter from this town, in your excellent paper of this week, "Teacher" gives a pleasing account of the tree planting on the grounds of the Methodist Church of this place. The details are at once interesting and creditable to all who participated in the work; but a great injustice (intentionally or unintentionally) is done one of our most energetic, earnest, noblest and most successful ministers of the past, by the omission of his name, and the absence of allusion, even, to the fact, that a beautiful tree was planted in a prominent spot to commemorate his services in our midst, and by the hands of seven young ladies, all members or ex-members of the Sunday-school. While Bros. Hunnicutt, Marshall, Drake, Ballard, Jones, and others of our pastors of past years, were kindly and lovingly remembered by the young ladies and children of the Sunday-school, the Rev. D. P. Bradford, who was our most acceptable, popular and earnest pastor a few years ago, was not forgotten. A tree stands in our church enclosure bearing his familiar name, and it is safe to say that the seven young ladies who planted it will watch its growth and expansion, upward and outward, with their heart's best wishes. Respectfully,

ONE OF THE SEVEN.

The Effects of Faith on Life and Character.

The man who believes something, who knows what he believes, who has convictions and the courage of his convictions, is the man to whom we are to look for great moral achievements.

It was the faith of Abraham that made him the founder of a race the most noted for its moral character and influence of all the ancient nations. It was the faith of Joseph that made him choose purity and a dungeon rather than guilt and freedom, and that made his name a synonym of innocence and virtue, and afterward made him the savior of his people. It was the faith of Moses that was the secret of his life-work and character, that made him the deliverer of his race and the legislator of the nations. It was the faith of Daniel that made him the noblest example of courage and fidelity, and one of the greatest prime ministers the world has ever seen. It was the faith of Paul that inspired his life-work and made him the grandest missionary that ever carried the gospel to the regions beyond. It was the faith of "the fishermen of Galilee" that made them "turn the world upside down." It was the faith of Martin Luther that made the mighty reformer of the sixteenth century and saved the Christian Church from the superstitions and immoralities that threatened its very life. It was the faith of John Wesley that made him the greatest preacher and reformer of modern times, and enabled him amid persecutions and oppositions to inaugurate a work that to-day seems destined to envelop the earth with its doctrines of free grace and full salvation. The inspiration of every great man's work is his faith.

On the other hand, it was the faith of Paul, the persecutor, that caused him to make havoc with the early church. It was the faith of Voltaire, the French infidel, that caused him to lead an immoral life, that prostituted his intellect to base purposes, and made his influence a moral poison upon society. It was the faith of Thomas Paine that made him write his "Age of Reason" and send it forth to subvert the faith and corrupt the life of every unwary youth that might be influenced by it. It was the faith of Baur, of Strauss, and of Renan, that made them spend years in trying to undermine the foundations of Christian faith in the inspired Word of God. It was the faith of the French Revolutionists that led them to attempt the overthrow of all government and authority, and turn peace and order into anarchy. It is the faith of the socialist and nihilist that makes them the worst and most dangerous elements in society. It is the faith of the Jesuits that has caused them, though calling themselves by the name of Christ, to be instigators of crime, and hence to be banished from almost every country. A bad faith makes a bad man. As a man believes, so is he. Can a man's faith point one way and his life drift another? Can a man believe there is no God and no future life whose weal or woe depends upon his moral conduct here, and yet it have no effect upon his life and character?

"It makes no difference what you believe, just so your life is right." What stuff is preached under this text of modern free thought! and sometimes by ministers of the gospel! Just as well say that it makes no difference whether a tree has any sap in it, or is planted in the earth, just so it bears fruit; or that it makes no difference whether an engine has steam in it, just so it runs the machinery. Just as well say it makes no difference whether the fountain be pure or impure, just so the stream is pure. Nay, verily; but make the fountain pure, and the stream will be pure. Faith is the fountain; life and character the stream. Make the faith right, and the life and character will be right. Faith is the condition of fruitfulness in the Christian life. The fruits of the Spirit are the fruits of faith. Faith is the motive power of all Christian character and life and labor. The inspiration of every great life-work is a faith, a strong faith, in some great truth. Let a man believe something, let him know what he believes, let him feel that he must deliver his message, let him have the courage of his convictions, and him men will hear.—Dr. W. F. Tillett, on Creed and Character.

From the Work.

PERCY'S CREEK, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Percy's Creek station is situated about half way between Fort Adams, on the Mississippi river, and Woodville, the county-seat of Wilkinson. Percy is a country station of five or six years' continuance, with a church membership of eighty-three, and one of the most pleasant appointments in the Mississippi Conference. The people of the charge are industrious, energetic, refined and cultivated, and know exactly how to esteem and appreciate a pastor. The material interests of the church are faithfully and energetically supervised by an intelligent and persevering Board of Stewards.

These stewards have on hand all the collections ordered by the Annual Conference, and each member of the church, after being assessed by said Board, regards the assessments made as a debt of honor, and would just as soon leave unpaid a mercantile bill, or disregard the payment of a note of hand after maturity. Such is the force of education and training in these directions.

Our first quarterly meeting was held on Monday, January 27, and we had a good, profitable time. Bro. McDonald looks after all the interests of our common Zion, and exercises fine judgment in the manipulation of the affairs of a Quarterly Conference. All the interests of the church are moving up, and we are praying earnestly to the Father of lights for a moral upheaval in the church, which shall revive and intensify spiritual life in my charge.

I am pressing the claims of the ADVOCATE, and I sincerely hope by midsummer to place it in the house of every Methodist family in my work. Its weekly visit is a benediction to any Christian family, and one of the best missionary preachers we can possibly secure to aid us in lifting the collections for foreign and domestic missions.

Our District Conference, as you see, will convene at Gloster, March 27-30, over which Bishop C. B. Galloway will preside. Now, Doctor, as the seat of this Conference is situated immediately on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., we shall expect you to be present on that occasion. The presence of the editor of our Conference organ will inspire the preachers and people of the Woodville district to greater energy and zeal in the circulation of our own church ADVOCATE. May length of days and long life be added unto you! God bless you and your paper! W. W. HURST.

HOMER, LA.

We are moving on pleasantly and harmoniously on Homer circuit; have had thirty accessions since Conference, principally by letters. The Board of Stewards have made a liberal assessment for the support of the pastor, an increase of $150 over former years. The Journal and Guardian, our parish papers, are outspoken in their opposition to the Louisiana Lottery, and I have yet to hear of a Claiborne man who favors the continuation of that iniquity. I am sure that our representatives are sound on that question. The cold wave that struck us yesterday played havoc with the gardens and the fruit. J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

SUNFLOWER CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

On the fifth Sunday in December I arrived at one of my preaching-places, and preached to a very good and attentive congregation. Never had better behavior; in fact, have had attentive hearers at all preaching-places, and very large congregations for this country. While this is said to be the worst work in the Mississippi Conference, and rumors say that the people will not treat a preacher with respect, and that the people are savage, I must say the above is injustice to the good, hospitable people of this Mississippi Delta. Owing to the arrangement of the circuit, it makes it quite laborious, especially at present, as the water is in an abundance. We are not overflowed yet, though some of our people are uneasy thinking we will be. Sunflower river and its tributaries seem to be on a stand. I have to go to my appointments on the boats, and in the skiffs. I have been only about three weeks traveling in that way. I am preaching at six places; had three to start on, two very good churches, and that property does not belong to us. One church is now being built. We hope to dedicate it March 23, when our second Quarterly Conference will convene. This church is situated near Nittayuma. I am doing my best to get our people to build two other churches this year. Schools are very good; more fine talent and intelligence than I anticipated. Thank God, while the people are not as good as they should be, they could be worse. I have been received kindly all over the work. A few are taking our paper. Some sickness and deaths—la grippe, pneumonia and measles. Brethren, pray for me as I pass over the waters, through the mud and wilderness.

J. C. ELLIS, P. C.

WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

"Our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places." We are very comfortably situated in the little parsonage at Walnut Grove, surrounded by hospitable people, who seem to appreciate their preacher, and by their words and actions endeavor to make him and his companion feel that they are not "strangers in a strange land." We have completed our second round, and everything is moving along nicely. Our first Quarterly Conference has been held. A liberal assessment was made for the pastor. Our presiding elder was present, although he had to travel over very rough roads and cross deep waters, which fact only convinced us that he was truly in earnest about his Father's business. The young ladies went to work soon after our arrival, and raised money to have the parsonage repaired, and they have had some work done on it, which put it in such a condition as to keep the rain off of the itinerant and his better half. God bless the women, and speed them in all of their grand and good works! We have organized a prayer meeting at this place (attendance very good), composed mostly of young people, who seem to be deeply interested, and some incline to take hold and do their part; but the older people do not encourage them as much as I would like to see. Pray for us, that we may convert many of these dear young people to the cause of Christ, and thereby place many watchmen upon the walls of Zion.

Yours in Christ, J. M. COWAN.

The Lottery.

Lotteries and Other Gambling.

Wherever the lottery still exists it argues a low moral tone among the people, and a spirit in the government far in the rear of modern ideas of either the right or the expedient. It has been forbidden by law, in England, for more than sixty years; since 1830 in Belgium also; and even in France, where it once flourished beyond almost any other country, it is now prohibited by law. Only two of the United States have, for many years past allowed this pernicious form of gambling, and in one of these, Louisiana, it will cease to be tolerated, when in five years more the charter of the company shall expire.

One of the chief reasons for the abolition of the lottery in the countries named above, and for its condemnation by all writers upon morals and upon political economy, is its essentially demoralizing effect upon the individual, and so upon society itself. "The legislators who sanction it," says one of the most eminent of these writers, "vote a certain number of thefts and suicides every year; there is no pretext of expense that can justify provocation to crime." While the lottery was a common thing, and was regarded as a legitimate expedient for obtaining money with small outlay and no labor, its first effect was the formation of a habit in the person so addicted, precisely of the same nature as that which enslaves and ruins the gambler in any other mode. Thousands of instances occurred in which the money which the poor man should have used to feed his starving children went in payment of the lottery ticket, always in the confident belief that the next turn of the wheel would bring fortune and abundance, yet always with the same cruel disappointment as the result, till crime, insanity, or suicide came as the result. It was found that no other form of gambling was so wide-reaching in its effect, or so destructive. "In the large cities," of countries where it was tolerated, "a great portion of the population lived in a perpetual excitement, which made men unfit for business, and generally ended by thoroughly demoralizing them." It was in 1836 that lotteries were prohibited in France, and "in the next year the deposits in the savings banks of Paris alone increased by 450,000 francs;" a significant fact, showing, as it does, that the lottery is neither more nor less than systematic robbery of the poor.

But the great objection to lotteries of every kind is grounded in moral principle, and is substantially the same as that which lies against all gambling. No kind of business is consistent with even common honesty in whose method there is no pretence, even, of giving a man value for value. The lottery ticket, save in the case of the "lucky" holder of a ticket, is simply and only a piece of pasteboard. It is, indeed, a great deal worse than nothing at all, for it stimulates expectation that in the great majority of cases is destined never to be realized; a species of stimulation becoming ultimately a disease, which over and over again in the history of this outrage upon humanity has ended in suicide or insanity. Mere common robbery is not half so bad as this form of it, for vexatious and even embarrassing for a time as it may be to be the victim of a common thief, there is no such after-effect as in the present case. In the mildest possible view of the matter, the lottery is systematic swindling. The laws of enlightened nations have come to so regard it. Wise legislation classes it with other forms of cheating and stealing.

The time has surely come when alike in States and in cities the function of the gambler shall be so effectually outlawed as to be placed where it belongs, with those of the highway robber and the burglar. Neither financial nor political expediency can qualify the infamy of either the law or the executive which tolerates this species of wholesale plunder. As for any connection with charitable or educational interests, let the moral sense of the American people be spared, at least, that indignity; let "the devil" be "served" if he must be so, in his own "livery," and not in that of "the angels" of God.—Standard.

The Lottery at Washington City.

The revelation of the status of the Louisiana Lottery in Washington is startling, and demands governmental action at once. This corrupting agency is doing an extensive business in the District of Columbia. It has grown bold and defiant. It has no fear of our national legislators before its eyes, and carries on its traffic as openly as in New Orleans. It has found a way to resist the laws for its suppression and to prevent the passage of more stringent legislation. It has, it is said, through its agents managed so to control the local authorities that there is no interference with its transactions. It is driving a lucrative trade, its monthly receipts amounting to $100,000, or footing up annually more than $1,000,000. Among its regular patrons is the greater portion of the government clerks and employees. Influential attorneys are paid large fees for looking after its interests. Its resident agent receives three or four times the salary of any Cabinet officer. It is doubtful if there is another city or section of country, outside of Louisiana, where the Lottery has a stronger hold, or more open recognition, or shows larger returns. And here, of all other places, it should have neither existence nor prominence. If the Washington authorities will not suppress it, Congress should make short work with it. The people look to their representatives to put a speedy end to the infamous concern. The sanction now given to it is a disgrace to the local and Congressional administration. Let the people, now that the facts are coming to light, bring a strong pressure to bear upon their representatives in Congress to take vigorous and effective measures to wipe out this blot upon the fair name of our national capital.—Presbyterian (Phil.)

BOOKS.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. A series of lectures delivered in the First Baptist Church, Montgomery, Ala. By Morton Bryan Wharton, D. D., pastor. Illustrated. Cloth, 12 mo, 340 pp. Price, $1 50. E. B. Treat, publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

This is a series of readable lectures on sixteen female characters in the New Testament. The author's style is smooth and pleasant, and he seems to be a close observer of human nature, and has considerable analytical power. This book seems to us to be a better one than the author's "Famous Women of the Old Testament." It will be read with interest and profit by the students of New Testament biography.

PERIODICALS.

—OUR LITTLE ONES, for March, comes to us full of pictures and reading matter specially adapted to the little ones, and will be hugely enjoyed by all who are fortunate enough to secure a copy. Russell Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $1 50

—THE TREASURY FOR PASTOR AND PEOPLE, for March, has a table of contents that will bear careful perusal. The contributors to this number are Dr. J. E. Rankin, Rev. C. B. Spurgeon, Rev. Joel T. Daves, Dr. T. W. Chambers, and others. E. B. Treat, New York. Price, $2 50. Clergymen, $2.

—THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST, for March, is a valuable number for farmers, gardeners, horticulturists, stock and poultry raisers all over the land. This is one of the best and cheapest of all the agricultural monthlies. Orange Judd Company, New York. Price, $1 50.

—THE BOOK-BUYER, for March, opens with an engraved portrait and sketch of Bret Harte; then follow interesting literary notes and notices of new books, etc. This is a valuable assistant to those who are trying to keep up with the publications of the day. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1.

—MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD. The March number has interesting and able papers by Drs. Pierson, Gracey, Ellinwood, and Revs. Grout, Leonard and Fulton. There is correspondence from all parts of the world, and the department of Missionary Intelligence is full. The editorial notes on current topics are spicy. The editorial of Dr. Pierson, A Plea for Enthusiasm in Missions, ought to be read by the church everywhere. There is no better missionary periodical than this Review, published by Funk & Wagnalls, New York, at $2 a year.

—The contents of THE FORUM for March are: France in 1789 and 1889, by Frederic Harrison; War Under New Conditions, by Gen. Henry L. Abbot; A Year of Republican Control, by Senator H. L. Dawes; The Relation of Art to Truth, by W. H. Mallock; Do the People Wish Reform? by Prof. Albert B. Hart; The Specter of the Monk, by Archdeacon F. W. Farrar; A Protest against Dogma, by Amos K. Fiske; The Right to Vote, by Judge Albion W. Tourgee; Western Mortgages, by Prof. James Willis Gleed; The Practice of Vivisection, by Caroline E. White. New York: The Forum Publishing Company, 253 Fifth Avenue. Fifty cents a copy. Five dollars a year.

First Quarter—Studies in Luke.

LESSON XII.—March 23.

CHRIST FORGIVING SIN.

Luke v, 17-26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Who can forgive sins, but God alone?—Luke v, 21.

TIME.—A. D. 27.

PLACE.—Capernaum.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Matt. ix, 1-8; Mark ii, 1-12.

17. And it came to pass on a certain day.—In Matt. viii, 5-9, a series of incidents are interposed. Our Lord there appears to have returned from the country of the Gadarenes and the miracle on the demoniac there, to "his own city," that is, Capernaum. The order in Mark is the same as here, and his narrative contains the only decisive note of sequence (chap. iv, 35), which determines his order and that in the text to have been the actual one, and the events in Matt. viii to be related out of their order. As he was teaching—Not in a synagogue, but probably in Peter's house. Pharisees and doctors of the law—These had probably come out of simple curiosity to hear and see the great Prophet of Nazareth. Out of every town—From all parts. The power of the Lord—The power of the Almighty Jehovah.

18. Men—Four bearers. Mark ii, 3. Brought...a man—The sufferer is passive, and is not only in a bodily, but also in a spiritual respect, borne by the faith of those who at any cost will bring him before the feet of the Lord. There is, nevertheless, no ground for the supposition that he himself did not share in this faith. Would he have been brought wholly against his will in so extraordinary a way to the Savior? A bed—Probably a mere mat or mattress. A palsy—The cessation of nervous activity is a disease that is found everywhere in various forms. Sometimes it attacks the whole body, sometimes only parts of it. Sought means—St. Mark explains that the crowd was so great that they could not even get to the door.

19. They went upon the housetop—A very easy thing to do, because there was in most houses an outside staircase to the roof. Eastern houses are often only one story high, and when they are built on rising ground the roof is often nearly on a level with the street above. Our Lord may have been teaching in the "upper room" of the house, which was usually the largest and quietest. Even if in this dwelling there was no staircase outside, a way could have been made over the roof of another to gain access to the place where Jesus was stopping. A breaking up of the roof right over the place where Jesus was, is the less inconceivable inasmuch as corpses were sometimes in this way removed from the house of death. Let him down through the tiling—St. Mark says they uncovered the roof where he was, and, digging it up, let down "the pallet." Clearly, then, two operations seem to be necessary: to remove the tiles, and to dig through some mud partition. But the description is too vague to enable us to understand the details. The making of an aperture in the roof is an everyday matter in the East.

20. Man—St. Mark has "Son," and St. Matthew "Cheer up, son," which were probably the exact words used by Christ. Thy sins are forgiven thee—Rather, have been forgiven thee, that is, now and henceforth. Here, trouble of conscience appears actually to stand in the way of restoration of the body, and the Savior, who with unerring glance looks through the outward and inward condition of the sick man, begins in this way to heal his soul. The words were addressed, we must believe, to the secret yearnings of the sufferer. Sickness had made him conscious of the burden of his sins, perhaps had come (as such forms of nervous exhaustion often do come) as the direct consequence of his sin. The Healer saw that the disease of the soul must first be removed, and that then would come the time for restoring strength to the body.

21. Who is this—The word used for "this person" is contemptuous. St. Matthew puts it still more barely, "This fellow blasphemes." Blasphemies—The words were but an echo of the charge that had been brought at Jerusalem, that "he made himself equal with God" (John v, 18), and may well have come from some of the same objectors.... For a mere man, as such, to claim the right of forgiving absolutely was to claim a divine attribute, and therefore, to blaspheme, that is, to utter words as disparaging as open profaneness to the majesty of God.

22. When Jesus perceived—Rather, Jesus recognizing. Their thoughts—Better, their reasonings.

23. Whether is easier—It was easier to say, "Thy sins are forgiven thee," for those words could not be put to any outward test, and only the consciousness of the sinner could attest their power. It was a bolder and a harder thing to risk the utterance of words which challenged an immediate and visible fulfillment; and yet he was content to utter such words, without fear of the result. Measured in their true relation to each other, the spiritual wonder was, of course, the greater; but here, as so often elsewhere, our Lord puts himself, as it were, on the level of those who hear him, and vouchsafes to speak to them according to their thoughts.

24. The Son of man—Ben-Adam has the general sense of any human being (Job xxv, 6, etc.); in a special sense in the Old Testament it is nearly ninety times applied to Ezekiel, though never used by himself of himself. In the New Testament it is eighty times used by Christ, but always by himself, except in passages which imply his exaltation. (Acts vii, 56; Rev. i, 13-20.) The title, as distinctively Messianic, is derived from Dan. vii, 13, and is there Bar-Enosh, a word descriptive of man in his humiliation. The inference seems to be that Christ used it to indicate the truth that "God highly exalted him" because of his self-humiliation in taking our flesh. Hath power—Better, authority, as in John v, 27. The Father had given him authority to "forgive sins" and to "execute judgment," because he was the Son of man, the representative of mankind, and as such was exercising a delegated power.

25. Took up that wherein he lay—This circumstance is emphasized in all three narratives to contrast his previous helplessness, "borne of four," with his present activity. He now carried the bed which had carried him, and "the proof of his sickness became the proof of his cure." The labor would have been no more than that of carrying a rug or a cloak, yet it was this which excites the fury of the Pharisees in Jerusalem. It was not specially attacked by the simpler and less Pharisaic Pharisees of Galilee. Glorifying God—The fact that the man himself did this as well as the by-standers is peculiar to St. Luke.

26. They glorified God—An admirable antithesis, the enthusiasm of the people over against the murmuring of the scribes. The dissonances dissolve themselves in harmony, the shadows in light and life. Strange things—Literally, things beyond expectation.

Missionary.

Woman's Opportunity.

To the Missionary Workers:

In the mind of one who is deeply interested in the cause, the Giver of all good has more than doubly conferred an honor on our sex, inasmuch that we can be so instrumental in ministering to the piteous appeals of benighted people, who owe their existence to the same Omnipotence that we Christians most assuredly do.

But do we realize the honor as servants of God? Are we at work? Or have we sent the laborers, or his precious Word, to the outstretched hands of thousands who are pleading for life and light?

God so loved us that he gave his only Son, that we might have life everlasting; and for even this, can we not endeavor to send the truth to eager souls who are waiting, watching?

It must be that this grand soul-saving work of the missionaries is intended particularly for women, and is, indeed, woman's work for woman.

So can we really promote the cause of our Lord by sending, in our humble, womanly way, the golden words of redeeming love. Then to the work, to the work, is the sentiment of his workers. May we all, as consecrated Christians, become more deeply interested in soul-sick beings, who know not that our blessed Savior on Calvary suffered, bled and died, that we might claim a life of delight with him when our lives here shall close.

How can a mere shadow of doubt arise as to whether it is our duty to labor for those souls, when life most priceless of all truths so beautifully urges us on and tells us so plainly of the necessity of spreading the gospel.

May we reject the infatuations and temptations or snares that shall stealthily entice us from the work, that it is now our opportunity to engage in!

May we, as woman, take advantage of the opportunities to lead those souls to the cleansing power of Jesus! May we not suffer a moment's delay, until the souls now in utter darkness reach the fountain of life, and we each day be inspired with more zeal, and be ready and willing to do what we find to do!

Oh! we must bestir our hearts, send out the life-boats, and rescue the perishing. We can, we must grasp the opportunities that are along our pathway strewn, so that when the silver chords of our lives are broken, ours will be the promised reward.

Can we go empty-handed, when all around us trophies in the form of human souls are pleading to us to come, come?

Then to the work let us onward go, clearing obstacles that will surely gather as dark and threatening clouds between us and those for whom we labor.

Surely our labor will be crowned with success and blessed with special efforts by our Christian women. We will work, and sing, and pray, that we the harvesters will be who shall capture the world for Christ, amid the mighty strife.

We will humbly, meekly hold up the cross, which is our banner, and with anxious hearts, willing hands and listening ears wait for the joy of Christians and angels, when the whole world shall sing—

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

MRS. JOHN C. HEAD.

Home vs. Foreign Missions.

The subject of foreign missions which, just now, seems to be more than usually under consideration, has, naturally, found some objectors, and it was to refute the charges that had been made during the last few days by letters and comments in some of the newspapers that Dr. Farrar applied himself on Saturday, instead of following the course he had originally intended of dealing with the incidental successes of missions. "Any cause," said he, "that calls for effort and self-denial is sure to meet with objectors, and it is these people—the people who will not make an effort or deny themselves—who tell us that we are paying too much attention to the heathen abroad when there are plenty of heathen at home to trouble about." "Before you send out missionaries to other lands," say they, "you ought to set about converting England, and should deal first with the blighted groups that hang about the gin shops and the corners of the streets." He—Dr. Farrar—thought that the relation of home to foreign work acted not by exhaustion, but by fermentation, so that when more money was sent abroad more was also given for home work, but no aid was wanted from grudging sources. The command of Christ—"Go ye into all the world," etc.—should be sufficient reason for missionary activity for anybody who pretended to be a Christian. Had Christ and his apostles acted with the excuse of modern selfishness, Christianity would have died away as the religion of some obscure sect upon the Dead Sea shore. Were there no unbelievers in Judea when Christ told his disciples to go to "all nations"? Were there none in Nazareth when he went to Capernaum? We must still leave the dead to bury their dead. Attention to foreign work was the duty of us all. No force was put on any to join in the work, for if it were not done willingly, it would be worth nothing. In every field of missionary labor there were signs of God's approval, and often the best way to rekindle the white embers of callous indifference at home was by creating an interest in missions abroad. As against the direct command of Christ, these arguments of objectors must pass for what they were worth. "It comes," continued Dr. Farrar, "with shocking ill grace, and sounds like shameful hypocrisy, when those who give nothing and do nothing for missions make the 'home heathen' a false excuse for doing nothing. They talk as if we were weakening the resources of England, and surely that is stupendous nonsense, when we are not even spending as much on missions as on tobacco and Christmas cards."—Exchange.

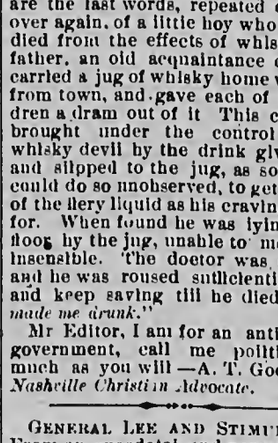
Temperance.

A CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.—I was one of those unfortunates given to strong drink. It reduced me to degradation. I vowed and strove long and hard, but I seldom held victory over liquor long. I hated drunkenness, but still I drank. When I left it off I felt a horrid want of something I must have or go distracted. I could neither eat, work nor sleep. I entered a reformatory and prayed for strength; still I must drink. I lived so for over twenty years; in that time I never abstained for over three months handrunning. At length I was sent to the House of Correction as a vagrant. If my family had been provided for, I would have preferred to remain there, out of liquor and temptation. Explaining my affliction to a fellow-prisoner—a man of much education and experience—he advised me to make a vinegar of ground quassia, a half-ounce steeped in a pint of vinegar, and to put a small teaspoonful in a little water and drink it down every time the liquor thirst came upon me violently. I found it satisfied the cravings and suffused a feeling of stimulation and strength. When I was discharged I continued this cure, and persevered till the thirst was conquered. For two years I have not tasted liquor, and I have no desire for it. Lately, to try my strength, I have handled and smelt whisky, but I have no temptation to take it. I give this for the consideration of the unfortunate, several of whom I know have recovered by the same means which I no longer require to use.—Connecticut Home.

"PAPA MADE ME DRUNK."—These are the last words, repeated over and over again, of a little boy who recently died from the effects of whisky. His father, an old acquaintance of mine, carried a jug of whisky home with him from town, and gave each of his children a dram out of it. This child was brought under the control of the whisky devil by the drink given him, and slipped to the jug, as soon as he could do so unobserved, to get as much of the fiery liquid as his cravings called for. When found he was lying on the floor by the jug, unable to move, and insensible. The doctor was sent for, and he was roused sufficiently to say, and keep saying till he died, "Papa made me drunk."

Mr Editor, I am for an anti-whisky government, call me politician as much as you will.—A. T. Goodloe, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

GENERAL LEE AND STIMULANTS.—From an anecdotal and personal article on "General Lee After the War," by Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, in the Century, we quote the following: "He had the gentlest way possible of giving counsel and administering rebuke. I remember hearing him say, in a presence where such testimony was worth more than a dozen temperance lectures: 'Men need no stimulant; it is something, I am persuaded, that they can do without. When I went into the field, at the beginning of the war, a good lady friend of mine gave me two sealed bottles of very superb French brandy. I carried them with me through the entire campaign; and when I met my friend again, after all was over, I gave her back both bottles of brandy, with the seals unbroken. It may have been some comfort to me to know I had them in case of sudden emergency, but the moment never came when I needed to use them.'"



Hood's Sarsaparilla has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaint, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1890.

To All Ministers of the Gospel in the State of Louisiana.

Dear Brethren:

The Pastors' Union of New Orleans would beg leave to call your attention to the fact, that at the approaching meeting of the Legislature, in May, efforts will be made by the Louisiana State Lottery Company to secure a renewal of its charter.

We earnestly urge upon you to preach against this great infamy and curse to our State; to strengthen the public sentiment already existing against it, and to do all in your power, in every way, to co-operate with us and all good men, that this great gambling corporation, which is debauching the youth of our State, and robbing the people, may be overthrown.

In behalf of the Pastors' Union of New Orleans, La.

M. C. COLE, Baptist Ch.
WM. W. ELWANG, Presby'n Ch.
WM. P. MCLAUGHLIN, M.E. Ch.

Anti-Lottery literature will be furnished on application to the Executive Committee of the Union, 15 Camp St., New Orleans.

Interpretation Extraordinary.

In our interpretation of the Sixth Restrictive Rule, a few weeks since, we gave the plain meaning of the words, and said that any discrimination between the classes named in the rule was a violation of the rule. On this the Arkansas Methodist says:

In our humble opinion this construction of the rule is begging the question; for if it proves anything, it proves too much—that all "traveling" preachers should share alike with the Conference claimants in the surplus. The evident object of the rule was to limit the appropriation of the produce of the House to the traveling ministry and their dependents; but it specifically designates who of the traveling preachers were to be beneficiaries—the supernumerary, superannuated and worn-out traveling preachers; the wives and children of these, and the widows and children of deceased traveling preachers.

It seems to us this is a most strange interpretation. The Methodist says: "The evident object of the rule was to limit the appropriation of the produce of the House to the traveling ministry and their depeudents!" Does the phrase, "their dependents," mean their wives and children? If so, then, the Methodist has forced a limit on the action of the rule unwarranted by fair interpretation.

It seems to us this is a strange interpretation of plain language. The Methodist's principle of construing these words would lead us to think that the "traveling ministry and their dependents" alone are entitled to the produce of the House, and in order that the supernumerary and superannuate may not be "cut off without a shilling," the Methodist has to invent a strange interpretation of words to stop the damage his own construction of the rule would bring.

It says the rule "specifically designates who of the traveling preachers were to be beneficiaries." We simply ask where is this specific designation made? The Methodist says the rule makes it. Here is the rule:

They shall not appropriate the produce of the Publishing House to any purpose other than for the benefit of the traveling, supernumerary, superannuated and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children.

Is there any specific designation here? Is it said in this rule that of the traveling preachers, the superannuated and supernumerary and worn-out preachers only are entitled to share in the produce of the House? Nothing of the kind! The rule is as plain as it can be. "Traveling, supernumerary, superannuated, and worn-out preachers" do not mean, can not be made to mean, supernumerary, superannuated and worn-out preachers, "who are of the traveling preachers." If that is what the rule means, why was it not stated in that way? If the needy traveling preachers are not entitled to a share in the produce of the House, then the rule simply says what it does not mean! In the Methodist's view the supernumerary and superannuated and worn-out preachers are traveling preachers as well as the men manning the districts and circuits and stations; which we do not believe is the case. If the framers of this celebrated rule had not intended that the traveling preachers should share in the produce of the House, they would have left out the word "traveling." We are afraid the Methodist has unwittingly adopted that false method of interpretation which twists words to mean anything you want them to mean.

An Old Blister-Plaster Re-applied.

We give our readers, in the article below, an editorial which appeared in the Daily Democrat, January 9, 1876. The Times-Democrat is in some sense the successor of the Democrat, and we wonder how the successor feels in looking back over these indignant and caustic utterances. The history of the Lottery for fourteen years since these utterances only clinches their truth, and shows how true were their prophecies. So true are these utterances that they sound as if written yesterday. Read them carefully, and then hand the paper to your neighbor with instructions to read and pass it along to his neighbor:

One of the most scandalous institutions which the era of Radicalism has spawned upon this State is the Louisiana Lottery Company. The bill creating this extraordinary corporation was passed through the Legislature by bribery, and every breath that it breathes is corrupting. The Louisiana State Lottery Company is an institution which, in the nineteenth century, ought not to exist in any thoroughly enlightened and Christian country; and we confidently assert that if a despotism of rascality, under which any nefarious organization can flourish, that can and will resort to bribery, did not oppress and disgrace Louisiana, the Lottery Company would never have been born, and could not now boldly buy up newspapers, employ pimps and influence Legislatures.

We are not so impracticable as to prate of destroying all demoralizing institutions, or even totally gambling institutions. There is a large element of wickedness in human nature, and it is likely that, until there is a new and higher birth, men will gamble and drink, and do other evil deeds. Efforts, therefore, to totally annihilate such transgressions of the moral law originate in the dreams of enthusiasts, and are certainly utopian. It is, however, one of the duties of Legislatures, and, indeed, of society, to check these evils as much as possible, and, instead of giving them encouragement, to repress them and frown them down. Even men not of the highest moral characters would shudder at a deliberate proposition to organize and establish an open, vast and powerful institution for the purpose of educating the youth of the country, and men and women, into gamblers for the immediate benefit of the conductors of the institution, and the ulterior benefit of "gambling hells." Were they asked if such an institution was lawful, or if it should be tolerated in a civilized community, they would denounce the suggestion with indignation. And yet the Louisiana Lottery is just such an educational institution. It is the preparatory school for the faro bank and the roulette table. Daily and hourly it is tempting men, women and children, who, were it not in existence, would never dream of such a thing, to gamble; it is infusing the passion—the eager, irresistible passion—for gaming into their hearts.

The faro bank is kept in seclusion; men who wish to venture have to hunt it up; its glittering fascinations are not spread before the eyes of the whole community; tradition, early teaching, its avowed character of vice, cause those not familiar with it to shudder at and shrink from it. But the Lottery Company is legalized by the Legislature of the State, and it opens its gambling tables at every corner of the city, and in nearly every town and village of the State. Its schemes of chance are advertised in every paper, and the agents of its gambling saloons are all over the land. In the city and in nearly all the towns one may find squads of boys, after the daily drawing, eagerly reading the result to see if they have lost or won; ladies slyly send to purchase tickets; and even pious men have been known to venture, what might, in accordance with their professions, have been better given to charity, upon the turn of the wheel. And thus the Lottery goes on in educating people into gamblers, preparing them for careers of crime, demoralizing the public—a gigantic scheme of legalized iniquity.

This corporation is an immoral one in every respect. It is a disgrace to our State, a blot upon our civilization, and every good citizen should exert his influence for its extirpation. Let the House of Representatives, then, institute a vigorous investigation into the system of bribery which voted it upon us; let men who have families, and who would remove a vile temptation from their children, ask if the Legislature of Louisiana had the right to create a monster scheme of immorality. And on this Sunday morning let Christian men bear in mind that, in this city, and ramifying this State, there is an agency of sin, of crime and ruin more powerful than all the churches which rear their spires toward the clouds—an agency whose advertisements of schemes of chance, appealing to the cupidity of the human heart, are finding a readier and deeper response than will all the utterances of the ministers of religion. Against this pestiferous creation every man who has the good of society at heart should exert his influence. It is constantly growing in opulence and power, and its influence for evil is constantly increasing. It is a moral, social and political evil, and the moral, social and political element of Louisiana should combine to destroy it.

Repentance and Faith.

BY "GILDEROY."

Repentance towards God and faith towards Christ, the conditions of personal salvation, are always united in the New Testament. They can not be separated. Each implies the existence of the other. Repentance implies pre-existing faith, and faith implies pre-existing repentance. Repentance is a condition of salvation, and faith is both the condition and the instrument of salvation. Both grow out of the preliminary grace of the Holy Spirit, and they are perfected in the concurrence of the will of man. Both are in some sense introductory to a state of grace; and, yet, faith in its saving exercise is the turning-point where conviction for sin and repentance towards God pass into life in Christ.

Repentance, as godly sorrow for sin, is divinely wrought. It is said to be the gift of God. The actual power of repenting is graciously afforded by the Holy Ghost. God granted repentance unto life unto the Gentiles; and Christ came to give repentance unto Israel.

Repentance is called a broken and contrite heart, godly sorrow for sin. It is the sorrow of the inner man, the hidden man of the heart. It is not in the sensibility only, nor in the judgment only, nor only in the will. The whole inner personality repents. The sorrow of the world dreads the consequences of sin, while godly sorrow hates the sin and refuses to be comforted save by God alone.

It is not so much a sorrow for particular sins as for sin itself. It is a feeling of hopelessness and a sense of divine justice in the visitation of merited punishment upon the sinner.

The sense of impotence in the penitent sinner withers all hope of present or future ability to help himself.

The repentance that is a condition of salvation shows its genuineness by efforts to amend the life. This is manifest in two things: first, in turning from sin, and, secondly, by aiming at perfect obedience. The repenting sinner ceases to do evil and learns to do well, and, in this way, brings forth fruits agreeable to repentance. It is worthy of note that the act of repentance is more dwelt upon in the Word of God than the feeling of sorrow. The feeling is a variable thing, but the act is always and in all men a given quantity.

Repentance is the half-way house between sin and salvation. It is a state and dispensation of law rather than of grace. It is the arraignment, trial and conviction of the sinner at the bar of inflexible justice and in his own conscience. It implies a confession of guilt and an acknowledgment of the justice of the sentence of condemnation. It is an act of penitence that causes the guilty sinner to throw himself on the mercy of God for pardon. In its final analysis repentance discards every plea in abatement, or extenuation, of sin, and every hope of escape from guilt and condemnation except by an act of grace or clemency on the part of God. At this stage it borders on despair and produces an agony nigh of kin to the wailings of the damned. If the sinner were left here, this life would be an intolerable hell. Fortunately, however, this despair of self and of human help, of all help, is the prime condition for the exercise of faith that bringeth salvation.

The First Response.

The reading of your issue of this date, March 6, is like a bugle call. It moves me to write that I will be one of any number—I trust a host—who will pledge you $5 for the holy warfare you wish to wage, during this spring and early summer, against the octopus—the Lottery—whose capacious jaws stretch from sea to sea. By all means let the five hundred (or more, if possible) extra copies of our noble exponent of truth go out into all the parishes of that beloved sister State, which has so long groaned under the burdens entailed on her good citizens by corrupt politicians. Press the matter of organization; and let it be a part of that platform that no man is to be countenanced for the Legislature who has not a clear record and a decided stand on this burning question of the day. What are sugar tariffs, and such like measures, compared to the disgrace that may well cause her best citizens a blush to own they hail from a State which once sat as a queen among her sisters. Between liquor and lottery it is hard to decide which is Satan's prime agency for stealing men's money and destroying their souls. Now seems the favorable season for striking at the latter monster. The other will take many seasons yet to overcome. But both will be done. High Heaven will not be forever mocked by these powers of darkness. I wish you could send a dozen or more of this last issue of the ADVOCATE among my people as samples. It is brimful of good things. Your criticisms on the Zion's Herald's utterance, "What Can Science Do," are just and very needful.

Watchman, blow the trumpet again, long and loud!

J. P. DRAKE.

SHUBUTA, Miss.

Oxford Church Burned.

LET US HELP.

On the night of March 1 the Methodist Church at Oxford, Miss., was destroyed by fire. Everything was lost except the organ and pulpit chairs. It was a very severe blow, especially in view of the previous history of the congregation. About seven years ago they purchased a parsonage at $1,200, and afterwards expended about $500 on its improvement. In 1887-8 they repaired and enlarged the church-building at an outlay of about $6,000. In October, last, the parsonage was destroyed by fire, a total loss. Within the last sixty days they raised $1,500 more and had just closed the purchase of a new parsonage when this great calamity fell in. It is not a wealthy congregation by any means. They have done all, and, indeed, more in proportion to their ability than could have been expected. It is at a town which is the seat of the State University, where the Methodist Church should be attractive in order to advance our interests amongst the coming young men of the State. In order that the church we shall erect shall be a fit representative of our people and our cause, it should be a building such as would cost a large sum. We are not able to build it without help. Let all send in their contributions at once, so that the good work of repairing the damage may go on. Remit to E. Mayes, treasurer, Oxford, Miss.

E. MAYES,
R. W. JONES,
REV. W. R. SIMS,
REV. S. D. LONG.

I most heartily endorse the above very modest statement of the case, and urge all friends throughout Mississippi to aid in reconstructing that church. Only a few months ago their parsonage burned, and now their improved and beautifully finished and furnished church is in ashes. That heroic, liberal congregation must have help. No cause, just now, could be more worthy. No place in the State is more important to evangelical Christianity. I, therefore, urge our brethren to send forward their contributions without delay. Pastors are asked to state the case to their congregations and give opportunity to help an enterprise worthy of most liberal sympathy. Next to having a well-equipped, endowed college of our own, is to have a tasteful church-building and well-organized working congregation near a State University. Every Methodist in Mississippi is interested in this church. Every Methodist patron of the University ought to be solicitous for it.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

JACKSON, MISS., March 6, 1890.

The Pacific Methodist agrees that the profits of the Publishing House should be employed in its legitimate business, and suggests that it might "extend its business by establishing a paper on the Pacific coast." That paper says:

Do the interests of the church demand the establishment and support of such a paper on the coast? Would it be well for the General Conference to authorize the Publishing House to invest two or three thousand dollars a year in such an enterprise? We do not think that there can be any doubt about the matter. What we need more than anything else the General Conference can give us is just such a paper.

We are in favor of that proposal. The General Conference could not do a better thing if the resources of the House will justify it.

Aristotle is said, to have given this advice to a young speaker: "Think as the wise men do, and speak as the common people do." Wise old man, that Aristotle!

Notes.

A brother writes: "The ADVOCATE is a blessing to any family, a help to any Christian and a source of comfort to the bereaved. I feel like Christ has entered a home where the ADVOCATE is found."

Dr. M. S. Andrews, of the Alabama Conference, in the St. Louis Advocate, makes a very important suggestion in regard to the future of our central organ at Nashville. We believe that some such plan ought to be inaugurated. We see no necessity of our central organ being any longer behind the very chiefest papers in the land. It ought to be the best!

A brother, who has written for the ADVOCATE from the beginning, sends us an interesting communication, to which is appended the following postscript:

Whenever your hopper runs low and literary grist gets scarce, you may grind out the above. I am in no hurry, if you have plenty that's better. I have enough to subsist on without it.

That last sentence is perfectly charming.

We receive many communications which end this way:

P. S.—Please correct errors, and much oblige your friend and brother.

It would be much better if the "friend and brother" would read his communication before sending it. He might be able to detect errors. It would not hurt him or the communication to rewrite it from beginning to end. At any rate, that postscript is a useless appendage.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has been spending thousands of money to "keep up" Ames Chapel, in this city; and now Dr. Parkhurst, of Zion's Herald, after visiting our city, says: "The result is a lamentable failure, and the future of the church is an oppressive problem." There is no problem at all. Turn the church completely over to the colored people, and they will soon have it full.

It is curious to note that the number of new books published in this country and England last year was considerably below the number produced the year before. Only in two departments were more produced among us: books of fiction and books of law. In England more were produced of fiction, juvenile books, and medical works. On theology and religion, in our country the number was 119 less than the year before, and in England 118 less. Whole number of books produced last year in this country was 4,014 against 4,621 in 1888, and in England, 4,694 against 4,960 in 1888.

The New York Sun, reviewing Bishop Andrews' report of his tour of inspection of Methodist missions in Asia, and comparing the religious tendencies in Japan with those in this country, closes with this significant paragraph:

It seems to us, therefore, that instead of attempting to encourage a tendency toward indifferent Christianity in Japan, Bishop Andrews and all Christian Bishops and ministers should rather bind themselves together to revive genuine Christianity at home. New York to-day is a pagan city. The majority of the people, and more especially the educated people, are as much pagans as the inhabitants of Tokio.

This is what the same paper says of John Jacob Astor, recently deceased:

He was not a man who in any way sought publicity, and was altogether without the vanity of riches or the greed of notoriety. But by his thousands of tenants and by all with whom he came in personal contact, he was honored as a just, able, and sagacious landlord and administrator, a quiet and unobtrusive gentleman, conscientious in the performance of duty, and of a commendable public spirit.

Dr. J. O. Peck, one of the secretaries of the Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, writing to the Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis, from Hot Springs, Ark., says:

Too many of our people north of Arkansas coming here affiliate with our rival Methodism. Were all loyal to their own church we would be a strong Conference. The Southern Church is alert to capture them. They bait the hook very temptingly sometimes, and at other times conceal the hook. Our ministers assure me that frequently they take our own church name for public use. That is, they drop their distinguishing denominational title chosen for themselves, "South," and publish their services as "The Methodist Episcopal Church." Well, it is the best name, but it is our own. Yesterday, in this city, I saw an announcement as follows: "Central Ave. M. E Church, S." The "South" was so concealed in the "S" that a friend from the North here said to me, "Why, here is one of our own churches!" I do not complain of this, but it is significant. May the whole spirit as well as name of the Methodist Episcopal Church pervade and bless our sister denomination!

We have seen similar statements before, and we would like to know who it is in Arkansas of the preachers of our church who assume the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, "for public use?" Can the Arkansas Methodist bring these preachers to light, so we can see what sort of men they are who will lie in order to catch Methodists from the North.

Personal and Otherwise.

Have you seen the Woman's Missionary Advocate, for March? It is worth seeing and reading, and will do you more good than the best medicine. It is a good tonic for dull souls. Try it; only fifty cents a year.

We understand our old preceptor, Dr. Rivers, of Kentucky, is visiting friends in Baton Rouge. We would be delighted if he will give us a call before he returns home.

Brookhaven, Miss., has a new municipal government, the mayor and aldermen having been appointed by Gov. Stone, according to a recent act of the Legislature.

A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, have our thanks for a beautiful Pepetual Calendar. It is new to us, giving the calendar of any month for over a thousand years from 1400 A. D.

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

Mr. Gladstone is reported to have said recently that perfect statesmanship consists in the practical application of the Christian religion to any given situation.

We are sorry to state the fact that our beautiful church in Oxford, Miss., has been destroyed by fire. Bro. Long, our pastor there, writes that there was no insurance. Our friends have the sympathy of the whole church. We believe Bro. Long and his people will prove themselves equal to the emergency thus thrust upon them.

Will some wise man or woman please tell us why people become offended when they are presented with a bill for amount due on subscription to the ADVOCATE? We would like to see that point in psychology ventilated!

Bro. Faunt LeRoy, of Ruston, La., writes: "We have all been sick with la grippe, and as soon as that passed off, the measles gripped the children. I am working up the Louisiana Chautauqua and am much encouraged."

Rev. Sam Jones denies the report that he has bought a stock farm in Kentucky. He says he expects to live and die a member of the North Georgia Conference.

He was a wise evangelist who announced: "Hereafter no Christian will be admitted to these services unless he brings a sinner with him!"

Some preachers never get to the, "Exhort with all long suffering." They spend all their time on the "reprove, rebuke" part of Paul's direction to Timothy.

The New York Advocate says: "Some prayer meetings are so managed that it would take a high degree of grace to regularly attend them." How about your prayer meeting, brother pastor?

The editor voices his own sentiments and the sentiments of a majority of the readers of the ADVOCATE when he requests that hereafter all contributors to the columns of the paper write over their own names.

We learn from the Wilson Sun that Bro. Cecil, of the Mississippi Conference, preached a powerful sermon against the Louisiana Lottery, not long since, at Wilson, La. The Sun says:

In our humble opinion this was one of the finest efforts and most convincing sermons we have listened to for years; neither have we read or heard of this subject being discussed in a more able manner from a religious standpoint.

We have almost come to the conclusion that to solve the race problem will be an act of cruelty to a great many people and to many newspapers! What would they then have to talk or write about?

President Cocke, of the Industrial Institute and College of Mississippi, having been exonerated from the charges brought against him, tendered to the Board of Trustees his resignation, which was accepted, and Miss S. J. Calloway was elected president pro tem.

Dr. Haygood's "Man of Galilee" is still selling briskly. Just as we predicted when we read it. The ninth thousand has been called for.

What is the matter with the Bishops of that branch of Methodism called, "The Evangelical Association?" They have three Bishops, and two of these have been suspended, and the third is to have a trial soon!

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

Will all the pastors within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference please send to me immediately the name and address of every Sunday-school superintendent in their charge? By so doing the Sunday-school Board hopes to greatly aid you in your Sunday-school work.

The College Location.

The committee appointed to decide upon the site of Millsaps College is composed, as I understand it, of men from the various competing towns; but for some reason the representative of Holly Springs is not among them. But, represented or not, the citizens are assured that a place presenting so many unparelleled advantages can not fail to command the attention of all who are desirous of the first step towards the upbuilding of Millsaps College—a favorable location. They have shown from the first the greatest enthusiasm in their efforts to secure the new college, having offered fifty thousand dollars and the location—a higher bid than that given by any other town in the State. One man alone (I will give his name, for it is worthy of remembrance—Dr. T. J. Malone) is second to Col. Millsaps himself in his generous offer. Dr. Malone is one of the wealthiest men in North Mississippi, and has offered one-half his large property to Millsaps College, provided only it be placed in Holly Springs.

It is an undisputed fact that, in the nature of the place, Holly Springs affords facilities which ought to make it the first educational point of Mississippi. Situated in the center of the northern part, it lies upon the very crest of the State, and is surrounded by a warm, pure, dry atmosphere. Its health is proverbial. It also commands the low-lying districts of Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama.

It is a matter of grave importance that Holly Springs, situated as it is, can obtain the cost of living—i. e., food, clothing and building—more cheaply than anywhere else in the State. Through the Illinois Central railroad it communicates directly with Chicago and New Orleans; the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad supplies it with the meat and grain of Kansas City on one hand, and the coal and iron of Alabama on the other; it lies equally near the lumber forests of the Yazoo Delta and the marble and stone quarries of Tennessee; and from its proximity to Memphis it shares every advantage that that city can afford.

By act of the last Legislature, the retailing of spirituous liquors was prohibited within five miles of the city limits. The society is old and well established, and is widely known for its literary caste.

Millsaps College in Holly Springs will in no wise interfere with the prosperity of the Centenary, just across the line in Louisiana, as its district and railroad communications are entirely distinct; while if located in any central or southern town, it will undoubtedly destroy or be destroyed by the Centenary.

If you endorse the sentiments of "Sigma," as published in the ADVOCATE, of February 20, you can not fail to see that, in naming the qualifications necessary for the site of Millsaps College, he has in every instance laid his finger on Holly Springs.

A CITIZEN.

The Pressing Needs of Church Extension.

There was never a time in the history of Southern Methodism when church building was so active as at the present. Each year it is becoming more so. And herein is the most substantial proof of the growth and progress of the church. Another good indication is in the quality of the houses built. The log cabin and the rough box-house, with no ceiling and no paint, are fast becoming things of the past.

The church extension cause inaugurated eight years ago has contributed no little to this result. It exercised the virtue of agitation in the first piece, and then furnished designs and plans of buildings, and inaugurated such practical measures as have made the cause one of the necessities of modern church progress. No one can realize, except those in a position to know, the importance of this arm of church work. Vastly more is done than the comparatively small outlay of money would indicate, for the larger force is in the incitements to do for themselves what churches were before unconsciously able to do. And, like every other cause which reaches out to help the helpless, as this was originally intended to do, it reacts in still larger measures of good upon the original sources of supply. Thus the church extension movement, from a sort of missionary movement, has become a general movement, and diffuses everywhere the spirit of better churches and more churches.

And the more this spirit increases the more pressing the needs. The Boards in charge of this work desire to foster the growing spirit by doing all they can in the way of substantial help. One hundred dollars is often a weightier argument than a whole bookful of logical deductions. A brother writes, for instance, in substance: "We are trying to build a church here of certain proportions, style, cost, etc. Can we depend on your Board for the remaining one or two hundred dollars—we can not raise any more?" You can imagine the effect of the answer. Now, our Conference Board has about one-half the amount asked for on hand. Four applications have been received since Conference. What are we to do? To answer these applications that there is no prospect of aid soon would be discouraging. Besides, there is no reason for making such an answer. At least, one-half the collections—say those for foreign missions and church extension—ought to be taken early in the year and forwarded. In that event these calls, or most of them, could be met at once. Brethren, let us have the money; and that also subscribed at anniversaries.

A Card of Thanks.

MR. EDITOR: We thank you for publishing a notice of our loss by fire and we thank Bro. Adams for sending it. We thank our friends and brethren who so kindly and liberally sent us relief, for we would have suffered greatly but for this timely aid; and we devoutly thank God for it all. No part of our loss and suffering has been without its lesson. Bro. Adams has proved his love for the needy and his faith in the promises of God. The good people of this place and Logtown, Miss., deserve honorable mention on account of their kindness and liberality to us. The letters sent, the words of cheer and affection and prayer have opened a well-spring of joy and love and sympathy in our hearts that shall never close until the valves of the heart pulsate their last time.

We were left so destitute, our condition was so defenseless, our hearts were so completely crushed, that such extreme kindness struck prepared soil which shall bring forth fruit to the relief of any needy creature that may chance to come our way. God bless abundantly everyone who contributed to our relief! To them all we send the warmest love and kindest thanks that human hearts can feel. Our loss has been almost, or quite, repaid so far as money can repair it. God bless you! Yours faithfully,

J. G. SIBLEY.

A Correction.

To Rev. H. D. Howell, Gallman, Miss.—

Dear Brother: You made no report to the statistical secretary either of assessment or collection for the General Conference delegates. Your presiding elder furnished the assessment, which you will find correctly reported in the Minutes.

"As no preacher likes to be misrepresented," I make this letter public, in defense of "the man" who received the money at Conference, of the editor who so patiently corrects the proof-sheets and prepares the manuscript for publication, and also in defense of

Your brother in Christ,
JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. D. Crymes writes from Meridian, Miss.: "On February 22 we began a series of meetings in the West End Church, 'and the rains descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon the house' of God, but there were visible signs of the grace of God in the hearts of those who assembled from time to time within her walls. The presence of God was felt in every service. There were a few conversions and valuable accessions to the church, and, in spite of the severity of the cold wave, we closed on the night of the second with tolerably fair congregation and the best service of all."

—Rev. R. M. Blocker writes as follows from Rayne, La.: "Our first quarterly meeting for this charge was held last Saturday and Sunday. Bro. John A. Miller, our presiding elder, gave us a week's faithful preaching. Dr. J. L. Gibson, a local elder at Lake Arthur, was with us also, and did fine preaching. We feel greatly strengthened by the coming of these faithful servants of God. Our next quarterly meeting will be held at Plaquemine Brulee."

—Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker writes: "The year's work opened well at New Iberia, and now, after two months have passed, we are prepared to report that the auspicious beginning was a true propheey. Twenty-five persons have been added to the church, congregations are large—at the evening services filling the house; prayer meetings and class meetings are well attended. The purchasing of ground for the building of a new church is enterprised."

—Bishop Galloway, in a private note about Millsaps Methodist College, says: "Our receipts are coming in nicely and our invested fund steadily grows. I repeat that never in life have I known a movement to command such generous attention and evoke such liberal offerings. We have everything to cheer us and nothing to discourage."

Educational Statistics.

The Congregationalist has the following:

Hours of study and columns of space might easily be devoted to Commissioner Dawson's report of education in the United States for the year ending June 30, 1888. It is a volume of over 1,200 pages which are an almost exhaustless thesaurus of information relative to the public and private schools of the country. Without transferring to our pages many of its innumerable statistics, we may cull several comprehensive items. The expenditure for public education during the year under consideration amounted to $122,455,000. More than twelve million children were enrolled in the schools, of whom eight millions, on an average, were in constant attendance. There are 357 institutions of collegiate rank, which is a decrease of four on the previous year. This is probably due to the dying off of weaker institutions from one cause and another. The enrollment of students in these higher institutions is 33,587 young men and 41,746 young women. In the 138 theological schools are 6,512 students; in the 175 medical schools, 18,513 students. At the various college commencements of 1888, 13,746 degrees were conferred. The commissioner, who, by the way, has been succeeded by Dr. William T. Harris, records his unqualified adherence to the American school system. The reports indicate a steady progress of the movement to secure temperance instruction, and greater attention seems to be paid year by year to the various phases of manual and industrial training.

Notice.

The district stewards' meeting of the Opelousas district was held February 5. Will its secretary get a move on him, and send out the assessments?

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policyholders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to those worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Father—"My son, you must not dispute with your mother in that way." Boy—"But she's in the wrong." Father—"That makes no difference, and you might as well learn, my child, once for all, that when a lady says a thing is so it is so, even if it isn't so."

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

"Advertising is to a genuine article what manure is to land—it largely increases the product. Thousands of persons may be reading your advertisement while you are eating or sleeping or attending to your business; hence, public attention is attracted, new customers come to you, and if you render them a satisfactory equivalent for their money they continue to patronize you and recommend you to their friends."—P. T. Barnum.

Recruit—"May I offer you a cigar?" Sergeant—"Have I not forbidden you above all other things to speak unnecessarily? Of course you may."

The great point is to put your announcements in such a shape that people will read them for their own intrinsic worth. Most of the community are more or less interested in your wares, but they won't hear of them if you don't take pains to tell them of it in an entertaining manner.—Art in Advertising.

Rescuer (who has pulled a man out of the water)—"Gracious! Your head is bleeding. How did you cut it?" Rescued man—"On the water's edge, I guess."

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art.
MANSFIELD, LA.
One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.
The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

A FAMILY GALE.

Such fun as we had one rainy day,
When father was home and helped us to play;

And made a ship and hoisted a sail,
And crossed the sea in a fearful gale.

But we hadn't sailed into Boston town,
When captain and crew, and vessel went down.

Down, down in a jolly wreck,
With the captain rolling on the deck.

But he broke out again with a lion's roar,
And we on two legs, and he on the floor,

Ran out of the parlor, and up the stair,
And frightened mamma and baby there.

So mamma said she'd be p'liceman now,
And tried to 'rest us. She didn't know how.

Then the lion laughed and forgot to roar,
Till we chased him out of the nursery door;

And then he turned to a pony gay,
And carried us all on his back away.

Whippity, hickity, kickity ho!
If we hadn't fun, then I don't know.

Till we tumbled off and he cantered on,
Never stopping to see if his load was gone!

And I couldn't tell any more than he,
Which was Charley and which was me,

Or which was Towser, for all in a mix
You'd think three people had turned to six.

Till Towser's tail had caught in a door,
He wouldn't hurrah with us any more.

And mamma came the romping to quiet,
And told us a story to break up the riot.

Little Frisk.

I have a little dog named Frisk. Frisk is about two months old, but he has not learned to come up the steps yet. He can bark as loud as any dog of his size. Frisk is a pure white shepherd dog, with long shaggy hair. You may think that he will not hurt if he bites you. I wish you would try to get a piece of meat away from him, and he would show you that he can bite hard enough to hurt. Frisk can run as fast as anybody four years old. He falls off of the gallery sometimes. We never let him come in the house; but we bring him upon the gallery and let him play as long as he wants to.

Your little friend,
ETHELBERT H. GALLOWAY.

MR. EDITOR: I broke my goat-cart, so I have been riding my goat horseback. On my seventh birthday I received several presents. One was "Joe: A War Story." I like that book. My Uncle Tom gave me a little ax. Father said I could not cut a stick of wood in two. But I have already cut it in two once, and nearly again. I had a nice letter from Sister Gordon yesterday. Bro. Gordon was our preacher last year. This year we have Bro. Terry. Have you had the grip? Lots of folks up here have. Bro. Lewis, at Winona, had it four weeks. Bro. Lewis' little boy is my special friend. He and his mother visited us recently. I tell you we had a good time. I like the children's letters and the stories better than anything in the ADVOCATE. You must come to our District Conference at Vaiden. Be sure to publish this letter, for Sister Gordon has been looking for it two weeks.

Your little friend,
DAVID L. BINGHAM.

CARROLLTON, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from this community, I thought that I would write to your excellent paper. Brother Hough visited us last Sunday. He preached at the Bayou Barbary, at eleven in the morning, and at the close of the meeting the stewards took up a collection, which amounted to fifteen dollars. He preached at Maurepas at seven that evening, and the stewards took up eighteen dollars for the purpose of furnishing the parsonage. We have a nice Sunday-school here, and we have a nice organ in our new church, and we have money enough to get a church bell. Bro. Miller is our superintendent, and Miss Roana Webber is my teacher. Good-by.

WILLIAM C. JONES.

MAUREPAS, La.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the children's column in the ADVOCATE, and as I find that some no older than myself have been writing to you, I will venture a few lines. I go to Sunday-school regularly, and papa, who is our superintendent, says I nearly always have perfect lessons. Rev. J. J. Kelly is our preacher this year, and the people here all like him very much. We have a new church, the old one having been destroyed by a cyclone two or three years ago. Our church is not ceiled yet, but we hope to be able to finish it some time this year. I am eleven years old and am going to school.

Your young friend,
GUSSIE HUNT.

WIDALIA, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am quite a small boy. I will be so glad if you will publish my letter. Papa and mama don't know that I am writing, and won't they be surprised when they see my letter in the ADVOCATE? Mr. Willie Evans, our new preacher, has been to see us, and we like him. He is a little man, but we think he will make a big preacher. Now, I will ask the cousins a question: Where is "ague and consumption" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

BILLIE B. MARTIN.

MISERY OR COMFORT.—In North Carolina recently an old colored man was lecturing, and this is one of the things he said:

"When I see a man going home with a gallon of whisky and a half-pound of meat, dat's temperance lecture enough for me, and I sees it every day. I know that everything in his home is on the same scale—gallon of misery to half-pound of comfort."

Those who never take the first glass will never become drunkard. Be on the safe side, boys, and say you will never touch the stuff which brings misery, poverty, and death. And, girls, let your influence always be against intemperance of every sort.

If you don't want your homes to be those which have a "gallon of misery to a half-pound of comfort," let your chosen associates be those who "touch not, taste not, handle not." Let the blue ribbon be your badge, and don't be afraid to show your colors.—Selected.

Sayings of the Little Ones.

"Mamma," said little Kate, "I don't mind going down to the hotel with Lou, but I don't like to go up in the alligator!"

Georgie saw a telegraph wire and poles for the first time; gazing for a minute or two deliberately at them, he remarked, in his slow way: "Is there any woman big enough to hang clothes on that line?"

"Ma," said Bobby, 'is it wrong for little boys to tie kettles to dogs' tails?" "Decidedly wrong, Bobby; I hope you'll never do such a thing as that." 'No, indeed, ma," replied Bobby, emphatically; "all I do is to hold the dog!"

Little French, seven or eight years old, is quite a philosopher. When an auntie of his was married, some one asked his little brother what it was to get married. French responded, "I know; it is being buried alive."

Ethel was in church for the first time and, with Tommy, was eagerly watching the collection plates.

"Why," said Tommy, in a loud whisper, "that old gentleman didn't give a thing. I should think he might have given a penny anyway, shouldn't you?"

"Well, I don't know," said Ethel, who owns a small bank whose contents undergo frequent reduction at her hands, "I guess mayhe he was too old and tired to have shaked long enough to get one."

Dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, and that tired feeling are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones the stomach, promotes healthy digestion, creates an appetite, cures sick headache and builds up the whole system. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

When God intends to fill a soul, he first makes it empty; when he intends to enrich a soul, he first makes it poor; when he intends to exalt a soul, he first makes it humble; when he intends to save a soul, he first makes it sensible of its own miseries and nothingness.—Flavel.

Household.

EDUCATION IN THE HOME.—There is a process of education constantly going on in every dwelling which cure and thought can make an unspeakable advantage, and at the same time contribute to make a happy home. To keep objects of pure and high interest before the children's minds, in a natural and suitable way—to have them supplied with such books as will occupy and interest—to talk not so much to them as with them about objects—to take note of and encourage any advance they make, and to direct the flow not of a part of, but of the whole of their lives—physical, mental, moral, without apparent interference or violence; this happy art—to be sought, prayed for, labored for under God's blessing, goes far to make a peaceful and happy home.

The tastes of children are naturally simple. Your child's wooden toy cut with your own hand, perhaps, and made a link of connection between your little boy and you, may be more to him, more influential over his character, more potent in binding his heart to you while living, his memory to you when you are dead, than a costly gift that you ordered at the store. And then you, living a loving, natural life before your children, and with them, bend the knee in their midst and speak to God of them and yourself, there is a powerful restraint being put on natural evil, there is a pleasant type of heaven where the whole family that is named after Jesus shall be gathered together.—Dr. John Hall.

THE HOUSEHOLD ANGEL.—The glad hearted, cheery woman who makes the best of everything is a treasure in any house. She may make mistakes, she may forget, she may spoil a dish in mixing or in baking, but if, with the mishap, she sends in a gleam of sunshine, a smile, a laugh, or some gay and kindly word, people forget their disappointments and make the best of what they can not help.

And how much better this is than the unvarying precision of one who has no faults and no patience with those who have; who never makes mistakes nor makes allowances for others who do. Accuracy and precision are excellent; punctuality and promptness are most valuable; but "love is the fulfilling of the law," and Christian charity is greater than faith, hope, faultless housekeeping or anything else.

If you're born with sunshine in your heart, thank God for it, and let it shine out.

But if not, turn your gaze to the Son of Righteousness, and catch the brightness that beams from his face. "They looked unto him and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed."—Common People.

A STRAW.—"Have you read your chapter this morning?" laughingly asked a school-girl of her young companions, as they gathered about a register in the Little Miami depot, and one of them picked up a Bible which was lying on the waiting-room table. "I haven't time for that," one replied. Another: "But I find plenty of time for the last novel." And all laughed and went on to school. Such are the coming wives and mothers. Partly bravado their words surely were, but all too clearly revealing the disrelish cultivated by the young for God's Word. Yet that Word bulwarks the home. That Word guards woman's honor, and lifts her to her peerage. O parents! what need we have for sincere and attractive piety that flowers in family worship! The family Bible; is there one in your house?—Western Christian Advocate.

Miss Mary L. Booth, the late editor of Harper's Bazar, was opposed by her father and mother in her desire to support herself by literary work, and she, therefore, learned the vest-maker's trade to pay her necessary expenses, and devoted her evenings to her loved studies. Although Miss Booth became so celebrated as a translator she never could speak a word of either French or German. Her struggles seem incredible, the amount of work accomplished marvelous, and the pay for years was simply in books. She often walked four miles because she had not enough for an omnibus fare in her pocket. Eventually she received the largest salary ever paid to any woman in America.—New York Herald.

Red Sunsets and Volcanic Dust.

The red sunsets that delighted and bewildered the world from August 28, 1883, to the end of January, 1884, will never be forgotten by the generation that witnessed them. The late Professor Proctor attributed them to light reflected from clouds of cosmic dust which the earth encountered in its passage through space. Mr. Lockyer and other eminent scientists held that the light was caused by volcanic dust from the eruption of Krakatoa in the Straits of Sunda on the 26th of August, 1883, the most terrific outburst known in the history of man. We remember that the entire island with its mountains sank into the sea, and that forty thousand persons perished. "Quantities of dust," we are told by Dr. Crookes, "finely divided, and having the same sign as that of the earth, may be kept suspended in the upper air for an indefinite period by electrical repulsion." Professor S. P. Langly relates his own observation on Mt. Whitney in 1881: "From a height of twelve thousand feet we looked down on what seemed to be a level dust-ocean, invisible from below, but whose depth was six or seven thousand feet. The light reflected to us from it was clearly red, and it stretched as far as the eye could reach, in every direction, although there was no special wind nor local cause for it. It was evidently like the dust seen in mid-ocean from the Peak of Teneriffe—something present all the time, and a permanent ingredient of the earth's atmosphere. At our own elevation the sky was of a remarkably deep violet hue, and it seemed as if no dust was present in this upper air. But in getting just at noon in the edge of the shadow of a range of cliffs which arose twelve hundred feet behind us, the sky took on a whitish hue. Scrutinizing this through the telescope, it was found to be due to myriads of the minutest dust-particles." The same authority tells us that with the unparalleled force of its last eruption—which we know was its death-throe—"Krakatoa may have added millions of tons to the dust-envelope of the globe; and this last contribution is not likely to fall soon to the surface."—Home Journal.

Water for Fuel.

What appears to be an important invention has recently been made public in Philps, Wis. It is no less than the cheap use of water as fuel. According to light, heat and power, the appliance consists of nothing but a piece of gas pipe from two to six inches in diameter, as may be desired, and of convenient length to fit a cook stove or a parlor or other heater, with short legs or stable support to keep it in position. This is placed in the stove, with one end slightly projecting, to which is attached a vessel of water with stop-cock conduit from the water vessel into the pipe. Before reaching the steam chamber, the water passes through the important part of the invention, the part that constitutes or contains the great discovery. By means of it the water may pass into the steam chamber, while the steam can not pass out. The part of the pipe containing the steam chamber is within the stove, although a small part may be without if desired. To this the heat of a moderate wood or coal fire is applied, so as to heat the steam to a high temperature, say 300 or 400 degrees, when it passes out of a small orifice immediately into the midst of a bed of coals or flame from burning wood or coal, when it is at once raised to the required temperature, 400 degrees or more, to be immediately decomposed into its gases (oxygen and hydregen), which instantly become flame. Only a moderate summer fire of wood or coal will be required the coldest day in winter, the gaseous flame furnishing the balance of the heat needed in the coldest room. The capacity for reducing heat may be regulated to suit requirements. When it is known that hydrogen flame yields a heat in burning five times greater than carbon, or about 2,000 to 2,500 degrees, one may form some idea of the capacity of this little contrivance for producing heat. By increasing the temperature of the gas pipe to about 400 degrees, the vapor may be decomposed into its gases before exit from the pipe, and in such cases it is emitted in a jet of blue flame. In either case the oxy-hydrogen flame is easily produced, and with very small consumption of fuel.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

AUSTIN—LEWIS STERLING AUSTIN was born in West Feliciana parish, La., December 2, 1806, and died in Jackson, La., January 1, 1890, at seven o'clock A. M.

He suffered greatly during his last illness, but was patient and uncomplaining. He was conscious until within a few hours of the end; then fell into a quiet and peaceful slumber, from which he awoke to begin the New Year in heaven. In addition to a long life of consistent Christianity, he was privileged to leave on record a dying testimony full of assurance and comfort. A loved one, sitting by, said to him, "If our heavenly Father should call you to come up higher, would you be afraid to go?" He replied, "No." "Do you feel that you are ready?" Without hesitation, he responded. "Yes." "If you should not see the children again on earth, what shall I tell them for you?" He calmly replied, "Tell them all to come to heaven." Thus ended a long, honorable and useful life. In early boyhood he attached himself to the Methodist Church, and continued to the day of his death its devoted adherent and warm supporter.

His name and labors are intimately associated with the early history of the parishes of East and West Feliciana, and no more faithful citizen did they ever have. But it was not in public life that his virtues shine forth more prominently, but rather in the domestic circle, in social intercourse and more particularly in Christian association. He was a most sympathetic and affectionate father. His children could approach him with the utmost freedom; yet they entertained for him the highest degree of respect and reverence. They show their appreciation of his faith and example, as all of them are endeavoring to serve their father's God. He was a most faithful and considerate husband, attending upon his wife when in suffering and affliction with a patience and tenderness which were beautiful and touching. He was a true and reliable friend. The attachment he felt and showed for his Christian associates did credit to his warm heart, and was ever a source of pure pleasure to them.

To his pastor he ever gave the warmest place by his heartstone, and the most appreciative welcome of his heart. To visit him at his home was a social and religious pleasure; worship at his altar was a privilege indeed. The Master always presided in the house of his servant, and made his gracious influences to be felt. As he grew older he arranged to be rid as far as practicable of cares and business, so that he might be the more ready for the coming of the Master; and so he was found calmly, peacefully awaiting the divine summons.

C. G. ANDREWS.

HODGE—FANNIE MAUD CARRUTH, daughter of John P. and Lizzie Carruth, was born in Amite county, Miss., on June 24, 1867. She was converted and joined the church, August 27, 1878, in her thirteenth year. Was married to Willie A. Hodge, by Rev. W. H. Germany, on December 23, 1885, and died at her home, in Lincoln county, Miss., December 24, 1889, aged twenty-three years and six months.

Sister Hodge's married life was a happy one. She leaves a husband, one child—Willie Lee—and a host of loved ones behind. She was of a mild, sweet, gentle disposition, a woman of deep solid piety. Though young in years, she was strong in faith. Her husband confided in her, and when she left him to go to her home in heaven, he felt like he had lost his richest earthly treasure. She was an obedient daughter, an affectionate sister, a noble Christian woman; a patient, loving wife; a tender, indulgent mother; a charming neighbor and faithful friend. This was evidenced by the large crowd of sympathizing friends that were present on February 9, at old Adams Camp Ground, when and where the writer of these lines preached her funeral sermon. She lived right, and died as she lived; so we who knew her best, and loved her most, mourn not as those who have no hope, for we know that if we are faithful to the end, that there will be a happy meeting in the beautiful beyond, where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are unknown.

May the God of love and mercy ever sustain the bereaved ones, and take special care of husband and child, and bring them all to the mansions of bliss! is the prayer of one who feels a deep interest in their spiritual welfare.

H. P. LEWIS.

TILLY—Mrs. HANNAH SMITHWICK TILLY (nee Moore) was born in North Carolina, on December 29, 1800, and died at her son's residence, Benj. Tilly, in Bienville, La., on January 21 1890, where she had lived for the last forty-two years, aged eighty-nine years and twenty-five days. Sister Tilly joined the Methodist Church at fourteen years of age. She married William Tilly, on July 19, 1821. The result of this marriage was thirteen children—five daughters and eight sons. Of this number two daughters and seven sons remain, all of whom, except one son, belong to the church—the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Two daughters died in infancy. The other deceased children belonged to the church, making, therefore, twelve out of thirteen for the church, with hope following the wandering one.

Sister Tilly lived a consistent, active, working member of the church for seventy-five years. Her last labors and efforts culminated in building and establishing Bear Creek Church, where she now rests from her labors. As her pastor, I only knew her a little more than a year, and in my visits to her it was like hearing one all but on the other shore. She loved to talk about religion, home, heaven, and of the prospects of being there. It was refreshing to be by her bedside and hear her experience and how much she desired to be at home in glory; yet she was willing to suffer and wait till the Master called. She suffered much; was confined to her bed a number of years before she died. When the messenger came he found her ready. Thus ended a full mission and lifetime; entering death with no unusual symptoms, but quietly as an infant going to sleep.

R. A. DAVIS, P. C.

STEEL.—Died near Opelousas, La., Friday, February 7, 1890, CHRISTOPHER STEEL, aged eighty-nine years and nine months. Bro. Steel was born in Pittsburg, Penn., and came to the parish of St. Landry, La., when eighteen years of age, where he has resided ever since. He connected himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1865; was converted soon after, and lived a devout Christian life up to the hour of death. Bro. Steel's conversion was a very remarkable one in some respects, and impressed all present with its genuineness. His life, afterwards, fully confirmed his testimony given at the time, and his death was peaceful and triumphant.

In all his business relations with his fellow-men his religion was paramount. He lived beloved and respected by all who knew him, and the large attendance at his funeral was an expression of the love and esteem of his brethren and friends. He leaves an only child and several grandchildren to mourn their irreparable loss. By his death earth is made poorer, heaven richer.

R. S. I.

VANCE—Mrs. MIAMI F. VANCE, wife of J. H. Vance and daughter of E. H. and R. A. Walnwright, died at her home in Enpora, Miss., December 29, 1889. She was born October 17, 1860, near Greensburg, in St. Helena parish, La. She came to Webster county, Miss., December, 1881; was married to Mr. J. H. Vance, December 16, 1883. She united herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived a devoted Christian till death.

She bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. She never murmured. In the morning before her death she told her relatives to meet her in heaven. Death to her had no terrors, for they had been extracted by the grace of God. She leaves a husband and three small children, and many relatives and friends, to mourn their loss; not as those who have no hope, for they are well assured that their loss is her eternal gain. May the Comforter be with the bereaved and sorrow-stricken ones.

C. R. A. BRANTLEY, P. C.

WATSON—In Rankin county, Miss., February 8, 1890, of congestion, ROBERTA MAY, infant daughter of Mr. A. O. and Mrs. F. W. Watson, aged nine months and twenty days. "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." S. S.

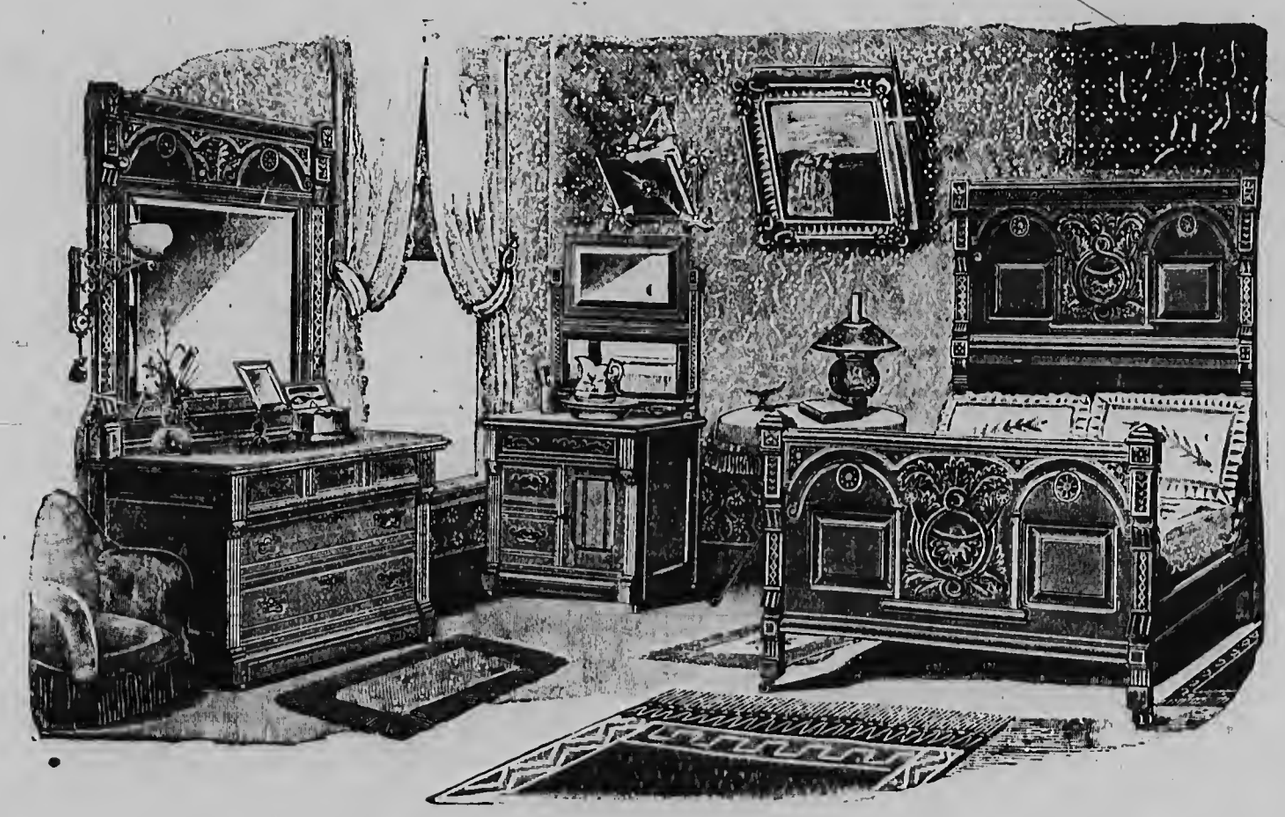
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

QUARTERLY REVIEW

Of the M. E. Church, South,

EDITED BY

W. P. HARRISON, D.D.

Published quarterly—January, April, July, and October. Price $2.50 per annum. This is as cheap as any similar publication issued in America or Europe. The erudition of the editor is so well known that no commendation of his skill and ability is necessary. The mechanical execution is not excelled by any publication of its kind. It is especially designed to meet the wants of the THINKING CLASS, both of the clergy and laymen.

No preacher who desires to be progressive can afford to be without the REVIEW.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PERIODICALS,

EDITED BY

W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM, D.D.

Our Sunday-school periodicals should be used in all our schools. They are authorized by the General Conference, prepared by our Editor, published by our House for the especial use and benefit of our people. Adapted to our wants, they should not be substituted by any other.

Preachers, Sunday-school officers, and all others interested in the furtherance of Southern Methodism, SEE TO IT that no undenominational or impure literature is used in our schools!

In matter and style our periodicals are equal to the best, and are cheaper than any other of equal grade.

All the moral and religious reasons that call for Methodist preachers in Methodist pulpits call for Methodist literature in Methodist schools. Write for specimen copies.

The Sunday School Magazine. A fifty-six page monthly of acknowledged excellence, for the use of officers, teachers, and older scholars. With full expositions of the International Lesson Texts; every number contains valuable hints as to the facts, principles, objects, methods, and capabilities of Sunday-school work. No publication of equal merit is furnished at a less price. Think of it, nearly 700 pages yearly, postage paid, for the small sum of 50 cents.

The Senior Quarterly. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for scholars in advanced classes. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns, maps, etc.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Representative Coleman is making an effort to have an appropriation for the New Orleans navy yard inserted in the general naval appropriation bill. This, if accomplished, would simplify the matter very much, as unless the opposition proves stronger than is expected, the item would go through with the rest of the bill.

The Military Committee of the House, by a unanimous vote, adopted Mr. Lansing's favorable report on the Grosvenor bill, establishing the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park. The report takes the ground that the Western armies should be aided in marking the lines of their valorous fighting as Eastern armies have been at Gettysburg.

Representative Boatner has introduced a resolution to appropriate $50,000 to be available immediately for the purpose of protecting the Mississippi levees below the Arkansas line.

Gold has been discovered in a gravel bank just east of Sioux Falls, Dak., and the find has occasioned much excitement, as samples that have been assayed leave no doubt as to its quality.

At Lebanon, Ohio, ex-Treasurer Coleman, who has been convicted of embezzlement, the amount being $12,500, was sentenced to pay double the amount embezzled, the cost of prosecution and to be imprisoned in the penitentiary two and one-half years.

A big financial institution which has no counterpart in this country is soon to be organized in New York. It will have for its principal object the capitalization of industrial enterprises in such shape that they will be available for general investment. The new institution will have a capital of $5,000,000, and it will be a joint English and American company, with headquarters in New York and London.

The funeral of Hon. Geo. H. Pendleton, ex-United States minister to Germany and ex-United States senator from Ohio, at Cincinnati, on March 8, was one of the most imposing ever held in that city. Ex-President R. B. Hayes and many other distinguished persons were present.

The Pan-American Congress will adjourn early in April, but the precise date has not been fixed. After adjournment they will visit the South.

Dr. McGlynn addressed the Anti-Poverty Society in New York City, on March 10, for the first time in several weeks, having just recovered from his illness.

Bishop Fink, of Kansas, has consented to have his recent letter prohibiting Catholics from joining the Farmers' Alliance modified. Representatives of the State and county alliances were given an audience by the Bishop, and assured him that there was no desire to conflict with the views of the church, and that all religious parts of the constitution would be eliminated.

The Mississippi is still rising, and the floods are piling up between Cairo and the sea. It is now at the highest point ever reached at New Orleans. There is a crevasse near Arkansas City about 350 feet wide, and efforts are being made to close the break at once.

Two thousand shirt makers are on a strike in New York City. Many of them are women, and they demand the uniform rate of pay in all the shops. They also want the bosses to provide machines for them to operate. The shirtmakers don't intend to work more than ten hours a day. At present they work fourteen hours.

FOREIGN.

The Czar has received a threatening letter from a woman. The writer says that unless he modifies his reactionary policy he will meet the fate of Peter III., Paul I. and Alexander II.

The Shah of Persia has ordered his ambassador in Berlin to send engineers to provide large Persian towns with gas works.

The Turks are extorting cash and promissory notes from Christians at Messara, Crete, by threats of imprisonment. The mayor of Zaros declining to cash a note for £6,000, the citizens were condemned to subscribe for the payment of the amount.

The Russian minister of the interior has assumed the right to dismiss Lutheran pastors and control pastoral conferences.

To mark the anniversary of the death of his grandfather, Emperor William I., the Emperor of Germany sent an aide-de-camp to Herr Von Boetticher, the minister of the interior, with decoration of the order of the Black Eagle. Accompanying the decoration was a letter in the Emperor's own handwriting, in which he associates the honor with the memory of the late Emperor, to whom he refers as the pioneer of the social reform movement.

The Portuguese government is determined, at whatever cost or hazard, to keep the railway and its lands and to exclude England entirely from Mozambique. The railroad company claims £1,750,000. America's claim on behalf of the McMurdee estate is £760,000. In view of Portugal's deliberate attempt at forcible confiscation, England and America will insist upon ample compensation for their outraged citizens.

The Federation of Belgian miners has sent a petition to the government and Chamber of Deputies, asking them to display an interest in the workingmen equal to that shown by Emperor William of Germany, and to see that legislation is adopted to reduce their hours of labor and to increase their wages.

Now, Give Attention

To the purification of your blood, for at no season is the body so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from a good medicine, as in March, April and May. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the people's favorite spring medicine. It stands unequalled for purifying the blood, curing scrofula, salt rheum, etc., regulating the kidneys and liver, repairing nerve tissues, strengthening and invigorating the whole body, as well as checking the progress of acute and chronic disease, and restoring the afflicted parts to a natural, healthy condition. If you have never tried Hood's Sarsaparilla for your "spring medicine," do so this season.

Death of Dr. W. A. Galloway.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, son of the late Dr. C. B. Galloway, was born in Kosciusko, Miss., February 9, 1851, and died in Jackson, Miss., on the morning of March 1, 1890, in the thirty-ninth year of his age. He was a student at the University of Mississippi for several years, but left there before graduation, to enter upon the study of his profession. He was a student in the Medical Colleges at Louisville and New Orleans, taking his diploma from the latter institution. At the University of Mississippi he took high rank in his classes and was popular and forcible as a speaker in the debating societies. His family and friends looked for him to gain distinction in the profession of law, thinking he had eminent gifts therefor. But he chose rather the life-work of his father, and after graduation was associated with him in the practice of medicine at Canton, Miss.

In 1879 he married Mrs. Bettie Williams, of Jackson, Miss., who survives him.

Since 1883 he has resided in Jackson, and at the time of his death had a large and lucrative practice. He was fond of surgery and had distinguished himself in several difficult, skillful operations.

He was a man of brilliant gifts, and a rare, refined humor which made him the charm of the circle where he was best known. A born gentleman, delicate in his sensibilities as a woman, gentle and confiding in disposition, proud and independent in spirit, he had a magnetism of manner that made him friends and held them with hooks of steel.

He died in communion with the Methodist Church, and during his last illness expressed unfaltering trust in Christ as his Savior.

He was a member of a large family—three brothers and two sisters whom survive. One of his sisters, Mrs. J. M. Weems, is a missionary in the City of Mexico, and his other, Miss Maggie, was a member of his family at the time of his death. One brother, Dr. J. G. Galloway, is a member of the Mississippi Conference; another, Mr. Columbus Galloway, is a farmer in Louisiana, and the third, Rev. Chas. B. Galloway, an eminent and deservedly popular Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dr. Galloway was buried on Sunday evening at four o'clock, Revs. Dr. Black and Watkins officiating. A large concourse of friends attended and sorrowfully joined in the last sad rites.—Clarion-Ledger.

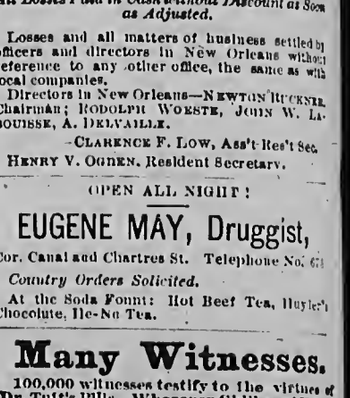
A Superb Rose



"THE DINSMORE"

Should be in every garden that it is not already adorning. It is entirely hardy, enduring our severest winters, of large size, perfect form, deep crimson in color, deliciously fragrant, and blooms continuously during the whole season, so that roses can be gathered from it almost every day from June to October. Remember, it is ever-blooming, hardy as an oak, with the rich crimson color and delicious fragrance of Gen. Jacqueminot.

Price, 25 cents each; five for $1.00; twelve for $2.00; free by mail.

With every order for a single plant or more, will be sent, gratis, our superb catalogue of "Everything for the Garden" (the price of which is 25 cents), together with our new "Essay on Garden Culture of the Rose," on condition that you will say in what paper you saw this advertisement. Club orders for FIVE or TWELVE plants can have the catalogue sent, when desired, to the separate address of each member comprising the Club, provided always that the paper is named.

BELIEVE GOOD THINGS OF GOD.

BY WM. LUFF.

When in the storm it seems to thee
That he who rules the raging sea
Is sleeping—still, with bended knee,
Believe good things of God.

When thou hast sought in vain to find
The silvery thread of love entwined
With life's oft-tangled web—resigned,
Believe good things of God.

And should he smite thee till thy heart
Is crushed beneath the bruising smart,
Still while the bitter tear-drops start,
Believe good things of God.

'Tis true thou canst not understand
The dealings of thy Father's hand;
But, trusting what his love has planned,
Believe good things of God.

He loves thee! In that love confide,
Unchanging, faithful, true and tried;
And ivi or joy or grief betide,
Believe good things of God.

Thou canst not raise thy thoughts too high:
As spreads above the earth the sky,
So do his thoughts thy thoughts outvie;
Believe good things of God.

In spite of what thine eyes behold;
In spite of what thy fears have told;
Still to his gracious promise hold—
Believe good things of God.

For know that what thou canst believe
Thou shalt in his good time receive;
Thou canst not half his love conceive—
Believe good things of God.

The Conscience of the Other.

BY REV. C. H. OWEN.

Many devices are contrived and many schemes are laid, many laws are enacted and much anxiety exists in this age of ours for the overthrow of evil and suppression of wrong. The complications existing in modern society and civilization are taxing the genius and resources of the mighty men to rear successfully the foundations of future progress toward the goal of the highest degree of human development, and render it impervious to the encroachments of corruption and vice. All plans fail that take their rise in merely human origin. No system of government founded on merely human ideals of law has been able to withstand the besom of destruction. The only adequate method of governing human society for its highest good is a government administered by the scepter of a Christian conscience. The home rule agitation of England, the belligerent attitude of the powers of Europe, the spirit of revolution in the petty provinces of monarchical government, the bitter strife between capital and labor—all exhibit the fact that the governments of civilization, calling themselves Christian, are far from the standard of Christian equity, and are dominated by rulers other than those who have the mind of Christ; that they are regulated by laws other than those originating in or comporting with the Decalogue and the Sermon on the Mount. Eighteen centuries have sped away since the regenerating Christ gave his commission to disciple all nations, and yet there are things that almost cause us to wail like Jeremiah: "Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there?"

The bitter prejudice and the scandalous denunciations of professed Christians on the vexing race problem would impress one with the heterogeneity of the human race rather than the brotherhood. This is as much beneath the dignity of Christ and his gospel as a Tartar peasant is beneath the great Gladstone. The great principle which differentiates Christ and his gospel from men and their institutions is self-sacrifice. The more man conforms to this ideal, the less friction there is in the management of human affairs. Conscience, properly enlightened, is the dictator of human conduct. We must follow conscience only so far as conscience follows the gospel. The more enlightened the conscience is with reference to our personal welfare and rectitude, the more correct will it be with reference to the welfare of others. We live not to ourselves, but we are vitally connected with every human being with whom we have to do. When I leave solitude and join fortunes and destiny with society, my conduct has reference to others than myself. I become, in a measure, my brother's keeper. Our conduct is open before all classes of critics. We are not confined, as Christians, to the narrow limit of nominal discipleship for the total range of our influence and responsibility. It has been asserted to the contrary by high authority. I had better state this argument is on the basis of Christian life. It is asserted that Paul's injunction in Romans xiv and 1. Corinthians viii refers only to a Christian's influence on a Christian. (Dr. Howard Crosby vs. Dr. Herrick Johnson.) If we, in our influence, are to regard the conscience and spiritual welfare of none but Christians, how can we be deaoted the salt of the earth? How are we the light of the world? How could believers be made at all? How, with this theory, can we harmonize the express language of the apostle: "If any of them that believe not, bid you to a feast, whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no questions for conscience sake?" Whose conscience? "Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other," the unbeliever. This is also the clear teaching of the apostles in another place. "Give none offense (occasion of stumbling), neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." How clear; how specific! There is an entirely different sphere in which conscience must act from that which merely pertains to ourselves. What would not be an injury to myself may be a stumbling-block to another of weaker faith and a less intelligent conscience. Considered upon its merits and demerits, a thing may be for us no wrong. But it may be the occasion of ruin to another of a weaker moral sense and moral stamina. We must abstain from some things that would give us pleasure for the sake of the conscience of the other. So we must be concerned not about things considered in themselves, but in relation to others. A thing may be perfectly innocent, considered on its intrinsic merits; but its connection with, or relation to, something else harmful may cause some one to go into wrong. So there are things intrinsically innocent that are extrinsically pernicious. Consequently the enlightened, conscientious Christian does not first ask, Is there harm in a thing? but, Is it good and profitable for all? We then do all things, in word and deed, for the glory of God, not to please ourselves; so that our whole concern is with things that are positively good. Things of doubtful character are either negative or positively hurtful. "He that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad."

Dr. Crosby reduces the teaching of Paul to a mere travesty by saying that the principle taught by him "had no fulfillment in fact." The apostle did not mean what he said exactly. It might possibly happen. He asserts that Paul practiced what he condemned, after he had written the doctrine of abstinence; that he ate idols' meat at the table with unbelievers. Of the truth of this assumption, we have no evidence. But Paul says, "All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient," etc. It was his glory to sacrifice sensual pleasure for the promotion of the gospel. "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." He loved God and souls more than wine and meat and money, and the long catalogue of delusive pleasures.

The law of self-sacrifice undergirds the whole system of Christian doctrine. In proportion as this law prevails, Christianity spreads and triumphs, and wrong is overthrown. The bulwarks of sin can not endure before the imperial march of the bride of Christ, a "living sacrifice." The catalogue of crimes, jealousy, hatred, variance and strife will stop in the church of Christ when the mind of Christ possesses her. The bloody pages of the past will be blotted out, and the rumors of war, internecine strife, enmity between the rich and poor will cease when each seek not their own things, but also the things of others. Can not, especially, the ministry of both sections of our great nation cease sectional vituperation, and exalt and strengthen the bond of Christian fraternity, and lead the church into the holy of holies of perfect national peace and righteousness? When a Bishop can descend from his lofty dignity and integrity of Christian character enough to talk of mustering men and arms to coerce the South into subjection to colored rule, there is time for Zion to put on sackcloth.

What is Christendom doing that the deadly curse of the rum traffic hangs like a diabolical vampire on Christian nations? Mr. Ingersoll justly taunts Christianity with the existence of the rum traffic in the United States, when there is a Christian population sufficient to vote it out of the nation.

Why has Christian England put the shackles of the blighting opium curse upon the Chinese Empire? No conscience for the conscience of the other is the solution. The Bank of England is of greater importance than the hundreds of millions of benighted heathen. Holding the pellucid water of eternal life in one hand and deadly poison in the other, she stands and offers the water, and says, "You may take it, if you want;" but, thrusting out the cup of poison, she says, "Take it, or die."

Our government is not a whit behind. She has "framed mischief by a law," and legalized the rum traffic, and invites the world to a table filled with the flummery of a little religion mixed with more gambling and most whisky. Of all times that have ever been, we now need a Christian conscience to deal with the present situation. Before the end comes, the church shall rule the world. But in order for this millennial blessing to be realized, Christianity must be first in everything, and every passion, sin and vice must own her sway and depart.

An Open Letter.

BY R. ABBEY, D. D.

[A lady correspondent living in New Orleans, in whose welfare I feel largely interested, in a letter, not a great while ago, remarks, in reply to my inquiry: "We are not members of any church. Do you think only church members are allowed in heaven? I do not." And I desire to reply in this way, presuming there are many others in your city who occupy the same position.]

My Dear Madam: The question you ask is not susceptible of a categorical answer; nor is your answer to it susceptible of any clear understanding. They both suppose the church might have, or be supposed to have, some intrinsic power of salvation, which I do not think is taught in the Bible. I think the agency of the church, as touching one's personal salvation, comes up in a very different way. The church is nothing more nor less than the religious association of religious people.

I know nothing about legal fitness for heaven beyond what I read in the Bible; and I read there, in very plain words, that fitness for heaven is hearty repentance, faith in Christ, and an open religious life. How long this open religious life must precede death, the Bible does not say.

I learn, too, without a Bible, that similitude of association is a natural and necessary condition of life. We necessarily seek and enjoy the association of those like us. You will see this all through every grade and phase of society. So religious people universally—yea, and necessarily—seek and enjoy the society of religious people. Communion of saints, love of the brethren, is one of the fixed laws of nature.

Where there is opportunity for church association, and it is not sought for or accepted when offered, there is something, whatever it may be, that keeps one out of the church; and that, a hundred chances to one, will keep such person out of heaven. So, while the church does not directly make Christians, it is the place where you and everybody else look to find them. And you would not only look in a church to find people likely to get to heaven, but to the most religious, evangelical church, to be sure; one where the people professed and practiced godliness of the best and highest type.

I doubt if you would advise a lady friend to stay out of the church. I doubt if it is prayer and close inquiry that keeps you out. You say you go to church pretty regular and take your boy. Allow me to inquire, For what purpose? Mere church going is nowhere enjoined or recommended in the Bible, only as church membership is presupposed. Religion, communion with Christ, is enjoined, and church communion is a natural corollary. The one follows the other. I much doubt if your out-of-the-church position is the result of your deliberate judgment. I have no doubt that if you were fully and heartily in the church, you would enjoy life far better, and wonder that you had so long lived below your privileges. You certainly know that we are on every hand surrounded with great uncertainties, and that heaven is a question of much uncertainty. I know of nothing about it that is at all reliable except what we read about it in the Bible. And the Bible certainly does not recommend your course of life. On the contrary, it declares that heaven is for those, and those only, who strive for it. Its demand is, "Strive to enter in." A life having a hope of heaven is declared to be a race where great exertion is made. Those at ease, even in Zion, are declared to be in most imminent danger. The Bible declares the path of safety, and declares there is no other.

You say you don't believe it is necessary to be in the church. That can hardly be called a belief. At most, it is a guess, or conjecture, without foundation of any sort. Suppose it should turn out that the Bible is true where it testifies in so many places that Christian faith and practical holy living are necessary. And where do you find such persons but in the church?

This is a subject on which we can not afford to risk much. Consequences are too great. In all sincerity, I think you represent yourself as not feeling any very great interest in the subject.

I know you are associated with many clever people of the same loose kind of don't believe. And we are scarcely aware of the influence such association has over us. But suppose in some decisive hour the great truth of the Bible should flash its terrors upon us. Are we not risking too much?

I know you will attribute my plainness of expression to the interest I feel in your welfare. And while I pray for you, I pray you to consider these things, and believe me your most sincere friend and well-wisher.

Revival in Laredo Seminary.

BY REV. A. H. SUTHERLAND.

Sunday morning, January 26, I preached in the chapel of the Woman's Missionary Seminary, in Laredo, Texas; baptized one girl, received another by ritual, and five by letter, and administered the Lord's Supper.

Sitting in the parlor awaiting the dinner hour, in company with several of the ladies, one of those asked me if I had read the letters of Dr. Carradine, in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, concerning his experience of the blessing of entire sanctification. I told her that I had, and that he related a genuine Methodist Christian experience. She remarked that they had interested her very much, and that she would like to hear something on the subject. I said that one reason why I did not preach more on the subject was because of the elementary condition of our Mexican work; but, that as there were so many Americans in the seminary as teachers, and also a good many large girls, members of the church, if it should be agreeable to Miss Holding, I would preach in English on the subject of "Entire Sanctification" two evenings. She, being present, expressed herself as not only willing, but very desirous that I should do so; so I left an appointment for the next evening.

Permit me to state right here that Miss Holding distinctly enjoys this blessing, and never hides her light under a bushel, or her talent in a napkin, though she makes no "parade" of her attainments in the divine life; nor do any who are sanctified.

Monday evening, at seven, I was on hand, and preached the first sermon on the subject. God honored his truth. I did nothing more than preach the Methodist doctrine, that which had produced such revolution and reformation in the Christian world, and which is the most distinctive and God-honored doctrine of the Methodist Church; that it is a distinct blessing, subsequent to justification and regeneration; that it is in answer to faith in the blood of Christ, and that it is the pentecostal baptism of the Holy Ghost, imparting to the soul of the believer a complete purification from all sin and a restoration of the image of the Creator in perfect holiness and righteousness; that this grace was needed not only that they themselves might be perfect Christians, but faithful workers in the Lord's vineyard. I exhorted all the teachers and workers to seek this blessing in the act. The Word was with power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit, how much soever it lacked of human wisdom and eloquence. On the right and on the left they began to seek and find the glorious blessing. By the second evening the work was deepening. But the third night it reached the unconverted with great power. This night eighty-five souls were converted by actual count. These joined others, the fourth and fifth, seeking the "second blessing, properly so called," to use Mr. Wesley's words. Saturday there was no meeting. On Sunday morning, February 2, I preached a sermon in Spanish and one in English, preparatory to receiving into the church those who had presented themselves as candidates. At three in the afternoon, aided by the pastors of our American and Mexican churches in Laredo, and in the presence of an immense audience, I baptized twenty-five and received twenty besides by ritual into the church, these having been previously baptized in some evangelical church. So there has resulted an addition of forty-five to the visible, and many others besides to the invisible church of Christ; and the good work only fairly begun.

This is a brief account of what has come to pass in the Laredo Seminary. But it is not all. Moved by a conviction that the same doctrine and the same way of presenting it would bring a blessing in the city churches, I suggested to Bro. Oxley, the American pastor, that he commence a meeting right away in his church on this line. This he did, and, insisting that I conduct the same, I remained a week with him. The work was glorious. Many sanctifications and conversions and additions to the church were the result; he carrying it on a week or two after my duties took me elsewhere.

Being in San Antonio some days, I conducted these meetings in our Mexican church nearly a week, and much rich blessing was the result. Many, many calls will not allow me to devote myself as exclusively to this work as I would like, as I long to; but I try to give my nights to it, and God blesses his work, though always preached after long, hard days' work.

This is the third night of such special effort here in Monterey. I had ten or fifteen minutes of testimony tonight at close of service; and it was very evident the Holy Spirit is at work. This is where our Border Institute is located, and most of those who spoke are in connection with that school. The principal of the school said: "Last night, while you were preaching, God blessed my soul." Another: "Since these meetings began God has greatly blessed my soul, and I feel like being on my knees in prayer before him all the time." Another: "Of late I have been in great distress and trouble, and could do nothing satisfactorily; but during these days everything has cleared up, and now I delight to do my duty." Another: "Of late I have had a great deal of trouble and distress of mind; but since speaking with you Sunday, I have been happy in God."

Now, these I take as indubitable evidences that the Spirit is at work, even here in Monterey. How much we need a church-building here! We have only a miserable little old room in which to assemble; for so great is the influence of the priests against us that no one will rent us a large hall for worship; and so great is our poverty, and so few our numbers, we can not even think of buying a lot, much less building a church.

Pardon, Dr. Carter, so long a letter as this; but I wanted to tell of these good things in the paper that sprung the conversation that seems to have led to this series of blessed results.

MONTERREY, Mexico.

"The Location of Millsaps College."

A PLEA FOR BRANDON.

MR. EDITOR: We have read with interest the communications from "Sigma" and "Tau" in regard to the location of the college founded by our noble-hearted Bro. Millsaps, of Jackson. As "Tau" suggests: "Unwisely located, its patronage will be limited, its success only partial, and its life a continued struggle for existence." The college should not be located in a commercial centre, nor in a town subject to epidemics and malarial fevers.

Brandon has no local cause of sickness; it is high, dry, and salubrious. It is 275 feet above the river (Pearl). It is strictly a prohibition town. No saloons, no gambling hells, not even a theatre. It is sufficiently near the capital for patrons who may be in attendance on the courts or the Legislature to visit their sons here. Should it be necessary for students to board in town, good board can be obtained in the best families from $10 to $12 per month.

The rival towns of Meridian and Jackson are in many respects desirable; but both are subject to epidemics, both are commercial centres, and, consequently, much dissipation in both.

Brandon is a kind of centre to southeast Mississippi, which district has been heretofore overlooked in the distribution of gifts from the legislative and ecclesiastical bodies. A striking feature of Brandon is its female college, which has been for many years entirely under the control of female teachers. Miss F. A. Johnson, the president, is one of the most thorough educators in the South. If the Millsaps College were located here, patrons could send sons and daughters to the same place to be educated; which would certainly be delightful to brothers and sisters who must be sent from home for instruction.

J. K. JAYNE.

BRANDON, Miss.

The Grand Object.

We commend the following paragraph from an editorial in the Central Christian Advocate:

"The grand object for which the church is established is the evangelization of the world. All its services, ordinances, privileges, duties are valuable only as they are tributary to this end. Sound doctrine is to build up sound lives by stimulating activity in Christian work. Church discipline is not simply to maintain the credit and purity of the church as an end. Nor is it solely for the benefit of those who are disciplined; it is rather to re-form them, to bring them back into line for work. Church fellowship is not merely for the benefit, edification or enjoyment of Christians. When so regarded it takes on a selfish aspect, as though those not within the fold were forgotten. The highest use of Christian fellowship is mutual incitement, counsel, training to work for the salvation of the unconverted. The social religious meetings of the church ought not to be for mutual enjoyment and congratulation on the delights of Christian experience alone. They should be meetings to devise ways and means for doing the Lord's work, to ascertain and adopt the best methods for winning souls; to report personal work done for Christ, new openings, needy and hopeful subjects for Christian effort. Not, "What is the state of your feelings?" but, "What is your experience in Christian work?" should be the paramount question. They should be meetings for the transaction of the King's business, councils of Christian workers in which they shall stimulate each other to greater activity, and talk, not in set phrase how they feel toward Christ and his cause, but in earnest, straightforward terms about how they shall glorify him more effectually by doing his work.

THE MOST ALARMING SIN.—If I were called to point out the most alarming sins of to-day—those which are most deceitful in their influence, and most soul-destroying in their ultimate effects—I would not mention drunkenness with all its fearful havoc, nor gambling with its crazed victims, nor harlotry with its hellish orgies; but the love of money on the part of men, and the love of display on the part of women. While open vice sends its thousands, these fashionable and favored indulgences send their ten thousands to perdition. They sear the conscience, incrust the soul with an impenetrable shell of worldliness, debauch the affections from every high and heavenly object, and make man or woman the worshiper of self. While doing all this the poor victim is allowed by public opinion to think himself or herself a Christian; while the drunkard, the gambler or the prostitute is not deceived by such a thought for a moment.—Dr. Crosby.

Love is the refreshing water; the law is the channel for it to flow in; and the spring is the bosom of God.—McCosh.

BY WILLIAM BYRON FORBUSH.

The ruse de war had failed, and the ocean
Pressed on like victors in mad fell state;
The strand, beset with rock, might not motion
The strand says, "Wait."

Upward they hurl their potent, restless forces,
As if to storm and batter Heaven's gate;
The stars, which sweep in calm, perpetual courses,
The stars say, "Wait."

The human heart here, impetuous, urges
Its waves of passion on the beach of fate;
The old, sad world beats back the rolling surges,
The world says, "Wait."

Upward it pours its manifold petitions,
As if to force an answer at Heaven's gate;
God, who discerns all needs and all conditions,
God says, "Wait."

Unlike the sea, which beats with strokes diurnal
Against its rocky barriers soon and late,
The human heart in the great world eternal
Need no more wait.

Church Festivals.

In many places church festivals are the rage. If money is needed to build a church or parsonage—"Let's have a church festival." If the church or parsonage need repairing or furnishing—"Let's have a church festival." I have even known churches where the disease had become an epidemic of the most malignant type, and they not only raised money for building and repairing churches and parsonages, but for the incidental expenses, Conference collections and pastor's salary. This mode of raising money is endorsed by many ministers and laymen, and opposed by many ministers and laymen. There is scarcely a church, where a church festival has ever been held, but the congregation is divided on the subject. This results oftentimes in confusion at the beginning of a pastorate, and hard feelings toward the incoming minister. This diversity of opinion bespeaks the necessity of earnest and prayerful consideration. If it is right, no pastor should oppose it; if it is wrong, no pastor should approve it. If it is a doubtful question, would not it be far better to give truth the benefit of the doubt, and oppose it for "truth's sake?"

There is a pertinent paragraph in the Nashville Christian Advocate, of February 22, which reads as follows:

> The indirect methods now frequently employed in raising money for church purposes, vary in character. Indiscriminate denunciation or condemnation would seem harsh to many good people, yet it is hard to draw the line between the allowable and non-allowable. What we purpose here is only to make two suggestions. First, the dollar that is given directly and cheerfully to the cause of Christ is doubly blessed. Second, if you think your pastor is unreasonable in his opposition to the prevalent indirect methods of raising money for church purposes, console yourself with the reflection that he bows to the safe side of the question.

Would that all the pastors in Southern Methodism would "lean to the safe side of the question!" I have never been able to find a single passage of Scripture that gave countenance to them; but the whole tenor, by precept and example, seems opposed to them. "By free grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." Yet we are not willing to give up our substance to the Lord, but must go to church festivals, and socials, and get something for our money. To me the whole thing is incongruous. It is as if man were under no obligations of any kind to give more to God than he has already given, but must receive something in return for his additional gift. Our Lord says: "Do likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do." (Luke xvii, 10).

If ever there was a time in the history of the church since the foundation of the world when a church festival seems to have been in order, it was at the foot of Sinai in the wilderness. Moses, after a forty days' absence, came down from the mount and announced the wonderful news that the God who had thundered his commandments from the summit of the mount, for forty days before, was going to tabernacle among them, and they were to build his house. But how were they to do it? There they were in that barren waste, with no income, and no visible means of sustenance, and there was no telling how long they would be in that condition. If one of our nineteenth-century Christians had been there, he could have solved the question in a trice. "Come, let us have a genuine church festival. Here, Bro. A., you give a goat; Bro. B., you give a kid; Bro. C., you give a young bullock; D., you look around and get together some wood or something to cook it with, and I will get a committee of ladies to take charge of the affair. We will charge a gerah for admission and supper, give a free concert afterwards, and invite the whole encampment. We will get the money." But the Lord prevented any such catastrophe by telling Moses to proclaim throughout the length and breadth of the camp, "that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering." (Ex. xxv, 2.) The command went forth: "Take ye from among you an offering unto the Lord: whosoever is of a willing heart let him bring it, an offering unto the Lord." (Ex. xxxv, 5.) Had that been to-day, from many sources you would have heard the cry, "You will never build the house that way." And thousands would have believed it. But Moses tells us the committee appointed to receive the offerings reported to him that the people offered so willingly they had more than sufficient to build the house; and they had to be restrained. What a revelation it would be if some preacher should announce through our church papers that he had to stop the free-will offerings of a people for the building or renovation of a church or parsonage, or for any church purpose whatsoever! It would be heralded from one end of Christendom to the other, and the name of that church and pastor would be familiar to all. Why do we not have such scenes as this everywhere? Has not the Lord, the Savior of the world, done enough for us to justify us in it? Surely he has. But we have starved "the liberal soul," that should have been "made fat," by church festivals, teaching by precept and example that while the Lord prefers (?) free-will offerings; if he can not get them, he will take any he can get. Why not say: "The Lord wants converted souls, but if he can not get them, he will take good, moral ones." Christ says: "Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God;" and I believe the Bible teaches with equal positiveness that none but free-will offerings are accepted.

A preacher will get up into the pulpit and preach himself hoarse on "Non conformity to the World," and that God will by no manner of means tolerate a compromise with the world; then announce a church festival to raise money for church purposes, and ask everybody to go. I fail to see the consistency.

While our Lord was on earth, we have an account of his going to one marriage. He not only adorned it by his presence, but with his first miracle, and made things pleasant. He also went to two church festivals, but made it very unpleasant. Shortly after leaving Cana of Galilee he went to Jerusalem and "found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting." And, having made a scourge of small cords, drove them out, overturned the tables and said to the astonished participants: "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise." (John ii, 14-16).

Again, having triumphantly entered Jerusalem, with the multitude spreading their garments in the way, cutting palm-branches and casting them before him, and shouting, "Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest," he came to the temple, and a second time cast out all them that sold and bought, overthrowing the tables, saying: "It is written my house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves." (Mat. xxi, 21, 22.) Yet these men had far more biblical authority for their action than we for ours. And if our Lord drove them out, how much sooner would he drive us out!

Brethren of the ministry, let us think on these things.

B. F. LEWIS.

Applied Christianity.

This is unquestionably a most practical age. So far is this true that the criterion of a thing's excellence has almost become the simple answer to the question, "What purpose does it serve?" The various branches of science have each come face to face with this test, and those which could not stand it have, in the general mind, no more place. Hence we see that chemistry and physics, the most interesting of these branches, aside from their practical, every-day applications, get little or no attention from the mass of the people. If a thing does not offer an immediate return for time, money, and energy expended, the great multitude are prone to pass it by. In general, it is a peculiar people that does not prefer the useful to the useless.

Now, it is but consistent that men should apply the same method of reasoning in regard to religious matters. It is too late in the day to attempt to argue that the religion of the Bible does not carry blessings, both temporal and spiritual, wherever it goes. To deny this in the face of so many positive proofs is either the height of folly or the obstinacy of bigotry. There never was a religion so practical as that of Christ; and this practicality is an argument that all the sophisms of agnosticism and the blasphemous assertions of infidelity can not meet. On this ground alone it has already and will ever conquer its assailants. "Having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come," it is good for every person that may come under its influence, for every emergency that may arise; good for time, good for eternity.

This point is now to be made. If Christianity is proven, by incontestable evidence from a great cloud of witnesses, to bestow such numerous and desirable benefits upon those who receive it, men should, if they be consistent, covet it earnestly. They should act with the same wisdom in this regard as they do in the other affairs of life. From analogous actions, on their part, they ought to accept, without argument, the teachings of the Scriptures as the sole rule and guide of their lives.

But the practicableness of our religion does not cease the moment one becomes a believer. It is only after that blessed experience that its utility assumes, in a measure, its true proportions. If it brings joy and gladness to the believer's heart, it ought to bring tenfold more to the hearts of those among whom he lives. For this we have sufficient Bible warrant. James is its great exponent, summing it up in these words: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Words may fail, empty professions are bound to come to naught, but good, honest work in the Master's cause will stand forever as a monument to the faithfulness of them that do it. Hence we should not strive for more doctrines, but rather give heed to make a practical application of those we already have.

Furthermore, it is this objective practicality with which the people at large are mostly concerned. They are not much in need of theology, but they are sadly in want of religion. They need its beneficent influence on their temporal conditions, and, most of all, its regenerating power in their hearts. To satisfy this need, the church has but to be true to her commission. We have the "applied sciences" and some "applied Christianity." Our prayer is not that the former may decrease, but that the latter may increase even an hundredfold.

TEECKE.

Nature on Exhibition.

On last Sabbath, about half-past four P. M., while about twenty miles northeast of this place, I witnessed a scene in the western sky surpassing in beauty, grandeur and novelty anything I ever saw in the heavens before. The sun stood in the west, about one hour high, exactly or nearly facing the moon in the east, which was about one and a half-hours high. The whole heavens were perfectly clear, except a very slight haziness in the northwest, extending up to, or about, a point immediately over the sun. Around the sun there was a circle, made by a bright, luminous bow of milky whiteness. A horizontal line, of same color as circle just named, passed through the sun and intersected this circle at points directly opposite each other from the sun, making at each point of intersection a luminous spot, rivaling the sun in brightness, and in appearance closely resembling a segment of the rainbow; for each of these spots had on the side opposite the sun a bright red tint. Above the sun, and a little to the right, a bright arc, with all the tints of the rainbow, drawn, apparently, around the bright spot to the north of the sun, extended over and intersected the circle just above the sun, making at point of intersection a larger and much brighter rainbow. Also to the left, and above the sun, another bright bow, exactly like the one to the right, but drawn, apparently, around the bright spot to the left of the sun, extended over and intersected the circle just above the sun at the same point, with the bow to the right; thus making in appearance one continuous rainbow, extending from right to left of sun, but having the form of a double arch. Some ten degrees above these bows a larger and still brighter rainbow (?) encircled the sun. Beginning about five degrees above the horizon on the left, and arching beautifully around and above the sun, it passed down beneath the horizon on the right. This bow did not form a perfect arch, as near the trees on the right it turned gently outward from the sun. Higher still by ten degrees, and some twenty degrees to the right, another bow, second in size and brightness only to the one just described, begins, and, arching downward toward the sun, intersects this large bow just above the sun, and then, passing onward to the left, arches upward and fades away some ten degrees above and twenty to the left of point of intersection with the large bow. The last described bow was completely inverted, with its back resting against the back of the large bow just beneath it. To the right and left of the sun, at a point about where the line passing through the sun would intersect the largest rainbow, if sufficiently extended, there were two other white, luminous spots resembling comets with their "tails" turned upward. Beneath the moon in the east, and a little to the left of it, there was a bright spot of milky whiteness, with two bows of same color arching upward to the right and left of moon. But the moon was not midway between the two bows, as it could be plainly seen that a line drawn through the angle formed by the intersection of the bows at the right spot would not pass through the moon. Besides these, there were many other spots and lines about the heavens too numerous for mention.

Now, Doctor, if nature ever gave such an exhibition as this before, I never saw or heard of it. It was grandly beautiful, beyond all description. With graceful curves, beautiful arches, and gorgeous tints and colors, no human hand or earthly power could equal it. My whole congregation was present, and witnessed the scene as given above.

F. P. SPENCER.

COLUMBUS, MISS.

Members of W. M. S. of Louisiana Conference.

We have been kept in-doors, more or less, for three months by the usual inclemencies of winter, and consequently doing little in our societies. But the season of inactivity is about past. Spring will soon be here with its vast opportunities for usefulness, and we must be up and about the Master's work. Our missionaries have not remitted their toils while we have been idle, and the needs of the work have accumulated. Unless we are willing to change places with them we must bestir ourselves and contribute to their necessities while they are doing our work and theirs in the foreign fields. It is go or send. There are but two wings to the grand army of the church militant. Which will you choose?

Many blessings have crowned our lives, the happy reunions and festivities of the winter season have gladdened our homes; our barns and store-houses have not failed. Let us come up now with our tithes and thank-offerings, bestowing freely as we have received and hope to receive again. If sorrow has come to us, let us remember that "we mourn not as those who have no hope," and testify our love to the Comforter by memorial offerings, whereby the "hope which is in us" may be carried to the hopeless ones who know not of "the light of life and immortality."

Sisters in Christ, let us gather up our strength and go forward in the work allotted to us. Let us provide the loaves and fishes. Small and few though they be, in the Savior's hand they will feed the multitudes.

The opportunity for usefulness has been brought to our very door. Let us rally to our societies, see that our dues are all paid in full, and study the needs of our work. Let every auxiliary see to it that delegates are elected to the Annual Conference in July, at Baton Rouge, and I especially beseech every one of you to make earnest prayer to our Father that he will send his Holy Spirit to the women in assembly, and give them strength and courage and wisdom to plan and execute great things for the coming of his kingdom. If the women of the church will covenant together, to spend a few minutes every day at the twilight hour in silent, fervent prayer to this end, I have faith to believe that our next annual convention will effect more lasting good than ever before. Let us ask, not for wisdom of words, but for the power of the Spirit, that we may go up in the strength of the Lord and be directed in all our ways.

With this preparation we will be counted "workmen worthy of hire."

E. J. FULLILOVE,
Pres. W. M. S.

Tupelo, Miss.

Bishop Galloway assigned me to Tupelo for the current Conference year. Tupelo is the county seat of Lee county, Miss. It is at the crossing of the M. and O., and K. C., M. and B. R. R.'s. It has a willow-ware factory, a compress and warehouse, a foundry, a furniture factory, a chair factory, a broom and brush factory, an ice factory, a Jersey dairy, a spoke factory which is adding to its machinery, a public school with over 250 pupils, and arrangements are being made for a $10,000 public school-building. Besides, we have four churches, four Sunday-schools, and two thousand clever people. In our church we have 104 members, and as many on our Sunday-school roll. We have good congregations. We have a class meeting growing in interest and power.

At our first Quarterly Conference the obligations of the church for the first quarter were fully met. Our outlook is good, and we take courage and thank God. Let all join in prayer to God for his presence with us. What a blessing to have a helpful people!

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

P. S.—We are confident of having a grand and useful church school in our State. But "Millsaps Methodist College" is too small and too sectarian a name. Millsaps University would be better.

No man ever served God by doing things to-morrow. If we honor Christ and are blessed, it is by the things which we do to-day.

The Lottery.

The Louisiana Lottery and National Politics.

Very likely some of the sensational stories concerning the relations of the Louisiana Lottery Company to the National Republican Committee are more or less imaginary. But of one fact there can be no reasonable doubt—the Louisiana Lottery Company was one of the largest contributors to the Republican campaign fund in the last presidential campaign, and it unquestionably had the promise of an equivalent. They have had enough of the Lottery in Louisiana, more especially since the principal beneficiaries have practically abandoned their residence in New Orleans and spend their millions of gains in New York and vicinity. There is no prospect of the renewal of the Lottery grant in Louisiana. If the Lottery Company can secure a grant from the North Dakota Legislature, it can well afford to pay the vast sums which it is reported to have promised on all sides.

It looks, however, as if the public sentiment, which has been aroused, will be too strong to be resisted. The Postmaster-General puts himself on record as opposed to it, and, perhaps, the President may follow suit and respond to the appeal, which has come to him from Dakota by issuing his disapproval. The Lottery Company will have the right to regard this as ungrateful, however, for its liberal contributions to the corruption fund aided materially in the President's election. The members of the National Republican Committee, through whom the Lottery Company's contributions were obtained, have tried to carry out their part of the bargain, for all their influence has been exerted to help the Dakota scheme. One of the members of the committee is said to be in the pay of the Lottery Company.

Much astonishment would be exhibited if the names of all the prominent men here who are in the regular pay of the Lottery were made public. The salaried list of its retainers, retainers for the real or supposed social and political influence which they possess, amounts up into many thousands annually. The enormous profits of the concern can be imagined when it is stated that its owners divide millions annually after paying expenses, for which there seems no limit, including also a "blackmailing" dependency of police and other officials which is never satisfied.

It will be a blessed thing if this Lottery, which for so many years has fattened upon the people of the United States, can find no place to renew its operations after it is driven out of Louisiana. But it can be calculated upon to make a desperate struggle to get a new foothold somewhere else if the Dakota scheme falls through, and though the President and the Postmaster General may express their dissent, many other Republicans high in place and power will give their active sympathy and aid to the cause. This both for favors past and for favors to come.

The Louisiana Lottery will claim that its money elected Harrison, and it would have been glad in 1884 to have made a bargain with the Blaine managers. On the day after the election of 1884 a member of the Republican Committee said in New York city, in the presence of the writer, and one of the principal owners of the Lottery, that if the committee had had $50,000 the day before the election they could have pulled Blaine through. The Lottery man replied immediately: "Why did you not come to me? I could have given it to you in a minute." This overture was borne in mind, and four years later the Republican Committee took good care to open negotiations with so liberal a giver.—Washington Correspondent, Baltimore Sun.

FIGHTING GAMBLING ALL ALONG THE LINE.—The sporadic battles with gambling promise to give place to a national warfare upon it. The honest citizens of Louisiana are agitating for the expulsion of their prince of pirates. His desperate and foolhardy attempt to board North Dakota and Montana has led the whole fleet of States to turn their glasses upon him, and to discover how heavily they have all been robbed. Bills against the whole tribe of gamblers are being introduced in Congress and in many State Legislatures. The political and newspaper pals of these robbers, who share their plunder, will fight hard for them. It remains to be seen whether papers who have only moral interest in the conflict will be so absorbed in fighting about new and old theology as to lose the opportunity to put the retreating gamblers to utter rout. Any newspaper that does not pour in hot shot upon the public foe at such an hour is too base or too blind or too cowardly for any true man to support. The same is true in regard to public officers. Now is the time to call for better laws and better enforcement of laws against this worst form of robbery, whose victims are the ignorant and poor. At such an hour speech is duty and silence is sin.—Exchange.

The Press and the Lottery.

The Louisiana Journal, Homer, La., says:

> The Lottery has been a shame and a reproach to Louisiana for years. The Legislature should remove this stain from the good name of the State by refusing to renew the charter of the Lottery. Gov. Nicholls is, we understand, strongly opposed to the Lottery. If the governor is on the side of the people in this fight, they ought to be able to win the victory over this huge and corrupt monopoly.

The Acadia Sentinel, Crowley, La., says:

> The new State of North Dakota had too much good sense to engraft this moral ulcer into its organic laws, even though the inducements held out were much better than at present enjoyed by our State; and we don't believe public sentiment in Louisiana will permit its existence in this State after its present charter expires. Surely our people can not afford to take up what has been contemptuously spurned by poor little Dakota?

The Southern Baptist Record, Meridian, Miss., says:

> A masterful gambling institution, working its way by corruption, that is what the Louisiana Lottery is—an open disgrace to the State that harbors it.

The Bunkie Blade, Bunkie, La., says:

> It is clear, beyond a doubt, to the unbiased mind that the existence of the Lottery is of no benefit to the State; whereas there are a thousand evils that arise from its existence, which we will prove to our readers by showing up some naked facts, which, we trust, will cause many who have never given the subject thought to see the evil influence of its existence upon society, and its contaminating effect upon the parliamentary assembly of our State.

The Alabama Christian Advocate says:

> Our Louisiana Conference passed ringing resolutions denouncing the Louisiana Lottery, and pledging its members to use all possible lawful means to suppress it. This was the right thing to do. Every religious organization in the State ought to do likewise. The State is disgraced as well as robbed by this iniquitous institution, which in a dark and evil day was imbedded in its organic law. And not only Louisiana, but the whole country is interested in the suppression of this abomination, for it fosters the gambling spirit and robs the credulous and ignorant everywhere.

Books and Periodicals.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

THE HYMNAL, WITH RESPONSIVE READINGS. Cranston & Stowe, publishers, Cincinnati. Price, $1 25.

The last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church adopted an Order of Service for use in the public congregation, in which they recommended Responsive Readings from the Scriptures wherever the people desired it. To meet this desire Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati, have prepared The Hymnal, with Responsive Readings. The readings seem to be well adapted to meet the wants of worshipers, being arranged under various topics.

PERIODICALS.

—THE KINDERGARTEN, for March, is up to its usual standard of excellence. Alice B. Stockham & Co., Chicago. Price, $2.

—GLEANINGS IN BEE CULTURE is a fine monthly for persons engaged in the bee business. It is a sprightly periodical, published by A. I. Root, Medina, Ohio. Price, $1 a year.

—THE STUDIO, for March, has a full table with three full-page etchings as supplements. The Studio is now published weekly at $5 a year. Studio Publishing Company, New York.

—THE GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS gives very much of its space this month to Mexico and the mission work in it. It is a most valuable and interesting number of this always welcome monthly. Hunt & Eaton, New York. Price, $1 50.

—BOOK NEWS, for March, tells all about new books, their authors, publishers and prices. If you want to keep in sight of the head of the literary procession, this monthly will help you. John Wanamaker, Philadelphia. Price, 50 cents.

—THE ARENA, for March, has a number of articles on prominent topics engaging the public mind at present. Among them is a paper by Dr. Howard Crosby, on Rum and the Rum Power. H. H. Gardener writes on Divorce and the Proposed National Law, and Junius Henri Browne on What is Religion? There are also other papers. Arena Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $5.

—THE HOME MAKER, for March, is on hand. The more we see of this monthly the better we like it. The editor, Marion Harland, evidently understands what sort of a magazine is needed in the home. This number is a splendid specimen, and we heartily commend it to all home keepers in search of good and pure and edifying home reading. The price brings it in easy reach. Home Maker Publishing Company, New York. Price, $2.

—POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY, for March, has a table full of varied articles. Among them we note: The Mission of Educated Women, by Mrs. M. F. Armstrong; Absolute Political Ethics, by Herbert Spencer; The Laws of Films, by Sophie Bledsoe Herrick; The Psychology of Prejudice, by Prof. G. T. W. Patrick; Origin of Land-Ownership, by D. E. Wing, and other papers. The editor writes on, How to Make Knowledge Real, and The Recognition of Truth. D. Appleton and Company, New York. Price, $5.

—The February and March numbers of OUR DAY at hand are full of valuable matter to students of public opinion and current reform. The February number opens with a keen, practical paper on Unsolved Negro Problems, by William Hannibal Thomas. Miss Willard has the first place in the March number, and discusses the Progress of the Prohibition Party, and the probable effect of the action of the seceding W. C. T. U. on the growth of prohibition sentiment. New Biography of Jonathan Edwards, by Rev. J. W. Wellman, will be welcomed by all theologians of every denomination as an important and valuable document. Dr. D. C. Greene, of Japan, contributes a paper on Joseph Hardy Neesima, the Japanese missionary, whose recent death is lamented by all friends of missions. A review of Hon. Carroll D. Wright's Report on Divorce, by Rev. Will C. Wood; Sectarian Division of School Funds, by Hon. John Fay; Faith Healing, by Rev. Dr. A. F. Gordon; The German Emperor as a Labor Reformer; British Opportunities in Africa; The New British Extradition Treaty, etc. As a record and review of current reform, Our Day has the foremost place among American monthlies. Price, $2 50 per year; clergymen and students $2; single copies, 25 cents. Our Day Publishing Company, 28 Beacon street, Boston, Mass.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlburt and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

LESSON XIII.—March 30.

TEMPERANCE LESSON.

Gal. vi, 1-10.

1. Brethren, if a man be overtaken. Bengel explains: "If another has really been overtaken in a fault; but remember, often he who is first to find fault is the very one who first transgressed." In a fault—Greek, a transgression, a fault. —Probably during the disturbed state of the Christians of Galatia there had been on the one hand not a few personal backslidings, and on the other, unbrotherly severity toward such; hence the apostle's exhortation. Ye which are spiritual—Ye who still retain the grace of the gospel, and have wisdom and experience in divine things. Ye that are "spiritual," that is, who are led by the Holy Spirit, the opposite of "the mind of the flesh." Restore—The Greek is used of a dislocated limb reduced to its place. Such is the tenderness with which we should treat a fallen member of the church in restoring him to a better state. In the spirit of meekness—Use no severity nor haughty carriage toward him; as the man was suddenly overtaken, he needs encouragement and lenient usage. "Meekness" is that temper of spirit toward God whereby we accept his dealings without disputing them; toward men, whereby we endure meekly their provocations, and do not withdraw ourselves from the burdens which their sins impose upon us. Considering thyself—Thou art now warned at his expense; therefore keep a good lookout. Lest thou also be tempted—As is likely to happen those who reprove others without meekness. The change of the number of the pronoun, (thou for ye) makes the advice all the more pointed. Hence, "the spirit of meekness" becomes us in trying to "restore" others. Nor is any other spirit likely to be successful.

2. Bear ye one another's burdens—Have sympathy; feel for each other and consider the case of a distressed brother as your own. As to the burdens, the more general the meaning we give the word the better it will accord with the sense of the command. The matter mentioned in the last verse led on to this; but this grasps far wider, extending to all the burdens which we can, by help and sympathy, bear for one another. There are some which we can not. And so fulfill the law of Christ—The law or commandment to love one another, or that to do unto men as we would they should do unto us. We should be as indulgent to the infirmities of others as we can be, consistently with truth and righteousness; our brother's infirmity may be his burden.

3. If a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing—Those who suppose themselves to excel all others in piety, understanding, etc., while they are harsh, censorious, and overbearing, prove that they have not the charity that thinketh no evil; and in the sight of God are only as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. There are no persons more censorious or more uncharitable than those among some religious people who pretend to more light and a deeper communion with God than others. They are generally carried away with a sort of sublime, high-sounding phraseology, which seems to argue a wonderfully deep acquaintance with divine things; stripped of this, many of them are like Samson without his hair.

4. Prove his own work—Prove it by the works and example of Christ; and if he find that they bear this touchstone, then he shall have rejoicing in himself, feeling that he resembles his Lord and Master, and shall not derive his consolation from comparing himself with another who may be weaker or less instructed than himself. The only rule for a Christian is the work of Christ; his only pattern is the example of Christ.

5. For every man shall bear his own burden—His own "load" (namely, of sin and infirmity). The Greek word here is different from that in verse 2. This verse does not contradict verse 2. There Paul tells his readers to bear with others' "burdens" of infirmity in sympathy; here, that self-examination will make a man to feel he has enough to do with "his own load" of sin, without comparing himself boastfully with his neighbor.

6. Let him that is taught...communicate—From the mention of bearing one another's burdens, the apostle naturally passes to one way and one case in which those burdens may be borne, namely, by relieving the necessities of their ministers. "Share with" is most probably the meaning, and not "communicate unto," as there does not appear to be an instance of the transitive use in the New Testament. But the two senses come very nearly to the same. He who shares in the necessities of the saints can only do so by making that necessity partly his own; that is, by depriving himself to that extent, and communicating to them. In all good things—In every kind of the good things of this life, according as the case may require.

7. God is not mocked—The Greek verb is, literally, to sneer with the nostrils drawn up in contempt. God does not suffer himself to be imposed on by empty words. He will judge according to works, which are seeds sown for eternity of either joy or woe. Excuses for illiberality in God's cause seem valid before men, but are not so before God. Soweth—Especially of his resources. That—Greek, this; this and nothing else. Reap—at the harvest, the end of the world. Regarding our good deeds done for Christ as a seed sown for eternity, he warns them not to be deceived; in this, as in other seed-times, God's order of things can not be set at nought; whatever we sow, that same shall we reap.

8. For—And this will be an example of the universal rule. That (now) soweth, is now sowing. Unto, with a view to. Corruption, because the flesh is a prey to corruption, and with it all fleshly desires and practices come to nothing. Every act in life, and every imagination of the heart, is of the nature of seeds; they root themselves in the soul, and produce their kind, whose fruits must be reaped soon or late. If carnal indulgence (or worldly pursuits) is the end for which a man lives, moral ruin must be the result. If he aims at the higher life, which comes through the operations of the Holy Spirit, the higher life will be his reward.

9. Let us not be weary in well-doing—"Well-doing" is easier in itself than ill-doing; and the danger of growing "weary" in the former arises only from the opposition to good in our own nature, or the outward hinderance we may meet with from a gainsaying and persecuting world. According to your present life, so will be your eternal life. In due season we shall reap—As the husbandman, in plowing and sowing, is supported by the hope of the harvest, so every follower of Christ may be persuaded that if he shall live in conformity to his Master's will he will assuredly reap the fruit of it in eternal glory. This is sowing to the Spirit; and the impulse and the grace to persevere to the end are furnished by Christ Jesus, and by him the kingdom of heaven is opened to all believers; but only those who believe, love, and obey (and endure to the end) shall enter into it. Faint not—Literally, be relaxed. Stronger than "be not weary." "Weary of well-doing," refers to the will; "faint," to relaxation of the powers.

10. As we have...opportunity—While it is the time of sowing let us sow the good seed; and let our love be, as the love of Christ is, freely manifested to all. Let us help all who need help according to our power; but let the first objects of our regard be those who are of the household of faith, members of the church of Christ who form one family, of which Jesus Christ is the head.

Missionary.

Letters from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: I will send you a translation of a letter of Bro. Oliva, that was published in El Evangelista, our little Spanish paper. This letter was written by one of our native preachers who has suffered much persecution because of his religion. For eight or nine long months he was in prison. He sent me a flower he made in the jail, of palm. I translate this letter for the readers of the dear old ADVOCATE, because it will serve to give some idea of the enthusiasm and zeal felt by many of the preachers in the Mexico district.

TULA OF HIDALGO.

The present year is truly the favored year of the Lord. Many souls have been consoled with the good news of salvation, and their sins have been pardoned by him. I have here "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." God has made these words resound among the people where immorality prevails. From there the sinner went to Christ, asking mercy and the pardon of his sins. He has wiped the tears of those who wept, he has healed their diseases; in the end, this field has been privileged to see the blessings of the Lord. We had our prayer meeting conformably to the program made for our week of public prayer, and in it had great animation; the brethren complied with their duty, uniting in prayer, and asking for the needs of the Christian world, and that all who knew it not may come to the knowledge of the gospel. Our enemies, the Romanists, shook their heads and saw us with the greatest scorn. Not being able to do anything else, they gave notice to a priest, who excommunicated us in his sermon, and counseled all those that they would not have any relation "with the enemies of the Holy Mother Church, either great or small," charging them much to notify the merchants that they must not sell us anything. Poor priest! In Tula already there are not many who believe their fabulous story.

On January 19 we celebrated our first Quarterly Conference, presided over by the presiding elder, Bro. J. M. Weems. Rev. D. F. Watkins was present as a visitor, and ended us the tribute of preaching in the morning and at night. He was listened to with much attention, and his words were very profitable to many. The Lord opened the hearts of men and women, and they went to their houses to relate what they had heard. During the service at night there were five persons baptized, who were immediately received into the church.

On the twentieth Bros. Weems and Watkins departed for the capital, and I went to Tezontepec, Mixquiahuala and R. de Vera Cruz. This same day I preached twice in Mixquiahuala in different houses. In the first I had fourteen hearers; in the second, thirteen. (During the latter service I baptized a child.) The following day I departed for R. de Vera Cruz, and preached there in the evening and at night and the morning of the following day. I preached also on my return to Mixquiahuala and Tezontepec; as a result, obtained five candidates, who will be received soon, I hope. God bless our work! J. R. OLIVA.

Mr. Weems is now traveling alone, Bro. Watkins having gone to Jalisco by order of the Bishop. There was a touching scene in the home of this missionary the night of his departure. Mr. Weems went to bid him good-bye, and as he entered the room he was telling his family he wanted each of them to pray for him before he bade them good-bye, and ask God to go with him and bless him and protect him from the dangers by the way. Mr. Weems knelt and prayed first; then his wife, and then his only child, Lizzie. He rose from his knees and departed. I feel sure you will hear glorious news from his work. He was satisfied that God would bless his labors.

I heard Mr. Weems preach his first sermon in Spanish. He felt his ignorance of the language most deeply when he attempted to teach these people of the deep things of God, and, feeling thus, he threw himself entirely on the promises of God. They did not fail him in this emergency. After preaching some time, he asked the congregation if they could understand him. The answer came promptly: "Perfectamenti" ("perfectly"). I saw tears in the eyes of many, but knew not if it was from sympathy or other cause. But my joy was intense when an old man approached Mr. Weems, and, with an eloquent gesture, said: "My heart is filled with love for you. That sermon was a blessing to my soul." Oh! I felt so thankful, that I thought I could rejoice for "evermore," since the Lord had made my husband's first feeble effort a blessing to a human soul.

Pray for us ever, and for poor, priest-ridden Mexico. Come, or send us help. S. G. WEEMS.

CITY OF MEXICO.

MR. EDITOR: Yours of February 27, with the ten dollars from Sisters Johnston and Eastland, came to hand this morning. I thank you and them most heartily, and have written my acknowledgement to the elect women. We feel most profound gratitude to God if our letters in any way aid in springing the church into greater activity in the support of the great cause of missions. I shall use the money in the work where I think it will do the greatest good; yet the better way is either to place all money in the treasury of the Board, or by concerted action give it a specific direction. There are three ways of doing this in this field. One is to employ a Bible woman. They cost about ten dollars a month, and do great good in this field. My wife has employed one in Tolnca with money sent by three friends in Livingston, Ala. If three or four persons will agree to send the money every month for this purpose, I can use it to fine effect, and any amount can be sent by the banks. Or if a number of persons would agree to send me one or two hundred dollars to build a chapel, it would be more helpful to our work than words can express. The last is, to raise money enough to send a missionary to the field. I make these suggestions that you may be able to give my opinion to any who may ask you for information.

The work in my district is moving on nicely, and I hope to be able to send you another letter for the ADVOCATE soon. Bro. Watkins is now in Jalisco, and I expect good reports of his labors there. Don't forget to pray for us; and may our Father bless you more and more! Your brother,

J. M. WEEMS.

Temperance.

The Christian Enquirer, of New York City, a conservative Baptist paper, has come out strongly against high license. A recent editorial contained these words:

Well, gentlemen of the high license Utopia, what next? You have asked us to wait until high license could be fairly tried, and you come back to us with the broken fragments of your beautiful system in your hands, and with sad and rueful countenance say to us, 'It don't work.' Of course it don't. Nothing will work that leaves the liquor traffic to manipulate our courts, frame our legislation, defy our laws and defeat the ends of justice. . . . What next, gentlemen? What else shall we try before we kill the liquor traffic? What new experiments?

In Lawrence county, Miss., from which the saloons were banished in 1882 by special statute, the prohibition sentiment has been so firmly fixed that the one-tenth of the voters necessary to petition for an election can not be found, though they have had this right ever since the local option law was passed in 1886.

The liquor men are loudly proclaiming that the W. C. T. U. has been run on the rocks by Miss Willard and other "fanatics." An exchange suggests that these same saloonists first called white ribboners "Rock of Ages women," and adds, "They are yet on the rock, it seems. They are built that way!"

A prize of fifty dollars for the best essay on the relation of the temperance question to political economy, has been offered for the competition of college under-graduates, by the National W. C. T. U. department of organization and instruction in the higher institutions of learning.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

We are a little behind this week in getting out our paper, for the reason that our engine broke down and could not be repaired sooner.

New Orleans District Conference.

This body of ministers and laymen convened in Carondelet Street Methodist Church, in this city, Thursday, March 13, at ten A. M. The Conference was opened by religious services conducted by Bishop Keener. The attendance of laymen from the country circuits was small; all the pastors, except two, answered to their names at the first roll-call. Rev. J. M. Beard was elected secretary. Bishop Keener took occasion to make a few judicious remarks as to the object of a District Conference, after which the stations and circuits were called, and the pastors reported the spiritual and temporal condition of their several charges. The reports of the preachers show the church all over the district in a healthy and growing condition. Nearly all the congregations are increasing in numbers, and quite a number of new members have been taken into the church. The healthy state of the church is evidenced by the fact of good attendance upon the social meetings, a large number of family altars, and the disposition among the great majority of our people to keep away from places of worldly amusements. Where there are class meetings they are well attended. The work among the young people in some of the churches is exhibiting gratifying results in securing our young men and women in co-operative labor for the advancement of the cause of the Lord.

The Sunday-schools, in the main, are well officered, and are doing better than this time last year. In some of the stations large numbers of the Sunday-school children are consistent members of the church, and regularly attend the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The pastors' reports in regard to finances were very cheering. Besides paying the ordinary expenses, several of the Conference collections have already been taken, repairing of churches has gone forward, and much outside of the regular finances has been accomplished.

Some missionary work is being carried forward by several churches in the way of mission Sunday-schools and sustaining preaching-places, Bro. Scurlock is developing the Lower Coast Mission, which extends from this city down to Port Eads, having gathered six congregations and established several Sunday-schools. Altogether the prospect for a year's successful work throughout the district is quite encouraging, and if the high water does not interfere, we expect this district will make to the next Annual Conference the best report it has ever made.

One admirable feature of the Conference was the preaching every day at 11 A. M. Several of the brethren preached excellent sermons, which were heard with attention, and contributed largely to the success of the Conference, as well as to the edification of the hearers. We respectfully suggest, in this connection, that in all our District Conferences the preaching of the Word be made the special feature of the occasion. There is nothing under the sun that can take its place.

The Conference elected the following brethren as trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground from New Orleans district: J. H. Keller, P. Werlein, E. P. Mackie, J. H. Campman, D. Zable, J. R. Westerfield, B. O. L. Rayne, W. B. Thompson.

The followiug delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: W. B. Thompson, J. G. Grant, J. T. Reames, J. W. Adams.

The report from the Seashore Camp Ground Association was read, and exhibited a better financial condition than any previous report. Several brethren read interesting papers, which were listened to with great attention. Louisiana Avenue Church was selected as the place of holding the next Conference.

The Raging River.

The Father of Waters—the mighty Mississippi—has been booming for several weeks, threatening the people along its banks for a thousand miles with devastation and destruction. The people have worked heroically, night and day, to protect themselves, strengthening and heightening their levees all along this tremendous stretch. They have generally been successful. A few places have been unable to stand the great pressure and have given way. Last Thursday there was a sort of spasmodic rise in the river in front of the city of about half a foot in an hour or so. This caused the water to run over the river front in many places and rapidly fill up the gutters and some of the principal streets. Considerable alarm resulted, but by the prompt action of the officials and a favoring wind, the normal condition was restored by Friday. The river at this point has been higher than ever known, but at this present writing the danger to our city seems to be over. From other points, however, the news is very unfavorable, and the prospects are that many of our people will be submerged.

Miss Barnes' Forthcoming Book.

Miss Annie Maria Barnes' book, "The Gospel among the Slaves," will, we understand, soon be ready for the printer. It is to contain articles from the pens of distinguished men and women thoughout our various Conferences. Considering the present agitation of the negro question, this book, which is a loyal tribute to the South—a record of the work done by the Southern Conferences of the Methodist Church for the evangelization of the slaves prior to and during the war—is looked for with deep interest. This work of evangelization, which was the crowning glory of ante-bellum Methodism, was of far greater compass than even many well-read people would imagine. During one decade alone the sum of nearly eight hundred thousand dollars was raised in support of these special slave missions, outside the work done for the negroes in the churches o the whites. These missions were to the plantation negroes exclusively. Next to the great work done on the rice plantations in South Carolina was that done in the cotton and cane fields of the Mississippi Valley. During the year 1859 Mississippi had as many as forty-one of these special slave missions, employing nearly as many regular missionaries and covering more than two hundred plantations. Out of her treasury the Mississippi Conference gave annually from six to eight and ten thousand dollars to their support, outside the appropriations from the planters; nor was the Louisiana Conference much behind her. Bishop Galloway, who is one of the contributors to Miss Barnes' book, says of the effort: "It ought to be the book of the century. The time is opportune in both Church and State."

Faith.

BY "GILDEROY."

Faith is a divinely-wrought belief in the record concerning Christ and an active trust in him as a personal Savior.

It is more than a belief that follows evidence, and more than the grace of faith which comes by the Holy Ghost.

In some sense, all men and all devils believe and tremble without once coming nigh the kingdom of God. Belief that follows evidence is one of the primary elements of human nature, and this kind of faith is too frequently presented as the condition of salvation in these latter days. This is purely an intellectual process. The faith that saves, as divinely wrought, is attended by assurance, and, in so far as human, it works by love. And in this way the prevenient grace passes into a new or regenerate life. The human and the divine in faith can not be so clearly traced as in repentance. Indeed, repentance is in the outer court; but faith is in the inner court, in the spirit.

The being of God, the guilt and punishment of sin, the mission of Christ, revelation from God, as a whole, are accepted by faith before the sinner is ready for personal trust in the Savior, or trust in the person of Christ for salvation. Mere intellectual assent to general truths is not enough for the saving of the soul. This statement needs the emphasis of thunder. Just here, more than anywhere else, perhaps, have we departed from the word and doctrine of God. Hence our churches are filled with men and women who assent to the truth, but do not try to live by the rule. This assent is good as far as it goes, and it ought to lead to personal trust in Christ; but in too many it falls short of this. It is faith in history, and nothing more.

We need to affirm constantly that, "No man can say that Jesus is Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." "Faith is the act of the whole man under the immediate influence of the Holy Ghost." That which makes faith faith is the single element of trust. This springs up, heaven born, in a penitent soul filled with despair. "A Person is the substance of all saving faith." It turns to a Person, relies on a Person and finds rest in a Person. "He that believeth on the Son." "Whosoever believeth on him"—"believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly." "Children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." The Person of Christ is the Object on which faith rests and lives. This is Christian faith, or the faith of Jesus Christ. It is not the assent of the mind to a fact, but the reliance of the heart on a Person that saves the soul.

Passive or receptive faith is opposed to works of every kind in this, that it relies wholly on Christ for what he has promised to give and receives what he offers. It abstains from every act and waits for a fulfillment of the divine promise. "To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness," or, in place of acts, works.

Active faith goes forth into action, into doing the will of God, into good works. It waits and works. It obeys the commands as well as trusts the promises of Christ. It receives Christ, believes on him and follows him. It is the obedience of faith. These two things constitute but one faith, for they are correlative parts of the same thing, or of one indivisible whole. As passive and receptive, it empties the soul to recieve Christ, and, as active it lays hold on him. This is the faith that brings regeneration and characterizes the regenerate soul. Faith working by love is the mainspring of the new life. The act of faith becomes a state of faith.

It is manifest that no power other than divine could inspire an act so essentially moral and spiritual. It is faith that is of the operation of God. A state of repentance, by the aid of the Spirit, culminates in the highest moral act of which the human soul is capable.

Our Church at Oxford, Miss.

The announcement of the burning of the Methodist Church at Oxford was a great shock to me and, doubtless, to everyone who appreciates the value of an active congregation in an attractive church at that educational center. A church there is of far more than local value. There are students at the University from all parts of Mississippi; and the church at Oxford reaches these in the formative period of their lives, and, through them, the future Church and State of Mississippi, as the church in no other place can. Seeing this, the Presbyterians built them a handsome church years ago, the public rendering large help to the local congregation. The Baptists, a little later, saw the situation, and, by the aid of their Mission Board, built well. Four years ago, after Methodism had suffered great loss in the State by our failure to equip ourselves at that place as we should, the Board of Church Extension came to the help of the local congregation and enabled them to put their church in a comfortable and an attractive state. But this is gone—the fire fiend has left nothing to them, and without help Methodism in the whole State must suffer. I visited Oxford last Monday, and found our brethren determined to do all they can; but for four years they have been under heavy tax to refit their church and replace their burnt parsonage. Brethren, help! On last Sunday the congregation at this place raised more than one hundred dollars for the new church at Oxford. Let every church in Mississippi, north or south, help, and thereby build a church in Oxford that will bless Mississippi Methodism through the coming years.

THOS. J. NEWELL.

GRENADA, MISS., March 12, 1890.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have read the appeal of the brethren, endorsed by Bishop Galloway. I hope it will be read, and heeded, by our preachers in Mississippi. T. J. N.

Brookhaven District Parsonage.

Fifteen pastors of the Brookhaven district have each a parsonage furnished by the church, but the presiding elder has been living in a hired house. A movement was inaugurated a year ago to secure a district parsonage, which now promises soon to culminate. The time has come for a definite forward movement in this enterprise. A meeting of the committee is called for Tuesday, April 1, in Brookhaven. The pastors of the district are invited to meet with the committee. Collectors of district parsonage money are requested to report to their pastor, that we may have a full report for that meeting. We hope to have a full attendance. This is a matter that concerns the whole district. Brookhaven will gladly entertain all who may come. The brethren are requested to come on Monday evening, March 31, so that the whole of the day following may be devoted to business. There is much to be done. First of all, we must determine where the district parsonage shall be. Then we must decide whether to build or buy a house. Finally, we must "perform the doing of it." The friends of the enterprise, especially the committee and collectors, will please be "diligent in business," and let us "cut it short in righteousness."

W. B. LEWIS, P. E.

MARCH 13.

Too Many Collections.

Some of our people—we do not know how many—are complaining at the number of collections that are taken by the preacher in charge to carry forward the work of the church. It is true that the number of collections is greater than it was in the days of our fathers, and it looks as if they might grow indefinitely in the future. The people who are called upon to give the money and the preacher whose duty it is to take the collection are, perhaps, both entitled to some sympathy; but if the work of the church is to go on, the money must be given. In these days nothing of any permanent value is accomplished without a liberal use of money.

But the case is not as bad, perhaps, as some of us think. If any reader of this paper feels disposed to complain because of the number of collections, he is not without company; and, as "misery loves company," he may be comforted in reflecting on the case mentioned by the Methodist Times, of London. A writer, mentioning a certain village, says:

The Wesleyan chapel built in 1849 will seat about 100. There are eight high-backed pews with doors, very few let. Income from this source 19s. per annum. The free sittings are forms without backs. For years there has been no society class, there being only one member, and she very deaf and aged. The average congregation for some time has been about ten adults and a few children. All the connexional collections are regularly made, the box is put before these poor people twice on the Sunday, on alternate Sundays as a rule. The following collections are made: Theological Institution Fund, General Chapel Fund Collection, Kingswood Collections, Horsehire Fund, Quarterly Collection, Circuit Fund Collection (on two Sundays in each quarter), Educational Fund, Mission Band Collection, Foreign Missions; also two or three minor collections, such as lighting, etc. The income from the above collections (with the exception of foreign missions) in 1888 was 38s.

Take heart, brother; we have not come as far along yet as our English cousins.

Grenada Helps.

Our friends in Grenada, Miss., have done a handsome thing. When they heard of the loss of our church by fire in Oxford, Miss., the official Board met and adopted the following:

Whereas, Our brethren of the Methodist Church at Oxford, Miss., have receutly lost by fire their parsonage and more recently their church building, lately refitted and refurnished at a cost to them of more than $5,000.

Whereas, We regard the church at that place of more than local value to the general cause of Christianity and to our denomination.

Whereas, We know the heavy drain upon their resources which they have undergone in remodeling their church and replacing their parsonage.

Resolved, That we tender to them our Christian sympathy in the loss of their property, and pray that the way may be speedily opened by which their church may be more than replaced.

Resolved, That we request our pastor to present their interest to our congregation and raise a public collection for their benefit, to be forwarded at once.

Acting upon these resolutions, the pastor, Bro. J. E. Thomas, took a collection for the assistance of the brethren at Oxford, and realized $112.

Now, let other churches in North Mississippi follow this good example, and the damage done by fire will soon be repaired.

In regard to the union of Grant University, at Athens, with the Chattanooga University, Editor Parkhurst says: "The situation is still anxiously problematical." We are inclined to think that the Boston Methodist editor went back home with his mind filled with problems whose solution his church has failed to work out! Our old professor used to say, "Boys, don't force the answers!"

Notes.

Church charity is mainly confined to purely church uses, and, when it happens to overflow, it overflows in the direction of purchasing blankets for the naked savages of Borrio Boola Gha, in Central Africa, or other object of an equally practical sort.—Times-Democrat.

This language is evidence of inexcusable ignorance, or it is willful misrepresentation.

The Mid-Continent has this. Does it tally with your observation?

When a saloon once gets seated in a town it begins to swell and swell until before long it grows bigger than the court-house, the churches, the stores; grander than the grand jury, the judges, the police; greater than the homes of high and low; stronger than the whole town. And innocence and virtue, youth and manhood; truth and purity, childhood and womanhood, all pay tribute to its coffers.

The Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention meets in this city, on the twenty-first instant, in the Coliseum Place Baptist Church. Eminent Sunday-school workers from abroad are expected, and a program of exercises for Friday, Saturday and Sunday has been published. We hope that our friends will bear this announcement in mind, and give the convention the encouragement of their presence and co-operation.

The Lottery Company offered a donation of fifty thousand dollars to Mayor Shakespeare for the protection of the city from the flood, and the donation was accepted. The same company offered Gov. Nicholls one hundred thousand dollars for the use of the State in protecting the levees, which was refused. The company then divided the amount among the several levee districts and donated it directly to them. So we go. The fight is growing in interest. God is on the side of right.

L. Prang & Co., Boston, Mass., have laid upon our desk specimens of their Easter publications. It is a notable fact that these publications are thoroughly American in their character, being made from designs by American artists, with texts from American authors. Flowers and spring blossoms, as well as little children, are prevalent subjects in these Easter cards and novelties. Easter booklets, in the form of poems by celebrated poets, form a considerable part of these specimens. We can truly say "these things are beautiful beyond compare."

It is true, too true, that there are multitudes of people in the church who never "do a lick of work" for Christ or humanity. A great many people, far too many, seem to think that conversion is all they need to secure a title to the rewards of the future. What good do such people do for the church or the world? What the world needs, what the church needs, what the individual needs, is that the converted men and women shall also be earnest workers of righteousness. Each member of the church needs to become "a servant of righteousness."

We have received the Thirteenth Report of the American Humane Association. This association has for its object, specially, the prevention of cruelty to children and animals. It is a part of a world-wide system. There are societies all over Europe, in Asia, Africa, Australia, West Indies, South America, Mexico and Canada. From the reports made of the workings of the association to the convention held, last September, in Louisville, Ky., we judge that much progress is being made. It is certainly a good line of work, and one which requires a vast amount of diligence to perform it properly. Cruelty in any form, whether to man or animal, is nothing but savagery, and every man and woman is under perpetual obligation to aid in bringing it to an end. We wish the association great success.

P. F. Herwig, the chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Louisiana, having been interviewed by the New York Herald on the Lottery, says:

The Republicans have always favored the Lottery, and they will be solid for an extension of the charter. I do not know a single Republican leader in the State who will oppose the proposition.

Our friends will take a note of this.

J. D. Houston, an influential Democrat, said to the same reporter:

I am heartily in favor of the proposition. If the people were not allowed to buy lottery tickets in the State, they would send their money to Havana, as they did years ago. I think the money should be kept here. The State needs more funds for her charitable and educational institutions, and the proposition of the Lottery Company furnishes an easy way to get it. I do not think $500,000, however, is enough for the franchise. It is exceedingly valuable, and the company should pay from $750,000 to $1,000,000 for it.

Our friends will note that also. The heads of both parties say they favor the rechartering of this abomination. Here we part company with them all. We belong to the anti-Lottery party, and believe it will succeed.

Personal and Otherwise.

Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge has been pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, in Richmond, Va., forty-five years.

Editor Parkhurst, of Zion's Herald, in his sixth letter from the South, says: "The solid South is the gravest danger as well as the greatest scandal to the land." Piqued about something, undoubtedly!

Of their university at Chattanooga, Editor Parkhurst says: "It seems to have everything but students. It is impossible to fully explain the situation, even if we have rightly apprehended it." He speaks of the institution as a sort of "storm center." As we understand the case, that university belongs to what he calls "the white work" in the South!

Maurice Thompson said, in last week's Independent: "There is no sincerity short of absolute projection of the truth as we see it." If that is true, it cuts the ground from under the feet of many professors of religion. They never "project the truth" they profess.

We received, the other day, a postal order for $2 from the postoffice at Vicksburg, Miss., but no name accompanied it. Will the sender send name, and tell us what to do with the $2?

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

We are pained to learn of the death of Mrs. Porter, wife of Rev. James Porter, of the North Mississippi Conference.

We understand that Miss Addie V. Marshall, of Brookhaven, Miss., has accepted the position of Conference Secretary of the Woman's Department of Church Extension, to which she was elected at the last session of the Mississippi Conference.

We learn from the last Texas Advocate of the death of Rev. N. A. Craven, a superannuate of the Texas Conference. Bro. Craven was for many years a member of the Louisiana Conference, and known all over the State as a preacher of great power. He lived to a good old age, and now rests from his labor.

Our contributors are filling our hopper with the very best grist. We only wish we had a larger paper, and then we could accommodate everybody sooner than we are now able to do.

We have received a letter from Rev. P. H. Dieffenwierth, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, residing near Clear Water Harbor, Fla. The letter bears date of March 12, and opens with these words: "To-day I enter my eightieth year." Fourscore years! Ah, how much they tell! Our brother says: "Christ is my only hope, my only plea."

We are requested by Bro. Roberts, of Utica, Miss., to say that homes have been provided for all who expect to attend the Vicksburg District Conference, to be held at that place, beginning April 3. The editor acknowledges the receipt of a special invitation, which he hopes to accept.

The postoffice address of Rev. J. H. Smith, of North Mississippi Conference, is Newport, Attala county, Miss.

The dispatches state that Rev. T. L. Mellen, presiding elder of the Meridian district, has been appointed financial agent for East Mississippi Female College. Dr. Saunders having resigned that office on account of ill-health. The Board of Trustees are fortunate in securing the services of Bro. Mellen, who, by official position and natural and acquired endowments, is peculiarly fitted for the place.

Dr. W. L. Walker, brother of Rev. John Walker, of the North Alabama Conference, a highly esteemed physician and steward in the Methodist Church, died at 5 A. M., March 14, at his residence in Houston, Miss. A good man gone to his reward.

A Call.

The Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana is hereby called at Ruston, for April 18, 19 and 20, next.

The presence of Mrs. Clara Hoffman, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Missouri, and other able speakers, will make the occasion interesting.

Provision for the entertainment of delegates has been made, and a full representation from every Union in the State is desired.

CAROLINE E. MERRICK, Pres.
MRS. F. A. LYONS, Sec.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: The Minutes of the Louisiana Conference fail to give the Haynesville circuit credit for their church extension money. They were assessed $26 10, and paid $26 10. Will you please correct it in the ADVOCATE, and oblige,

Yours truly, F. G. HOCUTT.

Woman's Work for Woman.

Dear Christian Sisters: When we consider who are the workers, what the work, and for whom we are working, is it not wonderful that more women are not interested and greater work been done? Should not this "labor of love" be shared by every woman in Christ's church? There is welcome and work for all. Our work is not the toil and drudgery of every-day life, nor is it for earthly recompense; but it is God-given and God-inspired, and he who "worketh in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure," will give us while here the "pearl of great price," and treasures hereafter in heaven.

How sweet to know that through us, even us, the enlightening, elevating influences of the gospel can be felt, and we can impart the saving knowledge of Christ—saving from error and sin, and unto the higher life in God! And it must be a comforting thought to the heathen women, brought under the gospel influences, that such blessings have been wrought through the instrumentality of their Christian sisters.

We are made sorrowful by thinking of the separation of our own missionaries from kindred and from home, forgetting that they have the great Comforter ever with them, and find deepest joy in doing the will of our Master. How much brighter their life in the heathen world than the life of those who are of that world. Think of the benighted, degraded, despairing, suffering heathen womanhood—women for whom our Savior died, and of whom he would make up his jewels, and who are dearer to him than are we when we fail or refuse to be co-workers with him in saving the world he died to redeem.

With such privileges as we have, and such opportunities to "spend and be spent" for him whose love for us we know, is it not passing strange that we, who pretend to be workers for him, are so idle, indifferent, neglectful? What can we say when the "Lord of the harvest" calls for our sheaves? Why should we allow little home cares, trifling social duties, to smother our desires to do his will? Why should we let selfish indulgence prevent our knowing the delight of saving souls, and also retard the coming of the Master? Why do we forget that imparting "love divine" to others, ourselves receive a double portion?

My dear sisters, let us awake! "To the work! to the work!" be our cry. We may be weak, yet strong in his strength; timid, yet willing for his dear sake to "dare and to die." Our opportunities are, indeed, golden and our privileges glorious; and we "who are of the day" should be awake and at work, resolved to work till Jesus comes, ever keeping in mind: "I am only one, but I am one; I can not do everything, but I can do something; what I can do, I ought to do; and what I ought to do, by God's help, I will do." E. P. M.

Discrepancies in Annual Conference Reports.

There ought to be no discrepancies, and yet they occur every year, as shown by the published Minutes. The reports of the different Boards, so far as I have examined, never agree exactly with the statistical tables. In the Minutes of this year there occur the following discrepancies between the statement of the treasurer of the Board of Missions and the tables: In collections for foreign missions by churches, $69 91; by Sunday-schools, $327 20; domestic missions, $39 99—total, $437 10. The discrepancy between the report of the Finance Board and the tables shows a deficit of $66 96, and of the Board of Church Extension, $16 12.

These mistakes may occur in various ways—by illegible writing, typographical error, and accidental wrong entries, or by omissions; but in many cases, no doubt, to say the least of it, there is an inexcusable carelessness and negligence on the part of the preachers in making their reports.

Lest anyone should think that I have made this charge hastily, let me illustrate its truth by comparing the published tables compiled from the preachers' reports with the church extension accounts which represent the cash paid by each preacher. I will take it by districts:

New Orleans district agrees exactly. Shreveport—Discrepancy, $2 95. One work reports ten dollars more than paid. Another paid $6 05, and reports nothing. Another reports nothing, and paid one dollar. Alexandria—One brother reports $7, and paid nothing. Opelousas—Discrepancy, $16 75. One work reports $16, and paid $5. Another, $5 75—nothing paid. Delhi—Correct. Homer district paid $10 58 more than the tables show. One work reports $1 25 more than paid. Another reports nothing, and paid $26 10. Another reports $14 30, and paid nothing.

If calling attention to these discrepancies will have the effect of making preachers more careful in making their reports in the future, a very desirable end will have been accomplished. J. W. MEDLOCK.

A New Sanctuary.

MR. EDITOR: On the fourth Sabbath in January I had the pleasure of dedicating a church at Carthage, Miss. It is an exceedingly tasteful structure, built according to one of the plans contained in Dr. Morton's Church Extension Catalogue. It has a Sunday-school room separated from the auditorium by folding doors, so that the two may be thrown into one when occasion requires. It is one of the neatest churches in the Conference, and an ornament to the town. A collection was taken to pay off all indebtedness, and the sum of $350 was raised. Our people in that locality have displayed a spirit of liberality that is highly commendable. To the pastor, Rev. J. M. Morse, belongs the honor of having initiated this enterprise and conducted it to a successful completion. There were obstacles in the way which it required his tact, energy and force of character to overcome. Carthage is now a station for the first time. It enters upon this new phase of its history with gratifying prospects.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. A. C. Flowers writes from Shubuta, Miss.: "We have received many tokens of kindness on the Clark circuit. There have been advances made on nearly all lines, both in a spiritual and a financial direction. Our presiding elder, Bro. Mellen, was with us March 1 and 2, despite the cold weather. He proved himself well qualified for his calling, and made a good impression on both preacher and people. We love our presiding elder, and are expecting a great work for the Lord under his administration. We are trying to work for the ADVOCATE. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis reports from Kearney, Miss.: "We are anticipating an overflow. Rain storms have been heavy. But little bank, and the water rises about three inches in twenty-four hours. I lost my nag in the back water. Right smart of uneasiness on account of the expected overflow. The people can not work but little on their farms. I go to my appointments in skiffs and boats. Thank God there is a way where there is a will. Pray for me."

—Rev. Robert Randle, presiding elder of Homer district, Louisiana Conference, writes: "We have had no serious sickness in our family, though there has been a great deal of complaint. The farming interests have been somewhat hindered by the late freeze and the rains that have followed. The spiritual interests of the work are advancing, and the church through the district increasing in strength on all lines."

—Presiding Elder Cooper writes as follows: "First round on Seashore district closed March 9. Miles traveled, fourteen hundred; nineteen faithful preachers at their post of duty. Every assessment on the district will be paid—so think the pastors. Nearly every charge has advanced the pastor's assessment; some charges from $300 to $550. Six new parsonages on foot. Presiding elder allowed $1,155."

—Rev. R. M. Blocker reports from Crowley, La.: "Last Saturday night we had Mrs. M. A. Goodale, the national organizer of the W. C. T. U., with us. A good house greeted her coming and enjoyed her excellent talk. On Sunday morning she addressed our Sunday-school to the delight of all present—especially our little folks."

A Lucky Girl.

MR. EDITOR: I think my experience will interest many of your readers, and as I have married recently, and retired from business I hope to benefit others that are in need. My face being partly broken out with pimples and blotches, our physician gave me a medicine that cured me in a short time, and made my complexion beautiful. My cousin also had a lot of freckles, this medicine cleaned them of, and left her face nice and pretty. Many of my friends were anxious to try it, and I concluded I could make some money selling the preparation. I saw on the bottle that the face bleach was made by Marion Walker, Louisville, Ky., and the price was $2.00 for 2 bottles, enough for one face, so I wrote for the agency, and in 22 weeks I cleared $407.41, an average of $18 52 a week, which I think is good for an inexperienced girl. Anyone can get the agency by writing to the above address, and can make lots of money, too. ONE WHO TRIED IT.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

A SEEDLING ROSE Raised by George Washington over a hundred years ago, and named after his mother. It can yet be seen growing at his old home, Mt. Vernon, and the Mt. Vernon Guide-book tells all about it. It is now first offered to the public, and, aside from the fact that it was raised and named by our first President, it is the most valuable rose in cultivation to-day, and the only HARDY PERPETUAL BLOOMING CLIMBER. It is a rapid grower, and commences to bloom early in Spring and continues in the greatest profusion until frost. The flowers are pure snow-white, perfectly double to the center, and of unsurpassed fragrance, being tinged with the musky fragrance so much admired in olden times. Its buds are as beautiful as the finest tea roses, long and pointed, on long stems, and often in large clusters. One plant will produce more bloom than a score of tea roses, and they can be cut in abundance every day during Summer and Fall. It is perfectly hardy, and will, in a short time, form a complete arch over a door, window, gate or arbor, and always full of bloom. It is unlike any other rose, and the greatest novelty of the age. Strong plants by mail, post-paid, guaranteed to arrive in good order, 50 cents each; 5 for $2. Also the beautiful Manettia Vine, 10 cents each; and the Wondrous Weather Plant, 25 cents; (Both previously advertised); or for 80 cents we will send Rose, Manettia and Weather Plant.

HOW JOHNNY JUMP-UP TURNED INTO A PANSY.

There was a little boy
Whom his mother did employ
In doing all the errands she could trump up;
And she sent his feet so nimble
After scissors, spool, or thimble,
Till the neighbors always called him
Johnny-Jump-Up.

Now this Johnny—little boy
Whom his mother did employ,
Saying, "Johnny-jump-up, dear, and fetch the 'tarts, please;"
Or, "Run, Johnny, to the spring,
And a pail of water bring,"
Don't you see he grew to be his mother's Heart's-ease?

The Editor's Way Out of Trouble.

MR. EDITOR: I am so sorry you are in trouble. I offer the following suggestion which I hope will help you out, and please all the "little cousins," viz: Select one line or sentence from each of the "thirty letters," and publish these lines in the form of a letter, that we may see how it will read. Hoping this plan will help you out of your trouble, I am,

Your little friend,
F. LEIGHTON JONES.
HAZLEHURST, Miss.

The editor adopts the above plan, and gives the following as the result:

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your paper, I got a Bible and hymn book last Sunday. She is a beautiful young lady, and our preacher was sent back to us, and I am living with my uncle, and I want it to be a surprise to her. I will take music lessons, though he makes us study hard we think it kind in you to leave a little girl not eight years going to school, and though a small boy am a big Methodist. I have a sweet baby sister named Addie, a little girl twelve years old in that dreadful waste-basket, the son of an itinerant Methodist preacher, with three sisters and one brother to hear us speak. We will be there in two or three weeks as we are not as well acquainted with him, but have a nice cow and calf going to do a good work for us this year. LITTLE COUSINS.

How does it read? Can each of the cousins pick out the line occurring in his or her letter?

Training for the Grand Style.

Little Bertie Blynn had just finished his dinner. He was in the cosy library, keeping still for a few minutes after eating, according to his mother's rule. She got it from the family doctor, and a good rule it is. Bertie was sitting in his own rocking-chair before the pleasant grate fire. He had in his hand two fine apples—a rich red and a green. His father sat at a window reading a newspaper. Presently he heard the child say:

"Thank you, little master." Dropping his paper, he said:

"I thought we were alone, Bertie. Who was here just now?"

"Nobody, papa, only you and I."

"Didn't you say just now, 'Thank you, little master?'" The child did not answer at first, but laughed a shy laugh. Soon he said: "I'm afraid you'll laugh at me if I tell you, papa."

"Well, you have just laughed; and why mayn't I?"

"But I mean you'll make fun of me."

"No, I won't make fun of you; but perhaps I'll have fun with you. That will help us digest our roast beef."

"I'll tell you about it, papa. I had eaten my red apple, and wanted to eat the green one too. Just then I remembered something I'd learned in school about eating, and I thought that one big apple was enough. My stomach will be glad if I don't give it the green one to grind. It seemed to me for a minute just as if it said to me, 'Thank you, little master;' but I know I said it myself."

"Bertie, what is it that Miss McLaren has been teaching you about eating?"

"She told us to be careful not to give our stomachs too much food to grind. If we do, she says, it will make bad blood, that will run into our brains and make them dull and stupid, so that we can't get our lessons well, and perhaps give us headaches, too. If we give our stomachs just enough work to do, they will give us pure, lively blood, that will make us feel bright and cheerful in school. Miss McLaren says that sometimes, when she eats too much of something that she likes very much, it seems almost as if her stomach moaned and complained; but when she denies herself, and doesn't eat too much, it seems as if it was thankful and glad."

"That's as good preaching as the minister's, Bertie. What more did Miss McLaren tell you about this matter?"

"She taught us a verse one day about keeping the soul on top. That wasn't just the words, but it's what it meant."

At this, papa's paper went suddenly right up before his face. When, in a minute, it dropped down, there wasn't any laugh on his face as he said:

"Weren't these the words, 'I keep my body under?'"

"Oh, yes! that was it; but it means just the same. If I keep my body under, of course my soul is on top."

"Of course it is, my boy. Keep your soul on top, and you'll belong to the grandest style of man that walks the earth."—Anon.

Wonderful Watches.

In 1883 a watchmaker of Dresden exhibited a watch made entirely of paper. The paper was chemically prepared, and the maker claimed that it would be as serviceable as if made of the materials ordinarily used.

An ingenious prisoner at Kariaus, Bohemia, recently constructed a watch three inches in diameter, with no other tools or material except two needles, a spool of thread, a newspaper, and some rye straw. The wheels, posts and cogs are all made of the rye straw, which, it is well known, is quite coarse and tough. It runs six hours without winding, and keeps good time. It is now in the possession of the prefect of Kariaus, who considers it the greatest marvel of the nineteenth century.

The most ingenious, perfect and complex watch ever manufactured was sent out from the works of Patek, Phillippe & Co., of Geneva, Switzerland, in July, 1887, and is now in possession of Baron Nicholas. It is what is known as a full-sized "hunter." On one side there is a dial of the regulation kind, exhibiting the hour, minute and second hands; also an independent chronograph hand, which marks the fifth of seconds. The same dial has repeating mechanism, which strikes the hours, quarters and minutes. The opposite dial has hands pointing to months, weeks and days. Another large central hand on this dial, if set at the beginning of each year, correctly points to all moon phases, and also acts as a perpetual calendar. It is so constructed as to admit of its keeping two different times, say standard time on one side and sun time on the other. —New York Ledger.

"Hello, Chicken!"—A little girl of my acquaintance saw a parrot for the first time in one of our ice-cream parlors. As she was looking at it the parrot said, "Hello!" The child gazed in astonishment a moment, then answered in an awed tone, "Hello, chicken!"

Mrs. Bloodgood—"What! not an open fireplace nor a stove in the whole house? How does your father warm his slippers, Willie?"

Willie (ruefully)—"Warms 'em on me, ma'am."

That tired feeling, so subtle and yet so overpowering, is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones and strengthens the system and gives a good appetite. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla. "100 Doses One Dollar" is true only of this peculiar medicine.

Sunday-school Teacher—"'By their fruits ye shall know them.' Willie Brown, you may tell me what that means."

Willie Brown—"You can always tell a Dago by his banana stand."

Household.

THE MODEL HOUSEWIFE.

BY MRS. A. GIDDINGS PARK.

Her house is a model of neatness,
Not alone for cleanliness sake,
But for the good of her loved ones,
And the comfort they there may take.
Her parlor is light and cheery,
And never too good for use.
Her kitchen the coolest workshop—
Not a prison for drudge or recluse:

Her chambers are airy and sunny,
Her linen as white as the snow,
Her closets and cupboards in keeping
With the system of rule apropos.
Her china, her glass and her silver,
Are dainty, polished and bright;
Superb are her pies and her puddings,
And her bread ever wholesome and light.

Her pickles in crispness are perfect;
Her canned fruit and jellies the best;
Her pie-crust the flakiest, the doughnuts
Perfection to turn and to twist!
She is nurse to the sick and the feeble,
From "grandpa" to sweet baby May;
She settles the quibbles and quarrels
Of the elder children in play.

With foot on the rocker at evening,
She darns and patches and mends,
While Robbie's and Lillian's lessons
She carefully superintends.
Where the time 'mid this legion of duties
For mental culture she gets,
Is a mystery—yet she finds it!
Best of all is—she never frets!

A Needed Accomplishment.

The gift of one good voice, clear enunciation, correct pronunciation in every family would raise the enjoyment of home life 50 per cent., if such valuation could be placed on so spiritual a family possession; the gain that would result in the increase of general intelligence to each family is incalculable. It seems a great pity that when so much money is spent on accomplishments that really minister to the student's development only, more attention is not given to the very desirable accomplishment of elocution—not that the student may recite in public, but that he or she may read in private for the common development of the intelligence of the family.

The Boston Traveler queries with wisdom: "Is reading, indeed, a lost art, that we must all flock to a public hall, and be read to at a given price per hour? There seems to be a tendency in this direction. The gregarious reading is the idol of the hour. It can not be denied that to hear a great play or poem read by one with whom expression is an art, whose interpretation vitalizes and vivifies each individuality and lends color to a scene, is one of the great artistic enjoyments; but this is the exception and not the rule, and so one still recurs to the question, Is reading becoming a lost art to the dwellers in cities?"

Talking not long since to a teacher of elocution, the writer was struck with this sentence: "The art of elocution has its true value in conversation." How often bad inflection, wrong emphasis, completely hides, if it does not pervert, the speaker's meaning! Elocution is not a superficial training, a mere effort at effect; it is a training of the perceptions of intelligence, it is the effort to bring always the true meaning by a clear understanding of what was meant by the declaration, the sentiment. No longer is elocution the training of one sense—that of speech; it recognizes that gesture must bear its relation to the thing said; it recognizes that perfect harmony depends on perfect health, and applies methods of training necessary to physical development.—Christian Union.

PARENTAL PRAYERS.—Surely, among all prayers that go up to God, none are dearer or more prevailing than the intercessions of parents for their children. They are the hallowed breathings of the purest, tenderest love. Such prayers, if persistent, believing and importunate, may we not say that God always answers in some way in the end? Monica, the mother of Augustine, prays for her son. For a time he goes deeper and deeper into sin, and it seems that the mother's supplications are unheard or unavailing. But she faints not; she will not give him up; she refuses to be disheartened. For many years her son wanders far from God, farther and farther; but she stays at her altar, undismayed, believing still, and pleading with renewed earnestness. At last, all her intercessions are answered in one hour, when Augustine falls down at Jesus' feet in submission, and instantly turns all the wealth of his splendid life into the service of his new Master.—Presbyterian Observer.

Scientific.

Photographing the Sun.

The expedition sent out under the auspices of the government to the African Coast for the purpose of taking observations of the total eclipse of the sun on Dec. 22, was a very gratifying success. Prof. David P. Todd, with sixteen specialists as companions, and twelve tons of scientific apparatus, set sail from New York on Oct. 16 on the U. S. man-of-war Pensacola. On Dec. 8 the expedition reached St. Paul de Loando in Anigola, about eight degrees south of the equator. Prof. Todd finally chose Cape Ledo as his point of observation, and the instruments were set up and put in adjustment without delay. Cape Ledo is on the Bay of Suto, which is about nine miles long, and receives the waters of a river of the same name. It appeared to be in every way the most suitable location. Not only were the meteorological probabilities better than at any other possible point, but the eclipse was a few seconds longer there. The party lived principally on the Pensacola, as she lay at anchor near by, a much safer arrangement than to trust wholly to the climate ashore. The great photo-heliograph, forty feet long, pointed directly at the sun, was one of the chief instruments used. The working of the apparatus was entirely automatic, and by an application of a pneumatic arrangement, never before used in this way, the charging of the photographic plates was far more quickly and accurately accomplished than ever before, while the exact time at which each picture was made was recorded to the small fraction of a second. While the astronomers were busy with their instruments in preparation for the eclipse day, Prof. Cleveland devoted himself to the meteorology of the region. Mr. C. A. Orr studied the anthropology. Mr. Loomis made researches into the botany and ornithology; while the geology, mineralogy, osteology, biology, and all the other attributes of this far-away shore were carefully studied by experts in each. The beginning of the eclipse on the 22d was entirely clear. Later clouds interfered somewhat with the view, but more than eighty fine photographs were taken, and the instruments worked without a flaw. The entire success of the new appliances was one of the most gratifying results of the expedition, since the principle upon which they worked is so completely demonstrated to be correct. The spectacular part of this eclipse was particularly gorgeous and impressive. The colors on land, sea, and sky, a few moments before totality, were superb, and the approaching shadow swept over the ocean toward the station with a terrifying velocity.—Evangelist, N. Y.

HOW HAIL IS FORMED.—A correspondent of Nature contributes to that journal a theory of the formation of hail, which is so short and clear that it will interest many readers, who have, at times, opportunity to test its correctness. Limiting our notice to such compound hailstones as are the most destructive, and are produced during a tornado or a violent thunderstorm, the following is, in few words, the theory of their formation: When the winds gyrate rapidly round an axis, more or less inclined to the earth, the space at and about the axis is rarefied. When air charged with vapor is drawn into this rarefied space, it may be condensed into cloud or rain, but at a greater elevation into snow. Now, supposing the rain formed in the lower region to be drawn up by the ascending current into the snowy region, and so held for a short space, the drops will be frozen, and then, if propelled beyond the gyrations, it will fall to the ground as a shower of ordinary hail. But if in the descent they are again drawn in by the inflowing current, they will be again carried up into the cold region, and so acquire another coating of snow, or, if wetted in the previous descent, the water will freeze into a coat of transparent ice. In this way the globule may make a number of ascents and descents, and acquire a fresh coating each time.

Gents.—Last spring I received by mail a bottle of your Antidote for Malaria for my brother, who had chills for more than six months. He frequently broke them with Quinine, but they would soon return. I gave him the Antidote and he has not had a chill since. It has made a permanent cure.

Yours truly, W. W. PERDUE.

WHY COUGH,

WHEN a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve you? Try it. Keep it in the house. You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. No household, with young children, should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use.

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1885 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Youker, Salem, N. J.

"Last winter I contracted a severe cold, which by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial irritation. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On taking this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been well ever since."—Rev. Thos. B. Russell, Secretary Holston Conference and P. E. of the Greenville District, M. E. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

MASON & HAMLIN

The Cabinet Organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since and including that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers, of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated

ORGANS $22 to $900 catalogues free.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their Pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1880, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which they secure the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with great increased capacity

PIANOS GRAND & UPRIGHT, for standing in tune and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians, and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

HANKINS—Mrs. E. M. HANKINS moved to this State when twenty years of age from Kentucky. Shortly after moving she joined the Southern Methodist Church, and for over fifty years she was a faithful, loyal Methodist. She passed away at the ripe age of seventy-five in the home of her youngest son, in McGregor, Texas, on February 9, 1890, at 1:30 o'clock P. M.

Ten years ago, when the writer, as a young, raw recruit in the ministry, was sent to Morgan City, he met this faithful and true Christian mother in Israel. During his pastorate she ever treated him as her own son; always kind, and full of earnest and sympathizing counsel, not officious nor obtrusive, but ever ready to strengthen, cheer and comfort whenever I came to her with my sadness or trouble at the dearth of fruits to my ministry.

She was loyal to her church, true to her Savior. She was with the Franklin congregation when Bro. Cravens had his great revival there years ago. She sat under the ministry of a number of faithful pastors at New Iberia, and was liberal to the full extent of her ability, never being able to do as much as she desired for her church. She waited upon her Lord by faithful, untiring service, always true to him in every crowd in all circumstances; the days never got so dark but she served him and trusted him implicitly, and he renewed her strength. The patience, the confidence of soul, the certainty that her Lord would reward her, was always present to her, and he never failed her. Cheerful, contented in her old age, she said when last I saw her: "I can not tell why I am lasting so long unless the Lord intends to let me live to see my prayers answered in the conversion of my two boys." When we separated we quietly promised to meet each other in heaven. There were no loud professions, no great outburst of religion in her life, but an even flow of life; the current was there, but no cataracts—just the deep, smooth flow of a river that had depth and volume. You would never meet her when there seemed to be no current; but always in sadness or trouble, in trials or temptations, even when the answers to her prayers were delayed, her life, spiritual and true, flowed on steadily, beautifully. She was a delight to an unried and youthful pastor, for she heard him gladly, she heard him prayerfully; and oft from the pulpit when, feeling how poor the sermon was, had the writer looked into that cheerful, prayerful, interested countenance, and thanked God for the sustaining power of her presence. She was a benediction to me in those years of trial.

She was always on hand when her health would allow her to attend the services; but for quite a number of years she had been feeble, and the last time we worshiped together she walked fully a half-mile to church, and when arriving there sank exhausted from heat and fatigue into the seat; but her eye lightened up and the same fervor of devotion and love to the Master appeared on her face when the service began. Her inner life was stronger and brighter, but the outer man was frail and feeble, perishing. She has mounted up on the strong wing of eternal life; the frail tenement that held her spirit is in the grave, but she has gone on before. She is waiting for her loved ones and those who have promised to meet her in heaven to come on—waiting for them, but waiting still on her Lord who has renewed her strength.

May her prayers for her sons be answered! May the comfort of the Holy Spirit abide upon her niece and sons who are left behind! My heart pours out its thanks to the Lord whose providence gave me her prayers, counsel and love in the first years of my ministry. By the grace of God I hope to meet her in the city of my God.

HERBERT—Bro. J. S. HERBERT was born in Butler county, Ala., February 19, 1824, and died in Holmes county, Miss., February 12, 1890. Bro. Herbert was happily married to Miss C. S. McGee, December 23, 1847, who still lives to lament her lonely widowhood. He made profession of religion in 1851, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained not only a consistent member, but a working member, until the day of his death. His illness lasted for about three weeks, during which time his Christian fortitude was wonderfully displayed.

It was the writer's privilege to visit him several times during his sickness and to pray with and for him, and I had good hope of his recovery until only a few days before he left us. My acquaintance with Bro. Herbert was only that of a few short weeks; but I do not think I ever knew a more transparent Christian. Modest and unassuming, he went about his Master's work, and the impress that he left on human hearts for good will be felt and seen for years to come in the community of Acona. He leaves not only the wife of his bosom and a large number of children and grandchildren to mourn his departure, but every one of his neighbors feels bereaved, indeed. In his death his household have lost their strong right arm; the community, one of its very best citizens; Acona society, one of its brightest jewels; and the official Board of Black Hawk, a steward whose place will be hard to fill. God grant that the father's mantle may fall upon and be worn worthily by his four boys!

The writer preached his funeral sermon from Amos vii, 7 and 8, at Acona Church, February 13, and he was buried with masonic honors. "Peace to his ashes." "We will meet again by and bye." May God bless and sanctify this providence to all our good and save us in his kingdom!

B. F. PHILLIPS, P. C.

SHORT—MARY ELLEN SHORT, wife of H. G. Short (whom she married December 13, 1861), was born October 17, 1847; died February 17, 1890. She professed religion early in life and joined the Baptist Church. She afterward joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which she lived a faithful and consistent member. She was a faithful wife, a fond, loving mother, a good neighbor, an earnest, useful Christian and a true friend, as the writer well knows, who was her pastor for three years. She was the mother of eleven children, two of whom preceded her to the better land. Her religious life was a model. She was modest and retiring in disposition, but practical in the discharge of duty. Her religion did not partake much of the sensational, but was solid and uniform.

Her family lay near her heart. Their joys were her joys, and their sorrows were her sorrows. She so impressed her life into that of her husband that it is no wonder he feels a part of his own existence gone." Her natural temperament was serene and her disposition calm. The law of kindness was in her heart, and no unkind words escaped her lips. But her race is run and she has reached the goal. Our Savior saw that her heart was perfect before him—that her work was finished; so he took her to her reward. Well may it be said of her: "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all." In the silent grave loving hands laid her remains away to rest. We mourn her departure, not for her sake, but for our own. May God, in love and mercy, sustain the afflicted ones left behind!

IRA B. ROBERTSON.

SHIELDS—Died, in Baton Rouge, December 5, 1889, Mrs. SARAH WHITFIELD SHIELDS, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. Sister Shields was born in Putnam county, Ga., and came to this State soon after her marriage, and settled with her husband in Claiborne parish, near the town of Minden.

This writer became acquainted with Sister Shields twenty-six years ago, and has ever been impressed with her worth and high Christian character. She was at that time a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Minden. Her seat was rarely vacant at church. Bro. Shields upon the right of the pulpit, and Sister Shields upon the left, was almost as certain as to see the preacher in the pulpit. Hers was always the first hand to greet the new preacher and bid him welcome—not with lip only, but with heart. Her home was the preacher's home. Let him be her pastor, or some weary itinerant who would find rest upon the way, her home was his home and his God her God. Recognized as the embassador of her Lord, nothing was too good for a Methodist preacher.

On turning to the subscription list of the ADVOCATE, you will find the name of "Shields" thereon as far back as the birth of the paper. The first time I ever saw the paper it was in her house, and the last time I saw her the paper was in her hand. The Bible, the Discipline and the church paper were her constant companions. With such association, it is no marvel that she daily grew in grace and the knowledge of her Lord. Simple in faith, firm in trust, consistent in life, years but added beauty to her Christian character, and when her Master called the response was ready: "Lord, here am I!"

A FRIEND.

You have no right to reckon on God's help, and protection, and guidance, and all the other splendid privileges which he promises to "the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ," until you have this first blessing, the mercy of God in Jesus Christ; for it is "in" Jesus Christ that all the promises of God are yea and amen.—Havergall.

The Peace of Europe.

The peace of Europe depends upon the will of one monarch. He has but to speak, and a bloody war will ensue. And yet, this mighty ruler, with thousands of his subjects, bravest officers and soldiers, has been forced to submit. To what? To an epidemic catarrh, a cold in the head. After all, disease is the great conqueror.

But read what Compound Oxygen has done for the alleviation and cure not only of catarrh, but other chronic diseases:

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN: "Before using your Compound Oxygen Treatment, I supposed I had consumption, but now my lungs are sound."

MRS. H. L. HADLEY.
Seneca Falls, N. Y.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN: "I have had catarrh for about 23 years. I have tried various remedies and found no relief until I tried your Compound Oxygen Treatment."

F. B. D. VAUGHN, Ilgley, Florida.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN: "I have used your Compound Oxygen Treatment for catarrh and have been greatly benefited by it." R.C. FOSTER.
Greenville, S. C., July 19, 1888.

You will find more evidence in our brochure of 200 pages. It treats of Compound Oxygen, its nature, discovery and results.

This book is sent free. It is the result of twenty years' experience in the treatment of over 55,000 patients. Read the records of cases, and you will, no doubt, find some similar to your own. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

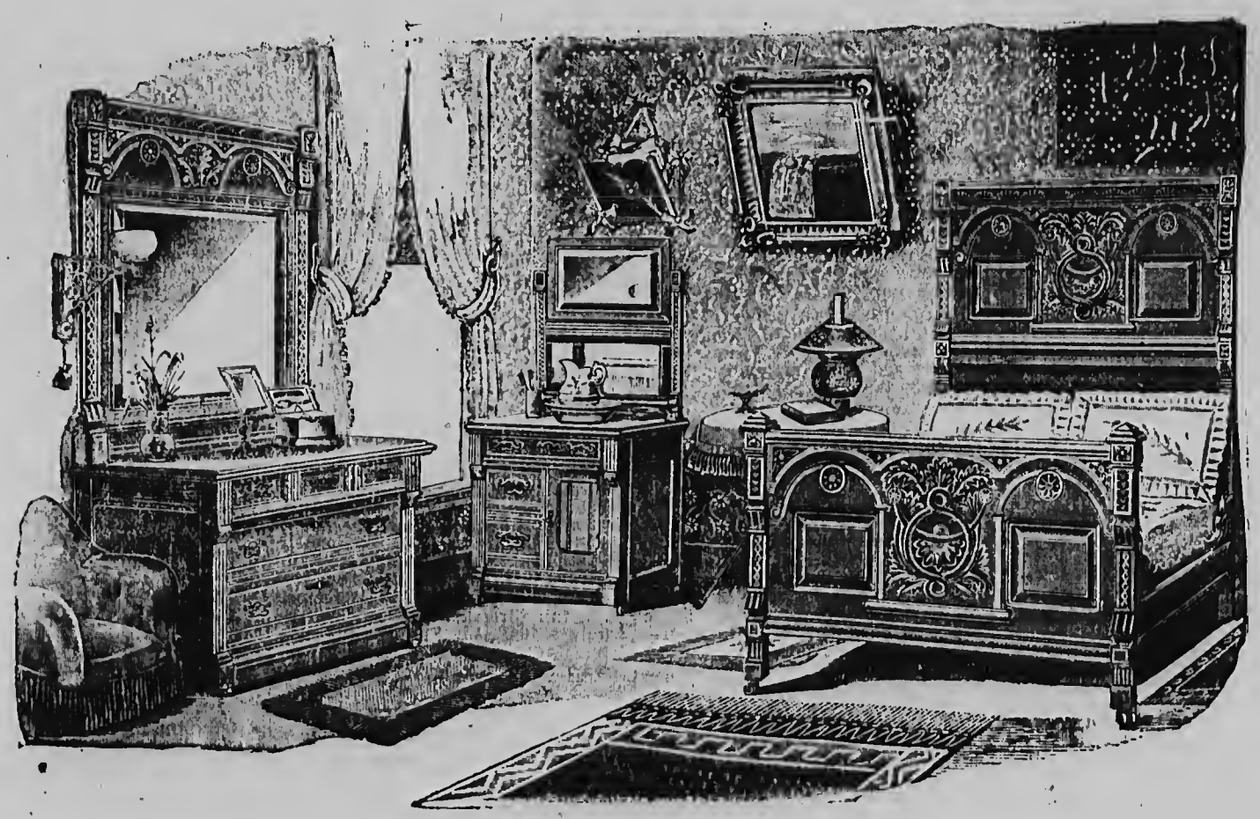
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

A VEGETABLE WONDER!

HENDERSON'S NEW

BUSH LIMA BEAN.

Just fancy a Lima Bean growing only 18 inches high! Yet this is exactly what we offer in HENDERSON'S NEW BUSH LIMA. Every one knows that the old Lima can only be grown on poles, so that those who plant the BUSH LIMA will not only enjoy the same delicious flavored beans, but by dispensing with poles save an unsightly expense. Our NEW BUSH LIMA is not only as productive (single plants have borne as high as 294 pods) but it is also TWO WEEKS EARLIER than any of the Pole Lima Beans. Planted at corn-planting time, it is ready for the table (around New York) in July, and bears in the greatest abundance until frost.

Price (by mail) 25 cents per packet, 5 packets for $1.00, 12 packets for $2.00 (12 packets sufficient for an ordinary sized family for the season). Directions for growing on each packet.

With every order for a single packet or more, will be sent, gratis, our superb catalogue of "Everything for the Garden" (the price of which is 25 cents), on condition that you will say in what paper you saw this advertisement. Club orders for FIVE or TWELVE packets can have the Catalogue sent, when desired, to the separate address of each member comprising the club, provided always that the paper is named.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A rise in the river of over five inches and a stiff wind from the southeast set the water flowing over the levees into the streets of this city on March 13.

Twenty thousand settlers have invaded the Cherokee strip, eager to secure choice farms in the promised land. The scenes incident to the opening of Oklahoma were repeated.

Chauncey F. Black, president of the Democratic Society of Pennsylvania, has issued a circular, calling upon all Democratic clubs throughout the country to celebrate the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, which occurs on April 13.

Secretary Windom has transmitted to the Senate a letter from Secretary Blaine, asking for an additional appropriation of $35,000 to meet the expenses of the International Marine Conference held in Washington last autumn. The original appropriation was $20,000.

The Louisiana Lottery Company offered $50,000 to protect the city from the encroachment of the river, and the offer was accepted by the mayor. An offer by the same parties of $100,000 to strengthen the levees of the State was rejected by Gov. Nicholls. This donation, however, has been made direct to the people of the threatened districts, and the sums allotted have been accepted by the following parishes: St. Bernard, Lafourche, Pointe Coupee, West Baton Rouge, St. James, Jefferson, St. John, East Baton Rouge, and the Fifth Levee District, comprising East Carroll, Madison, Tensas and Concordia. Plaquemines refused the gift. Assumption and St. Charles, the last heard from, have accepted.

Effective work of the city authorities and railroad companies on the city front has prevented immediate danger from the swollen river.

The crevasse at Nita Plantation, in St. James, has torn up all the cane and is flooding the adjoining plantations. It will be closed. At Raleigh the break is a quarter of a mile wide and ten feet deep. The back water has covered a large number of places and will sweep over one-fourth of East Carroll parish. The greatest portion of Madison and Tensas parishes will also be overflowed. Near Luna Landing, Ark., there is a break about 400 feet wide, and the Offutt levee, near Greenville, Miss., has broken.

Representative Lodge introduced his federal election bill in the House last week. The bill is a combination of the Australian system with federal control of elections. The Australian system, as in force in Massachusetts, is adapted and applied to the whole country in all congressional and presidential elections. Each polling-place is put in charge of six judges or supervisors, three representing each political party.

Secretary Proctor, on March 18, authorized the Mississippi River Commission to expend $100,000 for the protection of the levees along the Mississippi river in the Fourth District, which extends from Warrenton, Miss., to the head of the Passes, a distance of 484 miles.

Mr. Wilkinson had a formal hearing before the House Committee on Naval Affairs, on March 17, and made an able argument for the Algiers Navy Yard appropriation.

FOREIGN.

Emperor William is delighted at the readiness with which the powers, especially France, have accepted his invitation to the Labor Conference. It is stated that the Pope desired that the papal delegate should be made president of the conference, and that the Emperor refused to entertain the proposal.

Interviews with leading German socialists reveal that a section of the party is inclined to abandon the anti-monarchial agitation, providing the Emperor adheres to his proposals in social reform.

Twenty thousand engineers in England have gone on a strike. They demand a reduction of hours of labor.

Lord Salisbury, in the House of Lords, last week, gave notice of a motion approving the report of the Parnell Commission, and thanking the judges for their just and impartial verdict.

It is announced that the Russian government is about to issue a decree prohibiting further Germau colonization in south Russia. The Germans have acquired millions of acres of rich agricultural land in that part of the country within a few years.

The Labor Conference in Berlin was opened on the fifteenth. The proceedings were of the simplest character and were not attended by any ceremony. An immense crowd outside of the palace watched the arrivals in silence. There was no demonstration of any kind except slight cheering when the British members passed through the lines kept by the police. Baron Von Berlepsch welcomed the delegates in the name of Emperor William. Bismarck insists on secret sessions for the present.

The formation of a new French Cabinet has been announced, with M. De Freycinet, as Minister of War, at its head.

The price of coal in England is advancing rapidly in consequence of the miners' strike. One hundred thousand men are out on a strike.

Dispatches from Berlin state that both Prince Bismarck and Count Herbert Bismarck have tendered their resignations, and that Emperor William has accepted the resignation of the chancellor. Divergence of opinion between the emperor and chancellor has brought about the situation.

England is reported to have annexed the Shire district in Mozambique despite Portugal's protest.

The Pope, in reply to a letter from Emperor William, referring to the Labor Conference, said the question would be best solved by the application of the Christian principles of Sunday rest and religious education.

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

Mary Washington Rose.

This beautiful Rose, which was raised and named by Geo. Washington, and has since been growing at Mt. Vernon, and described in Mt. Vernon Guide Book, page 54, is now first offered to the public by one of our enterprising Florists, John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., whose advertisement appears in this paper. It is only one of the many charming Novelties he is introducing this year, and his Catalogue, one of the most beautiful and complete ever issued, should be in the hands of every lover of beautiful flowers, choice vegetables or rare fruits.

A Cancer Remedy.—Referring to Drs. Gratigny & Bush, Cincinnati, O., the "Cancer Specialists," whose card appears in another part of this paper, a correspondent, J. Hilsinger, Blue Ash, Hamilton Co., O., writes, "My wife had cancer and was cured by Drs. Gratigny & Bush." He says he found them attentive, faithful and successful.

LADIES
Needing a tonic, or children that want building up, should take
BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.
It is pleasant to take, cures Malaria, Indigestion, and Biliousness. All dealers keep it.

THE EVENING LINE.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

When the bright sun in roses and in wine
Goes down to light another hemisphere,
While yet his glorious beauty lingers here,
We say, "The day has passed the evening line,"
Then comes that hour of all hours most divine,
The twilight hour before the stars appear;
The hour to sadness and to joy most dear,
When tears to smiles and smiles to tears incline.
'Tis then the winged soul, from earth-thoughts freed,
Essays to mount upon the shining air,
Breathes hope and aspiration everywhere,
And meets God's answer to its human need;
For he who so illumes a day's decline,
Can brighten life beyond the evening line!

Only One Man for China!

BY REV. DAVID L. ANDERSON.

This is the answer that the Southern Methodist Church has made to China's call for help the past year. She can send only one man. In a recent letter from Bishop Wilson, dated December 7, 1889, he says: "I thought I could certainly send you two men this year, and have looked for them and instructed Dr. John to call for them, and to select from the applicants for missionary work the two best he could find. Several have made application, and been accepted and recommended for appointment to China; but all have withdrawn for various reasons, except one." So, though the Bishop has looked," and the secretary has called," only one has been found willing to come. That one has already reached the field, and we rejoice that he has come; but when we consider the great demands of this field, our pressing need for more workers, and our urgent call for help, we can but feel somewhat discouraged at the Church's response. In all her borders there is only one man for China.

Knowing the church at home as I do, and her numbers of true, devoted men, I am confident that this "one-man" response to our urgent call is due to the fact that she has altogether failed to realize our situation here, and our present opportunities. If she could but realize this, then numbers of her young men, in the ministry and out of it, anxious to do service for the Christ, would see in China the field of the world, and would willingly give themselves to this work.

The condition of our mission in China is peculiar. Within the past few years the church has given freely to establish a mission plant here. The foundations of our work have been badly laid. Those in charge have failed in view the accomplishment of great things here for Christ. Schools and colleges have been established, hospitals built, and about all that money can do to establish a first-class mission-plant, has been done. I doubt if there is a mission anywhere that is better off in this respect than ours here. Certainly none in this part of China are so well equipped. But this expensive plant looked to a largely increased force. The little handful of men upon the field six or eight years ago, when this plant was being set up, never expected that they would be left to work it alone, or they would never have drawn their lines so large. They naturally thought that the church that had given so freely of her money would not withhold her men. But, unfortunately, they have been disappointed in their expectation. Our number has not been increased, rather decreased, and the consequence is that the very extensiveness of our plant is a hindrance instead of a help. Imagine a well-equipped machine shop, supplied with all the latest improvements in machinery, and of such extent as to require the constant service of, at least, thirty men to ensure safety and the best results. Suppose the steam is turned on, and every part of the machinery is set in motion, and that instead of thirty men, less than one-third that number are present in the shop. It is evident that these few men, embarrassed, distracted by the extensiveness of the machinery, would not be able to accomplish such results as either their number or the machinery would call for. This well illustrates the condition of our China Mission to-day. The working of our mission plant calls for, at least, thirty men. We have on the field, all told, nine men, counting the latest arrival, the one man sent, who has been here less than three months. The consequence is that neither the plant, nor the men, are yielding the results that the church expects, and, under different circumstances, would have a right to demand. The very extensiveness of the plant is embarrassing. If the Southern Methodist Church can only send out men enough to fill up the gaps made in our ranks by disease, etc., and none for strengthening and enlarging our work, then it is very unfortunate that she has spent here so many thousands of dollars in setting up mission machinery. The small force of workmen here could accomplish far better results with a smaller outlay.

But while I make this statement, I would not be understood as saying one word against our mission plant here, or as questioning the wisdom of a plant of this character. The plant itself is excellent, all that could be desired. The requirements of mission work in China to-day afford abundant proof of the wisdom of setting it up. The real difficulty is, that having been set up, the force necessary to work it profitably has never been sent to the field.

Not only the missionaries here, but all who are sent to visit us from the churches are deeply impressed with the importance of China as a mission field, and the necessity of adapting mission work to meet the demands of the times. Our own Bishop Wilson, after two visits to our field, writes: "In my judgment China is our most important mission field—indeed, the most important of the world; and nothing would justify indifference or neglect there. It would be better to abandon every other field, if the necessity be laid upon us, than that."

Bishop Fowler, of the Northern Methodist Church, in his visit to China, over a year ago, was deeply impressed with the importance of this field over all others, and the necessity of adapting the work to the demands of the times. He set on foot the organization of two large universities—one at Peking, another at Nanking; and went home to advocate the cause of China before his church.

Secretary Smith, of the American Board, in his report made at the late session of that body, said: "The day of China's awakening draws on apace. Our laborers on the field, close to the course of events, assure us that the great body of the people is likely soon to be in movement toward the most important changes in government, education, traffic, customs, and religious thought. This is supremely the day of opportunity; it behooves us to work the works of God while the day lasts."

But it is useless to multiply testimony on this point. It is "supremely the day of opportunity" to mission workers in China. Not only do the changes now taking place in China tend to enlarge the missionary's field of usefulness, but the very form in which these changes are taking place greatly enlarge and extend his influence. The missionary in China occupies a unique position. In other lands—as in India or Japan, for instance—he is handicapped by infidel forces imported from the West. "Tom Paine's writings are scattered broadcast in the native languages, and Bob Ingersoll's blasphemies are having the same circulation." In China the missionary knows nothing of such opposition. He has the start of all such Satanic forces. He is ahead, must keep ahead, and preoccupy the country for Christ. Only thus can we save this people, not only from their own heathenism, but from being "enthralled by the vices that centuries have not enabled us to root out in Christian lands." So, then, those who set up our mission plant in China did well. The church, in contributing liberally to this end, did well. The fault is not here, but in the fact that our force is too small to meet the requirements of our outlay, and the demands of the times. Above all things now, the China Mission must have men.

In this call for men another thought is prominent in my mind. Our China Mission, of course, represents the whole church, and yet of the eleven men—including Parker and Loehr, who are absent—whose names are on our roll, eight are from Georgia. Outside of Georgia, Missouri has one, Kentucky one, and one from Arkansas. Georgia has no more than done her duty to China—in fact, has not come up to the measure of duty in giving her sons to this work; but would it not increase the interest taken in our work at home?—would it not greatly enlarge our constituency, if other sections of the church were more fully represented here? Of course, all sections do contribute the money that sustains us, and enables us to carry on our work; but what I am pleading for now is not money, but men. Can not the Louisiana and the Mississippi Conferences send us help? We have no representative here from Louisiana, and while Mississippi has sent us several valuable ladies through the Woman's Board, yet the Parent Board has no representative here. Is the missionary enthusiasm of the Methodist Church in Mississippi confined to the women? Is it not shared by the men? Then why is it that the women of Mississippi have several representatives in China, while the men have none? From among the young men of your several Conferences are there not those who will come? There is great need for you here. Doors are opening before us that we can not enter, for lack of men. Can not Louisiana and Mississippi send us help, and send it at once?

BY J. D. CAMERON, D. D.

Two very thoughtful and well-written articles, on the above heading, have recently appeared in the ADVOCATE, one by "Sigma" and the other by "Tau." In each of these articles there are evidences of breadth of view and fairness of discussion which must command the respect of every candid reader, no matter in what portion of the State he may live. It is to be hoped, and I doubt not has been the case, that the wise and timely suggestions of these writers have been carefully read, and that they will be duly considered by every member of our Board of Trustees. One question, and, perhaps, the most important that has ever been before the Methodist people of Mississippi, seems to have been settled; that is, Shall we have a college for boys and young men? The answer given is equivalent to an emphatic yes. Another—and it is only second in importance to this—is yet to be answered—that is, Where shall this college be located? In fact, the importance, or otherwise, of the former grows largely out of the answer yet to be given to the latter. I can imagine the college so located as to make it a matter of little importance as to whether we had one or not; but I can also imagine it so located as to make it one of our most important interests and one of our most potent agencies for good. "Tau" wisely suggests that we "lose sight of the fact that two Annual Conferences are interested, and consider Methodism as a unit, proposing to establish and locate a college in such place as will ensure the largest degree of success." In the furtherance of this prime end, I would suggest that we forget, as far as possible, in what latitude and longitude of the State we have our homes, and that we have any personal interests to serve, and regard ourselves simply as citizens of the State at large. Let us put ourselves as far away as possible from all local prejudices and preferences, and look only to the good of Methodism and the interests of the cause of Christ in the State. Even the matter of a few thousand dollars now offered to secure the location of the college at a given point must not draw our attention from the more important matter of the great good a proper location is to bring in the permanent blessings of the long years of the future. In what locality will the college likely draw the largest number of boys and young men from the different parts of the State? Other things being anyway nearly equal that question, it appears to me, should determine the question of location. No matter in what part of the State any member of the Board may chance to have his home or interests, if he is not a man of sufficient breadth and fairness to rise above personal considerations on local preferences, and cast his vote for location in the interest of Methodism, for the State at large, then a mistake was made when he was put on the Board. I suspect none of the Board as being of this sort. Verbum sat. Both the writers referred to say that the location should be such as to interfere as little as possible with existing church institutions. In that judgment all must concur. The other controlling fact should be to so locate as to draw the largest patronage from the State generally.

"Sigma" says: "The tendency of our people is to send northward to school." That is a fact. The question as to a few dollars to send a boy a hundred or two miles further northward is a small one as compared to sending him that much further southward to spend a session.

"Tau" says: "We have the example of the founders of the State University. When locating this institution for the whole State of Mississippi, they passed by all the southern points, including the city of Jackson, the capital, and going more than a hundred miles further north, they selected the beautiful and healthy town of Oxford as the site for the State University." He might have added, that after an experience of over a half-century with the University thus located, so well satisfied were their successors in statesmanship with the wisdom of this choice, that when it was determined that we must have an A. M. College, the town of Starkville was chosen; and when an Industrial Institute and College for young ladies was to be founded, Columbus is chosen as the site—both in the northern division of the State. Wise statesmanship dictated the location of the University, and the same, backed by a successful experiment of over a half-century, located the other two. The almost phenomenal success of these two, from their respective openings up to the present, demonstrates the wisdom of this policy. We need the wisest Christian and church statesmanship for the location of our college. I know that "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light;" but this need not be so, and especially when the principles and fruit of worldly wisdom are for the use and benefit of the children of light.

Allow this writer to say that, unless he is greatly self-deceived, he writes purely and solely in the interest of our beloved Methodism in the State of Mississippi, and the cause of Christ generally. He lives at a point which does not offer one dollar for the location of the college, and about fifty miles distant from the nearest point bidding for its location. By all means, let our trustees have light, and then let them locate the college to the very best interests of Mississippi Methodism. To this end let all the scribes write and all the people pray.

Excellencies and Defects of the Religious Press.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

The above theme was selected, some months ago, by the Religious Press Club, of New York City (since enlarged into the Quill Club), as the theme for an after-dinner discussion. Very properly they called in a doctor of divinity from outside to diagnose their case and prescribe remedies. He spent his allotted time on the first topic, and merely remarked, in closing, that every editor knew his "defects," as if he was not still more familiar with his "excellency," every editor being granted by the public "plenary indulgence" for publishing his own praises. It was as if a doctor, called in for an important consultation, had elaborately informed his patient wherein he was sound, and then told him that, of course, he knew all about his sicknesses and the remedies. The same subject is assigned for the next meeting of the Presbyterian Social Union, of New York City; and as the patients themselves, in this case, are to be the doctors—the announced speakers being exclusively editors—the outcome is likely to be the same as before—"Here's to ourselves; who's like us?"

The subject is worthy of a wider discussion, to which the writer wishes, in this note, to contribute, by way of suggestion rather than criticism, a single point, on which comparison of views might be useful.

Should not religious papers give a more sustained support to the great moral reforms that are the children of religion, fighting their battles as her own?

I do not here raise my question as to the space given to moral questions in religious papers, or the number of articles. Some religious papers could make a good showing on both these points. The question I raise for the consideration of religious editors is, whether they should not all wage as sustained a warfare against lotteries, for instance, now that the attention of the country is called to it by pending legislation at Washington, as some of them have recently waged against certain articles in the Westminster Confession. The New York Times dislodged the Tweed ring from their seeming Gibraltar, not by one editorial, but by a systematic warfare, day after day, until the surrender was secured. The New York Herald has recently entered upon a similar bombardment of the abuses in Ludlow Street Jail, the aristocratic prison of New York City. Such a persistent warfare has been waged by the News of Chicago, the News of Denver, and the Times-Star of Cincinnati, against Sunday saloons. Why should not the great religious weeklies apply the same wise tactics of persistency and concentration to some great moral reform, and, by a union of forces, if not singly, fight it through to victory? There are a dozen religious weeklies that could, if they would, exterminate the Louisiana National Robber, and prolific mother of robbers, that is invading State after State of the fifteen whose Constitutions do not bar her out, where it is only necessary to buy a Legislature. There is more than one religious weekly, that singly, by rallying its influential constituency, first to investigate the present status of gambling, and then to visit and write Congressmen as to the legislation needed, could secure the passage of the just laws pending at Washington for banishing lottery advertisements in newspapers, as well as circulars from the mails, and preventing national banks from acting as "pals" for these robbers, to which should be added interstate laws forbidding express companies or other carriers to transport lottery tickets or funds, and making stricter laws against gambling in the national capital and the Territories.

Other reforms also need such sustained fighting by the religious papers, which should be their "old guard," not merely their supporting allies. The Sunday Rest Law for the capital, and the larger one for all under the jurisdiction of Congress, could be carried to victory by the religious press, if, instead of random shots, they should campaign on this line. Immigration reform could be carried at Washington, and ballot reform all through the States, if the religious press would only keep firing at the evils referred to, instead of being content with one shot across their bows.

The fight with mighty evils in this country seems to many of us an unfinished Waterloo. Reinforcements from the religious press must come, or "night."

NEW YORK, Mar. 11, 1890.

"Millsaps College."

The committee appointed by Bishop Galloway to locate our Mississippi Methodist College are acting wisely to make haste slowly. A mistake here would be fatal. It is well that they have decided not to locate until they secure another fifty thousand dollars to the endowment fund, twenty-five thousand of which Maj. Millsaps proposes to give, if the other Methodists of Mississippi will furnish the other twenty-five thousand.

Now, if they will secure seventy-five thousand for the location, we can start off on the right foot, which they can do if they will use their present opportunity, for business men know well that the location of this college will be worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the town in which it is located; and the place reaping this financial harvest from year to year from this college, with its moral influence, and the advantage of sending their boys to a college at home, should pay all these local expenses.

The time has fully come that no one town or city will give much money to erect school-buildings in another town or city, and we had better take advantage of this fact, and secure a sufficiency before we locate our college, for after we have decided on the location, our opportunity is forever lost.

No place should be selected for the location of our college that does not offer, at least, fifty thousand dollars, and it should be twice that amount; and all that is necessary to secure this amount is time and nerve. What is a few months or a few years in securing a good send-off for our institution of learning, which is to live for centuries?

What a responsibility is resting on our committee! It is with them to say whether we start feebly, and go limping for years to come, or, with ample means, move out and succeed grandly. The only danger now is that our best friends will become too hopeful and too eager to see the college at work. Steady, my brethren. "A long pull, a strong pull, and pull altogether."

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss.

Gov. Nicholls and the Lottery.

The prompt and emphatic rejection by Governor Nicholls of the $100,000 donation offered by the Louisiana Lottery Company to him as governor of the State, for levee purposes, will meet with the hearty endorsement of every true anti-lottery man in the State. It was a severe, though merited, rebuke to the Lottery Company for its insinuating bravery in thus seeking to place the people of the State under an obligation which many would have been so foolish as to have imagined could only be discharged by extending some favor to the Lottery in return. The governor foresaw this at once and needed not a second thought to convince him of what his duty was in the premises.

The moral attitude that the State sustains toward the Louisiana Lottery is of such a character as will admit of no interchange of courtesies just at this time. If the State proposes to show the Lottery no favors in the future, it can not afford to accept any from the Lottery now nor in the future. A favor offered and accepted imposes upon the beneficiary a reciprocal obligation, which none but the most ungrateful and unprincipled would be inclined to avoid. To say that the acceptance of the Lottery's money by the governor in the name of the State would have placed the State under no obligation to the Lottery is to acknowledge one's ignorance of even the simplest and most imperative equities that attach to the act of a voluntary acceptance of a favor; and no one realizes more clearly than the stockholders of the Lottery Company, the obligation that the acceptance of such a donation would impose, and the weight it would have in determining the action of its beneficiaries in the settlement of future issues in which the Lottery might be vitally interested.

The Lottery question is now the great and all-absorbing question in Louisiana politics. While there are many other matters that deserve the attention and consideration of the people, they are all overshadowed by the Lottery question; and hence the Lottery question is practically the only active political issue now engaging the thoughts of the people of this State. And it is just as it should be. The Lottery is a gigantic evil, contaminating everything with which it comes in contact. Its every tendency is toward evil, and its whole influence is corrupting. Under the fostering care of the laws of the State it has become so powerful already as to be almost equal to the State itself, and but a few more years of legalized existence would be necessary to enable the Lottery to own the State bodily. No one has a clearer conception of the drift of affairs in this direction than the governor has, situated, as he is, at the head of affairs of State; and as a faithful guardian of the welfare of the State, it is his imperative duty, as far as lies in his power, to thwart every movement of the Lottery designed to strengthen its hold upon the State; and that the $100,000 donation was such a move, no one sincerely doubts. By his refusal to accept the donation, the governor signifies his full sympathy with the anti-lottery movement, and aligns himself with the better element of the State in the great struggle to redeem the State from disgrace, dishonor and shame, and the moral scorn and contempt of her sister States.—Caligraph.

At the devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold;
For a cap and bells our lives we pay.
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking;
'Tis heaven alone that is given away,
'Tis only God may be had for the asking.

THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1890.

THE DELAY OF PILATE'S WIFE.

I saw the great sky open down all its deeps of love
I saw the hosts of heaven come thronging swiftly through it,
And cherubim and seraphim at souls rejoicing flew.

They met, they closed together, and upward held their wings,
And arm to arm they waited with gentle flutterings,
Till one expanse of glory shone widely on all things.

Then down the wavering pathway, a sea of flaming glow,
I saw a human Presence in silent anguish go—
Great beams crossed on his shoulders, blood from his flesh did flow.

He walked alone and downcast, weighed with a whole world's shame;
He turned not and he spoke not, but through the great white flame
Adown the angels' pinions in grief and silence came.

Yet faltered not, or changed not, with step nor slow nor fleet—
He crossed the azure causeway, where earth and heaven meet,
Till on our world of turmoil he pressed his bleeding feet

And then dark shadows gathered and peals of thunder broke;
The glory of the heavens was veiled with hanging smoke;
Earth's rocks were rent asunder, earth's dead arose and spoke.

Far in the murky darkness the shadow of the tree
I saw that Being carry stood upward, one of three;
A shriek of mortal anguish came ringing up to me.

Then all was still; the darkness pressed upward over all,
And sun and sky were hidden and earth as in a pall,
And all the spirits vanished within heaven's closed wall.

My lord! my lord! I charge thee, have naught to do with him
Who walked the flaming pathway upheld by cherubim,
And bore the tree of sorrow into the shadows dim.

Love, of its strange foreknowledge, my dream interpreteth—
Oh! let it not be vainly! If he must die the death,
Keep thou thy hands blood-guiltless of him of Nazareth!

Experience and Observation.

BY A NEW PRESIDING ELDER.

Notwithstanding a few whispers and guesses by the brethren, my appointment was a shocking surprise to me. I had hoped to go back to Wesson, though I never said so till Conference had adjourned. As a loyal itinerant, I yielded a cheerful, if tearful, obedience to "our beloved Bishop's" mandate, and as soon as possible was on the way to Meridian, the ecclesiastical center of the district and the future great city of Mississippi. Of course, the wife and five children came with me—all the family except the baby-boy, whose body sleeps in Natchez.

It was after midnight when we reached Meridian. Dr. Andrews and Jimmie and Bro. L. P. Brown, President Saunders and Bro. D. S. Harmon met us at the depot, and with a period displaced the huge interrogation point which had been confronting us all the way from Wesson. Where shall we go? was answered by taking three of the children to Bro. Brown's home, and the remainder of the family to Dr. Andrews' parsonage. There we remained nearly three weeks, imposing on good nature and burdening our friends till we could get into our own "hired house;" for the six thousand Methodists in the Meridian district, with more than $3,000,000, have heretofore failed to provide a home for their presiding elder! Only those placed similarly can appreciate our embarrassment; and certainly none others can understand our gratitude to those whose hearts and homes were open to us. Before our next Annual Conference there will be a Meridian district parsonage, ready for myself or somebody else. Vossburg circuit has started the list with a guaranteed subscription of $500; other circuits are responding; and our brethren in Meridian will not be lacking in the "unspeakable gift"—the grace of liberality.

To Bro. Norsworthy, my predecessor, as well as to his "old guard," the noble band of preachers in this district, and to efficient official members in various charges, am I deeply indebted for the fine working condition in which almost every pastoral charge was found by me. Bro. Norsworthy had done no little to inspire the preachers with zeal and the members with liberality.

The outlook is encouraging. I confidently expect Meridian district to take the first place in the Mississippi Conference; for our people have members, financial ability and, I hope, grace enough to measure up to the standard of duty. There is a general disposition to take better care of the preachers. The increase in salaries will amount to more than $1,500 for the preachers, and to $200 for the presiding elder. Four out of the nineteen charges are without parsonages; but the good people of Daleville will soon have one for Bro. V. V. Boone and his wife, who quickly gained the love and respect of his flock. And such a flock! Numbering only twenty-three members, last fall they built an elegant frame church at a cost of $1,000, and then insisted on their church being made a station. They pay their preacher $600, and pay it quarterly in advance. Almost every man will pray in public and almost every member talk in class meeting. Family altars abound. They have a Woman's Missionary Society and a Juvenile Society also. Of the fifteen parsonages, some are not worth much. I have a feeling recollection of two very cold nights spent in one of them, and the opportunity afforded for studying astronomy through the roof! Such a parsonage is a shame to any people. There is not a stove in any church on that circuit. Yet the Sunday-schools did not go into winter-quarters. But everywhere else the people are moving to make the parsonages larger, neater, more comfortable, and attractive. God bless them in their efforts!

Three or four new church-buildings are being planned and provided for. At Stonewall, under Bro. Chamber's skillful leadership and generous example, about $1,000 have been secured in good subscriptions towards erecting a very pretty building to cost $1,500. Bro. Backus will probably round up his fourth year on DeKalb circuit with two new houses of worship, whose glory will surpass the old ones. Shuqualak under Drake, Paulding under Witt, Ellisville under Downer, and Vossburg under Hines, the Nestor of our district, are all showing decided progress on every line of Christian effort. Ware on widespread Marion circuit, energetic Clark on extensive Lauderdale, Langford, the pastor, on Binnsville, and Breland on Winchester, will press close after or just ahead of the others. Look out, brethren! Flowers on Clarke circuit will not be far behind; and even Leaksville under Rawls, and Union under Tinnin, will show very marked advance over last year. Dr. Andrews at First Church, encouraged by an addition of $300 to his salary, and Crymes at West End, made happy by the doubling of his, and assisted by Dr. Hyer as an unlicensed sub pastor and other helpers, will go far ahead of last year's work and results. L. P. Meador is trying to transform Hopewell circuit into that condition when the people will not only hope well, but do better than heretofore. I ought to note the fidelity of Bro. L. J. Jones on Meridian circuit, and the zeal and usefulness of Rev. A. Trotter, a very helpful local preacher on Clarke circuit. Honorable mention is due our venerable superannuates, Jas. A. Godfrey and Thos. Y. Armstrong; the former residing with his son in Waynesboro', "in age and feebleness extreme," waiting for the Master's coming. It may not be long. He is ready. The wife of his youth abides with him. Bro. Armstrong is at Rose Hill among a people who esteem it a privilege to stock his pantry for him and otherwise minister to the comfort of himself and faithful wife. God bless the Rose Hill people!

Class meetings have been revived and class leaders appointed in a number of charges; family altars erected; the people are praying; accessions are frequently reported to me; and many other signs point to a gracious revival throughout the district.

East Mississippi Female College, under the management of the Rev. R. M. Saunders and his accomplished wife, aided by efficient teachers, is enjoying the most prosperous year in its history. Except in the size of its buildings, it has no superior in the State. Steps are being taken to put up additional buildings, and then it may be said that it has no equal. Bishop Galloway has appointed this scribe financial agent for East Mississippi College.

It has been written of me that I am "not in a hurry;" but I hope no one will be led to suppose that I am lazy about the King's business. Great bodies move slowly; and a man weighing two hundred and twenty-five pounds is not always ready for a fight or a foot race.

Anonymous Communications.

There is a very general feeling against anonymous letters of personal import and violent character, and people are justly severe in condemnation of such letters; but when persons write for amusement, or in friendly criticism, or in suggestion in regard to some public affair, we do not think it at all objectionable to write under an assumed name.

There is some wisdom in the plan adopted sometimes when young people, writing for a prize, are required to put fictitious names to their productions, for then merit alone can triumph. We do not attribute any unfairness in instances where parties are known; but we lay it to the weakness of human nature, which makes it almost impossible to weigh the competitive articles or conflicting views of two individuals without allowing our prepossessions in one direction or prejudices in another to bias our minds in arriving at a just decision of merit.

On one occasion it was reported that a Bishop would preach in a certain country place where he was unknown; but he did not go, and some other brother of moderate power went to preach in his place. Many of the people went home highly praising what they supposed to be the Bishop's sermon.

In the first place, ideas put forth should stand on their own merits. If they have any, regardless of the individual who originates them, and a wise Board of Trustees can sift out the false, and duly consider the true, as well when written over a Greek letter as over any individual name. Very little importance is to be attached to a name or to an individual when the merit of ideas is at stake. A king's jester may make a very sage remark, and the wisdom of it ought to be heeded; and if, by chance, some very "irresponsible person" should make a good suggestion in reference to the very important question of the location of Millsaps College, we think his suggestion should receive as much consideration when written over a Greek letter as over the greatest name in Mississippi. The mere fact that an article is over a "responsible name" is no reason why the Board should accept its suggestions as entirely free from bias, for very many "responsible persons" are considerably influenced by local favoritism, and it is natural that they should be.

The whole matter resolves itself into this: The Board should give all views, at all worthy of notice, their prayerful consideration, and arrive at a conclusion in the light of all the facts as justly as they can, it matters not how such facts are presented.

R. H. MCGIMSEY.

JACKSON, La.

A Transferred Preacher.

Since the war native young men have met the demand of the Mississippi Conference for preachers: Galloway, Black, Mellen, Watkins, Drake, Cooper, Jones, with quite a number of promising young preachers from the southeastern counties of the State. It was not so before the war. There were many native preachers, as Jones, Watkins, Wheat, Millsaps, Harris, Lewis, Johnston, Andrews and others, yet there were not preachers for all the districts, stations and circuits. The Bishops, of course, must supply these appointments from abroad. With good judgment, these new preachers were strong men in the ministry, as Forsythe, Light, Linfield and others. Vicksburg, the most important station, was filled by a new transfer every two years for many years. This was my home, and I knew them all. I may name Travis, Davidson, Payne and Wilbur Fisk Hyer.

An obituary of the last-named may be found in the Minutes of the Conference after his death. I add incidents of his life known only to me. On arriving at his appointment, we met and introduced each to the other. I expressed words of welcome to our church and town, and to hard work, to an unsightly town of high hills and deep hollows, and to citizens not unlike men and women generally. I can not give his warm Christian reply. The substance was: "I am ready to preach the gospel to you also." (Romans i, 15.) "He that called me in one place to preach, hath sent me to preach in another." We relaxed our clasped hands only to move them in closer contact by a warm embrace. I saw a tear on his cheek, and felt one on mine. It may have been a weakness. St. Paul wrote, "When I am weak then am I strong." (II. Cor. xii, 10.) Many years have passed, and I am not ashamed to admit I shed a tear, and I think I do his memory no wrong to make known that he showed the same weakness, if such it be, "to wipe away a tear."

In many particulars he excelled the average preacher. He was decidedly handsome, but was so pleasant and accessible, socially, that his elegant dress and address did not appear objectionable. He was well educated by graduation in a New England Methodist College. His sermons at eleven o'clock were delivered from manuscript, and were faultless English compositions—at night he preached extemporaneously. A Presbyterian minister from the North, who heard him, remarked to me: "If your preacher were in Boston, such preaching would soon bring him into notice, which he may not have here with hearers who can not appreciate his sermons." I thought—perhaps, said—Give us time, and the Methodist Conference and people will advance him in popular estimation as rapidly as it may be best for him. Already his addresses before Masonic and other societies had introduced him favorably to the public.

Late in his second year the yellow fever appeared in the city. He spoke to me confidentially and seriously: "I have been considering as to my proper course." To avoid the disease he would probably live longer for his family and ministerial usefulness. If he should remain, the chances were that he could do but little service for the sick or well, as he would, no doubt, be attacked and probably die. The popular opinion was known that a minister who leaves is recreant to duty. "He ought to have a good report of those that are without." I could not advise, but said: "Your call to preach and your duty in many circumstances are to be left to the individual and him whom he serves." He decided to remain, was attacked, and soon died. As "the outer man perished, the inner man was renewed day by day" to the last. He repeated I. Cor. xv; knew that he had passed through that state of being which is first and natural (verse 46), and had been converted into that which was afterwards and spiritual (verse 44), and soon he would enter upon the disembodied state (verse 50), and then "it doth not yet appear what he shall be." (I. John xi, 28.)

Almost his last words to me were: "I have been very anxious to attend a session of the Conference to which I belong. I know that my brethren would receive me kindly, and when they came to know me, I believe they would admit me to warm Christian fellowship which I could reciprocate; nor could they indulge a hard thought for a transfer who had occupied one of the best stations in their Conferences."

With many others, I rendered such sad services as were necessary before and after his death. We put his body away in the Vicksburg Cemetery, where the preachers have a lot, in which he, and others who have died there, rest in hope under marble slabs, among the flowers, shrubbery and evergreen trees.

"Work for the General Conference."

MR. EDITOR: I notice quite a number of articles in your paper under the above head, all of which I have read carefully. Some of these proposed changes, perhaps, are very good; some, perhaps, are not. This I will leave for those that are wiser than myself to decide. Notwithstanding the great number of articles on this subject, there is still one change in our law that I think ought to be made, or, rather, a deficiency that ought to be met, of which nothing has been said.

Now, Mr. Editor, with your permission, I will give my idea about this deficiency, and how to correct it. If I understand the Discipline, it intends that the four quarterly reports of the pastor in charge shall give to the Quarterly Conference, to be entered in its journals, the names of all that are in any way received in or dismissed from the church, as well as all moneys collected for the church in her various needs. According to our present law this is not done. Sometimes the fourth Quarterly Conference is held three months, or more, before the Annual Conference meets. Several revival meetings are held after this, a large number of persons unite with the church, and most of the money that is paid to the calls of the church is received at these meetings. The pastor in charge goes to the Annual Conference, and is sent to labor in another field. The man that follows him has no record of the names of those who united with the church, nor of the money collected at the above-named meetings; and, consequently, it is never reported to the Quarterly Conference, as I think it should be.

The eleventh duty of the pastor in charge is to leave his successor a plan of his circuit, with subscribers to periodicals, etc. Let this plan also contain the above-needed statistics, and let them be reported at the first Quarterly Conference, and recorded in its journals, and they will give, as I think they should, a full account of what is done on the charge.

Yours in Christ,

R. A. BRELAND.

"Lay Representation."

I have just read Bro. S. S. Keener's article on the above subject. In making complaint against the present system as unfair, he says: "Should one thousand and eighty-eight members be allowed the same power in legislation as four thousand nine hundred? As it now is, every lay member of an Annual Conference is equal to four ministerial votes."

What remedy does Bro. Keener propose? To abolish lay representation altogether, as he proposes to change the law so as to allow "one lay member for every twelve thousand members of each Annual Conference." I do not now recall an Annual Conference that has twelve thousand members. Or does Bro. Keener mean one lay member for every twelve thousand members of the church within the bounds of each Annual Conference? He says the laymen represent the "church membership." If that is it, then examine his proposition as to fairness. One lay member of an Annual Conference is equal to four ministerial votes. That is unfair. Therefore, let us make it, thirty-six members of each Annual Conference equal to twelve thousand members of the church.

Bro. Keener must try again. Paragraph 33, as changed by him, would look beautiful in the Discipline, if not fair.

Church Etiquette.

"Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God."—Eccl. v, 1.

First: The preparation essential to acceptable worship: 1. Meditate upon your experience of the week or month just past, especially your failures, and God's tender care of you. 2. Think of your present necessities, physical and spiritual. 3. Spend a few moments, at least, in earnest prayer to God for both yourself and preacher. 4. Be prompt as to time, and go to church in a spirit of prayer. 5. If you are a boy or man, take off your hat, cleanse your shoes, and spit out your tobacco before entering the house. 6. After entering the church, do not talk foreign to the subject of the worship of God.

Second. The proper deportment during service: 1. Sing: if not, read the hymn as it is being sung. It will help you. 2. Conform to the attitude of worship suggested by the minister—e. g., do not sit when the congregation is kneeling in prayer, especially with head erect, eyes open, and gazing over the audience; nor scribble in books or on paper from one to another during service. 3. Should you be late, do not enter the church while God's Word is being read, for you might prevent some one hearing the Word of Life, for whom Christ died. 4. Do not talk while God's minister is delivering his message. Remember the message is from God to you, both in the Bible and sermon. Listen to it as such, and do not divide it with your neighbors; it is for you. 5. Pray during the service that the Word may do you good.

Third. The course to pursue after divine service: 1. Act upon it; if a sinner, repent; if a penitent, believe; if a believer, go work in the Lord's vineyard. 2. If you feel that the sermon does you good, occasionally tell your pastor of it. It will do him good. 3. When the benediction is pronounced, do not begin an uproar of laughter, but quietly retire from the church. Go immediately to prayer, and ask God to help you to obey his word, and be faithful to him. Also pray that his blessing may be upon your pastor, and his presence with him to other fields of labor, and crown him with success. Do this, and thy spiritual health shall spring forth speedily, and the glory of God shall rest upon thee.

Statistics—Louisiana Conference, 1889.

Some of the members of the Louisiana Conference are complaining of inaccuracies in the published statistics. An explanation will relieve a misapprehension on the part of these brethren to some extent. Items were reported by some charges that are not designed to appear in the statistical tables prepared by order of the General Conference. Such items are amounts collected by Woman's Missionary Society Auxiliaries, traveling expenses of General Conference delegates, "self-denial" offerings for missions, etc., including occasional special contributions for missions. All these are classified in the column in "Exhibit III.," headed, "Special Contributions for Missions, and Woman's Missionary Society."

If the brethren will kindly write me of inaccuracies in the statistics—should there be such—I will take pleasure in correcting them through the ADVOCATE after comparing the original reports.

FITZGERALD S. PARKER,
Statistical Secretary.

Dr. Black's Motion.

I write to second Dr. Black's motion that all the brethren who write on the location of Millsaps Methodist College, write over their proper signatures; and, I would add, that they put their names to all they write on every subject. This would throw much light on their epistles, for all men are more or less influenced in their judgment by their surroundings. This is demonstrated by the fact that in every contest for the location of a school or court-house, every man is in favor of the place with which he is identified. Hence locality has much to do with what he thinks and writes. No man has the right to publish over a nom de plume that which many readers may charge to another. It is an injustice to his brethren.

So I hereby give timely notice that when I get to be the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, you need not send me any anonymous articles.

J. W. HONNOLL.

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss.

There are three classes of people who take an interest in letters. There are the persons who read books; the much larger class which reads reviews; and, again, they who merely skim over the advertisements of new works. The last set live in a constant enjoyment of the pleasure of expectation; they pretend to themselves that some day they will find time to peruse the volumes in the birth of which they are interested; but, in fact, they live in the future. They are a month ahead of their friends who read reviews, and six months of the students who actually devour books themselves.—Andrew Lang.

From the Work.

DOWNSVILLE, LA.

This is the second year of my second term on this charge. I served this people in 1885 and 1886. There have been some material changes for the better, and some general advances all along the line of church work. Here is situated one of our largest camp grounds, where we have had a glorious revival every year for many years.

After much delay and many hinderances our new church is nearing completion. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," is the old saying. If true, then we have cause to rejoice; for we have a very handsome and well-arranged house of worship. It will be a monument to Methodism, and an ornament to our village. It has been by sacrifice with some and liberality of all that we have been able to build. We started out with the intention of building only a twelve-hundred-dollar house, but find it will cost us near fifteen hundred to complete it. It is not quite as large as the Methodist Church at Ruston, but is better finished. The house is 34x60 feet, Gothic, self-supported roof, ceiling overhead twenty feet high, windows and doors are Gothic, and the spire ninety feet high. The pastor's study opens into the pulpit. I fear we will not be able to pay for its completion and painting, as it has been a heavy burden for a small congregation after a short crop. We have not had any help outside of the community; but, rather than fail now, I will ask the Church Extension Board to help us.

The spiritual condition is good, as indicated by our social meetings. Since we have begun to build our Baptist brethren have kindly given us the use of their church, and have united in our weekly prayer meeting at this place. We have another weekly itinerating prayer meeting in the membership of this church, besides a fine Sabbath-school and class meeting once per month. The good sisters also have their weekly prayer meeting, their Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and aid society besides. They are engaged in raising funds to furnish our new church with furniture for the pulpit and matting for the aisle, etc. They have forwarded to the treasurer of their Foreign Missionary Society $15 for the first quarter. The godly women are doing good, honest work in the cause of the Master. They raise money in a scriptural way, and do not resort to suppers, fairs, prize-rattles, or any of those doubtful methods; but they ask for donations, free-will offerings, etc. May God bless this band of workers and prosper Zion!

R. S. COLIER, P. C.

WILLIAMSBURG, MISS.

We have held our first Quarterly Conference; had a pretty good turnout; all the churches were represented except one. The presiding elder was on hand, and preached us a good sermon, and we collected the Bishops' fund that was assessed to this circuit in full, and the stewards raised for pastor in charge and presiding elder $91 50. The other collections that were ordered by the Conference are very far behind. We were set down here in a strait betwixt two, and had it not been for the providence of God in sending upon us such pleasant weather, we would have suffered in body as well as mind. We have one-half acre of ground, partly enclosed with pickets and partly with a fence. I have no stable for the horse; haven't any crib to put corn in, and three rooms not finished in the parsonage. Mr. Editor, this is our condition at this time, and I have collected, it seems, all that I can get; and we are here among poor people, the most of them willing to do if they could. We have the lumber all on the ground to build the barn and buggy-house, and all on the ground to finish the parsonage; but can not get the workmen without the money, and the people can't raise it. Pray for us in our discouragements, for we need prayer.

J. H. EVANS.

FOREST AND MORTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Had I been granted the privilege of selecting my work for the present Conference year, I would not have chosen this circuit. But our Bishop did not ask me what I wanted; hence, when the appointments were announced, I was not surprised. Although the financial outlook was not flattering, I came in a cheerful spirit to do the work assigned me. We came to Morton—it being in the center of the work—and we received a cordial welcome. I must say I have never lived among a kinder people. At least one-half our table expenses have been supplied without cost. No merchant thinks of charging a preacher about cost for anything he buys.

At my suggestion the church adopted the monthly collection system. The result is an increase of thirty-three per cent. over assessments last year, with money all subscribed. Dues all paid to date. We fully expect a parsonage at this place by the close of the year. I am delighted with my work.

LESSON I.—April 6.

CHRIST'S LAW OF LOVE.

Luke vi, 27-38.

GOLDEN TEXT.—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them likewise.—Luke vi, 31.

TIME.—A. D. 28.

27. I say—With an authority that overtops that of Pharisees and scribes. Which hear—Meaning, which heed. Love your enemies—We are not to love them as sinners and for their sin, but as sentient beings, and because their happiness is a positive good; we are not to be attracted to their bad spirit or their evil deeds, but to cherish that love which shall move us to do them good, to pour blessings upon them, and to pray God to do the same. God does not love the sin, but the sinner despite of his sin. This love had been distinctly the spirit of the highest part of the law and the Old Testament. Exod. xxiii, 4. Do good to them that hate you—More literally, do nobly toward them that hate you; bear yourselves well, in the highest moral sense of well-doing.

28. Pray for them which despitefully use you—The Greek word implies the coarsest insults, and is found in 1. Pet. iii, 16. St Luke alone records our Lord's prayer for his murderers (xxiii, 34), from which St. Stephen learned his. Acts vii. 60.

29. Smiteth—The ethical commandments of Christ, or his explanations of the Old Testament, must themselves in turn be explained in the spirit of Christ. Cheek—Literally, the jaw. The blow intended is not, therefore, a mere slap, but a heavy blow; an act of violence rather than of contempt. Offer also the other—The general principle "resist not evil" is here impressed forever on the memory and conscience of mankind by a striking paradox. That it is only meant as a paradox in its literal sense is shown by the fact that our Lord himself, while most divinely true to its spirit, did not act on the letter of it. John xviii, 22, 23. In interpreting this passage and those which follow, Jesus certainly expected us to apply the common sense God has given us. They are sometimes abused by being pressed beyond their real purpose; far more often by emasculating them of their legitimate significance. Jesus had his eye upon common life. We are outside the legitimate domain of this law of non-resistance when we come into the realm of deadly violence; we misapply it when we hold that it forbids all self-defense against assaults upon life or the defense of wives or children against the assaults of the ruffian, the drunken, or the insane. But leave vengeance to the Almighty. Cloak . . . coat—The cloak was the customary outer garment, answering very much to a large shawl to wrap around the person on a cold day or evening, and for the poor to use as a coverlet in sleep. The "coat" was the inner garment, never conveniently spared. Give to every man—Literally, be giving, implying a habit, not an instant act. Here again we have a broad, general principle of unselfishness and liberality safely left to the common sense of mankind. The spirit of our Lord's precept is now best fulfilled by not giving to every man that asks, because in the altered circumstances of the age such indiscriminate alms-giving would only be a check to industry, and a premium on impostnre, degradation, and vice. The spirit of the precept is large-handed but thoughtful charity. Augustine remarks, Give to every one that asks, but not every thing he asks.

31. As ye would that men should do to you—The golden rule of Christianity, of which our Lord said that it was "the law and the prophets." The modern altruisms, though pompously enunciated as the bases of a new religion, are but a mutilated reproduction of this. Not what people desire of us, but according to all that we desire of them, agreeably to that should we do to them. The rule is only safe when our own will has been first purified, so that we wish only from others that which is really good. Reciprocity in evil or in folly is obviously altogether alien from the mind of Christ.

32. Love them which love you—Not the word which implies an instinctive, affectionate attachment, but a sentiment based on judgment and calculation, which selects its object for a reason. What thank—What kind of thanks? Not. What is your reward? but, What is your quality? Sinners—The article marks them as a class. So often in the New Testament, as when classed with publicans. Love those that love them—The very sinners love their lovers. Where St. Matthew (v, 46, 47), writing for the Jews, uses the term "tax-gatherers" or "Gentile persons," St. Luke naturally substitutes the nearest equivalent of those words in this connection, because he is writing for Gentiles. Our Lord meant that our standard must rise above the ordinary dead level of law, habit, custom, which prevails in the world.

33. If ye do good to them—Actual deeds of kindness take the place in St. Luke which in St. Matthew is occupied by the salutations which were but the outward signs of kindness.

34. If ye lend to them—Lending in the hope of receiving again is human; but without this hope it becomes Christian. And yet how many found their right to the Christian's name almost on nothing else than on services of love so carefully measured and egotistic that even heathen or Jew equals them therein, perhaps even excels them. To receive as much again—From this we see that "interest" and "usury" are not here contemplated at all.

35. Love ye your enemies—The most sublime precept ever delivered to man. Hoping for nothing again—Our Lord forbids the expectation of human recompense, but encourages the hope of heavenly rewards. A later Greek word is used only here in all the New Testament; it means originally "to give up in despair," a sense which is adopted by some high authorities; and by the Rev. Ver. "never despairing."

36. Merciful—St. Matthew has "perfect," but that there is no essential difference between the two evangelists we may see in such expressions as "the Father of mercies;" "The Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy;" "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, . . . bowels of mercies, kindness." A merciful man easily forgets injuries; pardons them without being solicited, and does not permit repeated returns of ingratitude to deter him from doing good, even to the unthankful and the unholy.

37. Judge not—"Judging" is here the considering the faults of our neighbor with a look sharpened by mistrust, and not tempered by love and self-knowledge. There is no reference here to the pardon of personal offenses; the reference is to charity which, in a general way, refuses to judge. No Christian ought to assume an office of judging, which his Master never assumed. Forgive—Literally, release. Christ exhorts to the opposite of what he has just forbidden: "Do not condemn, but release." The word "forgive" expresses, like the previous verbs, a quasi-judicial act rather than the forgiveness of a private wrong as such.

38. Good measure, pressed down—The imagery clearly points to a measure of grain, so pressed and shaken that it could hold no more. Men—The agents are indefinite, and the meaning is thereby rendered solemn and emphatic. Bosom—Pockets were unknown to the ancients. All that was necessary was carried in the fold of the robe or in the girdle. In the eastern markets at this day venders may be seen pouring the contents of a measure into the bosom of a purchaser. With the same measure that ye mete—Here again truth takes the form of a seeming paradox. The unjust judgment of man does not bring upon us a divine judgment which is also unjust; but the severity which we have unjustly meted out to others becomes, by a retributive law, the measure of that which is justly dealt out to us. The same proverb is quoted, it may be noted, with quite a different application in Mark iv, 24. Even in this life Jesus' disciples may, at least now and then, expect a superabundant recompense of their labors of love.

Missionary Unbelief.

The Christian who does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Great Commission. Repeat it, and see.

The Christian who does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Apostle's Creed. Repeat it, and see.

The Christian who does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Lord's Prayer. Repeat it, and see.

The Christian who does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Doxology in long metre. Repeat it, and see.

The Christian who does not believe in foreign missions, in this generation, believes that three hundred more millions of the heathen world ought to die before we try to tell them of Christ.

How long is this unbelief to go on? How many more millions must die before the Church of Christ is ready? "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."—Helping Hand.

MISSIONARIES' WIVES.—I never yet saw a missionary's wife whose companionship did not double her husband's usefulness. I have known more than one whose face, as the years of life increased, took on that charm, that wondrous beauty, that youthful features never wear—the beauty of character disciplined by suffering, of a life unselfishly devoted to the highest ends. One of the choicest things of missionary work is the unwritten heroism of missionary homes . . . . It is the missionary's wife, who, by years of endurance and acquired experience in the foreign field, has made it possible in these later years—the years of Woman's Missionary Societies—for unmarried ladies to go abroad and live and work among the people of Eastern lands.—Dr. Herrick, in Missionary Herald.

WHAT HAS IT COST YOU?—The Missionary Herald tells of a Scottish woman whose practice it was to give a penny a day for missions, to whom a visitor gave a sixpence to procure some meat, on learning that she had not lately enjoyed that luxury. She thought to herself: "I have long done very well on my porridge, so I will give this sixpence also to God." This fact came to the knowledge of a missionary secretary, who narrated it at a missionary breakfast. The host and his guests were profoundly impressed by it, the host saying that he had never denied himself a chop for the cause of God. He therefore instantly subscribed twenty-five hundred dollars additional, and others of the party followed his example till the sum of eleven thousand dollars was raised before they separated. It is probable that this good woman's sixpence was larger in the sight of God than the thousands contributed by these rich people; for she gave of her poverty, and they out of their abundance. This is a good illustration of the power of example. There is nothing so fruitful as self-sacrifice.

CHINESE CHRISTIANS.—Rev. Dr. Ellinwood says: It has been my privilege to visit China from Pekin to Canton, and to devote my whole time to a critical study of the mission work and of the character of the converts, and I do not hesitate to say that I regard the average sincerity and stability of Christian character in China as high as we find it in this country. That there is as great intelligence no one would claim. On the other hand, there is far less incidental help derived from a conventional public sentiment there than here, and therefore it requires much greater fortitude to embrace Christianity in China than in the United States. Some of the most noble instances of fidelity under cruel and persistent persecution, and even imminent peril, have been witnessed among the native Christians of China. Tests which are never known in a peaceful Christian land are constantly encountered by the Chinese in embracing Christianity, and this is just as true of the low classes as of the high. Not one in twenty of those who profess the Christian faith is in a position to expect therefrom any earthly emolument, but all must look for domestic ostracism by their heathen kindred. Few men of our time have inspired greater confidence by their keen penetration and sober judgment than the late Rev. W. Fleming Stevenson, of Belfast, who, after a tour of observation around the world, reported: "I have found nowhere in Christian lands men and women of a higher type than I met in China, of a finer spiritual experience, of a higher spiritual tone, or of a nobler spiritual life, and I may say with conviction that there are in the native churches in China not only the elements of stability, but that steadfast and irresistible revolution which will carry over the whole empire to the new faith."—Christian Weekly.

Temperance.

Washington's birthday was duly observed in history and propheoy throughout the country. There was no more notable gathering than that in the great Auditorium of Chicago, under the auspices of the Union League Club. The orator of the occasion was the Rev. Dr. Tiffany, of Minneapolis. Speaking of the growth and perils of our country, he touched the saloon, not lightly, as follows:

The enormous expenditures for intoxicants prove how wide-spreading is the danger. I put away as altogether unreliable the astounding figures of alarmists, and remember only the fact that from all sources, from the producers, and consumers, and observers alike, there is a general consensus that nine hundred millions of dollars are annually spent in this country in a business which requires no genius, develops no industry, and which is, at its best interpretation, purely indulgence. Nine hundred millions of dollars—a greater amount than Europe annually spends for the maintenance of armies and fleets—is spent in the liquor traffic in America. And this traffic, we are told, results in a larger percentage of gain to the individuals engaged in it than any other business or occupation known among us, and therefore has more money to be freely used in perpetuating its own existence. Consequently it is the more to be feared. It constitutes a national peril. It will not do to say that it can not be abolished, for it might be if we would. It will not do to say that prohibition does not prohibit, for it does when men will let it. There have never been so many violations of existing laws as there were votes against the enactment of those laws. I speak not of its moral issues. I say nothing of its physical harmfulness as against health; its social influence as against the peace of home; its moral influence as against religion and God; but, apart from its degradation, it results in crime, disease and death, and is a corrupter of the public conscience, and is a foe to free institutions; it is a peril to the purity of elections; it is an enemy to the industry which developed national wealth; it is the refuge of the idler and the dissolute. It must go. Its name in politics is the saloon—prohibit it.

EFFECTS OF PROHIBITION.—Temperance workers, both in Canada and the United States, will hail with gratitude another convincing proof of the success of prohibition. In the face of dogmatizers who express their disdain for the legalized prevention of liquor selling, it is wholesome to trust the facts of experience. In the case of Iowa, an official document from the governor of the State—his message to the Legislature—gives the most emphatic testimony of the success of prohibition. Let our readers note these statements in the governor's message: While the number of convicts in the country at large rose from one in 3,442 of population in 1850 to one in 860 in 1880, the ratio in Iowa is at present only one to every 3,130. The jails in many counties are empty during a good portion of the year, and the number of convicts in the penitentiaries has been reduced from 750 in March, 1886, to 604, July 1, 1889. It is the testimony of judges that criminal business has been reduced 30 to 75 per cent., and that criminal expenses have diminished in like proportion. There are less paupers and fewer tramps in the State in proportion to population than ever before. The deposits in the banks show an unprecedented increase, and there are everywhere indications of a healthy growth in legitimate trade.—Christian Guardian.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup never fails to cure a cough or cold in a short time. Price, 25 cents.

It is prophesied that Norway will be the first country in the world to have national prohibition, and that at no distant day—since one-fifth of the inhabitants are supposed to favor the temperance movement.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

*Wolf & Randolph, Phila.—Gentlemen:—I used Acme Blacking about a year ago but became dissatisfied and quit. Two months ago I met a friend whose shoes were strikingly handsome, and asked him "What kind of blacking are you using?" "Wolf's Acme Blacking," he replied. Had you ever any trouble with it on account of its coating on the shoes?" "Not a particle! When I bought the first bottle three years ago I carefully read directions and followed them." Directions? I never thought of that." I bought a bottle right then and there, took the wrapper off the neck of bottle, followed those directions and admit, "What a Fool I was." THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1890.

Our friends are coming to our help in the anti-lottery fight, and we send out this week 200 extra copies to some of our pastors in Louisiana for distribution. We hope the brethren will distribute them judiciously and that our friends will help us more, so that every week we can widen the field of our fight.

The Requirements of Religion.

Does religion require men to lie and cheat and steal? Can it be found anywhere in the Bible that a man may be an unmitigated rascal all the week and a saint on Sunday? Men of the world are very hard in the speeches about hypocrites—people who wear the garb of religion to cloak evil designs; but men of the world are not half as hard on them as Jesus is. With a fiery anathema, that should scorch its way to the heart's core of every man and woman, he delivers them over to the deep damnation of hell without any hope of release. The religion of Jesus always and everywhere presents the boldest front, the openest opposition to all sorts of sin and all degrees of wickedness. Opposition to all iniquity is written in letters of blood upon the escutcheon of Christianity, and its grand mission is to force out of this world everything that has even the appearance of evil. Men who reject religion because there have been, or may be now, hypocrites in the church, misapprehend the whole nature of Christ's work and design of his teaching. There never has been a being on this earth more opposed to evil in all its various forms than Jesus Christ. His religion tolerates wrong-doing in no man, and to reject him because there are wrong-doers who claim to be his followers, is as foolish as to reject the genuine coin because there are counterfeits in circulation.

But his religion has its positive aspects. There is not only a ban put upon sin, but a premium is put upon righteousness. "What doth the Lord require of thee, oh, man, but to love mercy, to do justly, and to walk humbly with thy God?" There is nothing implied here that will warrant a rejection of religion. Here is mercy for the unfortunate, justice with all men, and humility before the great God. There is nothing dishonorable or degrading here. There is nothing that tends to harm a single individual in the world. There is nothing that will bring sorrow or pain of heart. On the contrary, here is what will tend to honor and peace and prosperity. The requirements of religion are simple; but if these simple requirements were practiced by men, paradise would open its gates again to the human family and the earth would be as full of God's glory as are the heavens. Men don't know, or they forget, that the religion of Christ is an honorable religion, and unconditionally opposed to everything dishonorable and mean. It undeniably repudiates all sin and meanness and rascality. What more do men want than that as the fundamental principle of their religion?

Some of the best articles in our country exchanges against the Lottery have appeared in papers that advertise the lottery. That is something that puzzles us. It takes a "mighty strong" editorial to counteract a three-quarter-column advertisement on the other side of a question!

The Devil-Fish Lottery.

The press of the country is waking up. The Dakota incident has aroused the fears of some and the conscience of others. The octopus nearly captured a State. That danger is past. Whether it will hold Louisiana, time will tell. The good people of the Pelican State are making a brave fight for their honor and virtue. Well they may. Fifty years more in the embrace of these slimy, devil-fish arms, means a degree of perdition, social and political, that no American commonwealth has endured—that no State in this Union can endure.

Upon the infinite dishonor of two men, who had been the chiefs of brave men in the cause that heroes died for, I do not dwell. They have had their price; they will also have their reward. History will more than get even with them.

It helps little to denounce Louisiana; this poison is in the blood of the whole nation. Not many United States postoffices can be found that has not sent some contribution to feed the beast in the Crescent City. All over the land these swindling drawings are advertised. In thousands of papers little paragraphs slip in, as if news, mere reading matter, but well paid for, telling how this "lucky fellow" drew a big prize. And so the fever spreads. It is a blood poison to untold thousands who never saw New Orleans. In great cities, in country hamlets, in rich people's palaces and poor men's cabins the victims are found. Clerks on $30 a month, and spending $40, risk a chance—lose—try again, lose and then steal. Poor, miserable negroes try their luck. Women, too—God pity them!

Why don't our paternal government strike a blow at this huge devil-fish? True enough, a carpet-bag governor left this curse in the fair State of Louisiana; a Republican administration might make what amends it may. Under what clause of the Constitution must the government defile the mail service by making it the cheap servant of this incarnate crime? If obscene books may be excluded, why not all correspondence that concerns this great gambling, swindling corrupter of our people? If government may not pierce the creature's little heart, it may lop off some of these far-reaching, crushing arms. Let the good Wanamaker bestir himself.

This is a common cause. It would be a matter of material interest if nobody outside of Louisiana bought a ticket. For we are one family; what hurts one hurts all; what dishonors one dishonors all. But this poison is not simply diffusible; it is already diffused. Wherever a ticket is sold, bought, or sent New Orleans now, there the evil is. Maine, Oregon, California, the most distant and the most near, are all concerned in this matter; it has already harmed nearly every community in the United States, and many beyond have caught the sickness.

Here, they tell me, in this new iron city, on the beautiful Tennessee, young men—some old ones—buy lottery tickets. Is there one town in America that has not lost money and honor to this beast, whose "seat" may be in New Orleans, but whose kingdom is from ocean to ocean?

Let papers that can't be bought, speak out. Let every pulpit give its voice; in almost every congregation there are those who need warning. Let the people say: "This octopus must die. We will begin by closing the mail service, we pay for, to his base uses."

The good people can drive this living infamy into the Gulf if they will. It is very foolish to abuse New Orleans papers for silence, when a thousand others advertise the Lottery. Honor to the good people of Louisiana, who are fighting a hand-to-hand fight with their great enemy! Let all others help them in all ways possible to them, and this black chapter in our nation's history will come to an end.

The Reason.

Mr. E. H. Farrar, a prominent lawyer in this city, being interviewed by the New York Herald on the Lottery extension, gave his reasons for opposing the same in the following language:

I am opposed to the extension of the Lottery charter even if they should bind themselves to pave the State with gold. An extension of that charter means the perpetual domination of a corrupt power in politics and the political slavery of the people of this State. No arrangement the State can make with the Lottery is anything more than a revocable license. Such an agreement, as decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, is outside of the domain of contract and entirely within the domain of the police power; therefore it rests entirely in the good-will of the granting power. The grant of a lottery charter being, therefore, precarious, the Lottery Company will be compelled to protect it. The more valuable the grant the greater the incentive to protect it. Now, the only way they can protect such a grant is by perpetually controlling the majority of every Legislature that may hereafter be elected in this State. They must, therefore, be a perpetual factor in politics and a factor only in the interest of corruption, because it is only by the exercise of such widespread corruption in the future as they notoriously exercised in the past that they can hope to control a majority of all future Legislatures. They will then be brought into such relations with the whole gamut of politics that they will necessarily end by controlling the whole politics of the State. The result of this will be that all honorable and independent men will be excluded from public office, and no man who will not bow his head to their degrading yoke can ever hope to obtain any political honor.

There you have the whole matter in a nutshell. Now, the question is, Will you help resist the encroachments of this monstrous devil-fish?

The Case Stated.

Rev. J. A. Parker, in a communication to the Ruston Caligraph, thus states the case, in regard to the motive behind the recent Lottery donations of money to the city and State:

The truth about the $50,000 given to New Orleans is this: The water began running over the front Thursday morning. Thursday night the City Council voted $50,000 for the protection of the city—the strong northwest wind changed to the southeast, and by Friday morning there was no water in the city, except in the gutters. So you see the "city fathers" can use the $50,000 to support a police force to wink at the violation of the law—particularly the Sunday law.

Why was the $100,000 given to the State? In 1882 and 1884, the country was in a much worse condition than at the time of this gift, and the Lottery never opened its trembling coffers in this sort of way. Why not? Simply because it was then too far from the hour of its own need. Its magnanimity might have been forgotten. But now, it is less than sixty days to the assembling of the representatives of the people who are to determine its doom, and a rusty moral sentiment takes lubrication as kindly as rusty machinery.

The Louisiana State Lottery has quietly sat down on its millions of money with several years of assured life for it, and year after year has seen these floods cover the State from one end to the other without any such display of magnanimity. But, now, as it hangs to the last knot on the log, it has become wonderfully magnanimous!! This is a gauze that a blind man can read through. Mr. Dauphin knows only too well the purchasing power of money, and this is clearly a deal for public sentiment. It comes too late to dupe sensible people.

History of Our Creeds.

The discussion in regard to the revision of the Presbyterian Confession of Faith has excited an interest in the subject of creeds in general; and a slight review of the origin and history of the several creeds of Protestant Churches may not be uninteresting. Visiting the Howard Library, of this city, in quest of information on this subject, I was referred to Hardwick's History of the XXXIX. Articles. I had inquired for Burnet on the XXXIX. Articles, but found the other a late work by a young Englishman, who died recently, and it proved to be a purely historical statement, just the thing I was seeking.

1. The first creed of modern times was the Augsburg Confession adopted by Martin Luther and his adherents in the year 1530. It is strongly Calvinistic, and teaches that all unbaptized infants are lost. Nevertheless, it is the foundation of all the later creeds of Christendom, and most of our XXV. Articles are taken from it.

2. The well-known creed of the Church of England was produced in 1553. It was made in obedience to the reigning sovereign, Queen Elizabeth, and was promulgated by her authority in 1556. A majority of its Articles, thirty-nine in number, are taken almost literally from the Augsburg Confession. Nineteen of them are leveled against errors of the Romish Church. The Seventeenth Article is as strong Calvinism as the Augsburg Confession; but, by a happy inconsistency, many of the ministers of that church have always been Arminian, which gave rise to the remark of Macaulay, that the English Church has a Calvinistic Creed, but an Arminian clergy. It teaches the doctrine of baptismal regeneration straight out; and by implication the damnation of the unbaptized. This awful doctrine is still the belief of the Roman Catholic, Lutheran and other medieval churches.

3. The Westminster Confession was a product of the English Revolution of 1648, in which Charles I. lost his crown and his head, and consequently the Established Church was overthrown as one element of monarchical government and a relic of popery. Its rites and ceremonies and its form of Episcopal government were most offensive to the Puritans, and, with the same ability and energy with which they overturned the throne, they set about to destroy the National Church. The Confession does not differ from the Thirty-Nine Articles or the Augsburg Confession in regard to predestination and election, but goes a step further in pronouncing the reprobation and damnation of the non-elect. It is neither better nor worse on the subject of infant damnation, only putting the ground of this horrible dogma on the basis of election and reprobation instead of infant baptism.

4. The Twenty-Five Articles of the Methodist Church, North and South, are taken from the Thirty-Nine of the Church of England by simple omission or subtraction. Mr. Wesley took such as he deemed of greater importance, omitting the XVII, which taught predestination, and eliminating from others Calvinistic expressions.

The unfortunate condition in our Restrictive Rules that no power of the church can "revoke, alter or change" one of these Articles of Religion, leaves the church of our choice at a disadvantage in comparison with other churches of modern times, and seems to imply our belief in the infallibility of our founder. It was certainly a hasty conclusion that a perfect creed could be extracted from the Thirty-Nine Articles or any other existing standard.

F. M. GRACE.

A Great Factor Withdrawn.

The voluntary retirement of Prince Bismarck from the chancellorship of the German Empire removes the most potent factor in European politics. For a quarter of a century this "man of iron" has made his influence felt at all the courts of Europe. To him more than to any other man the German Empire owes its present proud position among the nations of the world. He has been its real head, and it was his work that evolved the empire out of petty little states and created a government respected and feared by all the great powers. He was not always successful in his measures, several notable schemes having come to nothing; but when he spoke all Europe listened, and listened with attention. No one seems as yet to have guessed the real reason of his retirement; but everybody looks with real apprehension to the future. Nobody can tell what will happen next, when this important factor, so long the dominant figure, has fallen out of the calculation. To the Christian, who believes that God controls the history of the world, and controls it to the best advantage and speediest enlargement of the domain of righteousness, it does not matter much. "He setteth up one and putteth down another," and governeth "all things after the counsel of his own will."

To the Members of Louisiana Annual Conference.

There has been organized a Conference Brotherhood, with eleven members. Rev. J. B. Walker was elected president; S. S. Keener, financial secretary. The object is the relief of the family of itinerant preachers at their death. Condition of membership is that the preacher be a Methodist itinerant, and that said member pay a fee of $5 upon joining, and the same amount within sixty days after the death of any member. Each member will be notified by the financial secretary of the death of any member through the columns of the ADVOCATE; also by letter.

The by-laws and constitution will be furnished each applicant for membership. The first year there will be no age limit to applicants, but after that there will be no member admitted who is over fifty years of age. Let all provide for their families by joining at once.

Further information can be obtained from the financial secretary.

S. S. KEENER, Sec'y,
551 Dauphine St., New Orleans, La.

How Would Christ Act?

In the matter of personal work for the salvation of men, the Central Christian Advocate has this pertinent paragraph:

We should act in this matter as Christ would were he again among men in the flesh. Would he limit the sphere of his activity to the public and social religious services of the sanctuary? Would he confine his work to the instruction of Christians? Would he not rather go out into the streets and market-places, to those who never go to church, and work among them? And would he not command us to go and do likewise? If all Christians able to do so could be induced to go into the slums of the cities, and to the untaught, destitute and wretched, everywhere, to labor with and win them to Christ, what a work would be accomplished? Too many ecclesiastical organizations act on the theory that their mission is to those who come to them. This was not Christ's method. He came to seek that which was lost: His command to the church is: "Go ye out into the highways and compel them to come in." The church will never accomplish its divinely appointed mission until its members go out after the unconverted, and entreat, persuade, and beseech them in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God. It is remarkable how many times the command, "Go," is found in the Gospels. Some one has said: "Christ's command to sinners is, 'Come!' and to Christians, 'Go!'".

Notes.

A straw—A gentleman of our acquaintance wrote a letter to a friend; the result was, three or four boys went to Centenary College! Little things generally tell when done aright.

The Texas Advocate held a symposium on this proposition: "Should we have a Parent Board to provide for the support of Conference claimants, making the fund for their support connectional?" Of the thirty-five answers published thirteen were favorable and twenty-two unfavorable.

The Mirror, Jackson, La., says:

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is making an energetic fight against the Louisiana State Lottery Company. If it could have the entire support of the membership of the church it advocates, and be sustained by the Christian denominations of the State, the Lottery might then tremble, as it would soon be a thing of the past.

The Christian Visitor, Lake Charles, La., says:

The Louisiana State Lottery Company now seems determined to buy its way through the next Legislature. There never was a better time for the members of that august body that have any principle to prove it to the world, for the eyes of the world will be upon them.

Dr. Cunnyngham is out with a beautiful and appropriate program for Children's Day. Sunday, May 18, is the day, and if the pastors will use this service sent out by our Sunday-school authorities, they will heighten the enjoyments of the day. The price, by mail, is 10 cents a dozen, or 60 cents a hundred.

"Weel, ye see," said a Scotch worthy, who was criticising the new minister, "frae Monday till Saturday he's invecsible, and on Sabbath he's incomprehensible."

Perfectly natural. The preacher who is invisible during the week is bound to be "past finding out" on Sunday.

We understand that the president of one of our prominent banks said, in a commercial club, the other day, that Gov. Nicholl's communication refusing to accept the Lottery donation was worth millions of dollars to the commercial interests of Louisiana! That is a good deal more than the Lottery is worth to the commercial interests of the State.

We call especial attention to Bro. Anderson's letter from China, on the first page. The cry is for men to do the Lord's work in China. Has the Lord opened doors for effort without calling some one to enter? We do not believe it. Young brother, have you ever thought that, maybe, the Lord needs you in that distant land to show the heathen the way of salvation?

The burning of our church at Oxford, Miss., should cause our Boards of Trustees everywhere to look after the insurance of their church property. Better pay a little annual premium and be safe, than to neglect it and wake up some morning and find all swept away and not a dollar to replace it. You don't know when your church will burn.

We are glad to see so many of our religious exchanges speaking out on the lottery question, for this nefarious business is affecting the constituency of every newspaper in this broad land. Everywhere the people patronize the Louisiana Lottery, and thousands of church members all over the land are buying tickets. Speak out, brethren of the press, and show your constituents the iniquity of this thing.

The Caligraph, Ruston, La., says:

The issue between the opposers of the Lottory and the advocates of the Lottery is now made, and turns on the proposition of submitting the matter of rechartering the Lottery to a vote of the people. No anti-lottery man who knows what he is talking about will favor legislative action on the subject, unless it should be to shorten the term of its preseut existence. All that is needed for the Lottery to be a defunct concern after 1894 is for the Legislature and the people to let it alone; and no one is so fully aware of that fact as the Lottery people are.

The editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate was asked: "Should a man be made an official member in a church who does not read a church paper?" He answered thus:

No man should be trusted and honored with an office the duties of which he is not willing faithfully and intelligently to discharge. That proposition is beyond dispute. But no man can intelligently discharge the duties of a church office who does not make himself intelligent in church affairs; and no man can be intelligent in church affairs who does not read a church paper. He may be intelligent on other subjects accordingly as he improves his opportunities, but he can not be intelligent in church affairs unless he reads a church paper. The necessary information is not elsewhere to be found. So we conclude that a man is not properly qualified to act as an official member who does not read a church paper.

We think this decision is correct.

A Memorial to the Louisiana Legislature.

To the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana:

The memorial and petition of citizens of the State of Louisiana, with respect, shows—

That the people of this State, in the Article 172 of the Constitution, have declared, in common with the moral sentiment of the world, gambling to be a vice, and have commanded you to enact laws for its suppression; that the Louisiana Lottery Company, a gambling institution, petitioners are informed, will seek an extension of its franchises beyond the time definitely fixed by the people for their suppression (Article 167), by demanding of you to propose for its benefit an amendment to the Constitution of the State.

Your memorialists further show, that this Corporation, the Louisiana Lottery Company, aside from the hardihood and effrontery of its present demand, aside from the fostering of the odious crimes which follow legalized gambling, above and beyond the shame it has brought upon the State, has been and is an unmixed evil in the politics of this State.

Your memorialists can state no facts and propose no arguments in this behalf which your honorable body have not already known and appreciated, and your memorialists, therefore, content themselves with making the petition in behalf of all that is upright and innocent in this State.

They pray that you enforce the constitutional enactments already voted by the people. They pray that you relieve them of the shame of sheltering in their laws an institution which outrages every and all proper moral feeling. They pray you that you spare them the further spread of vice and crime and political demoralization which is wrought by the Louisiana Lottery Company; and to accomplish these ends they pray you to refuse to propose any amendment to the Article 167 of the Constitution.

And, as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray, etc.

Personal and Otherwise.

Logan D. Dameron, after a connection of twenty-one years with the St. Louis Advocate as its manager, has retired, and Rev. J. W. Lowrance takes his place.

Lottery literature is coming hot from the press in all sections of the country. Rev. T. J. Duncan, of the Tennessee Conference, delivered a "broadside" in the last St. Louis Advocate, which we read with great relish. People outside of Louisiana are assured that when they strike "our robber," "they strike for their" own "altars and fires!"

Our agents and subscribers will please address their business letters to the business manager. The editor has nothing to do with that department.

Rev. J. W. Lowrance has been appointed by Bishop Granbery assistant editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. Two editors and one assistant ought to make the St. Louis Advocate "hump itself."

Our anti-lottery fund is growing. Won't you help us in this fight? He who gives quickly gives twice. The time is short. Help is needed right away.

Bro. T. A. Holloman has laid us under obligation for a copy of the Catalogue of Phœnix Graded High School. The school is located at Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss.,

Bro. Kirkland, of the Southern, has had quite a spell with la grippe, but at last accounts was improving. May he rapidly recover his wonted health!

We have on hand enough to keep our obituary column full for six weeks to come.

About five columns of the last Calligraph were devoted to our "prince of pirates," the Louisiana Lottery. Lay on, Bro. Pearce!

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

And now George Francis Train has started to beat both Miss Bisland and Nellie Bly. He inteuds to make the trip around the world in sixty days!

The Lottery, in a round-about way, has offered the School Board of this city $25,000. Whether these gentlemen will receive the money remains to be seen!

The editor's second son, Thomas, was licensed to preach by the Felicity Street Quarterly Conference, last Monday evening. He was graduated from Tulane University, last June, and is not quite twenty years old.

One of our pastors recently had a conversation with a man in this city, who said that since the establishment of the Lottery here he had spent $25,000 for lottery tickets and had drawn prizes to the amount of $2,000. And he is still at it, for he expects to get it all back, and more. Poor dupe! There are hundreds like him all over the land.

—Rev. William G. Evans writes from Minden, La.: "Our first Quarterly Conference has just closed, and we find we are moving along smoothly on all lines. Services in all places except one are well attended. Our Sunday-schools are well attended, and we hope to organize two more very soon. I am doing all in my power to reorganize the Y. M. C. A. in this place, and with hopes of success. Have organized a very good class meeting here. Our love-feast yesterday took its place, and we had a glorious time. All went away refreshed. Am preaching nearly every Sunday against the Louisiana Lottery, and hope to be able to do much good in that line here. We will start a protracted meeting here soon, and we hope to have a revival of religion in this town where the professed Christians seem asleep."

—Rev. I. W. Cooper, P. E., writes from Bay St. Louis, Miss.: "God is wonderfully blessing the church here. Four joined yesterday; two to-day, among whom is the editor of the paper of this place. Nine or ten have joined to date, and others will. The church is gloriously revived."

Notice.

The Louisiana Conference Holiness Association will hold its first semi-annual meeting at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, New Iberia, La., May 6, 1890, at 12 M. Let there be a full attendance of the members of the association. Members of the Louisiana Conference are all invited to attend the meeting; and brethren who are "groaning to be made perfect in love" are especially and earnestly requested to come. Entertainment will be provided for preachers. Let all who purpose to come to this meeting write me at once, in order that arrangements for entertainment may be made with certainty.

Notice.

The district meeting of Woman's Missionary Society, of Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, will be held at Vaiden, Miss., on April 17, 1890; Mrs. M. L. Hargrove, president of Woman's Missionary Society of North Mississippi Conference, presiding. Each Auxiliary within the bounds of the Winona district is requested to send one delegate with a written report of the condition of the Auxiliary she represents. Please send the name of the delegate as early as possible to Mrs. J. F. Evans, Vaiden, Miss. MRS. J. B. STREATER, District Secretary.

The Democrat-Star, of Scranton, Miss., has this personal in regard to our pastor at that place:

Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, pastor of the Methodist Church of this place, is outspoken in the pulpit against dancing, card playing, whisky drinking and whisky selling. And he gives professing Christians a rap for attending shows and theatres; and never spares the Louisiana Lottery.

Domestic Missions—Louisiana Conference.

There are criticisms which, in their nature, seem hypercritical, but which are, nevertheless, just and proper. In criticising the conduct of a man or a company of men, it seems so difficult to avoid the appearance of suspicion of motives, that I feel it incumbent to declare in advance that it is not any part of my business to express, or even feel, the least bit of doubt as to the motives of the Board of Missions in making certain appropriations. However, if I believe, or think, that those appropriations have not been wisely made—that the best that could have been done has not been done—I suppose no one will deny my right to speak.

With the Minutes before me, I will begin at the beginning, naming such points as impress me most strongly.

First, there comes the Lower Coast mission, with a membership of 19, to which has been appropriated the sum of $125 for 1890.

Next is North Caddo, a name which I fail to find in the list of appointments. To this charge $50 is given. Clearly there is some mistake in this, and I withhold criticism.

Then comes West Monroe, with an appropriation of $75. This is one of the old circuits, and paid the pastor last year $478 40; paid the presiding elder, $51; paid $12 for missions, and $48 for Bishops and Conference claimants. This charge has 144 members.

Floyd circuit comes next. The appropriation to Floyd circuit is $75. It has a membership of 316. It paid for missions last year, $83; to the pastor, $410; to the presiding elder, $45, and for Bishops and Conference claimants, $60.

Oakley comes next, with a membership of 136. The appropriation to Oakley circuit is $25. Last year it paid the salary of the preacher in full—$180. Paid for missions, $23 50, and for Bishops and Conference claimants, $12.

Sugartown has $75 given it. It has 253 members; paid for missions last year, $5 46; for Bishops and Conference claimants, $2 15. It paid the pastor $174.

Spring Creek, with a membership of 400, has an appropriation of $25. Last year it paid $13 for missions, $272 for the pastor, and paid up all the other claims upon it.

Sparta circuit is an old circuit, which has 364 members; paid for missions last year, $11 80; for pastor, $421 45, and for Bishops and Conference claimants, $28. It has an appropriation of $25.

Taking out the Lower Coast mission and North Caddo circuit, we have here circuits, having an aggregate membership of 1,613, in the oldest and best-settled portions of the Conference, which are absorbing the money that ought to be used in the occupancy of new fields. The average membership in these six missionary charges is—leaving out fractions—268, and the average salaries paid pastors is $322 64. The following charges in the Conference, which have no appropriations, paid less than $300, viz:

Gretna (with Soraparu last year)	$250 00
DeSoto	260 00
Bellwood	250 00
Valley	269 95
Centerville	237 35
Vidalia and Trinity	246 25
Black River	278 00
Vienna	281 81

The membership of these eight circuits aggregate 1,599. The average membership is 199 (fractions omitted). The average salaries paid pastors in these circuits is $264 67, or $57 67 less than the circuits which were helped with missionary appropriations.

Are we in duty bound to assist a circuit having, as Floyd circuit has, 316 members? I know a church of colored people—no exception to the general rate of poverty either—which, with a membership of 250, paid last year over $2,000.

Sugartown, with 253 members, ought to take care of a preacher; else the preacher should do like St. Paul—i. e., "turn to the Gentiles" with the gospel. Spring Creek, with 400 members, receiving a contribution from the little fund collected to enable us to spread out! It does not seem right to make such appropriations unless there are hidden reasons for it, and in that case the "peculiarity" should have been stated. Sparta circuit, now being ploughed up for railroad beds, calling upon the poverty of the church to help 364 members take care of a preacher! Which of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference has not served for less than Floyd circuit paid ($410), or Sparta ($421 45), or West Monroe ($478 40).

It may be said that the appropriation of missionary money is an episcopal prerogative, and should not be called in question. The presumption is, that he, the Bishop, did right. He meant right, beyond a doubt; but he is not infallible, and has no prerogatives which may not be called in question. If there are satisfactory explanations for some of these appropriations, it would do our cause good to have them published. J. A. PARKER.

BATON ROUGE, La.

1863—Chapter xix.

The Federal Army was sore pressing upon us, north, east and south. Hundreds of families were fleeing from the scenes of the war, and refugeeing to this region of country, to save their stuff, and to get away from the horrors of the battlefield. So far as living was concerned, we had learned how to raise corn and hogs, manufacture salt, cotton and woolen goods, tan leather and make shoes and panama hats, too. I know of no time in life when we had a greater profusion of milk and butter, hog meat and cornbread than we had this year. Besides, we raised a patch of wheat, trailed it out by hand, winnowed it by taking advantage of the wind when it blow, and pouring it down from as great a height as we could reach, hauled it thirty-six miles to a corn-mill, had it ground, and sifted through a muslin sieve to get the bran out. Counting the time, labor and expense of raising and manufacturing it, we concluded that it did not cost us more than twenty-five cents a biscuit. Our congregations had been greatly increased by reason of refugees having settled in the country. The negroes were still quiet and subordinate, and their conduct commendable. They were anxious to hear preaching, and a constant revival of religion was going on among them.

The following incident is worthy of note: We had to preach to them in a grove on the premises of D. A. Blacksher, in the vicinity of Bayou Pierre. The congregations were large; a number of white people, refugees, from the southern part of the State were there, perhaps, through curiosity. I was greatly blessed in preaching, and, it may be, these visitors were affected in a way they had not expected. At the close of the sermon they walked out to their carriages. In the meantime I had asked the negroes, who were full of religious emotion, to sing one of their favorite songs, "Roll, Jordan, roll." There were two negro women among them whose voices, in point of compass, strength and sweetness, in my judgment, was equal to Jennie Lind's in her palmy days. They only lacked culture. These two led, and a hundred other strong voices to follow, and having sung together so much that, by the pat of the foot and the swing of the body, they kept as exact time as a scientific choir. Our visitors were so charmed, they halted and marched back, took their seats and remained till the services were closed. The year 1863 closed with all its thrilling events.

The Conference met December, 1863, at Homer, La. Accompanied by the Rev. J. C. Keener, D. D. (with his Opelousas ponies, which he had driven well nigh over this portion of the Confederacy, in the interest of the church and to keep out of the way of the Yankees), we got to Shreveport, Saturday night. The city being jammed with soldiers, there was no place for us. The only place we could get shelter was in a so-called boarding-house, up stairs, with window-panes out, and scant bedclothes. We suffered no little, as it was freezing cold. Next morning, Sunday, as it was, we had no scruples of consolence about going on. We got to Homer in good time for the Conference. No Bishop being present, Dr. Keener was elected to preside. Here we first met the inimitable E. M. Marvin. We first saw him coming out of a livery stable. He, like the rest of us, had on homespun. Having a sore eye, he wore a green shade over it, which added nothing favorable to his appearance, and I supposed he was an employee of the stable. Next view we had of him he was in the pulpit, and preached one of his grandest sermons. We heard him often afterwards; but that was the grandest effort we ever heard him make. At the close of his sermon, Dr. Keener was so enthused with it he said to me, "That is the grandest sermon you ever heard or that you will ever hear." I was returned to Natchitoches and Bayou Pierre mission, my war inheritance. J. P.

GRAND CANE, La.

Messrs. Roberts & Co.

The well-known and reliable firm of Messrs. Roberts & Co. are proprietors of one of the largest and best-stocked and equipped Sash and Blind Factories in this section of the country. They have made many of the finest mahogany, walnut and rosewood doors, as well as inside oil finished wood-work for banks, insurance offices, and other commercial and public buildings, also for residences, to be found anywhere. The senior member of this firm, Mr. Robert Roberts, has been personally known to the business manager of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for ten years. He is a gentleman of integrity, intelligence and fair dealing. The card of this enterprising firm has appeared in this paper for many years, and many of our numerous readers who have patronized Messrs. Roberts & Co. will, doubtless, fully endorse what we have said above.

We hope that the growing trade of this house will continue to quadruple, as it has in the past ten years—which is one of the best indications of an appreciative public.

Young people who are cogitating whether they shall adopt literature as a profession or not, should consider what the Detroit Free Press has said: "Take ten writers of novels whose books have a fine sale and ten mechanics who have steady work at $2 50 per day, and at the end of two years the mechanics will have earned the most money."

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine at this season, to purify the blood and build up the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most popular and successful spring medicine and blood purifier. It cures scrofula, all humors, dyspepsia, sick headache, that tired feeling.

ASLEEP.

A BABY BALLAD.

Little baby lies asleep
In a dream of glory!
By the light upon her face,
By the smile that I can trace,
Half I guess the story
That the angels tell
To my baby Belle.

Wide they ope the pearly gates,
Letting heaven's splendor
Float adown before her eyes—
Half a mem'ry, half surprise—
While, with voices tender,
New delights they tell
To my baby Belle.

And they bring her for her mates,
Cherub children holy,
While an angel fair and tall,
Purest, sweetest one of all,
Kisses, bending lowly,
Brow, like pearly shell,
Of my baby Belle.

Whispers, how they loving wait
Close beside her ever;
How her place is kept above
By the One whose name is Love,
Who forgetteth never,
Who delights to dwell
With my baby Belle.

Tell her how her gardens fair,
Grow each morning fairer;
And the cherub children bring
Palms and lilies blossoming;
But of treasures rarer
Tenderly they tell
To my baby Belle.

Tell her of a crown that waits
Jewels for its setting,
Of a wondrous harp of gold
That her hands shall one day hold,
Weariness forgetting;
This, and more they tell
To my baby Belle.

Little baby, fast asleep,
In a dream of glory,
By the golden glow that slips
Over brow and cheek and lips,
Do I guess the story
That the angels tell
To my baby Belle?

MR. EDITOR: As I do not see many letters from this neighborhood, I thought I would write one. I am a little girl ten years old. I have been attending school for four months; but the school is now out. Miss Ida McCormick, a young lady from Union Church, Miss., neighborhood, was my teacher. She offered a gold medal in the school, and my brother got it. I did love Miss Ida so much, for she was so kind to me. I have two brothers—one is older than I am, and the other is younger. I have no sister living. I am very fond of pets, and have a great many of them; but the prettiest one is a little deer, which I call Ged. Rev. H. Bradford is our present pastor. I attend Sunday-school at Meadville, four miles and a half from home. My Sunday-school teacher is Mrs. Wentworth, and I love her so much. We have a nice library in our Sunday-school, and I like to read the books very much. Well, as this is the first time I have ever written to your paper, I will close.

Respectfully yours,
LEMMIE GUICE.

MEADVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I read the children's letters in the ADVOCATE, and have never seen one from South Warren; so I will write, and hope I may see it in print. I live four miles from Red Bone, which is mama's church. Bro. Stevens is our preacher, and we are pleased with him and his wife. Bro. T. B. Holloman baptized me, and Dr. Hunnicutt baptized my sister and brother, Maggie and Talley. I am eight years old. I go to school to Mrs. Hullum, at Mt. Magnolia. Our school will soon close. Will some of the little cousins tell me the author of this: "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb?" Your little friend,

LIDA GIBSON.

WARREN COUNTY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: As I never see any letters from this part of the country, I will write one. I am going to school to Mr. J. B. Aswell. I like him very much. Mr. J. T. Reames is our preacher this year. We all like him splendidly, and hope he will preach for us next year. We have Sunday-school every Sunday. Our superintendent is Mr. J. B. Aswell. I am studying history, grammar, physiology, geography, algebra, arithmetic and spelling. Before I close I will ask the little cousins a question: How many different Marys are there in the Bible? I hope it will be answered soon. I will close.

OLLIE M. RAPE.

MR. EDITOR: We like our preacher, Bro. Parke, so much; also his wife. I have a little dog named Jet; she is so pretty. My school is out; but I study at home. Brother has a nice pony named Charlie. Please publish this, my first letter.

Your friend,
MADGIE HAUGHTON.

PRAIRIE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing so many letters in the ADVOCATE from the little folks, I will write you one. I am eight years old. I have been going to school; but have stopped now. I have only one pet, a cat. Much love to the little folks.

Your little friend,
MINNIE G. BROWN.

SALLIS, MISS.

A Boy Who Became Famous.

A boy, only six years old, was sailing with his father down the Danube. All day long they had been sailing past crumbling ruins, frowning castles, cloisters hid away among crags, towering cliffs, quiet villages nestled in sunny valleys, and here and there a deep gorge that opened back from the gliding river, its hollow distance blue with fathomless shadow, and its loneliness and stillness stirring the boy's heart like some dim and vast cathedral. They stopped at night at a cloister, and the father took little Wolfgang into the chapel to see the organ. It was the first large organ he had ever seen, and his face lit up with delight, and every motion and attitude of his figure expressed a wondering reverence.

"Father," said the boy, "let me play!" Well pleased, the father complied. Then Wolfgang pushed aside the stool and, when his father had filled the great bellows, the elfin organist stood upon the pedals. How the deep tones woke the sombre stillness of the old church! The organ seemed some great uncouth creature, roaring for very joy at the caress of the marvelous child.

The monks, eating their supper in the refectory, heard it and dropped knife and fork in astonishment. The organist of the brotherhood was among them, but never had he played with such power. They listened; some crossed themselves, till the prior rose up and hastened into the chapel. The others followed; but when they looked up into the organ loft, lo! there was no organist to be seen though the deep tones still massed themselves in new harmonies, and made the stone arches thrill with their power. "It is the devil," cried one of the monks, drawing closer to his companions, and giving a scared look over his shoulder at the darkness of the aisle.

"It is a miracle," said another. But, when the boldest of them mounted the stairs to the organ-loft, he stood as if petrified with amazement. There was the tiny figure, treading from pedal to pedal, and at the same time clutching at the keys above with his little hands gathering handfulls of those wonderful chords as if they were violets and flinging them out into the solemn gloom behind him. He heard nothing, saw nothing besides; his eyes beamed, and his whole face lighted up with impassioned joy. Louder and fuller rose the harmonies, streaming forth in swelling billows, till at last they seemed to reach a sunny shore, on which they broke; and then a whispering ripple of faintest melody lingered a moment in the air, like the last murmur of a wind-harp, and all was still. The boy was John Wolfgang Mozart. —Anon.

Mr. Jones had married little Johnny's maiden aunt, and they were at the wedding breakfast.

Little Johnny (to his grandfather)—"When are you going to begin on him, grandpa?"

Grandpa—"Begin on who, Johnny?"

"On Mr. Jones. I heard you tell grandma he wouldn't be so bad if you could only put some brains in him."

Breakfast was finished without Johnny.

A SONG FROM THE SUDS.

BY LOUISA M. ALCOTT.*

Queen of my tub I merrily sing,
While the white foam rises high,
And sturdily wash and rinse and wring,
And fasten the clothes to dry;
And then out in the fresh air they swing,
Under the sunny sky.

I wish we could wash from our hearts and our souls
The stains of the week away,
And let pure water and air by their magic make Ourselves as pure as they;
Then on the earth there would be, indeed,
A glorious washing-day!

Along the path of a useful life
Will heart's-ease ever bloom;
The busy mind has no time to think
Of sorrow, or care, or gloom;
And anxious thoughts may be swept away
As we busily wield a broom.

I am glad a task to me is given
To labor at day by day;
For it brings me health and strength and hope,
And I cheerfully learn to say,—
"Head, you may think; heart, you may feel;
But, hand, you shall work away!"

*At fifteen.

Overworked Boys.

If parents will require of their boys a man's work when they are boys in nine cases out of ten they will not be able to do more than a boy's work when they are men. Excessive exertion of any kind is a trespass upon Nature's laws, and we must sooner or later be held responsible for the violation. Let all parents bear this in mind, and be careful how they over-tax the strength of their children.

Farmers who have hale, robust boys are apt to exact from them an amount of labor that pushes them beyond a healthy capacity of endurance, and when they complain of indisposition they are charged with a desire to shirk their duty or throw upon another the burden they are unwilling to bear themselves.

It is well to bring up your children to work, indeed it is a duty you owe them; but because they are under your control, do not demand of them more than they are able to bear.

Children are often unduly stimulated by rewards and punishments to work beyond their strength, and many a diseased spine or deformed limb has been the result of such cruelty, for they are naturally disposed to constant activity, and a seeming indolence is oftener the offspring of indisposition than a natural aversion to action.

Parents should teach their children to work, that they may become useful members of society, but they should not require so much of them that in middle age they will be broken-down men and women, and a burden to themselves and friends. Their claim upon the future is an indisputable one, and beware how you trifle with it or wrest it from them.

Nothing justifies parents in severe exactions upon their childrens' time and strength, and the health, happiness and general well-being of every child depends in a large degree upon parental development and training, and no parent is justified by the laws of God or man in claiming the best part of his children's time, or in taking advantage of their helplessness by over-working them when in a condition of dependence.

A LITTLE FUN AT HOME.—Do not be afraid of a little fun at home. Do not shut up your house lest the sun should fade your carpets; and your hearts, lest a laugh should shake down a few of the musty old cobwebs that are hanging there. If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left at the threshold without when they come home at night. When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling houses and reckless degradation. Young people must have fun and relaxation; if they do not find it at their own hearthstone they will see it at less profitable places. Therefore, let the doors and windows be cheerfully thrown open in the summer, and make the home delightful with all those little arts parents so well understand. Do not repress the buoyant spirits of your children. Half an hour of merriment within doors and merriment of a home blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day; and the best safe-guard they can take with them into the world is the influence of a bright home.—Selected.

The Greatest of Nervines.

A certain amount of sleep is necessary to enable us to work well, enjoy health, and promote longevity. Thought and constant activity of muscle wear out the vital forces much faster than they build up, and it is imperative that we sleep so many hours if we would add to our strength and be able to bear the strain of constantly recurring duties.

When we diminish sleep by overwork, diversions, grief, and torturous thought, we shorten our lives, and pass our days under the horrors of hypochondria, dyspepsia, insanity, and every form of suffering to which our lives are subject until death itself kindly intervenes to end the scene.

The time required for sleep varies with the temperament, natural vigor, vocation, and mental state of individuals. It is generally asserted that women require a larger amount of sleep than men; but whatever may be nature's requirement, they are lighter sleepers and usually earlier risers, the cares of a household or the demands of duty in some other sphere arousing them betimes from their downy nest of inertia.

Persons of very active, stirring propensities or highly nervous temperaments do not, as some contend, recuperate sooner than the opposite class, and if the mental force of taxation be in proportion to the muscular, they wear out faster and require more sleep—say, eight or ten hours—to sustain the undue strain upon the functions. They often deceive us in regard to what rest is absolutely needed, for their interest in all they undertake is unflagging, and this keeps them unnaturally awake when they should be sleeping.

Persons of great energy must not fear that they will sleep too much; they often require a larger amount than they claim, and are not aware of it until the vital forces have long been overtaxed by severe pressure when they are compelled to yield, unable longer to bear it.

The most of us have occasionally experienced an uncomfortable sensation after having slept longer than usual; but it is not the fault of too much sleep, but proceeds from some other cause. The blood may be in an unhealthy state; the ventilation may have been defective; a healthy circulation may have been obstructed by too much clothing; or the position in which we have been lying may not have been conducive to comfort.

When one has exercised brain or muscle too severely and sleep refuses to build up the waste, it is suicidal to attempt repeated abuses of this kind, for Nature enters her protest against it, and sooner or later the forfeit must be paid.

Whatever it may cost us, seek sleep, for it is the best and safest nervine, and without it the strongest, most vigorous system will finally be forced to succumb to the wreck which the loss of it ever produces.—Baltimorean.

A Cure for Hydrophobia.

When I was eight years of age I was bitten by a large moccasin snake on the foot. I was two miles from home. I was carried by a neighbor home; when I was taken off of the horse I could not stand. I was sick to blindness, and my leg was swollen to an enormous size. Spirits of turpentine was applied to the wound and continued for four or five hours; a dessertspoonful of it was given internally. The next morning the swelling was nearly all gone, and I was well and could walk without pain.

I have been engaged in the practice of medicine for thirty years, and have used this remedy in all cases of snake bites, with perfect success. In 1874 a very rabid dog bit a girl nine years of age; she was badly lacerated by the dog. I applied spirits of turpentine to the wound, and continued the application for six or eight hours: gave her a teaspoonful internally, and continued to give teaspoonful doses twice a week for three months. She has had no symptoms of hydrophobia up to this date. The dog that bit her bit several cattle, and all of them had hydrophobia. I have treated one other case since with the same result. I am satisfied from my experience with this remedy it will prevent any case of hydrophobia, if used in time.

SHUMAKER—Sister EVALINE JACKSON SHUMAKER was born in White county, Tenn., May 11, 1819. Her farther, Andrew Jackson Passons, served in the Creek Indian War under Gen. Jackson, who was afterwards President. He, with his family, in her infancy, moved to Alabama, and afterwards to Winston county, Miss., where she was married to John M. Shumaker, January 25, 1842. She, with her husband, became one of the first settlers of Attala county, Miss., where she lived until February 17, 1890, when the Master called her home.

She was thrown from a buggy in 1856, receiving injuries which made her a cripple for life, and, in consequence, was ever a great sufferer. She was the mother of seven children; one of whom died in the late war, and another in childhood. The remainder—four sons and one daughter—with a devoted husband are left to mourn their loss. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and a devoted and faithful Christian the greater part of her life No more genial and devoted companion, no sweeter or lovelier mother, ever had charge of a happy home. Her amiability rendered her a queen among her loved ones. A favorite was she, and beloved by her neighbors and all who knew her. Perfect patience in afflictions and under the trying circumstances of life was one of the graces that adorned her life. Her forbearance towards the weaknesses of others was unlimited. The sincere and devoted love she cherished for her Master was manifested in her constant efforts to support the institutions of the church and to minister to the wants of her pastor. Hers was always the preacher's home, and when this scribe found no parsonage, in coming to this charge, he, with his family, was taken under her roof and ministered unto with her own hands. Her deeds of kindness and words of cheer established a relation similar to that enjoyed by children to parents.

Until prevented by old age and affliction, her love for humanity, and especially the afflicted, was shown in the great sacrifices she would make to help them—often going several miles and serving as nurse and physician for several days. The poor were sought for and relieved. In fact, her motto was, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." When she helped the poor she was serving Christ.

Her last years were full of comfort to her, by the fact that God had called her baby boy into the work of the ministry, and that he, too, was active in aiding the unfortunate of earth. Her dying prayer was that she might see him before she expired, and was often heard calling "Johnnie." In the providence of God, he was at her bedside a few hours before she breathed her last, and as she was passing through the valley he was able to catch from her dying lips these blessed words: "The Lord is with me!"

Thus ended a life that had been sweetened and sanctified by the love of Christ. She now sings with the angelic choir in her long sought home, high up in heaven. J. E BUCK.

BURNS—C. BURNS was born in Germany, August 4, 1835; was raised principally in Pennsylvania; had lived in Simpson county twenty-three years, and was thrown from his mule at nine o'clock A. M., and died at eleven P. M., February 6, 1890, aged fifty-four years six months and two days.

Bro. Burns was converted and joined the Methodist Church while young, and spent his life in the service of God. He was a cheerful, happy, large-hearted, liberal Christian man—one in whom the preacher always found a warm friend. He said to me, a few days before his death, he never felt satisfied about his contributions to the cause of Christ until he had paid enough to feel it. He paid, prayed and worked with all his might for the upbuilding of the Master's cause. He was a member of the Quarterly Conference as far back as I have any history of him, until he was called from the church militant to the church and kingdom triumphant. He was twice married. One wife and six children had gone on before, and were, no doubt, at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for him. A wife and two sons are left on the shores of time. May God grant them large measures of grace, that they may follow on in his footsteps until the Master shall say to them as he did to him, "Leave the cross and come up and wear the crown!"

I never saw more tears shed over the lifeless form of anyone than were shed over him. May God help us all to live the life of the righteous, that we may meet him in the sweet by-and-by!

T. J. MILLER.

SAUCIER—LARAN JEFFERSON SAUCIER, son of William J. and N. E. Saucier, was born in Harrison county, Miss., on December 14, 1886, and departed this life on January 29, 1890, aged three years and fifteen days.

It seemed to be a great struggle with father and mother to give little Laran up; but father and mother should not weep for him—he is at rest. The blessed Christ said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Look up, father, mother; he is at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for you.

J. H. HOLLAND.

WATSON—Died, at her home, near Grangeville, La., on the night of January 21, 1890, in the seventy-third year of her age, Mrs. ANNA E. WATSON (nee Hays). She was born February, 1817; converted and joined the Methodist Church when quite a child, and ever afterwards maintained that sacred relation with Christian fidelity. Since I have known her, though old and infirm, and living some miles from church, it was a rare thing to find her seat vacant on public worship. She was married to John Watson, on May 3, 1840, and was left a widow, with eight children. May 3, 1861, which honorable estate she honored as "a widow indeed" to the day of her death, nobly struggling with great odds to maintain her household, and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, which holy work she succeeded well in doing.

Her death was sudden, but not unexpected to herself nor to her family. She had set her house in order for both sides of the river, and though the call came "at the cock-crowing, it found her ready." She leaves four children, thirteen grandchildren, one brother and many friends and relatives to mourn her loss. But, thank the Lord, "we weep not as those who have no hope!" P. HOWARD.

BAILEY—Little EVALINE, daughter of Jordan and Stellilue Baily, was born January 4, 1883, and died quite suddenly, January 31, 1890.

Only sick about two days, and suddenly the father and mother are called upon to pass under the darkest cloud of their young life. Evaline, eldest child, the first sunshine of "home, sweet home," cold in death. Oh, how sad! All the light suddenly turned to darkness; but, thank God, not to interminable nor impenetrable darkness, for the light of this world has said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Blessing their Lord and Master, the Christian father and mother can say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" We can not call our darling back to earth, but we can and will go to her and dwell with her in heaven.

May God, in his infinite mercy, lead them gently, but surely to that final meeting of his children.

B. F. PHILLIPS.

BURTON—Mrs. SUSANNA MERCER BURTON was born near Belfast, Ireland, June 25, 1815. Her parents came to America in 1847, and settled in Newton county, Miss. She was married to Rev. R. W. Burton, July 7, 1853. She professed religion and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church when a girl, and after her marriage she transferred her membership to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Sister Burton was a pure Christian, a faithful wife and a fond and loving mother. Her death was sudden and unexpected, even to those of her own household; but she was ready for the great change. Late, Friday evening, January 17, 1890, she passed away with neuralgia of the heart. She was a great sufferer, but bore her affliction with Christian fortitude. Her religion did not partake of the sensational, but was quiet and loving. God grant that her children may all follow in her footsteps, and at the close of life's pathway meet her in that home prepared for all God's people!

J. S PARKER.

JONES—Mrs. M. J. JONES, widow of R. J. Jones, one of the founders of the Mississippi Conference, and father of R. J. Jones, Jr., and K. Jones, fell on sleep, January 23, 1890. She was born in Alabama, January 14, 1834; was married August 30, 1865. She was the child of pious parents, and her own life was marked by a deep devotion to God.

During her last sickness she seemed to lose sight of all earthly things. Her mouth was filled with the songs of Zion, and the last articulate words were, "Glory be to God!" She leaves two sons and a daughter—all grown. May God's providence, as manifested in this taking away of their beloved mother, be blest to their growth in grace!

JOHN W. CHAMBERS, P. C.

RUSHING—MARY RUSHING, daughter of G. and A. Redmon, was born in Pike county, Ala., on August 12, 1829, and departed this life on February 5, 1890, aged sixty years five months and twenty-three days. She was married twice. Her first marriage was to Mr. George Hudson in 1845, and her second marriage was to Mr. C. L. Rushing in 1881.

Sister Rushing put off the day of her return to the Lord until a late period in life. She was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1885. She lived from the time of her conversion a very consistent Christian. She died with that terrible disease, dropsy of the heart. She said, in her sickness, that she was ready to go whenever the good Lord called for her. She said to her husband and children that there was not one spot of darkness between her and heaven. About two days before she died she shouted, "Glory to God!" and said to her weeping husband and children, "God will take care of you all."

Husband, children, weep not. She is at the beautiful gate, waiting and watching for you.

J. H. HOLLAND.

The Bridge of Life.

Addison, in his "Vision of Mirzah," represents life as a bridge of a hundred arches, and many of these, especially those at the farther end, in an almost impassable condition. The bridge was formerly much longer. Now no one reaches the other side by passing the bridge. Yet all must use it, and all must fall, sooner or later, into the swift current beneath. He represents the medical faculty as assisting travelers through, rather than over the bridge. But now, with the wonderful progress in medical science, no doubt the structure would be represented by modern Addison as in better repair. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

As a Flesh Producer there can be no question but that

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda

is without a rival. Many have gained a pound a day by the use of it. It cures

CONSUMPTION,

SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS AND COLDS, AND ALL FORMS OF WASTING DISEASES. AS PALATABLE AS MILK.

Be sure you get the genuine as there are poor imitations.

Habitual Costiveness

causes derangement of the entire system, and begets illnesses that are hazardous to life. Persons of costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind and body, and perfect heart'n ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Bills repealing the charters of the Frankfort, Henry county, and Grand Lodge lotteries passed the Kentucky House of Representatives on March 20. The anti-lottery men form a strong majority in the Legislature, and will use every effort to suppress the lotteries.

Maj.-Gen. George Crook, U. S. A., in command of the department of the Missouri, died in Chicago, March 21.

The Louisiana delegation was successful in getting the House to adopt the bill authorizing the Secretary of War to expend $25,000 in the purchase of tents, if necessary, to be loaned to the State on the application of the governor for the use of flood sufferers.

The chance for an appropriation to establish the Algiers Navy Yard is considered to be rather slim, so far as this session is concerned. The pressure for appropriations for Republican measures is so great that there is no disposition to make haste with a matter of no special interest to Republicans.

Seventeen blocks of buildings were destroyed by fire in Jacksonville, Fla., on March 20.

The House Committee on Alcoholic Liquors has authorized a favorable report on a bill providing for the appointment of a commission on alcoholic liquor traffic. It provides that the commission shall consist of five persons, to be appointed by the President, and who shall be selected solely with reference to their personal fitness and capacity for an honest, impartial and thorough investigation of the alcoholic liquor traffic, and who shall hold office until their duties shall be accomplished, but for not more than two years.

Senator Ingalls by request introduced a bill to give every soldier or sailor who served ninety days or longer in the late war a bounty of $50 a year for every year's service or part of a year. If the soldier is dead the money shall go, in the order named, to his widow, minor children, father or mother.

Rises in the Monongahela and Youghlogheny rivers have caused much apprehension, and the people in the lowlands and valleys are preparing for a flood. Johnstown is threatened with another inundation.

Nearly 200,000 acres of the eastern portion of Iowa have been burned by a prairie fire. Several lives are said to have been lost.

Mrs. Harrison, the wife of the President, and party arrived in Atlanta, Ga., on March 24, and were welcomed by the mayor and a delegation of prominent citizens.

The levee broke at Chicot City, Ark., on March 24, and the crevasse was then 100 feet wide and widening fast.

The San Francisco Board of Trade has adopted resolutions reciting that the existing tariff on sugar is favorable to the development of the best sugar industry of the country and particularly of the Pacific States, and protesting against the proposed reduction of duty on this product.

FOREIGN.

Emperor William has cordially thanked Bismarck for his past services, and created him a duke and field marshal.

In the House of Commons, last week, Mr. Labouchere moved the abolition of hereditary representatives in Parliament. He reminded the House that demooracy had become a reality. After a brief debate the motion was defeated—201 to 289.

It is stated that Emperor William has intimated to King Humbert and Emperor Francis Joseph that there will be no change in the foreign policy as regards the triple alliance.

The report of the Parnell commission was approved in the House of Lords, on March 21, on motion of the Marquis of Salisbury. He said the Parnellites congratulated themselves upon being found not guilty on certain charges, but there was evidence to show that the Parnellites in Parliament were ready to make up for crimes committed by Parnellites outside of Parliament. The Irish parliamentary party had their hands in the throttle valve of same, and let go or restrained criminality as their political necessities required.

There is considerable uneasiness manifested in Austria over the retirement of Bismarck. Prince Bismarck was the long-proved ally of Austria. The Emperor himself is regarded as the real successor in the chancellorship. He, it is asserted, has a temperament which caused apprehension of surprising and dangerous revolutions.

The Labor Conference, in session at Berlin, adopted a resolution favoring the prohibition of the employment of children under twelve years of age in factories and mines.

The students of the University and the Academy of Agriculture, in St. Petersburg, engaged in a serious riot on March 22. The students insist upon the restoration of the liberals of 1883, and the refusal of the authorities to comply with their demand led to the outbreak. Five hundred students were arrested and imprisoned.

The damage done by continued floods throughout Italy is estimated at 4,000,000 francs.

The North German Gazette (Prince Bismarck's organ) says that the result of the recent elections for members of the Reichstag and the loss of his old influence were the real reasons for the resignation of Prince Bismarck. Nobody, the Gazette says, asked him to reconsider his resignation.

Chancellor Von Caprivi has addressed a note to the German embassadors abroad in which he intimates that he will continue the policy of Bismarck.

If you are suffering from Malaria, ask your druggist for Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria. If he don't have it, and tells you he has something just as good, don't believe him, but send one dollar to Dr. A. T. Shallenberger, Rochester, Penn'a, and get the Antidote by mail. A few doses will restore you to perfect health. The Medicine is in the form of pills, but is not a purgative. It not only destroys Malaria, but is an excellent tonic.

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policyholders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Diseases of Women.

Nausea, indigestion, bloating, general debility DEPRESSION, SLEEPLESSNESS, liver and kidney troubles and kindred affections, permanently cured by using Maguire's Cundurango.

A letter intended to promote the new temperance crusade, signed by Archbishop Walsh and others, was read in all the Catholic Churches in Ireland on March 23.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as is the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

THE CHORUS TRIUMPHANT.

BY LAURA C. CALHOUN.

The Easter bells are pealing from many a belfry tower,
Telling that Christ is risen. In this bright morning hour,
As I awake from sleeping, my heart joins in the lay
Which heaven and earth are raising on this glad Easter day.
For Christ our Lord is risen, our Savior's gone on high,
Mid angel hosts his throne is set beyond the shining sky;
Awake, my soul, to praise him; awake, my lips, to sing
Hosannas, glad hosannas, to Christ our risen king!

The Easter bells are pealing from many a belfry tower,
And Easter flowers are shedding fresh fragrance for this hour;
All nature wakes and praises. Shall I alone be dumb,
When Christ my Lord is risen, is risen from the tomb?
I'll give my life to praise him, and at life's parting breath
Join in the Easter anthem of souls redeemed from death;
In heaven then to praise him, in heaven then to sing
Hosannas, glad hosannas, to Christ our risen king!

The Easter bells are pealing the whole glad world around,
Every land beneath the sun is heard the joyful sound;
From shrines and heathen temples, from palm and orange-grove;
From our beloved hill-sides rings out the sound we love.
The grand, triumphant chorus, let all unite to raise;
In joy and loving service through all the coming days.
Awake, all souls, and praise him; awake, all lips, and sing
Hosannas, glad hosannas, to Christ our risen king!

A Remarkable Revival.

BY REV. J. M. BEARD.

When that government which the French people seems to have chosen "for better, for worse," has a very important measure to carry, it gets ready for an impetuous onset and a sweeping victory, by what is termed a state of urgency, and it is really sublime to witness with what unanimity and enthusiasm the whole legislative force of the nation will rush to a coup d'etat in the wake of such a measure. Now, a vote of urgency, if we could somehow compass it, is what we need for parsonage extension in our great Church, which is great in almost everything but household heritage. Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis, is a good maxim for the occasion, as far as it goes; but, alas! the times have inexorably outrun us. Our itinerancy has come to its providential end to find social habitation and a place, but no dwelling. Our itinerants have married themselves out of celibacy and into family headship, with no place in a few of homes to bestow their newly acquired accidents of encumbrance. If the itinerate now at all, it is from inveterate habit, like the aged mule or ox, which had so long revolved through the spheric orbit of a tread-mill, that when turned out to grass there is nothing for him but endless gyrations through a zone as grassless as the equatorial ring of Saturn. If, indeed, the itinerant survives at all, it is in the person of the evangelist; if he has an existence at all, as under former customs, it is practically without limits, or what he allows himself—say, approximately, a sum equal to the salaries of ten Bishops; if he carries saddlebags at all—at once a proud prerogative and dear distinction—it is under the portly guise of a brass-bound Saratoga trunk. The itinerant of the present generation, then, is not an itinerant at all, but a sort of traveling lottery whose octopus-folds, sweeping the itinerant sea, resemble the gospel net in the single unique particular, that "it gathers of all sorts." But if the itinerant has taken his flight, so has the pioneer, with such awkward excuse for wings as he could command. It has not been very long since we were a nation out of doors. The American of a few decades ago was wont to stretch himself upon a prairie mattress, while a mere filmwork of cloud and sky served him for a covering. He had manna for breakfast, and angels' food for lunch, and unleavened bread and, semi-occasionally, pickled pork and turnips for his principal feast. But in an exceedingly short space of time he has graduated out of that into semi-luxury. He has still, it is true, a prairie bed "wide enough to stretch himself on it," and a sovereignty of mottled sky "broad enough to wrap himself in it;" but he has indignantly left his broad domain of freedom for the crampled quarters of an aristocrat. He has "silently folded his tent about him," and in almost the short space of a single night has exchanged the arid land of Arabia for "whole Palestina," with its riches of milk and honey and fruits and flowers. And, what is most sad to relate, is the fact that, unlike his scriptural forefathers, in accomplishing this break for liberty and lucre, worthy, indeed, of a pioneer race and an illustrious precedent, he has ingloriously left Caleb and Joshua to wander in the wilderness. It was, indeed, a prophet, as well as a poet, worthy of renown who put into the itinerant's mouth the ghostly rhyme:

"No foot of land do I possess
In this wide world's wilderness."

As some of the Scripture writers are wont to say when describing these landmarks of sacred story and clime, upon which neither the tooth of time nor the lash of tides and seasons has made any impression—"it is there until this day."

But the Methodist people have grown rich, as Mr. Wesley prophesied, and have gone into palatial quarters, taking their servants—at least, their domestic servants—with them. They have gone into manufactures and have built manufacturing towns without number for the maintenance of their young men and maidens. They have gone into commerce and set palaces afloat, and made luxurious provision for the ships' companies, or have despatched argosies to ivory and gold realms. And all this while the ministerial companion of his toils and poverty has been left to graze in the wilderness. He has compromised himself into wealth and luxury, "the putting on of gold and costly apparel," "faring sumptuously," and such like; but he will not compromise his creed to give his spiritual adviser a Hottentot's chance for shelter—to say nothing of an inheritance among the Lord's people. In his generosity towards his Maker for his rich gifts too numerous to mention, he is willing to make such a division of his palatial wealth as the son of Hibernia proposed to the partner of his bosom, with whom he could no longer live on amicable terms, viz: that they would divide the house—Biddy to have the outside, and himself the inside. To his Lord's immediate representative, who has been sent to demand both ground rent and insufruct, he proposes, with magnificent liberality, to give up to the former the largest half of the estate—that is to say, the portion which has not yet been reduced to possession. He revenges himself upon both the former for their oft-repeated references to the "house of many mansions" by indefinite compulsory confinement in a house without any mansions. It will not avail anything to combat his position with numerous Scripture proofs, as, for example, that the priesthood had the chief inheritance in Israel; that Caleb and Joshua were munificently provided for in the partition of the land of promise; that the Levites dwelt in rock-walled cities provided for them long centuries before Jehovah himself emerged from a tent-sanctuary; that when the temple was built it was honeycombed with priestly domiteries; that Peter and John and Philip and Paul were householders in apostolic times; for he has American—not to say, Methodist—usage enough to outweigh whole tomes of "the law and the prophets," with any number of the apostles thrown in for good measure. If you tell him the Roman Catholics provide houses for their celibates, he retorts that if celibacy is bad, it is bad to make provision for celibates; or if you suggest that the Roman pontiff dwells in the richest palace of Europe, and handles more revenue than the most opulent of the Hohenzollerns, he will argue that this is a bad extreme wrought by a pernicious custom. But not only is his position ethically bad; it is politically destructive. It is almost trite to say that the country that does not provide winter-quarters for its soldiers will soon have no soldiers to provide winter-quarters for. A great many theories have been advanced as to the raisons d'etat of Southern defeat in the late war; but two causes were certainly prominent: 1. The magnificent equipment of the army of invasion, which was never excelled. 2. The positive destitution of the soldiers of Lee and Hood, who had scarcely a rotten shred between them and winter's most sombre visage.

That army, whether we speak of a temporal or a spiritual host, is in a sad state that has not shelter enough to keep its powder dry, and which is forced to expend in fruitless battling with the elements the courage and strength which might entitle it to victory in conflict with a less formidable foe. A homeless and unprovided ministry can gain no further victories on American soil. The genius of our institutions forbids it, if the laws of nature did not. We can not oppose magnificently equipped forces, and the anti-mob sentiment of the age, which is one of its leading characteristics, with the poor devices obtaining with that motley organization called the Salvation Army.

A home is the biggest investment for any American, be he soldier or civilian—for any Christian, be he minister or member. He who has one knows more of the purchasing power of a dollar than any other not similarly blest. To convey some idea of the meaning of this last sentence: If the three principal Methodist Churches of New Orleans should invest the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars in homes for their pastors, such parsonage provision would be worth to the latter and, therefore, to the investors not less than five hundred dollars annually, or the equivalent of twenty per cent. on investment. Or, to express it differently, several of these pastors do pay five hundred dollars annual rent for houses not marketable at the first-mentioned sum. In the country and country towns the ratio is still greater owing to fruit, garden and oftimes farming advantages. But we need hardly discuss the expediency or profit feature of the subject, which is sufficiently obvious.

Then let us build homes for our itinerant nomads, whom both the country and the church in this feature have outgrown by fully two generations. Let us build parsonages, and thus get rid of the Wandering-Jew element of our ministerial population, for who would consent or has consented to houseless tabernacling in one place for a space longer than twelve months? Let us build parsonages if for no better reason than to reap the largest possible profit on investments, and to make it possible for a man to be, in one breath, a citizen, a patriot and a minister of the gospel. Let us build parsonages for the preachers, that the preachers may build churches for the people; for every dwelling provided by the church for its self-sacrificing minister will net that result, as the past history of the church abundantly testifies. In a former age of itinerancy, when circumstances which do not exist now compelled frequent locations among the itinerants, churches sprang up as by magic in their neighborhoods, and wherever a circuit or station in more modern times has recognized the scriptural order by postponing the house of worship until the comforts of God's chosen have been provided for, they have found at a not remote period that in building slowly they were building surely.

Of preachers' homes there is no field more destitute than the great State of Louisiana, and, therefore, none to which this exhortation will apply with greater force; but it will be needless to state that we can have no parsonage-building movement without a parsonage sentiment, and no parsonage sentiment without an organization, wide and thorough, and extending to latitudes where they both know and practice more of self-sacrifice in this work. The Woman's Parsonage Extension movement affords us the opportunity which we should have been seeking for a century past. And, quite as much as for anything else, we began these lines to say that a really remarkable revival in that work is progressing at this moment in this city under the able leadership of Mrs. S. S. King, the State secretary, and Miss Kate L. Riggs, district secretary of the New Orleans district, both lately appointed by our State Board, and admirably fitted for the positions. Societies have been organized in the Rayne Memorial, Carondelet, Felicity and Morcau Churches with large and, in some instances, enthusiastic memberships. Others have been projected where not previously existing, and in a very short time, these ladies tell us, there will be a parsonage society in every Methodist Church in the New Orleans district, while the battle will be pressed so vigorously in the country that nothing but determined opposition, joined to the habit of indifference, which unhappily has prevailed heretofore in both city and country, will prevent final victory.

Let us say, in conclusion, while exhorting both preachers and people to help these active helpers with us in the gospel with their prayers and purses and most active co-operation in good works, that the parsonage extension revival has not come too soon and can not stay too long. To it will be credited more successes—whatever its record of failures, and this has been the genesis of all measures that have attained to renown—than any gospel movement of our church in this age, and not the least of these will be to balance the urban against the suburban and rural conquests of our glorious Methodism, and qualify it for an advance in solido against the hosts of sin.

Notice.

To the Friends of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Mississippi:

All persons desiring to attend the fourth Annual State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Mississippi, to be held in West Point, April 24 to 27, are requested to send their names to Mr. Perry Duncan, West Point, Miss., before April 15. By complying with this request you will greatly aid the Committee on Entertainment.

The railroads have given $1\frac{1}{3}$ rates for round trip. Be sure you obtain certificate, when you purchase ticket to West Point, and should you be compelled to purchase more than one, get also a certificate with each ticket you buy. These certificates will entitle you to secure excursion rates on your return.

The following gentlemen will address the evening sessions of our meeting:

Bishop C. B. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., Thursday. Rev. W. L. Pickard, of Birmingham, Ala., Friday. Rev. C. E. Cunningham, of Yazoo City, Miss., Saturday; and Rev. S. E. Mitchell, of Clinton, Miss., Sunday evening.

You are earnestly requested to interest yourself and others in this convention, for we are sure it will prove interesting and profitable to all who attend. A full programme will be sent out before the meeting.

Hoping you will feel it your privilege and duty to attend,

Respectfully,

J. R. DOBYNS, Chairman.
W. N. JENKINS, State Secretary.

Will We Rebuild Our Church at Oxford?

This is a question in which every Methodist of Mississippi is interested. We have more than fifty young men of our church at the State University, going out into all sections of the State to represent our church, and we can not afford to have it said that we have no church in this educational center. The Methodists of Oxford are not able, after their great loss, to rebuild the house we must have. They have exhausted their resources; given more according to their ability in the last two years, perhaps, than any other church in our State. They have worked manfully to properly represent our church in this town, where denominational lines are so closely drawn; but now they are prostrated, and need our sympathy and our help. Shall we help them and save our church and our honor, or leave these victims of the fire fiend to suffer for the help that can be given and not seriously injure anyone? Then what shall we do? Let our Conference Church Extension Board give them $1,000—$500 this fall, and $500 next. Let all the towns and cities of the State help, for all are interested in our church at Oxford. Are there not ten stations in the North Mississippi Conference which will give $50 each; ten pastoral charges which will give $25 each, and twenty-five which will give $10 each? Then why not take these collections at once and help the unfortunate and save our church? Let us move at once and report in the Oxford column of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Holly Springs has given $102; Grenada, $112. Other places, no doubt, need help from our Conference Board; but the sacrifice will not be half so great for the work to be postponed at these places as for us to fail to rebuild at Oxford.

Let us help a struggling people who have tried hard to help themselves.

J. W. HONNOLL.

HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Rupert Wise.

A POETIC ROMANCE.

This is the title of a new book by a young Mississippian. Though fresh from the press, it has already commanded the warmest commendation of many discriminating literary critics. One eminently competent to pass judgment says: "It is the most ambitious poem and the greatest literary success of the age. Truly American; a tale of passion, doubt and the final triumph of a great soul." Dr. Harrison, the scholarly editor of the Southern Methodist Quarterly Review, uses these strong words: "No poem since Festus appeared is equal to it." Another writer, whose notice has fallen under my eye, says: "There is a Tennysonian touch in the words that lingers deliciously in the memory and reminds one of Paul H. Hayne's subtle undertone."

The author, the Rev. H. M. DuBose, was born, I believe, in Clark county, Miss. He gave early promise of literary taste, and at the age of twenty was a belles-lettres scholar of marked attainments. In 1878, having entered the Mississippi Conference, he served a pastoral charge on the river above Vicksburg. During that year he was a frequent and ever welcomed visitor to my home in the Hill City. The scene of this poetic romance is laid in the city of Vicksburg, and the whole plan was conceived in that fateful year of worse than war. In the preface to this volume, the author says: "Ten years and more ago, amid humble labors, in a village beside the Father of Waters, and when the shadow of the pestilence that walketh in darkness was but newly lifted from the hearts of a smitten people, my hand was first set to the task."

Rupert Wise is a young physician of high birth, educated in American and German universities, of brilliant gifts and laudable ambition. He wins the heart of lovely "Madeline," but never her hand, because his proud spirit was powerless to resist a remorseless, hereditary appetite. The plan is admirably sustained to the final conquest, the heroic measures often quivering with rare poetic power.

In the following opening lines he refers to Vicksburg:

"Hail, city fair, throned on eternal hills,
Hard by the mighty river's sullen flow!
* * * * * *
Red war around thy gates hath flamed, and Mars
Hath looked, with eyes of fiery curse, on thee.
While fate's malign and tracts of evil stars
Have marked with lurid fires, thy destiny;
Yet queenly still thou sittest, clothed and free;
The past thou hast in tears, the future's page
Thou holdest fair for peaceful memory;
Though writ with golden pen for golden age,
Thou still wilt hold thy past, with good or ill presage."

"To thee relates my song of various key;
To thee pertains my tale, in theo 'twas wrought,
I own from thee the sense of mystery,
And power of strong desire, in youth begot;
To thee anon turns memory ever fraught
With old-time visions of that free, grand tide,
Moving majestic tow'rd its ocean lot,
Like symboling through all its glinting pride."

After describing at length the preparations made to avert the threatened pestilence, and the council of the physicians, in which Rupert Wise was a central figure, the author, in these exquisite lines, gives a vivid picture of the solemn night preceding the wild flight of the populace from the great destroyer:

"Now midnight clothed in shades and ebon gloom
The favored town, and silence as of doom
Held cot and lofty dome in mute embrace;
The watch-stars, mounting toward their vigil place,
In shining ranks, approached the sable tower,
And flung their beams, creation's vastness o'er.
What darkness looked they on! What sorrow read!
Through latticed ways, where smothered dread
Spoke forth in sleepless eyes or forced its seal
On fevered lips and brows too soon to feel
The fiercer touch of mortal ill."

One of the finest passages contains the eloquent pleading of Rupert Wise for "sweet Madeline" to be the angel keeper of his heart and home, and her sad refusal. She loved him with all the wealth of her great, pure soul, and had from early girlhood, but the higher law, duty, compelled a course which made both hearts suffer. She says:

"Nay, never can it be, although each flow'ret
That blossomed fresh in girlhood's peaceful morn
Be blighted by the word, and envious dust
Rest on their petals, and each rapture born
With them be turned to grief, and though the rust
Dim all my altar gold, it may not be."

And in that supreme hour of disappointed love she thus plaintively invokes the spirit of her sainted mother:

"Oft when I bow at evening time for prayer,
I feel unearthly impress on my brow,
As if some guardian spirit's touch were there;
O tell me, mother, is that impress thine?
Enough! I know thou art near me here;
Thy life of love, thy memory's constant bloom
Breathe patient trust—the higher will is mine!
Yon fair ascending star whose beams are shed
In radiance half melodious round thy tomb
A beacon light become, and fate shall lead
My trustful spirit heavenward, sunward, home."

Rupert Wise passed through all the stormy and bitter agonies of a soul fired with high and noble purposes, yet in the thrall of vice. It shadowed every prospect—dimmed every fair perspective—fettered every divine impulse. With the dawn of a new hope chasing a long night of gloom, the author thus describes him:

"'Tis love transmutes the thorny crown to gold;
How brief now'r its spell or pastlooked hold,
It fetters ill, bids weak imprisoned hope
Once more attempt its grated doom and rope,
New pamphlet, with late. Brief, like the cup
Of April clouds, love's chalice holden up
Baptized his spirit's grief, till moved by strains
Of unseen power, he rose and lisping faint
Between his parted lips he swore an oath,
An awful oath, to ban his curse. As death
To let its accents die, left purpose fell,
He held the words till seemed his breath to wail."

But I will not tax your columns with further extracts from these pages. I write not this to advertise a book, but to pay friendly tribute to the gifts and culture of a young Mississippian, destined to hold high place in our nation's literature. He now resides in Los Angeles, Cal.

Woman's Department Church Extension.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I am just in receipt of the following:

Dear Sister: We have before us so many urgent applications for aid that we are very anxious to get in all funds possible before the meeting of the Board of Church Extension in April. Stir up the Auxiliary treasurers and send in up to that time all that may come into your hands due the General Board. Send all you can by March 31. Do, I beg, all you can to help us have as large a fund as possible at Board meeting. God help you in that way to aid his servants. Yours,

LUCINDA B. HELM.

I have received the following amounts this year: Holly Springs, $6 25; Sardis, $2; Greenville, $8; Coldwater, $1 75; Coffeeville, $1 75; Carrollton, $10. Total, $29 75.

Let others send at once. If you have any money on hand, send it to me without delay.

MRS. EVA R. BINGHAM,
Treas. W. D. Ch. Ex., N. Miss. Conf.
CARROLLTON, MISS.

A Distressing Case.

Rev. C. B. Foust, pastor of our church at Oak Ridge, La., is in deep affliction. He was attacked by acute spontaneous gangrene in his foot on February 23, which necessitated the amputation of his leg above the knee a month later, and he now lies in a helpless and suffering condition. He was in the Confederate Army during the Civil War—a member of Company B, Thirteenth Regiment Mississippi Volunteers—and lost his left leg in the attack on Knoxville, Tenn., by the Confederate forces under General Longstreet, November 29, 1863, and while lying wounded on the field his right foot and ankle were severely frostbitten, and their circulation so impaired, as to render them easy victims of acute disease twenty-six years later. He is among kind friends who contribute to his wants; but all material assistance would be thankfully received. Should any old soldier, comrades, friends or brethren who may read this be touched with a feeling of generous sympathy, let it be expressed in sums, great and small.

DE RESURRECTIONE DOMINI.

Pone lictum, Magdalena,
Et serena lacrymas.

Cease thy sorrow, Magdalena,
Tearless lift thy beaming brow;
'Tis no more the feast of Simon,
Causeless is thy weeping now.
Thousand reasons challenge gladness,
Exultation now for sadness.
Hallelujia!

Summon laughter, Magdalena,
Let thy kindling face grow bright;
All thy suffering has departed,
Gleams again the glowing light.
Lo! the world unchained through Jesus,
Triumphing, from death he frees us.
Hallelujia!

Shout for joy, O Magdalena!
Christ has left the gloomy grave;
Finished is the sad transaction,
Death destroyed, he comes to save.
Whom with grief thou sawest dying,
Greet with smiles, the tomb defying.
Hallelujia!

Lift thine eyes, O Magdalena!
Lo! thy Lord before thee stands;
See! how fair the thorn-crowned forehead,
Mark his feet, his side, his hands.
Glow his wounds with pearly whiteness,
Hallowing life with heavenly brightness.
Hallelujia!

Wake and live, O Magdalena!
Now thy night is changed to day;
Let thy heart swell with rejoicing,
Death's strong arm is dashed away.
Grief and lamentation spurning,
Hail thy loving joys returning.
Hallelujia!

An Appeal in Behalf of Our Sunday-School Work.

The vast possibilities bound up in our Sunday-school work deserve the most deliberate and careful thought of the next General Conference. The results already achieved evoke our profound gratitude to the Lord of all.

To our Publishing House agents and managers, our Sunday-school editor and assistants, we should make acknowledgment commensurate with the large service rendered. They have labored under many serious embarrassments during the past decade, and have accomplished a work worthy of our sincere thanks.

Now that the skies are bright with promise for all departments of our Zion, we should look well to the "bottom rock" of our foundation and see that it is laid broad and deep. There can be no valid reason now why our Sunday-school department should not be equipped in all of its practical workings equal to any on the earth. It can be done with very little, if any, more outlay from the income of the Publishing House.

I first desire to call attention to what I deem our real needs, and then show what I think an entirely feasible plan for meeting the same.

OUR NEEDS.

1. In order to meet the necessities of the work we should have a thoroughly systematized plan for distributing vastly more Sunday-school literature than we now have. We have probably an ample number of Lesson Helps, but they need enlargement and improvement, and we need many more little books, tracts and leaflets on methods of Sunday-school work in detail, practices of successful workers all over the country, and many other matters in the line of helpfulness, too numerous to mention here, but which every Sunday-school worker who has studied this subject seriously will understand and appreciate.

2. We need a much more general distribution of our regular Publishing House literature than goes out at present, in order to keep our workers fully alive to the issues of the times and to give them the inspiration and enthusiasm always engendered by a thorough knowledge of our splendid history, doctrine and polity (the equal of which I do not believe exists on the earth to-day). Who is not thrilled with holy fire when he once fully understands the excellencies of our ecclesiastical machinery, and he can but feel the impulse of prophecy upon him for its magnificent future with God's blessing upon it. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," is the utterance of one who saw by the light of the Lord's candle long ago. It is true, and has many parallels to-day. My candid opinion is that more Methodists become puny, sicken and die, for lack of knowledge than anything else. Hence we need to scatter cheap, wholesome literature, methodically, continuously and abundantly as the leaves of the forest. Of course, this is no new suggestion, simply following the primitive paths of Mr. Wesley and his early helpers. The wisdom of the ages demonstrates that some things can not well be improved on. This idea of Mr. Wesley is one of them.

3. We need more direct connection with headquarters. Of course, at present, our editor can not visit the field and personally come in contact with thousands who have read his comments for years, but have never seen his face in the flesh.

The benefit of a living representative is fully understood by the world, and is being utilized in many directions by the church. What would our Mission Board accomplish without a secretary in the field? Who would know half as much about our prosperous and hopeful field of church extension without the business-like appearance and statements of Dr. Morton, who constantly recounts successes in other fields, and thus furnishes the best possible reason for more earnest and liberal support? Commercially, it is next to impossible to know what the world wants or really needs without going where the people live. And one of the wise devices of this age is to create a demand by going, and then fill it with the needed production. Many a man has added to the comfort and pleasure of his home and family by some simple article to which his attention was directed. Otherwise he would probably never have known of it. Hence the benefit of a living, breathing representative, who out of knowledge thus gained will evolve many more plans for forwarding the work now impossible to even dream of. If, acting on the principle that the richest yielding part of a business deserves the best attention, then there can be no question as to our duty in the premises.

4. We need a weekly organ to push the work to its highest excellence. Scarcely anything now can prosper or make rapid strides without an organ. We must keep the field covered with information. There is nothing that more quickly strikes a responsive chord than the doings of eminent and useful workers in other places. How can we possibly know these things without and organ? Our Advocates are burdened all the time with more matter than they can print frequently for weeks, and it is not primarily the function of such a paper to furnish this kind of information. The magazine comes only once a month, and has its own peculiar field, with no room for practical hints to workers, and no place for toilers in this department to report their doings for the benefit of others. Suppose a brother in Texas has discovered an excellent plan for accomplishing some particular thing, and it would do great general good if disseminated, what will be affected by it if it never goes further than his neighborhood? and how will the brother in Georgia ever know of it if there is no organ through which to give the same to our entire connection? The secular schools of the country have long ago laid tribute on this useful vehicle for advancing great educational movements, and they keep the workers in her fields fully abreast of the times through various well-conducted journals. Now, of course, all these things cost money, and will not be met by a theory or a vision.

THE PLAN PROPOSED.

1. Let there be such legislation as is necessary at the General Conference to set on foot "A Sunday-school Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and, if thought wise, couple with it a tract attachment for the present, at least.

2 Elect a first-class man as secretary, who will give his entire time to this part of the work. Be very sure he is the right man before electing him.

3. The statistics will probably show 300,000 members in our Sunday-schools. Let there be an assessment made of five cents, per capita, annually, which would yield $30 000 if all paid. Of course the preachers should be required to see that the amount is raised in the Sunday-school, and either forwarded to the proper authorities or settle with the Sunday-school Board at Conference, just as other funds are reported now. I am satisfied there would be far less trouble raising this fund than any of our connectional claims, especially after a year's trial, when its merits would be fully understood and its benefits made manifest.

4. It would undoubtedly give such an impetus to the work that the income from "Children's Day" would enable each Sunday-school Board to place one man, at least, in the field to cover their respective Conference bounds, who would not only work constantly for the betterment of Sunday-schools, but would also become an excellent canvasser for our Publishing House, and thereby greatly aid in making known our interests generally. Think of forty agents for the Publishing House pouring in orders daily! What a stream of business going to one channel, and returning with blessings to our people!

5. Of course, the expense for all this work should be borne by the "Sunday-school Union," and its expansion would depend upon the income of that work, just as the other Boards take care of their expenses. If an assistant Sunday-school editor is needed, which, doubtless, will be the case, let the Publishing House look to that and any other additions of force and improvements needed.

6. When it is understood that only about twenty-five per cent. of the adult members of the church are giving any active work to the Sunday-school, and hence we have only about half as much Sunday-school membership as we have in the church, an anomalous condition, we need no further argument in showing evidently a disease in the vitals and the imperative need of heroic treatment in the way of thorough organization of "all for all." Our motto should be "All the church in the Sunday-school; all the Sunday-school in the church, and everybody in both." and all at work.

7. When it is also understood that the little twenty-five per cent. effort of the adult membership yields eighty per cent. of the conversions and accessions to the church, we catch sight of a problem at which we may well stand amazed while filled with holy joy. What institution on earth ever furnished such an exhibit—twenty-five per cent. invested; eighty per cent. dividend annually. Could there be a stronger appeal to our generosity. "We can not offer a better compliment to a good thing than to try to improve it," said a wise man. There was never a richer opportunity nor a more favored moment than we have now.

8. It is to the honor of our beloved Methodism that she furnished the first voluntary Sunday-school teaching. When the devout followers of Mr. Wesley in Oldham saw the great outreach of the work as instituted by Mr. Raikes and his paid teachers, they said, "Let us do it ourselves," as a voluntary offering of service to our dear Lord.

9. With such a precedent the work has stretched from pole to pole, so that if every Sunday-school teacher to-day were paid one dollar per Sunday for their labor, it would require sixty-five millions annually to cover that expense of the work alone. What a matter for rejoicing, then, is the voluntary feature of the work; otherwise it would have been greatly impeded and, perhaps, blocked long ago.

10. Then, as Methodists, having set the key to an invaluable free-will service, we can not afford to not foster the work and stretch every muscle of our organic life to enlarge its development and increase its efficiency. As to numbers, our goal should be, at least, a member for every member of the church. As a teaching agency, in material furnishing and methods, we should equal the best secular schools of our land.

11. With such a standard before us, and with such possibilities almost in our grasp, it would be a fitting crown to the work of the General Conference to give this most hopeful child of the church a heritage worthy of her name. And for this purpose I make appeal to our beloved Bishops and all in authority to carefully consider these things.

From the Work.

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I will close my first round on the Opelousas district next Sunday. In some respects it has been a trying time to the new presiding elder. An absence from home-folks for three months is a new experience, and has been somewhat trying to my faith and patience; but the experience has proven a great means of grace to me. I think I shall better appreciate home and its associations. This work has thrown me among a class of people so different in customs and habits from those I have been thrown with for the last thirty years, that one feels like he is learning to live life over again. I hope, however, through God's grace, to be able to mould myself to the situation. Notwithstanding I had a very severe attack of la grippe, which continued through several weeks, I was able to meet all of my appointments. I was received kindly by the preachers and people. The quarterly meetings were all interesting and profitable. The preachers have entered upon the new year with energy, and, trusting in God, they hope to do the best year's work of their lives. The outlook is favorable, some one constantly having accessions at their regular appointments; prayer meetings are reported well attended, class meetings are being revived. I would say just here, that the quarterly love-feast at all the quarterly meetings has been a refreshing time from the presence of the Lord.

In places the preachers are going "into the regions beyond," and establishing gospel preaching among a class not accustomed to hear it. The Creole Catholic element are being reached in places and brought into the Methodist Church. In many places the priests have lost their hold on this Creole element, and they go to hear Protestant preachers in spite of the "holy father." We are praying and working for good times this year. Pray for us.

SPRING CREEK CHARGE.

We are moving on smoothly at Spring Creek. I have taken several subscriptions for the ADVOCATE. The good people are taking care of their preacher, and we together are looking for a gracious time during this present Conference year. We moved into the parsonage at Babb's Bridge on February 18, and our hearts were made glad to see the interest that the good sisters of Babb's Bridge had taken to prepare for our reception. The parsonage had been nicely arranged, and, while on account of delay of shipment, there was no stove to cook our first supper on, there was no need of cooking, as supper was furnished to our hands, and that, too, such as we like best, and you may know it was amply served and greatly relished after a day's travel in an ox-wagon. I commenced a year's work with the first Sunday in the year, and have missed but one appointment, which was promptly filled by a local brother. Our people on Spring Creek are waking up to Sunday-school interest. We have a fine one at Spring Creek Church, with about fifty on the roll.

BABB'S BRIDGE, La.

SHILOH CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our first quarterly meeting has come and gone. Rev. P. A. Johnston, our presiding elder, was at his post in the spirit of the Master, and preached two excellent sermons to the edification and instruction of the people, and also raised about all the apportionment for Cato Church for the Conference collections. The stewards made a liberal assessment for the support of the ministry, and made a good showing for the first quarter. So we start out on our fourth year on this work much encouraged to try to do all we can for them and the cause of our divine Master. May the great Head of the church abundantly bless them and us in our work this year!

The Lottery.

"A Useful Institution."

There has been scattered throughout the land recently an almanac, called "The Capitol Almanac," bearing the imprint of A. Baldwin & Co., of New Orleans. There is in this document a great deal of useful and valuable information, historical, political and governmental. One would think, A Baldwin & Co. had done the people of the country good service in distributing among them, gratis, so valuable a document, and that they were entitled to the thanks of all the people. No doubt, many of the readers of this paper have had a copy of this almanac sent to them, and are ready to praise the charitable forethought of said A. Baldwin & Co., and have come to the conclusion that, as "one good turn deserves another," they will give said "manufacturers and jobbers of agricultural implements, machinery and hardware" the benefit of their trade! They had better examine that almanac, and see what its purpose is before they do that, if they are upright Christians!

If you will examine closely, you will see that this document is nothing more nor less than an advertisement of the Louisiana Lottery, gotten up in an expensive and attractive style. A footnote at the bottom of every calendar-page gives the information upon what day in that particular month the monthly drawing takes place. This is to keep it ever before the mind. No matter what you want to find out—the time of sunrise or sunset, when the moon is new or full—you are certain to be informed that on a certain Tuesday in that month the drawing is to take place, and that the capital prize is $300,000, and whole tickets are worth $20. There is nothing like keeping a thing before the people.

On page 34 of this document is an essay, on "A Useful Institution—Something About It," in which there is an attempt to show that lotteries are not immoral, and that they have done great good in the past, and that this particular Lottery, that has its deadly fangs fastened in the vitals of our State, is really a useful, benevolent institution. The writer starts out with the assertion that "whatever indictments lie against the lottery system are traceable not to the system, but to its abuses," and then goes on to bolster that up, not by showing wherein it has been abused, but by telling that a great many good things, and Christianity among them, have been abused, and then coolly drawing the conclusion that we don't reject Christianity because there have been some bad Christians—the meaning of which is intended to be, because there have been some bad lotteries, you ought not to reject the useful and benevolent and educational and charitable Louisiana State Lottery. If you do, then by the same reasoning you must reject Christianity, for there have been bad Christians. "If the one is immoral, so is the other." The impudent effrontery of this writer in putting Christianity on a par with lotteries as to morality surpasses that of the devil himself. But, says this writer, all this talk about the immorality of lotteries is mere "heresay," and "heresay" is invariably unjust and invariably tyrannical." "Peculiar ideas of morality held by even well-intentioned people" should not be accepted by everybody, for "human judgment is lamentably fallible." Did not the church "roast heretics?" "Did not John Wesley see ghosts and Cotton Mather hang witches?" They were good and true men, and yet how grievously were they mistaken! And so the argument is: all who say that lotteries are immoral are "grievously mistaken!"

But the cream of this precious document is its pretended history of the "origin of the lottery." The writer does not hesitate to say that God started the lottery; and if he started it, it was right then, and is right now, because "truth is eternal." "The verdict of countless ages stamp it as useful and right." According to this writer, the first lottery was gotten up by Moses and Aaron, acting under divine command, for dividing the land of Canaan among the Jews. The mind that can discover the modern or ancient lottery in that transaction ought to be turned loose and kept out on voyages of discovery for the good of human-kind. If Moses had proclaimed that there were one hundred thousand tickets at twenty dollars apiece, and that three thousand one hundred and forty four only would draw a title to a piece of land in Canaan, then there would be some reason for such a statement; but when we know that every man, woman and child among the millions that followed Moses actually drew a homestead upon which to spend the remainder of life, where is the likeness to a lottery? Every man can see that such a statement is not only a falsehood, but it is blasphemous to attempt to make God the author of the most monstrous iniquity the earth ever saw. Christian merchants and farmers will note that this statement is sent to them by the firm of A. Baldwin & Co., "dealers in hardware and agricultural implements."

This precious document then goes into an explanation of the "drawings," and endeavors to show that everything is done fairly and in good faith to all concerned. The statements made are such as nobody believes. For instance this: "The ticket holders unite in contributing a sum of money to be distributed among themselves." That is "cheeky," certainly. "To be distributed among themselves," indeed! How many thousands there are in this land who can rise up and say that while they have contributed for tickets, the "distribution" never reached them, and they have lost all they ever put in! We have heard of one man who says he can show $16,000 worth of lottery tickets that never drew a dime! The "distribution" is a humbug, except among the members of the company, who are fattening upon the credulity of their poor, pitiable dupes. The only thing that is distributed among the ticket holders is the growing desire to get large sums of money for the payment of a few dollars, which is downright dishonesty. This Louisiana charitable and educational institution has done more to demoralize honest labor and foster the spirit of gambling among the people than all other causes combined. And it is still permitted to do this thing—still permitted to go on debauching politics and prostrating honest toil and bribing Legislatures and corrupting public justice, for the paltry sum of forty thousand dollars paid into the State treasury! Did ever a people sell out so cheap before?

In giving the history of lotteries in the United States, this document gives a rosy coloring to the establishment of lotteries in various States, and parades the great good they have done, but—strange to say—omits the important fact that every State that ever legalized the lottery soon found out that it had legalized a public robber and an educational concern that graduated thieves by the hundred. And when the true nature of the institution was learned, public indignation not only expunged the law creating the lottery from the statute book, but drove the robber from her borders. And this same indignation is arising in Louisiana to-day. There are mutterings arising all over our State. Their meaning is unmistakable. Louisiana has suffered long enough! There is no need to wait for an expiration of the time allotted for the existence of the Lottery. It never had a legal existence, because it has never complied with the conditions upon which that existence was predicated.

A Lottery Bribe.

The instinct of the Louisiana Lottery Company to gain its ends by corrupt means was shown on Saturday in its attempt to bribe the governor, Legislature and people of Louisiana with money under a pretense of concern for the public safety.

The president of the company sent to the governor of the State a check for $100,000 of the company's dishonestly got wealth, to be used in work upon the levees for the protection of life and property.

The manifest intention was in that way to buy official and popular favor in aid of the company's desire to get a renewal of its chartered right to maintain a gambling establishment for the robbery and demoralization of the people.

The governor promptly gave this interpretation to the matter. He returned the check with a letter expressing his conviction that it would be manifestly indecent in him to accept it on the eve of the assembling of a Legislature which must presently pass upon the company's right to exist.

Admitted that there was no collusion between the governor and the Lottery people to obtain a "rise" out of the public by this display of generosity and civic virtue, it must be noted that the lavish readiness of the gamblers to pay so large a sum upon the mere chance of its beneficial effects as a bribe suggests its still greater readiness to buy legislators outright, and will justify the harshest suspicions as to the integrity of any legislator who shall favor the company's scheme, whether in Louisiana or elsewhere.—New York World, March 19.

Books and Periodicals.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

ENGLISH BIBLE STUDIES. By Rev. J. C. Murray. B. D. Cranston and Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, fifty cents.

This book contains sixty studies in the life of Christ, and is intended for the first year's course. The lessons are only given in outline. Each lesson is divided into four parts, viz.: Lesson analysis, comparative readings, notes and suggestions, and important lessons. We hardly think this book will meet the demand in colleges for the study of the English Bible.

PERIODICALS.

—CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for April, has a full complement of serial stories and miscellaneous papers. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $1 50.

—ST. NICHOLAS, for April, is beaming with beauty. Pictures and poetry, fact and fancy, history and romance, make up a delightful number of this popular young people's monthly. Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, for April, has a large supply of good things for the ladies. There are thirty-two pages, and in these may be found every variety of reading matter. Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. Price, $1.

—THE MISSIONARY REVIEW, for April, has a full table of mission literature of all grades and missionary intelligence from all parts of the world. As we have frequently said, this is one of the best missionary periodicals published in this country. Funk and Wagnalls, New York. Price, $2.

—DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for April, has a wonderful amount of good reading. It is not wholly taken up with the fashions nor with stories, but has articles on home art and comfort, sanitary and kindergarten, and other interesting departments. New York. Price, $2.

—MUSICAL HERALD, for March, is a good number. This magazine has been doing good service lately in the interest of church music, and we hope it will continue on that line, until the whole subject shall be brought down or up to the level of common sense. New England Conservatory, publisher, Franklin Square, Boston. Price, $1.

—The MISSIONARY REPORTER is full of good things on the missionary line. Dr. John is making a splendid little monthly. We hope the next General Conference will change this periodical into a weekly. The present form is good, and cheap at fifty cents a year, but a weekly at the same price will be better. Send to Dr. Barbee, Nashville, Tenn.

—THE CHAUTAUQUAN, for April, begins a new volume. This monthly deals in a great variety of subjects, and the contributors are men and women who not only have something to say, but say it in good, plain English. We appreciate the general information which a number of this monthly always serves up. Theodore L. Flood, Meadville, Pa. Price, $2.

—WIDE AWAKE, for April, is a most beautiful Easter number of this popular monthly. The beauties that are revealed in this periodical seem to us to be getting larger and more pleasing with each month. In the present number are articles from Hezekiah Butterworth, Edith M. Thomas, W. O. Stoddard, Harriet Prescott Spofford and others. D. Lothrop Company. Price, $2 40.

—THE MAGAZINE OF ART, for April, opens with a photogravure entitled, "Saved." Then follow Old Masters, by Fred Wedmore; A Lesson in Ornament, by Lewis F. Day; Art Patrons, by F. M. Robinson; Miss MacDonald, by Sir. T. Lawrence; Winter in the Country, by E. F. Brewtnall; the Imperial Institute, by Sir Somers Vine; The Chronicle of Art. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $3 50.

—POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY, for April, is on our table full of matter for inquiring minds. Among the papers furnished in this number we note, Science in the High School, by Prof. D. S. Jordan; Ethics and Religion, by Prof. C. H. Toy, Natural Inequality of Men, by Prof. Huxley; The Mysterious Music of Pascagoula, by C. E. Chidsey; Northern Lights, by Wilhelm Stoer. Editor's Table has several articles. D. Appleton and Company, New York. Price, $5.

—CHRISTIAN THOUGHT, for April, edited by Charles F. Deems, D. D., is packed full of articles of great value. Austin Abbott, Esq., contributes an able paper on The Uses of Retaliation in the Mosaic Law; President J. E. Rankin, a lecture on Men of Literary Genius and Christianity; Rev. George C. Yelsley, The Uses of Imagination in Historical Science; Mr. E. Cole Morris's, Rev. J. J. Smith's, Rev. George W. King's and Prof. Morrison's names add vigor to this number, by scholarly papers. Dr. Richard Whiteley also furnishes a paper up to his usual high standard, called The Philosophy of Christian Theology. Other articles serve to make up a most interesting number of this popular magazine, now in its seventh volume. Yearly subscription, $2; Clergymen, $1 50; Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 13 Cooper Union, N. Y.

PAMPHLETS.

—THE TWO SIDES OF THE SCHOOL QUESTION. This is a pamphlet giving the speeches of Cardinal Gibbons and Bishop Keane on the one side, and Edwin D. Mead and Hon. John Jay on the other. These speeches were delivered before the National Educational Association held in Nashville, last July, and published by the Arnold Publishing Company, Boston. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlburt and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

Second Quarter—Studies in Luke.

LESSON I I.—April 13.

THE WIDOW OF NAIN.

Luke vii, 11-18.

GOLDEN TEXT.—They glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us.—Luke vii, 10.

TIME.—Possibly A. D. 26.

PLACE.—The suburbs of a little town, not far from Endor, among the mountains of Issachar. Its name means "The Lovely."

11. And it came to pass—St. Luke alone, with characteristic tenderness, preserves for us this narrative. Nain means "lovely;" it deserves the name from its site on the northwest slope of Jebel-el-Duhy, or Little Hermon, not far from Endor, and in full view of Tabor and the hills of Zebulon. It is twenty-five miles from Capernaum, and our Lord, starting in the cool of the very early morning, as Orientals always do, would reach it before noon. It is approached by a steep ascent, and on each side of the road the rock is full of sepulchral caves. It was on the way to one of these that the funeral procession was met by our Lord. Many of his disciples went with him, and much people—More literally, there were accompanying him his disciples, in considerable numbers, and a large multitude. In this first year of his ministry, before the deadly opposition to him had gathered head, while as yet the Pharisees and leaders had not come to an open rupture with him, and he had not sifted his followers by "hard sayings," our Lord was usually accompanied by adoring crowds.

12. Nigh to the gate—One entrance alone the village could have had—that which opens on the rough hillside in its downward slope to the plain. It must have been in this steep descent, as, according to Eastern custom, they "carried out the dead man," that, "nigh to the gate," the bier was stopped, and the long procession of mourners stayed, and "the young man delivered back to his mother." The places of sepulture were outside the towns, to avoid ceremonial pollution. Much people of the city—Compare the public sympathy for the family of Bethany; and on the bitterness of mourning for an only child. (See Jer. vi, 26; Zech. xii, 10; Amos viii, 10.)

13. The Lord—This is one of the comparatively few instances in which the term "the Lord" is used absolutely instead of Jesus. As far as it goes it confirms the view that the narrative came from those who had a profound reverence, and at a time when they had learned thus to speak of him. Compare the language of Mary Magdalene in John xx, 2, 13. It may be noted further that this use of "the Lord" occurs more frequently in St. Luke and St. John than in the other Gospels. He had compassion—We note in this instance, as in so many others, how our Lord's works of wonder spring, not from a distinct purpose to offer credentials of his mission, but from the outflow of his infinite sympathy with human suffering.

14. He came and touched the bier—The word so translated is used by classical authors in various senses. Here the facts make it clear that it was after the Jewish manner of burial. It was not a closed-up coffin, like the mummy-cases of Egypt, but an open plank on which the corpse lay wrapped up in its winding-sheet and swathing-bands, as in the description of the entombment of Lazarus and of our Lord, with the sudarium, the napkin or handkerchief, laid lightly over the face. The immediate effect of the touch was that they who bore the bier "stood still." They must have marveled that One who was known as a teacher should touch that which rabbis would have avoided as bringing pollution, and their halting in their solemn march implied, perhaps, both awe, and faith that the touch could not be unmeaning. Here again, as in the case of the leper (ver. 6), our Lord sacrificed the mere levitical ceremonialism, with its rules about uncleanness, to a higher law. Had it been in Judea, the hired mourners and musicians would have preceded the bier; in Galilee they followed. First came the women; for, as an ancient Jewish commentary explains, woman, who brought death into the world, ought to lead the way in the funeral procession. Arise—Probably the single monosyllable Kum! how unlike the passionate tentative struggles of Elijah and Elisha.

15. He that was dead sat up—The supporters of natural interpretation pretend that the young man was merely overtaken by a lethargic sleep. In that case the miracle of power would only disappear to make room for a miracle of knowledge, equally difficult to understand. For how should Jesus know that the supposed dead man was still alive, and that the moment of his awakening was at hand? He delivered him—For he had already ceased to belong to his mother.

16. A great prophet—The expectation of the return of Elijah, Jeremiah, or "one of the prophets" was at that time widely spread. This, we must remember, was the first instance of our Lord's power as put forth to raise the dead, except of Jairus's daughter following in the order of vii, 40 56. God hath visited his people—Compare i. 68; John iii, 2.

17. This rumor—Rev. Ver., report; namely, of a great prophet who had vindicated his claims by raising the dead. Throughout all Judea—The notion that St. Luke therefore supposed Nain to be in Judea is quite groundless. It means that the story of the incident again spread even into Judea.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

How opportune was the appearance of Jesus! An hour earlier or later there had been no miracle. Is not Jesus at hand at the critical moment—in need and trial and sorrow reach their climax? He appears when the storm on Galilee is at its height, and when strength makes its final effort, as the evil spirits hurl the poor boy to the earth in a spasm of agony that appears with the transfiguration glory still lingering upon his face; he speaks and he heals. In the very day and hour when the daughter of Jairus was dying he appeared. Just when the centurion's servant was in danger he came that way. While Bartimeus was sitting by the way-side he passed and stopped and gave sight. At the very moment when the funeral procession appeared he appeared and gave life.

Read and Reflect.

1. Our liberties, laws, homes, sanctuaries and schools are a common blessing through the common Savior, as well as our good hope of eternal life.

2. A common gospel has lifted us from common savagery to common civilization, and will do the same for all men. We are only Gentiles.

3. Jesus, the world's Savior, says we are "his body, the church," and the "light of the world;" and, "Freely ye have received, freely give."

4. More than three fifths of the race, or a thousand millions of men, are in the despotism of darkness and nakedness of sin.

5. Now, a Savior who gives complete salvation has waited expectant eighteen centuries to see the world evangelized, and his kingdom prepared for by his church.

6. To be indifferent to the heathen millions is to be indifferent to what our Savior agonized for and bled in sacrifice, their welfare and his kingdom and glorious reign on earth. (Prov. xxiv, 11, 12.)

7. To pray, to toil, to give, for saving the whole world, alone identifies us with the inmost heart and purpose of our coming Savior and Judge.

8. To make any distinctions in our love and interest and activity in regard to any nation or man, is narrow, cruel, and apostate from the very spirit and charge of Jesus.

9. God's churches can give the entire gospel to all the world in this present generation, if we will. We have the power and opportunity in abundance.

10. Converts, saved souls, are the glory not only of Christ, but also of the soul winner, who, under God, brings them to salvation. (1. Thess. ii. 19.)

11. It will be the most dazzling, God-like glory eternal of the man, church or denomination, who shall chiefly bring Africa's millions, and Asia's myriads to conformity to the risen Christ. We may now do this.

12. Therefore, let us all pray "without ceasing" that all God's people everywhere may burn to save the world, and that we also may have continuously consuming zeal to do so at once, and do all we can to answer our prayers.—Rev. T. G. Field, in The Kingdom.

THE TRIUMPH HASTENING.—Nothing so impresses the student of missions as the fact that a wonderful celerity of movement is manifesting itself with increasing force in the mission fields all over the world. Much of the work of the past has been the tunneling, ploughing, and sowing, preparatory to the grand uplift, the toppling of walls, and the reaping of harvests. There were fourteen years of work in Tahiti before there was a convert, and now the Tahitians are the leaders in the Polynesian mission movement, which is evangelizing the islands of the South Seas. There were many years of fruitless toil among the Telugus; later, Dr. Clough baptized ten thousand in three months. Johnson saw Sierra Leone transformed into a Christian state in seven years. In Fiji, a thousand spires took the place of twelve hundred cannibal ovens in fifty years; at the beginning of that time there was not a single Christian, at the close not a single professed heathen. . . There are discouraging facts in places abroad, as well as at home; but a fair mind must be awed by the multiplied miracles of missionary work by which God is testifying to his presence with his people in these wonderful years.—Helping Hand.

The crisis of missions is evidently upon us, and this seems to be the growing conviction in every part of the field. A missionary who has labored twenty-six years in India says: "India is now ready for our work, and if this crisis is not met by the church, at least two or three generations will pass before an equal opportunity can be offered." From Brazil the word comes: "This land is ready. Thousands would accept the gospel if they only had preachers." One writes concerning China: "A thousand missionaries are worth more now than ten thousand ten years from now. As for Japan, it is melted and waiting for molding. What shall the mold be—Christianity or infidelity?"—Missionary Review.

In heathen countries Protestants occupy 500 separate mission fields, containing 20,000 stations, supplied by 40,000 missionaries. In these stations there are 500,000 Sunday-school scholars—an average of 25 to each station—and 1,000,000 native communicants, or an average of 50 to each station. There are also 2,000,000 adherents who are friends of the evangelical faith and hearers of the gospel preached from the Bible.

Temperance.

High License in Operation.

We have never admitted that high license was a successful remedy for the evils of intemperance with its misery and crime. Therefore we have a feeling of satisfaction, in reading such admissions as the following: "It is becoming apparent that the high license system is a delusion as a means of stopping or checking the use of liquor." "Judge H. F. White's strict interpretation of the Brook's law has reduced the number of saloons 90 per cent. in Philadelphia, yet there are more drinking places than there ever were before." "There is a general complaint of the large number of places where liquor is sold without a license. These surreptitious bar-rooms do their principal business on Sundays when the licensed saloons are closed, though many of them are in operation during the week. They are conducted under various disguises or with no disguise at all, and for the most part they are known to the policeman on the beat." "It was confidently affirmed that on account of the high license, those who obtained license to sell intoxicants would shut up the illegal sellers. But these latter secure their stock from the former. Hence it is to their interest to help rather than to hinder the law-breaker." "All accounts agree that high license is a failure in Pittsburg. 'Speak easies' or unlicensed groceries have multiplied in every section of the city, until now it is believed that the number of places where liquor is sold in considerably greater than it was two years ago under low license. These 'speak easies' are thinly disguised as 'soft drink' places, cigar shops and restaurants. They get their supply of liquors in the dead of night and sell without hindrance or regulation, when they please and to whom they please."

The Journal, of Providence, R. I., an opponent of the prohibitory law, says: "During the period of prohibition in this State and the discussions of reform incident thereto it was promised by the advocates of high license, as one of the chief inducements to change to their system, that a good high license law, properly enforced, would materially reduce the number of places maintained for the selling of liquor, thus decreasing the agencies of temptation to the thoughtless and bringing the liquor traffic within limits where it could be conveniently and satisfactorily controlled. It must be plain, however, not only by the statistics of licenses lately published in these columns, but by the common observations as well, that the happy result predicted has not been brought about under Rhode Island's new license law."

These quotations express the candid judgment of the editors of the papers from which they are taken. The papers are the leading papers in the largest cities of the Eastern States, and furnish us with the proof that a decrease of intemperance and crime must come by some other means than high license. The States that have adopted prohibition have found intemperance and crime decreased. Hence it is the true solution of this great question.—Mid-Continent.

A GOOD BARGAIN.—A school-boy defined strong drink as "the stuff that causes the most human happiness—by letting it alone." Here Patrick seems to give credit to the rumseller by a similar back-handed process of reasoning:

At a temperance meeting where several related their experiences, a humorous Irishman was acknowledged to be the chief speaker. He had on a pair of fine new boots. Said he, "A week after I signed the pledge I met an old friend, and he says, 'Them's a fine pair of boots you have on.' 'They are,' says I, 'and by the same token 'twas the saloon-keeper who gave them to me.'

"'That was generous of him,' says he.

"'It was,' say I, 'but I made a bargain with him. He was to keep his drink and I was to keep my money. My money bought me these fine boots. I got the best of the bargain, and I'm going to stick to it.'"—Temperance Banner.

THE SALOON.—By common acknowledgment, the saloons are manufactories of crime and criminals,—trysting-places of vice; allies of the brothel; breeders of poverty; wholesale and retail dealers in rags and wretchedness; the despair of law and order; the raison d'etre of police and prison; a chronic assault upon property and life; organized anarchy. Yet the State licenses the saloon! It legalizes temptation! The thief—it sends him to jail. The murderer—him it hangs. But the thief-maker, the manufacturer of the murderer, it commissions. For so many dollars dropped into its palm, the State permits this temptation to ensnare and damn. Thus, with one hand it strangles the victim, and with the other it protects the victimizer. Will not the future Tacitus, when he looks back to study our times, count this as the most curious of historic monstrosities?—Rev. Carlos Martyn.

TEMPERANCE.—Edward Everett Hale says: "I am ready to acknowledge that the clergy are apt to be a little fanatical in this matter of temperance. Why not, indeed? They see the skeletons in the closet, which other people do not see. They receive the confidence, and they know why this lad never kept the fond promise with which he entered college. They know what is the hidden cause of the ruin in this household, and the fond hopes of that young married pair. If you want to make an active temperance member of any indifferent friend, set him to work in prisons, in charity organizations, in education; you will soon find that he says less about moderate drinking, that he looks less doubtfully on strong legal measures for keeping men out of temptation."

We see in the risen Christ the end for which man was made, and the assurance that the end is within reach. Christ rose from the grave changed and yet the same; and in him we have the pledge and type of our rising.—Westcott.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

MASON & HAMLIN

The Cabinet Organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since and including that of Paris, 1867, in competition with ORGANS of all competitors, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated $323 to $8000 catalogues free.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their Pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1865, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN Piano Struning," by which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity. PIANOS GRAND & UPRIGHT, for standing in tune and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, our letters, and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments, and also rented.

Short Easter Sermons.

THE OPEN SEPULCHRE, A SEAL OF REDEMPTION.

I. An open, empty tomb. Earth is the place of tombs. Every grave of earth will yet be empty.

II. Momentous truths were uttered from the empty tomb where the Lord had lain. 1. The first voice proclaims the evil and power of sin. 2. The second voice proclaims liberty from sin. The open grave of Christ is a three-fold sign of acceptance, liberty, and life.

III. The lessons which men may learn as they linger by the Redeemer's empty tomb. 1. A lesson of penitence for sin. 2. A lesson of love to Christ. The grave of loved ones has a strange fascination. 3. Realize a nearness to him. 4. Ally yourself with those who honor him. 5. He is alive forevermore.—D. Rose.

THE PROOFS OF THE RESURRECTION.

I. Presumptive or circumstantial evidence. 1. The precaution of the Jews. 2. The departure of Jesus from the sepulchre. 3. The change which took place in the disciples.

II. The testimony of credible witnesses. 1. The sufficiency of evidence depends upon the number, qualifications and information of the witnesses. 2. Their competency being established, examine their credibility. Their testimony was honest, explicit and constant.

III. Divine testimony. The Holy Spirit bears witness to Christ's resurrection. 1. By the predictions of the prophets. 2. By the miracles of the apostles. 3. By the success of the gospel. —T. Gibson.

FUNDAMENTAL TRUTHS OF THE RESURRECTION.

1. The humiliation of Christ.
2. The infinite love of God.
3. The divine faithfulness.
4. The divine sovereignty.
5. Christ's triumph over all enemies.
6. Glorious pledge of perfect salvation.—Pulpit Themes.

A Monument to Clara Chrisman.

We have been permitted to see a photograph of the monument to Clara Chrisman to be erected over her grave at Beauregard, Miss. It is furnished by Kursheedt's marble works of this city. It is a broken column entwined with a garland of flowers cut in relief, caught at the top with a ribbon, resting on a moulded plinth, die and bases, standing in all ten feet high, and made of Italian marble.

The inscriptions are as follows: On the column, the name "Chrissie" in raised letters. On the die:

Anna Clara, daughter of T. J. and J. T. Chrisman, born at Beauregard, Miss., December 25, 1860. Died at Johnston, Pa., in the Conemaugh flood, May 31, 1889, on her way to Brazil, as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

On the base:

Twenty-eight beautiful years! "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God."

The work is exquisitely and artistically made, and well worthy of the object for which it is intended.

We understand the monument has already been sent forward to Beauregard.

"And Peter"—An Easter Sermon.

——"Tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee.", (Mark xvi. 7.)

This distinction, naming only Peter, is not a mark of pre-eminence, as Papists vainly teach. If such pre-eminence had been designed, the words would have been: "Tell Peter and the disciples." The Savior desired to relieve the weeping apostle of further mortification and despondency. Without this encouragement Peter would not have ventured to reappear in the Lord's presence. Allow a few pertinent suggestions about Jesus, the wonderful Savior.

1. A wonderful Savior in the sacrifices he made. (a) Incarnation. The King of Glory takes upon himself the form of a servant. (b) Poverty. He became poor. Had not where to lay his head. (c) Suffering and death. Misjudged, maligned, villified, maltreated. Anguish of soul. Gethsemane, Gabbatha, Golgotha present the scenes of the most epochal tragedy.

2. A wonderful Savior in conquering death and the grave. The Lord is risen indeed. Death is swallowed up in victory. Death, where is thy sting? Grave, where is thy victory? (a) Stone, imperial seal, armed guard, of no avail. (b) Angels, ministering spirits, witness and bear testimony of the Lord's resurrection. (c) Divine justice approving of the ransom paid for sinners, Jesus majestically arose from the grave. He who was dead liveth, is alive for evermore. He appeared to Peter, to Mary Magdalene, to the disciples journeying to Emmaus. To ten disciples, Thomas being absent. To the eleven. On the shores of Tiberias. To more than five hundred adherers at the time of his ascension. Jesus is "the first begotten of the dead." He has brought life and immortality to light.

3. A wonderful Savior in saving sinners like Peter. (a) Peter had been highly favored. Witnessed the Master's transfiguration, miracles, etc. (b) Had been repeatedly warned. (c) Recreantly denied the Lord—thrice. With all this, the Savior would not cast him off. And Peter. He restored him to favor and apostleship. Having repented of his sin, the Savior readily forgave him.

Learn.—

1. Sin is a misfortune as well as a crime. The sinner deserves commiseration, pity.

2. The Savior is solicitous, anxious to restore the backslider to sonship.

3. No penitent sinner need despair. The dying thief, the prodigal son, even Peter found forgiveness. And you?

JEAN PAUL.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Justification.

In a general way, justification is said to be the forgiveness of sin. Justification is a divine judicial act which applies to the believing sinner the benefit of the atonement, delivering him from condemnation, introducing him into a state of favor and treating him as a righteous person in the sight of God. Justification is the act of God as a judge. It refers always to the sins of the past and not to those which may be committed in the future, as erroneously taught in some systems of theology. In this court God is the judge, and Christ the sinner's advocate. It is the court of mediation, of propitiation, of substitution and of the forgiveness of sin on a principle honorable to God and conducive to virtue in the moral government.

"It is God that justifieth;" God in Christ to whom all judgment has been committed. Christ, as an advocate, pleads before the Father his own sacrifice, the propitiation for the sins of the world, the promises of forgiveness made in the gospel and the penitence and faith of the sinner; and for Christ's sake God absolves the sinner from the punishment justly due his sins. Instead of guilt and condemnation before God the sinner finds forgiveness and acceptance in his presence.

As an individual he is forgiven, and as an ungodly person he is accepted and accounted as righteous. Righteousness, as a moral virtue, is imputed to him, or counted as his own. In other words, his sin is not imputed to him. His faith in Christ is counted for, or in place of, righteousness. As we put it now, the will is taken for the deed. It may be well to note here that the thing said to be imputed is no more, nor less, than the faith of the individual which is graciously accepted in lieu of righteousness. Abraham believed God, and his faith was accepted in place of the works. God, seeing Abraham's faith, his determination to obey at all hazards, let him off from the specific act commanded. His faith was taken for the act, the will for the deed. The righteousness which is of God by faith stands in opposition to man's own righteousness which is, or may be, of the law.

The faith that saves is in itself an admission that the righteousness of the law is an impossibility. The law has been broken and its condemnation confessed. Faith once and for all renounces all trust in human ability. If there is any salvation, any hope, it must be by grace through faith. Hence we are justified by faith without the works of the law. The fact that faith is counted for righteousness is assurance that there is no righteousness to be counted.

God reckons a principle in place of a thing. Faith does not justify because it contains the germ of all good works, nor because it has any merit in itself, but because it is the condition on which is suspended the gracious application of the merits of Christ. Faith is not righteousness; it is only counted such. Righteousness is imputed to the believer, not to his faith. Imputation, or counting, has two meanings in the word of God: The first is counting to one his own. The second is counting to him what is not his own. In the second list we may enumerate a few things. The sin of Adam was not the sin of the race, but it is counted to the race. The sin of the race is not the sin of Christ, but it is counted to Christ. The righteousness of Christ is not the righteousness of the believer, but the benefits of his righteousness are counted to the believer. In this way faith, the instrumental cause of salvation, lays hold on the atoning merit of Christ's obedience as the meritorious cause, and so God graciously forgives sin for Christ's sake. The impotent arm of faith is made efficient by the Holy Ghost to lay hold of the hand of him who has power to save all that come unto God by him.

Justification, then, is a thing done for us, and not something wrought in us. It is the judicial act of a reconciled and placated judge—the sentence of absolution from sin. God alone can forgive sin, and he pardons, not by prerogative, but by principle—a principle that makes sin appear more exceedingly sinful. The justification of a sinner on this principle sets the character of God in a new light. It enables us to see how God can be essentially and rigidly just, and yet justify, or pardon, a sinner. The attributes of mercy and justice are so blended that we can not tell whether God is the more infinitely merciful or infinitely just in his dealings with our fallen race. This softening of justice gives us hope in a world of sin, and this hardening of mercy makes us afraid to repeat sin.

What effect, if any, this exhibition of the divine character may have on intelligent beings in other worlds than our own, is beyond our ken.

It would seem that the angels are studying God as seen in the atonement; because seen here as nowhere else.

GILDEROY.

The Great Storm.

Again has a portion of our country been visited by a most terrific cyclone. The greatest damage to life and property has been the result. Louisville, Ky., seems to have suffered most. The storm struck the city early at night, and, for a few minutes the storm demon reigned supreme. Residences, hotels, business houses, warehouses—yea, the strongest structures—were as straw in the hands of a giant. They collapsed and crushed in, destroying human lives by hundreds. The scenes that followed the storm baffle all powers of description. The most fertile imagination fails to conceive the awful facts of the case. Offers of help poured in upon the distressed city from all parts of the country as fast as the telegraph lines could send them. It demonstrates the fact that "one touch of sorrow makes the whole world kin."

Other places beside Louisville suffered severely. Hopkinsville and Cloverport, Ky., Gallatin, Tenn., and Metropolis, Ill., were great sufferers. The farming interests in many sections have been greatly damaged, great numbers of cattle and horses having been killed. The railroads have also sustained great losses, the tracks being torn up in many places and many costly bridges having been destroyed. The loss of property by this cyclone has been exceeding great.

Science has yet a very important work to do in the study of the laws which produce and govern storms, and to so publish them that the people may take warning in time to save themselves and property from disaster and ruin.

Sympathy and Help for Oxford Church.

The Sardis District Conference, in session at Senatobia, Miss., has heard with deep sorrow of the burden which has fallen upon the brethren of the Oxford Church caused by the loss by fire of their parsonage and newly-refitted church, both of which said accidents have come upon them within the last few months; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby express to our brethren our profound sympathy for them in these severe afflictions, and our lively admiration for the Christian fortitude which they manifest by their determination to proceed at once to the work of rebuilding and restoring their desolated structures.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that our brethren at Oxford have a right to expect and are entitled to the assistance of good people everywhere, and especially of all Methodists, in repairing this waste, because many of the youth of our State and of other States are there for years in attendance upon studies at the State University, and the destruction of this church-building is, until it shall be restored, a great diminution of the sources of Christian influence and energy which have been exerted upon the student body; and especially should all Methodists see to it that the sons of the people are not long deprived of those advantages which can only be obtained by the having of suitable and attractive houses of worship at that place, in which are taught from the pulpit and in the Sunday-school room those doctrines which are distinctive of us and which we so fully believe.

Resolved, That the demand upon us to aid our brethren at Oxford is the more imperative, because they had but recently, and within a few months before the destructive conflagration, taxed themselves to the amount of six thousand dollars in repairing and refitting their church-building, so that it had become not only the pride of that society and the ornament of that town, but also as well a subject of congratulation to all our people in the State, and at the time of its destruction the repairs were not yet quite completed.

Resolved, To the end that our sympathy may take practical shape, we urge that, at the earliest possible date, every pastoral charge in this district be given an opportunity to come to the help of our brethren, and that each pastor in this district is requested without delay to present these resolutions to his people when they are assembled for worship, and receive from them their voluntary offerings to this most exalted and praiseworthy work, and to supplement these resolutions with such remarks and appeals as may to him seem meet and proper.

This is a true and correct copy from the records of the Sardis District Conference, held at Senatobia, Miss., March 21-23, 1890. R. G. PORTER, Sec.

Sardis district lay delegates to Annual Conference: J. C. Kyle, Rev. W. H. Eckles, P. T. Callicut and G. D. Shands. Alternates: T. J. Hunter and J. L. Boyd. Next District Conference at Como, Miss. R. G. P.

Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference.

It was my privilege to attend the session of the Sardis District Conference, held at Senatobia, March 21-23. Bishop Galloway presided, and Rev. R. G. Porter was secretary. The occasion was one of interest and profit to all present. Brotherly kindness and harmony characterized the business meetings, and the preaching was good to the use of edifying. Reports from the various pastoral charges indicated a healthy and growing condition of the work. It was shown that during the three years past six new churches had been built and seven parsonages bought or built, including a district parsonage at Sardis. Every pastoral charge in the district now has a preacher's home, excepting one.

In the same time the financial increase has been as follows: On preachers' salaries, fifty per cent.; Conference collection and church extension, forty per cent.; foreign missions, thirty-seven and one-half per cent.

The presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Thames, is serving his fourth year on this district. During this term he has magnified his office and proved himself to be a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The circuits and stations in the district are served by a corps of good preachers. Surely "the work of the Lord will prosper in their hands." Rev. J. R. Robertson, who was appointed to Lewisburg circuit, has been compelled, on account of failure in health, to resign his work; but it is being supplied by Rev. W. H. Eckles, an efficient local preacher.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, agent for Millsaps College, attended the District Conference, and by his preaching and affable manners left a good impression.

It is in order just here to mention that the third session of the Woman's Missionary District Conference was held Thursday, March 20. This meeting was one of much interest, being participated in by a goodly number of delegates from the eighteen societies in the district; seven of which are juvenile organizations.

Sister Thames, the district secretary, was president of the Conference. She has rendered valuable service throughout the district in organizing and encouraging this department of church work. It is hoped that her example of enterprise and activity will stimulate others to these good works.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Notes.

The Baptist Year Book, for 1890, gives the following figures according to the Standard. Number of ministers, 21,175; churches, 33,588; baptisms, 144,575; members, 3,070,047; Sunday-schools, 17,690; scholars, 1,211,696; value of church property, $58,162,367; contributions, $10,199,259.

In regard to revision, the Interior has this: "With the Confession judiciously revised we shall not have to be everlastingly explaining and apologizing for statements which are only defensible by intricate and difficult processes of construction." That will certainly be a relief!

If Christian people were so "anxious to do the will of the Lord" as they appear to dispute and wrangle about his plan, what a blessing it would be to the world. The fact is, the man who is earnestly engaged in "working righteousness" has the least time to spend in squabbling over theological quibbles.

We are indebted to Raphael Tuck & Sons, New York, for samples of Easter cards. These are most appropriate in design and most beautiful in execution, and exhibit a most refined taste. They represent all phases of the resurrection idea, and are such as will be acceptable and pleasing to all classes of people.

An exchange gives this for the pew to ponder:

A prepared pulpit fights against infinite odds when it has to deal with an unprepared pew. It is the unprepared pew which accounts for the very small success of the preaching which is done in this city every Sunday by the eighty Christian teachers. Let the pew ponder this fact.

A brother writes:

I send you five dollars in answer to your call for help to send extra copies of the ADVOCATE through the country while fighting the Lottery. The money is sent by one who is not a member of any church, but he is very much in favor of driving the above-named abomination out of our State. I hope to send you more help at an early date.

"We have been content with long-established and respectable religious routine agreeable to our own taste, and quite careless of the fact that the tastes of thousands around us, who need blessings we could help them to, can never find attraction or benefit in our religious routine." That thought will bear looking into; and if we find that it is true in our own case, there ought to be a change.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin has rendered a decision against reading the Bible in the public schools of that State. What a world of history, poetry, philosophy and morality that decision shuts out from the young and growing minds! The Bible has so affected human affairs that very little can now be really understood without studying it in Bible light. That decision puts out the light and darkness prevails.

See how the Lottery is working. A newspaper man wrote us the other day:

Please send me a copy of your paper for six months, provided you are still keeping up your anti-lottery agitation. They sneaked up on me lately and bought my paper; a trade which I sincerely regret making, now that I see clearly. With hearty good wishes for your success in the war, I am,

Yours, ——.

That shows the old tactics: buying out those who can't be bribed.

A correspondent in Georgia writes:

God bless you for the fight you are making against the Louisiana Lottery. That "devil-fish," as Dr. Fitzgerald calls it, has its tentacles fast upon even this little far-away town of less than 500 inhabitants. I wish I was able to pay for twenty copies of your paper to circulate them here. Keep the gun pointed and firing. The shot has already begun to tell. Increase the size of the "pounders," touch them off with the matches of faith and prayer, and the ugly claws of this monster can not long keep their hold before such force as that.

This is from the Evangelist:

A Scotchman, speaking of the quality of the preaching in a certain place where he had been living, said: "Why, it reminds me of the little girl whose mother sent her to a neighbor to borrow a beef-bone to make some broth, and she said to the little 'un, 'Weel, ma lassie, I canna jist do that. Ye see, we made broth with it oursels on Monday, and we lent it to Mrs. Macvicar to flavor some hare soup on Tuesday, and we be using it to-day for oursels: but ye may get a bolling o't on Friday, for Mrs. Tamson has the promise o't for the morning for some nice strengthening soup, for her man's an invalid.'" We fear it would not be necessary to go as far as Scotland for a like experience. The same idea is made to do duty in sermon after sermon, till the quality of the preaching becomes only too much like what we may suppose Mrs. Tamson's "nice strengthening soup" must have been.

A Memorial to the Louisiana Legislature.

To the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana:

The memorial and petition of citizens of the State of Louisiana, with respect, shows—

That the people of this State, in the Article 172 of the Constitution, have declared, in common with the moral sentiment of the world, gambling to be a vice, and have commanded you to enact laws for its suppression; that the Louisiana Lottery Company, a gambling institution, petitioners are informed, will seek an extension of its franchises beyond the time definitely fixed by the people for their suppression (Article 167), by demanding of you to propose for its benefit an amendment to the Constitution of the State.

Your memorialists further show, that this Corporation, the Louisiana Lottery Company, aside from the hardihood and effrontery of its present demand, aside from the fostering of the odious crimes which follow legalized gambling, above and beyond the shame it has brought upon the State, has been and is an unmixed evil in the politics of this State.

Your memorialists can state no facts and propose no arguments in this behalf which your honorable body have not already known and appreciated, and your memorialists, therefore, content themselves with making the petition in behalf of all that is upright and innocent in this State.

They pray that you enforce the constitutional enactments already voted by the people. They pray that you relieve them of the shame of sheltering in their laws an institution which outrages every and all proper moral feeling. They pray you that you spare them the further spread of vice and crime and political demoralization which is wrought by the Louisiana Lottery Company; and to accomplish these ends they pray you to refuse to propose any amendment to the Article 167 of the Constitution.

And, as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray, etc.

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

Rev. Dr. R. H. Rivers, of Louisville, Ky., has been some days in our city visiting relatives. We had the pleasure of listening to him last Sunday at Rayne Memorial Church, a pleasure much appreciated and enjoyed. Dr. Rivers had several of his old Louisiana pupils to hear him, and he was evidently gratified in again being permitted to grasp their hands.

Trinity College, of North Carolina, will be removed to Durham, the citizens of that place having offered $114,361 for its location there!

A note from Bro. Wimberly says that he and Bro. Henry are holding an interesting meeting in Thibodeaux. He calls loudly for a preacher for that place.

Please don't send us any more money for the Mexican Mission. If you have any to send, Dr. John, at Nashville, is the proper person to whom it should go.

A note from Bro. W. W. Hopper says: "I have been holding a meeting in Columbus, Ga., with Pastor W. F. Lloyd; also I am succeeding admirably with the endowment fund for our old preachers."

A private letter from a friend at Oak Ridge, La., brings the distressing intelligence that our pastor at that place, Rev. E. B. Foust, has had a severe attack of blood-poisoning, which necessitated the amputation of his leg. Our brother and his family have our heartfelt sympathy in this calamity.

A sister writes: "Among my earliest recollections, I can remember many good resolutions formed while reading the ADVOCATE."

There is music in the air. A preacher, in our hearing, asked a high church official under what rule he should proceed against members dealing in lottery tickets. Look out!

Bishop Galloway passed through the city last week, "surrounding" the high water to reach a District Conference at Gloster, Miss. He represents the prospects of Millsaps Methodist College as encouraging in every respect. In regard to the location of the college, the Bishop said all the interests of the church in Mississippi will be the guide in that matter. Right!

My engagements for holding revival meetings are as follows: Opelousas, La., April 13; New Iberia, La., April 28. W. W. HOPPER.

A Philadelphia millionaire has been lately investing largely in Louisiana timber land, and, while in New Orleans for that purpose, became so impressed with its advantages as a business centre, that he purchased a controlling interest in the large wall paper house of Heath, Schwartz & Co. (Limited), leaving Mr. Schwartz in New Orleans to represent him.

Neuralgic Persons

And those troubled with nervousness resulting from care or overwork will be relieved by taking Brown's Iron Bitters. Genuine has trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

A FELLOW'S MOTHER.

"A fellow's mother," said Fred the wise
With his rosy cheeks and his merry eyes,
"Knows what to do if a fellow gets hurt
By a thump, or a bruise, or a fall in the dirt.

"A fellow's mother has bags and strings,
Rags and buttons, and lots of things;
No matter how busy she is, she'll stop
To see how well you can spin your top.

"She does not care, not much, I mean,
If a fellow's face is not always clean;
And if your trousers are torn at the knee
She can put in a patch that you never see.

"A fellow's mother is never mad,
But oni. sorry if you are bad.
And I'll tell you this, if you're only true,
She'll always forgive whate'er you do.

"I'm sure of this," said Fred the wise,
With a manly look in his laughing eyes,
"I'll mind my mother, quick, every day,
A fellow's a baby who don't obey."

Easter Eggs.

The question is often asked: "Why do people make presents of eggs at Easter?" And the answer is, generally: "Because at this season eggs are chosen as symbolical of our Lord's resurrection." This, however, is but a vague and unsatisfactory explanation, since it gives no information as to when, or how, or by whom the custom was originated. Moreover, we know that people of other countries and other religions than ours, observed the same custom of offering eggs at their spring festivals; as the Persians, Jews, Egyptians, Hindoos, and the Japanese; while more barbarous nations in Africa and South America presented offerings of eggs to their idols at certain springtime festivals. Hence it appears that the giving of Easter eggs is not exclusively a Christian observance, and that it probably came down to us from some custom of the past ages whose origin is lost in obscurity, but which we can at least trace back as far as the days of our Saxon ancestors.

The Saxons, when they took possession of Britain, worshiped various pagan deities, among whom was "Eoster," whose festival was kept at the full of the moon in the month of April—called by them the Oster month. She represented the revival of spring, the resurrection of nature from her long winter sleep; and her festival was attended with great ceremony and rejoicing. In her honor the people cast off their old winter garments and arrayed themselves in new; and so went in gay procession, with music and dancing, to offer at her shrine the products of the early spring, consisting chiefly of flowers, water-cresses, and eggs.

These eggs were usually goose-eggs; geese being kept by the Saxons and the Britons in flocks of hundreds and thousands, and forming an important article of homestead property; though the Britons never ate the flesh of the bird, considering it impious to kill the creature which supplied them with so nutritious an article of food. As the goddess could not make use of the eggs offered her, they fell to the share of the priests, who, retaining a portion for their own use, distributed the rest among the poor. The people also, in the general rejoicing at the return of spring, would on meeting each other present or exchange an egg, "Eoster the divine hath awakened!" Merry games in honor of the goddess Eoster were also played, in which eggs bore a prominent part; they being regarded as emblematic of the life of nature which had so long slept and was now about to burst forth.

When the Saxons, through the preaching of the early missionaries, embraced the Christian religion, they continued to celebrate their festivals, only converting them from pagan rites to the worship of Christ. Thus the spring festival in honor of Eoster occurring in the same month with the Christian observance of the Lord's resurrection, became merged in the latter, under the name of Easter, from Oster-monat, or month of the easterly wind, which was the Saxon name for April. Some of their religious customs and amusements they were allowed to retain; and thus has come down to us, their decendants, the custom of putting on new garments on Easter Sunday, of decorating our churches with flowers, as they did the shrine of their goddess, and of presenting Easter eggs. In place of the pagan salutation of "Eoster hath awakened!"—was now heard the religious expression: "The Lord hath arisen!" And this phrase is still made use of in Russia and some other northern countries, when on Easter morning friends and acquaintances meet for the first time.

Also, games continued to be played with eggs; such as throwing and catching, running and jumping over without breaking them. One favorite amusement, as we learn from an old Saxon chronicle, appears to have been a sort of tilt or tournament, in which boys and youths engaged. Twelve short poles, on each of which was placed an egg, were set at intervals in a circle, around which youths armed with blunt lances ran at full speed, taking aim at each egg as they passed, and doubtless he who broke the greatest number was declared victor.

This was in the pagan times; but six centuries later we find accounts of London Easter games, one of which must have been a relic of this tournament. In the bed of the river Thames, near the shore, a number of short poles would be fixed, each bearing upon its top a ball; and the "knight" standing in the stern of a small boat, would take aim at the balls with a blunt spear, while four boatman rowed him past as swiftly as possible. The chances were that, if he missed the ball, he would strike the post instead, and so be knocked overboard, amid shouts of laughter from the spectators. As late as the time of Elizabeth similar "jousts" were held by the London apprentices on Easter day, on both land and water; a ball or ring being substituted for the eggs used in former times when they were more plentiful than later days. So cheap and abundant were they that it used to be a saying in England: "Who would not take money for eggs?"—that is, who would hesitate to exchange what is worthless for something of real value? Also, "You will get eggs for your money," was a common warning to a person about to make a bad bargain.

It was the custom of the pagan priests to bless the offerings of eggs brought to Eoster, before distributing them to the people; and, probably this was one of the rites continued to be observed on the Christian Easter festival—for we find the following in the church "Ritual" under Pope Paul V.:

"Bless, Lord, we beseech thee, this thy creation of eggs, that it may become a wholesome sustenance to thy faithful servants, eating in thankfulness to thee, on account of the resurrection of our Lord."—Wide Awake.

An Old Ditty Explained.

You all know the old "Sing a Song of Sixpence." Have you ever read what it meant?

The four-and twenty blackbirds represent twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world; the top crust is the sky that over-arches it. The opening of the pie is day-dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is "a dainty dish to set before the king."

The king, who is represented as sitting in his parlor counting his money, is the sun; while the gold pieces that slip through his fingers are golden sunshine. The queen, who sits in the dark kitchen, is the moon, and the honey with which she regales herself is the moonlight.

The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before the king—the sun—has risen, the day-dawn, and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird which so tragically ends the song by "nipping off her nose" is the hour of sunset. So we have the whole day—in a pie.—Selected.

MR. WESLEY'S MEDITATION.—I have thought: "I am a creature of a day, passing through life as an arrow through the air. I am a spirit come from God, and returning to God; just hovering over the great gulf; till a few moments hence, I am no more seen! I drop into an unchangeable eternity! I want to know one thing, the way to heaven; how to land safe on that happy shore. God himself has condescended to teach the way; for this very end he came from heaven. He hath written it down in a book. O, give me that book! At any price give me the book of God! I have it; here is knowledge enough for me. Let me be homo unius libri (a man of one book)." Here, then, I am, far from the busy ways of men. I sit down alone; only God is here. In his presence, I open, I read his book; for this end, to find the way to heaven. Is there a doubt concerning the meaning of what I read? Does anything appear dark and intricate? I lift up my heart to the Father of lights. "Lord, is it not thy word—if any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God? Thou givest liberally, and upbraidest not. Thou hast said, if any be willing to do thy will, he shall know. I am willing to do; let me know thy will." I then search after and consider parallel passages of Scripture, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. I meditate thereon with all the attention and earnestness of which my mind is capable. If any doubt still remain, I consult those who are experienced in the things of God, and then the writings whereby they, being dead, yet speak, and what I thus learn, that I teach."

THOROUGHGOING OBEDIENCE.—Thoroughgoing obedience, irrespective of consequences, is the secret of all blessedness.

"Great peace have they which love thy law," the peace of conscience; the peace of ceasing from that which is our worst enemy, self-will; the peace of self-surrender; the peace of feeling "'Tis his to command; 'tis mine to obey;" the peace of casting the whole settling of the campaign on the King's shoulders, and of finding our duty restricted to tramping along with cheery heart on the path that he has appointed. That is worth having. Oh! if we could cease from self and lay our wills down before him, then we should be quiet. The tranquil heart is the heart which has the law of Christ within it, and the true delight of life belongs to those who truly say, "I delight to do thy will." So yielding, so obeying, so submitting, so surrendering one's self, life becomes quiet, and strong and sweet. And, if I might so turn the story that we have been considering, the faithful soldiers who have been true to the King when his throne was contested, will march with laureled heads in his triumphant train when he goes back after his final and complete victory, and reign with him in the true City of Peace, where his will shall be perfectly done by loving hearts, and all his servants shall be kings.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

The strongest proof that we love Christ the most is that we are glad to give him the best we have. The precious perfume lavished ungrudgingly on Jesus' feet was worth its weight in gold. Nothing is too good for love to bestow. Let everybody and everything else stand aside for Christ. "When I get any money," said Erasmus, "I buy books; if any is left I buy clothes." There spoke the genuine hungerer for knowledge. So has Christ the first claim on those who love him best. The freshest hours are for prayer, not business; the purse is opened first for charity, and then for the furniture, the equipage or the new carpet; the brightest boy is educated for the ministry, and not for fame and fortune-hunting. Christ first is the motto with the holiest and the happiest of his servants. Do you wish to know whether you will have a place close to the Master up at yonder marriage-supper of the Lamb? Then look and see if his name is stamped clearly and strongly on hand and tongue, purse and time, brain and beating heart!—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Sleep.

In discussing sleep and sleeplessness, the Lancet says:

"What the just and right allowance of sleep may be for the individual does not seem to depend altogether upon the amount of mental or physical work done, and is, to a considerable extent, determined by inheritance and idiosyncrasy. The idler and the pleasure lover often seem to sleep longer and more easily than the laborious brain-worker, and cases may be traced where a tendency to light or heavy sleep has run strongly in families, irrespectively of the occupations or of the physical and intellectual activities of individuals. The only safe guide in determining such a question is experience. If good health and full intellectual efficiency can be preserved by six hours' sleep, there seems no motive for making efforts, probably destined to failure, to secure eight hours. But care should be exercised that short sleep has not been the result merely of a long-continued bad habit, and that every opportunity is afforded to the organism to procure that amount of sleep that seems normal for it. Hence, moderately early hours, quiet, freedom from sources of disturbances are necessary, and for a prolonged period, before we can feel sure that the amount of sleep that seems natural to us is really so. Eight hours has been fixed by general consent as the happy mean, and we have no objection to make to it, although it is, perhaps, a liberal allowance for adults in vigorous health. The young and the ailing may, with advantage, take more, and, indeed, can hardly have too much of so excellent a tonic and restorative as sleep."

DISTANCES ESTIMATED BY SOUND.—Captain Thouveuin, of the French army, has devised an instrument which he calls the "phonotelemeter," and which is intended to be used in estimating distances from the time taken by sound to travel. The instrument consists essentially in a stop-watch, fitted with a second dial at the back, which dial is marked in kilometres and seconds. In addition, there is a measuring wheel at the rim of the watch, connected with a separate hand or index. The front dial contains distances marked on two concentric circles from 1 to 20 kilometres, and 1 to 15 kilometers, which correspond to the two ordnance maps of France, drawn to scales of one in 100,000, and one in 80 000, respectively. To ascertain the distance from the map it is only necessary to set the index to zero and run the measuring wheel along the route on the map between the two points the distance of which is required. The distance can then be read off on the front dial. For purposes of orientation a small compass is put into the winding knob of the watch. To use the watch for ascertaining the distance by sound, the second hand is started at the moment when the flash of a gun is seen, and is stopped when the sound reaches the observer. He can then read off the distance in kilometers, and fractions of a kilometer, on the back dial of the watch.—Christian Weekly.

FIRE EXTINGUISHER.—An intelligent physician said to me a few days ago, "I think I can give you a good item," and I replied that I was always on the lookout for useful information. He then said that he had studied the subject very carefully, and was convinced that it would be well for every house to keep its own fire extinguisher, and it could be easily done. It would certainly be invaluable to persons living in the country, and far removed even from neighbors. The doctor then told me that he would give me the exact recipe of the solution now used in the fire extinguishers now being offered for sale: Take twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of sal ammoniac (muriate of ammonia, to be had of any druggist), and dissolve in seven gallons of water. When dissolved it can be bottled and kept in each room in the house, to be used in an emergency. In case of a fire occurring, one or two bottles should be immediately thrown with force into the burning place so as to break them, and the fire will certainly be extinguished. This is an exceedingly simple process, and certainly worth a trial. We give it, hoping it may prove successful to any who may take the trouble to try it.—Atlanta Constitution.

Obituaries.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

LOFTIN—LEILA LOFTIN, daughter of Bro. Wm. and sister Nancy Loftin, of Smith county, Miss., was born August, 1887, and was shot to death by a negro-man, Sunday morning, February 23, 1890.

The people of Smith county were never so shocked and horrified by any deed recorded in its history. The particulars gathered from this sad occurrence are about as follows: Leila had a quiet place near the garden where she went to study her lessons, and on last Sunday morning, about nine o'clock, after finishing her house work, she went as usual with books and slate to study. In a very few minutes a pistol was heard firing in rapid succession, which greatly alarmed the family, and the boys, running down to where Leila was, found her gasping for her last breath; but her lips were forever closed to this world. She was shot through the body with two balls, one through the head and one through the arm. In a short time the whole community was in confusion, men were riding in all directions where it was thought the negro might have gone; but all to no purpose, as he made his way to the railroad, in a swamp, where he flagged a train, boarded it, and thus, perhaps, thought he was safe. The conductor, having a description of him, arrested him and carried him to Jackson, Miss., where he is now in prison.

There is but one star to shine in this dark and gloomy hour—that is, that Leila was, though young, a good Christian girl and member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. May God, who alone can weigh and measure human sorrow, sustain, strengthen and comfort, be constantly with the broken-hearted and sad father, mother, brothers, and sisters and friends, and may they realize that although Leila can not come back to them, by the grace of God they can go to her, where there will be no more parting, no more sad farewells! is the prayer of their pastor.

M. J. MILLER.

[There is evidently an error in the date of birth above given; but we print it as written.—EDITOR.]

GALE—It pleased our all-wise Father, on November 24, last, to take from our society and community our beloved sister, LIZZIE GALE. While we can truly say, "Thy will be done," we can not help wondering at the mysterious providence, that this member, seemingly destined to much usefulness, was thus so suddenly taken from us.

Resolved, That our society has lost one of its best and most devoted members, and, although her stay among us was brief, it was not void of usefulness, as she was always at her post, eager to do all in her power for the Master's cause.

Resolved, That we yield submissively to the will of him who doeth all things well, and, though we mourn, we mourn not as those without hope, for we are confident she has passed to a higher sphere of life, as her last words were, "All is well."

Resolved, That we, the remaining members of Adams Missionary Society, strive to emulate Sister Gale's Christian example, and, by the grace of God, meet her at the great white throne.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the bereaved husband, children and relatives in their distress, and our prayer to God is for them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and also a copy be sent to the bereaved family. GUSSIE KENNA, for Com.

LEIGHTON—Bro. CHARLES W. LEIGHTON died at his home in Jefferson county, Miss., December 18, 1889, aged forty-eight years. He had been home only a few months from the Northwest, when his health began to fail, which finally terminated in a case of pneumonia, causing his death. Bro. Leighton, while but a youth, joined the Methodist Church and remained a faithful member until death.

No more will the troubled waves of life roll across his peaceful breast. He is at rest with Jesus. While in the vigor of manhood, and with life's sun at its meridian, the angel of death laid his finger upon him, and his mantle fell from him to rest on other shoulders. Oh, precious promise, glorious thought, that "yet a little while" life's mysteries will be solved, and broken families united to part no more forever! Glory be to our heavenly Father for a Christian religion which enables Bro. Leighton's sorrowing loved ones to say, "Though our hearts cry out for the missing one, yet we humbly say 'Thy will be done!'"

CHAS. W. CRISLER, P. C.

KENDRICK—Sister MARY P. KENDRICK (nee Warner) was born in Washington parish, La., January 12, 1806, and died in Franklin parish, November 6, 1889, in the eighty-fourth year of her age, leaving her husband and two surviving children and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn their loss. She joined the Methodist Church in 1825, in which she ever lived a true and faithful Christian until the summons came, which found her ready and waiting the bidding of her Master, to lay down the cross in exchange for the crown. In 1828 she was married to Mr. Benjamin Kendrick, with whom she lived in holy wedlock for more than sixty years, whom she leaves for a short while "weeping on the shore," expecting in a few more days to rejoin her in the blissful home of the happy and the good.

It was more than thirty years ago when I became acquainted with her, and have known her continuously ever since—the same true and faithful servant of the Lord, whose chief delight was to do and suffer God's will. Many an itinerant minister, together with myself, who may read this notice, will doubtless stop here and shed a tear of sympathy and condolence with the bereaved over the happy dead, while they remember the many kindnesses they received from her hand.

For thirty years she was an invalid, and I never heard a murmur, in the way of complaint, at the mysterious providences of God, though dark they may have been. In her life I have thought "patience had its perfect work." The subject of many afflictions; yet with unflinching faith in God, with childlike sympathy, she was ready to submit to his rulings, "who is too wise to err." As a wife, she was kind and indulgent, almost to a fault; and as a mother, she was tender and loving, aiming at the best results. In the church she will be remembered as one of the best expounds of the doctrine of holiness of heart, and in the community as a specimen of the Master's best work.

Such a life as this must end triumphantly. Thus she stepped out upon the chariot of salvation, and was received up into glory amid the shouts of the redeemed and the songs of the seraphs. T. H. MCCLENDON.

JEFFRIES—LUCIE ANN JEFFRIES, daughter of John and Nancy Glover, was born near Bolton, Hinds county, Miss., September 5, 1858, and died in Richland parish, La., November 15, 1889. She was married to Mr. R. F. Jeffries, December 7, 1876. She joined the Baptist Church in the year 1873, and spent the remainder of her life in the service of Christ.

The testimony of her bereaved husband is, that "she tried to live a Christian, and to serve her Lord. She loved her Savior, and taught her children to love and serve him. She was a loving wife, a devoted mother."

The terrible pain of fire was the suffering she endured the last hours of life, for severe burning was the cause of her death. Though so painfully and so suddenly called to die—praise the good Lord!—she was not unprepared. She said the Lord had forgiven her sins, and that she was going home. To her husband and friends, she said, "Meet me in heaven!"

May you that read and I that write this notice of this loving and lovely character, meet her, too, and meet each other, in that bright world where there is no more death.

W. F. ALEXANDER.

CHAMBERS—Died, on February 16, 1890, the aged mother and sister in Israel, after a long struggle of affliction. She was born December 20, 1815. Sister CHAMBERS lived to a ripe old age, all the while retaining her mental vigor. She was an affectionate wife and an indulgent mother, a good Christian neighbor, and certainly possessed those attributes which characterized her as a true, noble Christian woman.

The burial rites were solemnized at the old home grave-yard by the writer, in the presence of some of her children and a host of friends, after which her mortal remains were consigned to rest. The burden of the wayworn traveler has been laid aside for a crown of life. The condolence of the entire community is extended to the bereaved.

J. H. EVANS, P. C.

HARDY—Little PEYTON HIGH HARDY, youngest son of T. D. and M. E. Hardy, was born December 4, and died February 24, after a painful illness of two weeks and two days. God takes our treasures and lays them up in heaven. The dear precious one is safe, waiting to welcome father, mother, brothers and sister.

Cheer up, bereaved parents, and be ready to meet your little angel, High, when God sends his summons for you. May God pour the oil of his salvation upon them! is the prayer of one who deeply sympathizes with the bereaved ones, but rejoices that their sorrow is not without hope.

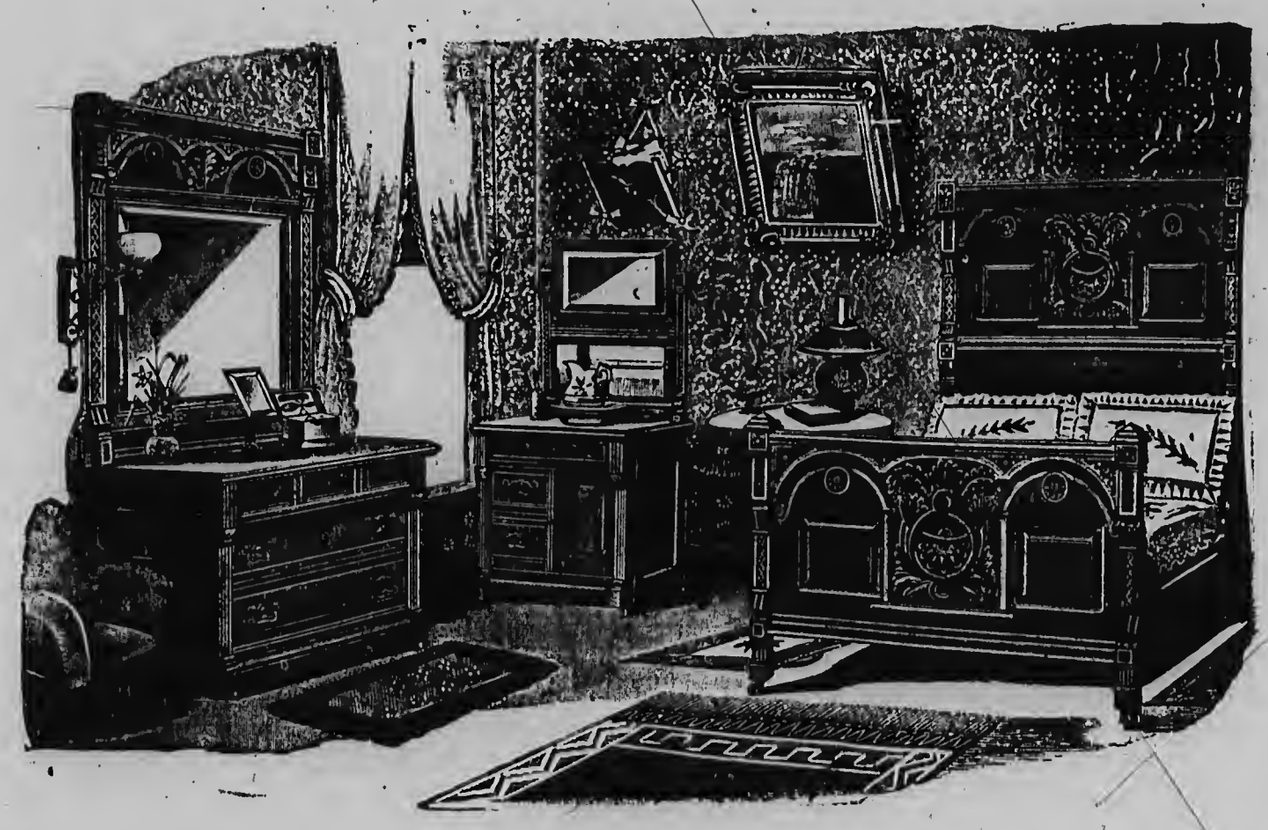
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of and thirst for pleasure. The ruling passion of the human family. In grasping after riches the brain is taxed, the nervous system strained. In the pursuit of pleasure the body is tortured by fashion's despotic away; the hours designed for repose are devoted to exhausting revelry; the stomach is ruthlessly imposed upon; pure water, the natural drink for all created beings, is ignored, and liquid fire is substituted until, ere we are aware of it, disease has fixed its Iron grasp upon us. Then we look for the "remedy." To the victim of these follies, we commend Dr. Tutt's Liver pills. They stimulate the liver, strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite and build up the debilitated body.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A tornado struck Louisville, Ky., on March 27, from the southwest, leaving death and destruction everywhere. Bowling Green and Marion, Ky., and other places, suffered severely, and there are fears of heavy loss of life at many places. Metropolis, Ill., is also a heavy sufferer in life and property by the storm. Fayetteville and Rugan, Tenn., have been reduced to ruins by the tornado.

The bill admitting Wyoming as a State passed the House on March 27.

Andrew Hero, Jr., has been appointed assistant United States treasurer at New Orleans.

Arkansas is trying to secure from the War Department and the Mississippi River Commission the sum of $100,000 for work in the flooded district.

The faculty of Amherst College has suspended the entire freshman class, for refusing to attend any college exercises whatsoever until three of their number under discipline for trouble were reinstated.

The Maryland Senate has accepted the House amendments to the Australian ballot bill, and passed it. The act only now awaits the governor's signature to become a law.

Secretary Tracy has no objection to Algiers as a site of the Gulf Navy Yard, but is opposed to a naval yard in the Gulf waters. He is in favor of a naval station and dock.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Chicago branch, on March 28, it was stated that the plans for the erection of the Woman's Temperance temple had so far progressed that the corner-stone of the building would probably be laid this spring. The edifice, which will be 190 feet by 96 feet, will be twelve stories high and cost over $1,000,000.

Miss Clara Barton and the Red Cross staff are now in Louisville, and have decided to continue their work to the poorer sections of the State. Terrible havoc has been wrought by the cyclone in country towns and districts. The death list in Louisville shows a total of less than 100 lives lost. Ample funds are at the command of the Relief Committee, and outside help has been declined.

The back water from breaks is the present and ever-increasing menace of the people. Arkansas City, Meyersville, Skipwith and many other points are inundated.

A high license bill has passed the Maryland House of Delegates. The license fee was fixed at $250.

The protection levee at Greenville, Miss., gave way on March 31, and the town is deluged. The large embankment known as the Austin levee, in Tunica county, also broke, and the crevasse on March 31 was about 500 feet wide.

Senator Gibson called upon the Secretary of War and the chief of engineers and had a talk with them concerning the situation in the Mississippi Valley. He presented to the Secretary a communication setting forth the necessity of protecting the government works along the river, Morganza and other levees, which cost millions and might be saved perhaps by the expenditure of a few thousands.

Secretary Proctor has authorized an additional expenditure of $27,500 for the protection of the levees of the Mississippi river in the third district.

FOREIGN.

The University and College of Husbandry at Moscow have been closed by the Russian government on account of recent disorders among the students. Six thousand students attending the institutions have been arrested.

Father O'Dwyer, who has been in prison for five months for offenses under the crimes act, was released last week from Tullamore jail (Ireland.) Great demonstration was made in his honor. Several thousand people in cars and on foot accompanied by numerous bands of music escorted the priest to his home. The procession was a mile long.

Dispatches from the west coast of Africa state that fighting has occurred at Kotonou, in Dahomey, on the coast of the Bight of Benin, between the French forces and the native allies. Three men were killed and twelve wounded.

Chancellor Von Caprivi has declined the services of detectives for his protection. Bismarck always had a bodyguard of detectives following him wherever he went.

Prince Bismarck left Berlin for Friedrichsruhe, his country seat, on March 29. He visited the imperial mausoleum at Charlottenburg, in which the remains of the Emperor William I. are interred, and placed a wreath upon the coffin of his old master. Prior to his departure from Berlin to-day he paid farewell visits to the royal princesses. Later in the day thousands of persons gathered along the route to the railway station to witness his departure. Many tears were shed as he bid farewell to the multitude at the station. He received an ovation at Friedrichsruhe.

The final sitting of the Berlin Labor Conference was held on March 29.

On Tuesday, March 25, at 5:30 P. M., when 216 miles west of Fastnet, the starboard engine of the City of Paris broke down from an unknown cause. The cylinder went to pieces, injuring the bulkhead, breaking the injection and water pipe connections and allowing a considerable quantity of water to run into both engine-rooms and adjacent sections. The second engineer, at the peril of his life, enveloped in hissing steam, managed to shut of the steam, thus saving the machinery from total demolition. No one on board was injured.

Messrs. A. T. Shallenberger & Co., Rochester, Pa.

Gents.—The bottle of Shallenberger's Pills sent me in February last I gave to W. G. Anderson, of this place, a long standing case of chills and fever. He had tried everything known without any permanent good. In less than ten days after taking your Antidote he was sound and well, and has gone through the entire season without any return. It seems to have effectually driven the Malarious poison from his system. Yours truly,

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

F. D. VANVALKENBURGH.

FOR A DISORDERED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS.

The Standard Oil Company has purchased the property of its strongest competitor in the Ohio field—the Lima Oil Company—for $1,000,000.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—R. S. Drake, M. D., Beliot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

For catalogue and particulars address

THE TIDE IS IN.

BY SARAH K. BOLTON.

The boats lay stranded on the beach,
Tangled with seaweed, dank and green;
A desolate and dreary scene,
Far as the eye could reach;
The tide was out.

How changed the view when day was done;
The boats rode gayly on the deep,
Their white sails nodding as in sleep,
Kissed by the setting sun;
The tide was in.

Thus many a life, in want or woe,
Lies stranded on a barren shore;
But God is God for evermore;
Take courage, for we know
The tide comes in.

And lifted from the rocks and shoals,
We sail upon a sunlit sea;
Night opens on eternity—
Sweet rest for weary souls—
The tide is in.

—Journal of Education.

In Memoriam.

REV. NEHEMIAH A. CRAVENS.

January 28, 1807, in Ohio county, Ky., in an humble home, this man of God first saw the natural light. In 1821, in Christian county, Ky., he saw the light of the Son of God shine in his heart. At the same time and place he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in the same place, in 1825, he was licensed to preach the gospel. At Russellville, Ky., the same year, he was admitted on trial by the Kentucky Annual Conference. In 1827 he was ordained deacon; in 1829 he was ordained elder; in 1826 and 1827 he served as junior preacher on Breckinridge and Jefferson circuit; in 1827 there were three preachers on the same circuit he was on; in 1828, Little Sandy circuit, as senior preacher; in 1829 Fleming circuit, as senior preacher; in 1830, Green River circuit, as senior preacher; in 1831, Henderson circuit; in 1832 he dropped out of the regular work, studied medicine, and became a successful physician. But the fruit of his labors as a preacher were too numerous and plain for him to remain in secular life. The field was white unto the harvest, and he, in 1847, again offered himself to the Annual Conference, and went fully into his work. He united this time with the Alabama Conference, and in 1847 was sent to Wetumpka; 1848, Woodville; 1849 he transferred to Texas, and served two years on the Rio Grande when that was a primitive country. None but those who were on the ground can tell what men have to endure there to preach the gospel in that country. But no man in the church then was better qualified to stand in front of the enemy than this man of God. When the Lord said, "Go," he conferred not with flesh and blood; but, knowing that the Lord was able to keep him in all danger, he went, trusting him with all he had. He was removed from there to Galveston, where he remained two years. There he had another opportunity of demonstrating his faith in the Master. During his pastorate there the city was visited by an epidemic of yellow fever that swept many people away. Bro. Cravens was at his post day and night administering to the wants of his people, physically as well as spiritually. No night was too dark, or alley too narrow, for him to go where he knew he could relieve suffering humanity. At the close of his pastorate in Galveston, he was transferred to the Louisiana Conference, and in 1855 and 1856 and 1857 he was presiding elder of Lake Providence district; 1858 he was pastor in charge of Lafourche and Bayou Black; 1859 and 1860, Alexandria station; 1861, Baton Rouge; from 1862 to 1865 there were no Minutes of this Conference published. In 1866, 1867 and 1868, he was stationed at Homer; 1869 and 1870, Minden; 1871, Vernon; 1872 and 1873, Homer. At the Conference in 1873 he was transferred to the Texas Conference, and in 1874 stationed at Shearn Church, Houston; 1875, Bryan station; 1876 and 1877, he was presiding elder of Galveston district, which was his last charge. He was then placed on the superannuated list, and remained there until at the home of Judge N. A. Cravens, his son, in Willis, Texas, March 8, 1890, the Master called, and he was as ready to die as he ever was to work.

It will be seen that Bro. Cravens' life extended over great and eventful times in Methodism. His chief power was in the pulpit; and yet he was no one-sided man. He could combine pulpit and pastoral work, and his power was felt in both places. But in camp and protracted meetings no man was more efficient than he was, even in his own charge. In one year of his ministry he reported as many as eight hundred conversions and accessions to his charge. What a greeting he must have met when he landed on the other shore! Converts from Kentucky, Ohio, Alabama, Texas, Louisiana; from among Americans, French, Mexicans, and Indians—all to greet him who led them to the Lamb of God. Such a life and death, and such an entrance as he had, are worth the toiling and suffering he so willingly gave for the Master's cause. His last visit to our Conference was at Brenham, in 1886. We will not forget soon his reply when the Bishop asked him if he had anything to say to his brethren. In a few words he related his experience and his prospects for a better world. His was an anxious spirit to get home. There were so many ties over there, and such perfect bliss awaiting him. He felt almost at times a little impatient for the Master to say, "Come up higher." Praise the Lord for such examples as our fathers gave us! It is worth more than all endowments of gold, silver, or bonds.

The circumstances sixty-five years ago and now are quite different. To have heard Bro. Cravens in his prime, one would have thought he could have started in some of our best stations; yet we find him for two years as junior preacher on large circuits. The salary we can imagine how much it was in those days; yet he, with all this in view, went forth to battle. The training he received on those circuits was never in this way in any position he was ever called upon to fill after that. The same grace that kept him in his great labor sustained him in his old age. The hardest fight some men make in their ministerial life is for them to say, "I here lay my armor down." This thought with this man of God was done like all other duties of his life—with a willing mind, expressing a submission to the Master who had so faithfully sustained him all through life. He had suffering grace as well as laboring grace.

The wife has lost a true, faithful companion; the children a loving, tender father; the church a true soldier of the cross. But who can tell the riches he has bestowed upon this world when men testify as an old gray-headed brother did but a few days ago, when he said, "My father, away back in Alabama, was converted under Bro. Cravens' ministry?" It is out of the power of our arithmetic to count up the labors of such men as these fathers in Israel.

Although he had only been in Willis but a few days, the church there thought it a great privilege to have one who had served the church so long to lay off the armor in her midst.

A large audience attended the funeral, and he sleeps in the cemetery in Willis, Montgomery county, Texas.

MARLIN, TEXAS, Mar. 27, 1890.

Remember only two things: One, that to ask mainly for earthly blessings is a dreadful dwarfing and vulgarization of the grandeur of prayer, as though you asked for a handful of grass when you might ask for a handful of emeralds; the other, that you must always ask for earthly desires with absolute submission of your own will to God's. —Farrar.

Letter from Japan.

The last American mail brings the announcement in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE that J. F. Towson is the missionary sent out by the second thousand dollars raised by the readers of that paper. I am the last addition to our mission force in Japan, and so suppose I am the one referred to, although my initials are W. E., instead of J. F.

As the readers of the ADVOCATE and its editor have an interest in the one sent out, since they furnished to the Board of Missions, in this instance, the sinews of war, a few words, personal, will not be out of place. I am a native of Missouri, but a member of the Pacific Conference, in my fourth year. There were five in our party from California—Mrs. Towson, her mother, our little missionary girl, five weeks old the day we sailed, and Miss Mary F. Bice. The latter, earnest and consecrated, was a member of my last charge at Healdsburg, Cal. She is one of three ladies regularly appointed to the Japan Mission, and will prove herself to be a very efficient worker. She is already hard at work at Hiroshima, where we have a girls' school presided over by Miss Gaine.

I have some very pleasant recollections of a three years' residence in New Orleans, when, as an orphan boy, I lived with my uncle, Mr. John L. Dunlea, at that time a steward in Carondelet Street Church. Rev. W. V. Tudor, D. D., was pastor then, Bro. Walmsley superintendent of the Sunday-school, and that old saint of blessed memory, "Father Sherry," was my teacher. I have some bright memories also of a session of the Louisiana Conference, which was held at New Orleans, and of the two preachers that were at our home, one of whom is now the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. At that time he was plain "Bro. Carter;" but he or his theology has been doctored since, and now he is no longer "Bro.," but "Dr. Carter." I wonder if he remembers the twelve-year-old boy who was then living at 41 Prytania street! I suppose not; but I can assure him that the boy has never forgotten him. So, after all, though I am from our most western Conference, still, by virtue of a former residence in New Orleans, I am also one of you. I want to thank you, Mr. Editor, and all of your generous readers for the substantial interest which you have shown in the Japan Mission, and especially so since it enabled the Board of Missions to put me in the field. I count it a rare blessing that God has permitted me to join our brethren who are laboring for the redemption of Japan. I do not esteem it a hardship to be in a foreign field, but a blessed privilege—one which an angel might well covet. Home and friends and native land, of course, are very dear to us all; but Christ and souls and heaven are dearer still. My greatest desire is that I may be used of God in leading some of the sons and daughters of this benighted land to the feet of the Master. To this end, let me ask that each one who contributed toward the second one thousand dollars will pray that the one who was sent out by it may be used of God for much good. While money is very essential for missionary work, the prayers of the church are needed just as much, or more.

Let me exhort you, Mr. Editor, and your readers, that you go on in your good work for Japan. You have done well; but do not rest from your labors. Keep on pushing the battle at home while we are pressing it here! As the immortal William Cary put it: "You hold the rope while I go down into the pit." The needs of this field are very great: the people are crying out for the gospel. A dozen men could be placed to-day, if they were on the field. Only an hour ago Dr. W. R. Lambuth told me of a pressing call for a man, that had come to him from a city of eighty thousand; but it can not be answered, as there is no one to send. Last week, while in Oita, a city of twelve thousand, located in the midst of a thickly settled country, the nearest missionary to which is at a point one hundred miles away, a young man said to me: "I am so glad that you have come to Japan to give my people the gospel." My heart was touched by this simple, but earnest welcome, and I felt it when I responded, "I am glad that I have come."

A great revolution is in progress in this empire, and what the church does for it must be done quickly. Japan has been aroused from its sleep of centuries, and is rapidly adopting western civilization in all of its forms. The church of God must see to it that while it is accepting that civilization which is the result of Christianity, it should also have the opportunity of accepting him who gave it to us. The time for a great work in Japan is ripe, and the call which comes to the church of to-day is as colossal as potential facts can well make it. May the church be true to its Master, fulfilling his command and measuring up to its duty! And may the ADVOCATE and its readers continue in their efforts for Japan! God bless the editor and all his constituency!

W. E. TOWSON.

P. S.—At present we are with those good people, Dr. J. W. Lambuth and wife. We will soon move into our own house. No better people ever lived than Dr. Lambuth and his good lady. What a rich legacy the church has in their labors! Their praise is in all the churches. It is a rare privilege to be with them. May God spare them for many years yet to labor in Japan for the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom!

KOBE, JAPAN, Feb. 21, 1890.

Letter from Mr. Moody.

MR. EDITOR: Many letters come to me from all parts of the country asking information in regard to the Bible Institute for Home and Foreign Missions in Chicago. Will you kindly accord me the use of your paper to answer some of these queries?

Some of my friends quite misunderstand the object of the institute. It is not intended to make it "a short cut" for young men into the ministry. Doubtless, some who show exceptional fitness for ministerial work may be called by their own churches into the regular ministry; but the object of the institution is to fit laymen for Christian work, as Sabbath-school superintendents, assistants to pastors, and workers in city mission fields. We feel the need to-day is for trained laymen to help the pastors in Sunday-school, mission and visitation work. There are men and women all over the country who, with such training as the institute will give, will become efficient workers in these varied fields. There are men called of God into Christian work too late in life to take a regular college and seminary course, who, with the aid of such an opportunity as the institute offers, would be qualified for great usefulness. There are also business and professional men who desire a better acquaintance with the Bible and methods of Christian work to aid them in their church and missionary work. The object of the institute is to meet the needs of all these classes.

In the course of study the English Bible is the principal text-book, and it has been divided into five classes:

1. The inspiration and structure of the Bible, and methods of Bible study.
2. Study of Bible doctrines.
3. Study of the Bible by sections and books.
4. Instruction in regard to Bible readings, addresses, etc.
5. The study of the Bible in its application to various classes of men, and how to use it in the inquiry-room, the home, and the workshop.

The study of music is also a special feature of the institution, and will be under the direction of Prof. McGranahan and others. Various methods of work will be studied under the direction of those who have had successful experience in these lines. A considerable portion of each week is devoted to actual work in homes, cottage and inquiry meetings, and missions.

The regular corps of instructors consists of R. A. Torrey, Mrs. S. B. Capron, Miss Gertrude Hurlburt, and others. A large portion of the instruction will, however, be given by A. T. Pierson, D. D., Philadelphia; H. Grattan Guinness, D. D., London; A. J. Gordon, D. D., Boston; Prof. W. G. Morehead, Zenia; Prof. A. F. Weldmer, D. D., Rock Island; W. G. Case, Albany, and others.

Prof. Morehead will be in charge for the coming three months, and will be succeeded by Maj. D. W. Whittle, the evangelist. A building capable of accommodating one hundred has just been opened. It is centrally located, and in it are all the necessary rooms for the institute.

Persons desiring to enter the institute must be good Christians, possessed of good common sense, and willing to work. There are no educational tests. Applicants should state place and date of birth, educational advantages, business experience, condition of health, and experience in Christian work. It is open to men and women of not less than twenty years of age. There are evening as well as day classes. Room and board cost about $1 per week, and there is no charge for instruction.

There is constant call for such workers as the institution expects to provide, and the demand is so great that men are hurrying into the work without adequate preparation, to the detriment of their whole future life and work. Truly yours,

D. L. MOODY.

NEW YORK, Mar. 26, 1890.

Woodville District Conference.

The Woodville District Conference met at Gloster, March 27. Our presiding elder opened the Conference with religious services. Attendance upon the part of the members was good. Only three preachers in charge were absent. Quite a number of local preachers and a number of laymen were present. The business of the Conference went forward smoothly and with dispatch. Our elder, Bro. McDonald, makes a good presiding officer. Our business began and proceeded in the usual order. In examining the spiritual condition of the church, a good deal of sadness in thought was awakened. In some places there was immorality among the members. There were cases of those that are at ease in Zion. Others were found to be sluggish in the performance of duty. And the brethren agreed that the state of the church in these charges was not good. In other charges there was found life, power, and increase. The presiding elder reported that the state of the district, as a whole, was good, and there is a tendency to a better state. Almost everywhere the church had its pillars, who were strong to support the church, and faithful in labors for the salvation of men. Our Sunday-schools were favorably reported of almost everywhere. Church-houses were in moderately good condition, and new ones were being erected. There are twelve parsonages on the district; six charges being without parsonages. The finances of the church are in tolerably good condition. The preachers are better supported than at any former time, and there is a steady growth in the amount contributed to all departments of church work.

Bishop Galloway came on Friday, and thenceforward conducted the business of the Conference.

Bros. Mitchel, representing the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE; Watkins, representing Millsaps College; Van Valkenburgh, with his books, and McLaurin, Bible agent, were welcomed to the Conference, and represented the interests of these departments.

Contributions to Centenary College endowment, the claims of which were presented by the president, Dr. Hunnicutt, and liberal contributions to the Bible cause, and one other good collection, marked the liberality of the people.

Religious services were conducted by the following brethren: Galce, Featherstun, Woodward, Cecil, Hunnicutt, Watkins, McLaurin. All good; some of it eminently good.

The love-feast on Sunday morning was a feast of fat things. Bishop Galloway preached on Sunday morning the best sermon I have ever heard from him. I need hardly add, therefore, that it made a profound impression.

The reports of the committees on temperance, or intemperance, and the Louisiana Lottery were ordered to be printed and circulated. The utterances contained in them give no uncertain sound.

Resolutions were passed in reference to a strict construction and a closer following of the Discipline as to the reception of members, the purity and holiness of the church, and the better religious home training of the children. Also in reference to Sunday-school collections, agreeing to take four collections annually in the Sunday-schools, viz: one each for pastor, Conference claimants, missions, and church extension, for the purpose of identifying the children with the church, and training them in church work.

We recommended the organization of one domestic mission within our bounds, lying in a district southeast of Gloster. The people of Gloster are religious, hospitable, and social. They are turning their attention to schools, and are apparently aspiring after every good thing. Every member of Conference, I think, left with a pleasant impression of the Conference and people.

The following persons were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: George T. McGehee, J. F. Cassels, H. C. Newsom, T. D. Lipscomb. Alternates: Dr. Reams and S. S. Petty.

We have on the district eighteen itinerants, and twenty-six local preachers, and fifty lay delegates—in all, a Conference of ninety-four members. These are men of sterling worth, and many of them of real force of character by reason of natural gifts well cultivated.

Bishop Galloway gave us a fine, very interesting lecture on Mexico, Monday morning. Quite a large number were present.

The whole Conference was pleasant and instructive, and this closing lecture left all ready for every good word and work.

B. JONES.

CLINTON, La.

The Goose That Lays the Golden Egg.

As a rule, the pro-Lottery press of this State is chary of openly advocating the perpetuation of lottery gambling in Louisiana. Some of the papers which are supposed to belong to the Lottery are altogether silent on the subject. These have not the courage to defend what they have not the honesty to oppose. Others sneer at the opposition to the Lottery, and attempt to ridicule and discredit the moral element, "denouncing virtue, exalting vice." Others go still further and openly defend the Lottery as a means of educating our children, supporting our charities, and building our levees. Some are even so unblushing as to base their advocacy on the ground that the Lottery is a benign and benevolent institution, a corporation with a good soul, a liberal, pure, and virtuous monopoly! Others base their support on a lively sense of gratitude for favors received and benefits expected. Indeed, it is hard to define the exact position of the Lottery advocates. In the past their position was well defined. From 1876 to 1880 they advocated the Lottery because it corrupted members of the Packard Legislature. From 1880 to 1886 they opposed the creation of other lottery companies (and thereby maintained the monopoly) on the ground that their consciences would not permit them to increase the evils of lottery gambling; but it is noticeable that all those who took this position are in favor of rechartering the present Lottery.

From all that we can gather from the pro-Lottery press, the favorite ground which will be urged on legislators for rechartering the Lottery is that it is the goose that lays golden eggs for Louisiana. It is said that it brings millions of dollars into the State, and makes money cheap. It is said that it collects but three per cent. of its revenues from the people of the State, and ninety-seven per cent. comes from abroad. Hence, it is said the State is a great financial winner, and that the Lottery gamblers not only come down liberally in support of charity, but they build public institutions, establish new enterprises, develop the resources, and add to the wealth of the State. In other words, the Lottery is painted as the greatest philanthropist, the greatest blessing, and the noblest financial institution in the State.

Now, nobody believes this. All gambling is alike, and all gamblers are a curse to any community. They are non-producers. They are a drain and a burden. Like paupers and criminals, gamblers are a charge on society.

But suppose we admit the facts as stated, then what is the true meaning of the argument? We can afford to be robbed of three per cent. in order that our fellow-citizens of other States may be robbed of ninety-seven per cent! We can afford to bear the odium of legalizing gambling if it brings the golden fleece from neighboring States. This was the argument of the pirates of Barataria when they cut the throats and scuttled the ships of the Spaniard.

Those who agree that we can afford to be impoverished and demoralized and corrupted by the Lottery, if it will only impoverish others more than it does us, certainly have made a new discovery in the science of political economy. But we challenge the correctness of their position. The golden stream that flows from other States returns in a current of disappointment, disgust and hate. What our gamblers gain, our merchants and planters lose. A State can not flourish, or be built up on the proceeds of vice. Our prestige is destroyed, our honor is stained, our commerce is injured, our society is debased, our people are impoverished, and, above all, our politics are corrupted and controlled by the Lottery. Does the money we receive compensate for such wrongs as these? Let the legislator who is tempted to pamper the goose that lays the golden, but stolen eggs, remember what Burns said:

"The honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that!"

[ANENT THE BEAUTIFUL DEAD.]

[To Congressman Mooney.]

By the [illegible] and the [illegible] tower of [illegible]
And the [illegible] on its hewn [illegible] sheeps,
And we love to linger [illegible]
Like a [illegible] of light fall of heaven's perfume
Where never a tear-drop is seen,
And the rose and the lily are ever in bloom—
'Tis the land of the beautiful dead.

Each moment of life a messenger comes
And beckons man over the way;
Through the hearts-ease of women and rolling of drums,
The army of mortals obeys.
Few lips that have kissed not a motionless brow
A pace from each fireside has fled,
But we know that our loved ones are watching us now
In the lane of the beautiful dead.

Not a charm that we knew ere the boundry was crossed,
As we stood in the valley alone;
Not a trait that we prized in our darlings is lost—
They have fairer and lovelier grown.
As the lilies burst forth when the shadows of night
Into bondage at dawn-break are led,
So they bask in the glow of the pillar of light,
In the land of the beautiful dead.

O! the dead, our dead, the beautiful dead,
Are close to the heart of eternity wed.
When the last deed is done and the last word is said,
We will meet in the land of the beautiful dead.

General Conference Work.

I feel that an apology is due the readers of the ADVOCATE for my delay in giving the reasons why I was not elected to the ensuing General Conference. Such an explanation seems the more necessary since, among the contributors to our church papers, I have not, like certain prominent members of other Conferences, a thoughtful friend to do this for me by reminding the church at the proper time of my absence for the past year or two in foreign travel, or my recent transfer to the Conference to which I now belong, or the urgent nature of the local or connectional church business with which I have been charged. I have not been abroad several years. I am not a recent transfer. I hold no important position, whose duties would interfere with my attending the Conference in question. There is no technicality of our organic law, no opposition of custom even in my case. Indeed, it has troubled me greatly to explain the matter to my friends, and no less to understand it myself. I am sure I neglected no opportunity to let it be known that I was in the hands of my brethren, and that, without reference to personal feeling or interest, I would cheerfully respond to the call of the church.

Having observed, also, that the class of men commonly chosen on such an occasion are careful not to intimate a desire to be; that they even seem indifferent before election, and take it quite as a matter of course afterwards, I did my best to assume a similar bearing whenever the subject was mentioned in my presence. Our Conference, as you know, is entitled to ——* clerical delegates. I was frequently asked to express my preference, and while I did it freely as to a majority—as to all but one one, in fact—I never once intimated whom I should select to complete the delegation. I distinctly remember, on more than one occasion, naming several generally, including my interlocutor. My own name I never mentioned in this connection, and I am very sure no one ever had the temerity to mention it to me.

As to my contributions to our church press, and their demonstration of my fitness for General Conference work, it is hardly worth while for me to speak. As none of these were ever answered, I take it that they exhausted the subjects treated of, leaving nothing more of the same kind to be said or desired.

In spite of all this, I was astonished, as were your readers, no doubt, and the church generally, when our delegation was made up and my name was not called. That such a result was contrary to general expectation was plainly shown by the disappointment manifest in the countenances of a number of brethren when one after another was declared elected, and I was left out.

I need not weary your readers with the suspicions and surmisings which have been suggested to me at different times. I have given much thought to the subject during the past three months. I have talked it over with judicious friends, and, up to this time, I have arrived at nothing more satisfactory than that my brethren thought I might serve the church better at home than in the General Conference.

Upon this hypothesis, and realizing the need of safe counsel at this time, I feel impelled to write this letter, setting forth my views on several questions now being discussed. I am particularly impressed with this duty, when I reflect that the most of this discussion is being done by anonymous writers, or by those who, like myself, have something awry in their connectional status. For it is a noteworthy fact that election to the General Conference has quite as strong a tendency to suppress or to moderate the views of men, as reprobation or non-election has in the contrary direction; insomuch that the mind of a man before the last Annual Conference of a quadrennium is by no means an index to his opinions afterwards. Hence it occurs sometimes that those even who are most pronounced as to needed changes in our Discipline before election, grow speedily so conservative afterwards that they might be assigned at once to the Committee on Non-Concurrence.

First, then, as to the episcopacy and certain proposed limitations of the appointing power. I may say that I feel great delicacy in writing upon this subject since the Bishops themselves have said so little upon it, and those nearest to the episcopacy seem least disposed to curtail the large prerogatives which our chief pastors have heretofore enjoyed. Indeed, I have noticed that one's attitude towards prerogative in Church and State, alike, depends very much upon whether he is actively or passively concerned with; whether, in other words, he is in position to regard it subjectively or objectively.

As there is wide divergence in the views heretofore expressed by others, I should propose as a compromise measure, and to avoid serious agitation in future, that a new restrictive rule be added to those now in force, which shall provide that no change shall be made in the present manner of appointments, except by a two-thirds' vote of both the General Conference and the College of Bishops. Or, if this seems too radical, I should suggest as an alternative that it be made the duty of the presiding officer of every Annual Conference to appoint at the beginning of the session two stationing committees, one of ministers and the other of laymen. These committees to set separately with closed doors, and, at least, one day before the end of the session to present to the said president, or Bishop, and his cabinet a sealed list of appointments which are to be null and void wherever there is a disagreement between the two lists, but to stand when these agree, except where the Bishop may decide that a different appointment should be made.

Such an arrangement would certainly be at a safe distance from centralization on the one hand and from socialism on the other, and would effect the needed reform with the slightest possible infraction of existing usage.

2. As to the surplus revenue of the Publishing House: I confess to some surprise that there should be any difficulty at this point. I can account for it only on the ground that preachers, as a class, have had so little to do personally with a surplus in financial matters. Quite a number of ways occur to me by which this excessive revenue may be disposed of.

For example: the subscription prices of all our church periodicals might be greatly reduced, and the agent might be required to sell all other publications at cost. In this connection, the plan proposed by my friend, Dr. Haygood, might be extended to every branch of our connectional business, viz.: increase the number of secretaries and agents. If, as the Doctor suggests, this increase of officers would largely augment the income, then appoint more secretaries and increase their salaries. It would be a stubborn excess that does not yield to this treatment; besides it would be such a comfortable thing for the secretaries.

3. As to the number of Bishops to be elected: I take it to be an admitted fact that our episcopal service is unequal to the demand for it. Since, therefore, we can not make our Bishops ubiquitous, the most obvious alternative is to have more of them. And, while we are about it, it might be well to have two orders of Bishops—one for work and one for show, like our sister Methodism of the North, following whose fraternal example, we might station one of the new panel in every great city where they have or may establish an episcopal residence. Of course, there would not be much use for these dignitaries; but the example of fraternity thus shown might be edifying to the world. And, then, the additional expense incurred might be charged upon the Publishing House and become a further check upon the surplus.

4. As to a reduction of the ratio of representation in the General Conference: That the present constitution of this high court of our church is not generally satisfactory must be apparent to all who have given thought to the subject. For more than one reason I am not pleased with it. But, not to be tedious, I will suggest this remedy for existing evils: Let there be two General Conferences—one constituted as at present for the purpose of legislation, and one to be composed of all those who in the election of delegates may have received as many as one vote, whose business it shall be to discuss things. The latter body, being large, might have trouble in securing entertainment; but this difficulty could be met by providing that each delegate shall pay his own expenses. Or if there should still be a surplus, the cost of the session might be met by any unexpended balance in the hands of Dr. Barbee or his successor.

5. As your space will hardly suffice for other suggestions I might make, I will propose only the following changes in our book of Discipline: (See edition of 1876.) General Rules, page 29, third paragraph, second line; strike out "kind" and insert "way;" and chapter vi, section five, answer 1, section 3, on the "Trial of a member," strike out the words "has the" and insert "is in." These changes will commend themselves at once to those who favor them, and a sufficient answer to all who oppose is that they are quite as necessary as many which have been advocated by myself or others.

For the comfort of Dr. Black and others who insist on seeing the full names of your contributors, I subscribe myself,

Yours fraternally.

CHARLES WESLEY COKE.

P. S.—I neglected, in discussing the episcopacy, to state three important facts whose connection with the subject and with each other the reader is left to determine for himself.

1. There ought, by all means, to be a Bishop resident in San Diego.

2. Bishop Marvin was elected to the high office he adorned by a General Conference of which he was not a member.

3. My physician advises me that the climate of Southern California would be greatly beneficial to the present state of my health. C. W. C.

"Lay Representation."

MR. EDITOR: In your issue, of March 13, appears a letter from Rev. S. S. Keener on the above subject. As a layman of the church, I beg to submit my protest to a portion of this, to me, strange and erratic document. His assertions are unjust, to say nothing more. His reflections are utterly out of place, and uncalled for. He says: "The law has rushed much raw material into our legislative Conference. And usually these untried laymen are a dead-weight for two weeks of the General Conference session. The third week they begin to learn the duties devolving upon them, and leave for home at the opening of the fourth week." Is there a legislative body in the world, a creature of the people, whether political or ecclesiastical, that does not have this "raw material" constantly entering into its membership? This is true in our government. It is necessarily true in our ecclesiastical economy, both as to clerical and lay representation. Our legislative Conference exists only by delegated authority. Every General Conference since 1846 has had its clerical "raw material;" and the fact that a man is a new member, "raw material," does not argue that he is an idiot or a dupe. Is it possible that every new lay member to the General Conference is "a dead-weight for two weeks?" Is that the kind of stuff our "raw material" laymen are made of? He says the "raw material" laymen are a dead weight for two weeks. I suppose he means the first two weeks. "The third week they begin to learn the duties devolving upon them." The inference is, they do not finish the learning during the third week. "And leave for home at the opening of the fourth week."

The General Conference of 1886 was in session twenty-one days—three weeks. Now, the inference is that the clerical members spent the fourth week legislating. Bro. Keener will have to rearrange his dissecting process. He says, in speaking of the election of delegates to the General Conference: "If the lay representation at our Annual Conferences were punctual in attendance, and all came, * * * but to have half absent, then those who do come fix up a ticket outside and then come in and vote it through, is doubly unjust. In some Conferences the electioneering among the laymen is just shameful. In a certain Conference one man openly asked a majority of those present to vote for him. In most cases you will find that none are elected except those present at the Conference when the vote is taken. If a good man is absent, his election is hopeless." These remarks apply equally to the laymen in all our Annual Conferences. I repudiate it all. There may be a case, a single instance; but does it follow that the laymen in all our Conferences should be branded in this wholesale way? It is no more true of the laymen than it is of the preachers. Because one man violates the rule of propriety or custom is no reason that all others are guilty of the same offense. But to come down to hard facts and the unadulterated truth, does Bro. Keener know of a single instance when half the lay delegates to an Annual Conference were absent at the session for election of delegates to the General Conference? Does he know of a single instance when the ticket was fixed up outside? Was that man in earnest who asked "a majority of those present to vote for him"? To what Conference does he belong? In what Conferences does that "shameful" electioneering go on? Is it a fact that if "a good man is absent, his election is hopeless"? Is it not also true that in nine times out of ten the best men, the readiest men, the men who have the welfare of the church at heart, are the men who attend the Annual Conferences? And who are better fitted to represent the church in her highest council than they? He continues: "Not only is this electioneering visible in the Annual Conferences, but in the General Conference. * * * One layman will work through the whole Conference for a certain man for Bishop. These tricks of the politician and the caucus are deplorable. * * * Bishops can be elected on mere location or pet hobbies, such as woman suffrage, temperance, 'second blessing.'"

I had the honor of being an humble member of the General Conference of 1886. I can say that not once did a layman approach me as a tricksler. I have known preachers to ask laymen to vote for certain laymen as delegates to Annual and General Conferences; and, while I considered it somewhat out of place, yet I did not think it "shameful." I have been a member of the Mississippi Conference for ten sessions, and I have yet to see or hear of the laymen holding a caucus and fixing up a ticket. At our last Conference six ballots were taken in the election of four delegates. Bro. Keener has loaded his gun with too little powder. The "raw material" laymen in the last General Conference were no such men as he represents; nor do I believe there will be any such in our next General Conference. So far as I know the general character of the men, there are very few politicians in it. No man of Christian character, and a moderate degree of common sense, would think of perpetrating "tricks of the politician and the caucus" in such a place. He says: "There are hobby-riders in every General Conference who are very dangerous. Then those who think the church is deteriorating, and something radical must be done to save it, for both of these classes the 'raw' laymen, full of their ability, is an available force easily captured and wielded. All class legislation is very attractive to the uninitiated. * * * To this species of work how easily this body of laymen can be drawn! But the most dangerous legislation is that which is territorial. * * * Who more readily acquiesce in this legislation than the men who frequently do not know the wants of their own Conference—who are unacquainted with the needs of Methodism in their own State?"

Bro. Keener certainly reaches the height of absurdity in the above assertions and insinuations. He says positively, "There are hobby-riders in every General Conference." Who are they? They can not be "raw laymen." They must be preachers. I have searched the pages of the journal of the last General Conference, and I fail to find a single petition, memorial, resolution or proposition made by laymen only. I fail to find any radicalism in the legislation of the last General Conference. I did not see a single hobby-rider on top of a "raw material" layman at the Conference; and I was a "raw" one at that time. I do not know what Bro. Keener means by "the raw laymen, full of their ability," when the inference to be drawn from his entire article is, that they are a set of idiots or fools. They are dupes, and have no "ability." I am puzzled to know what Bro. Keener means or expects to accomplish by these unwarranted strictures upon the "raw material" laymen. The per cent. of "raw material" laity will be very little more than that among the clergy at our next General Conference.

I have the list of delegates from thirty-two Conferences before me, and sixty per cent. of the clerical delegates are "raw material." Bro. Keener says two-thirds of the laity in the General Conference of 1890 will be new; so this gives the "raw material" crowd a majority. Therefore, beware, ye conservatives!

This entire tirade of Bro. Keener's upon the "raw material" laymen resolves itself into the reductio ad absurdum. THOS. A. HOLLOMAN.

Why Not?

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to second Bro. A. D. Miller's article on reduction of our delegation to the General Conference. I differ with him, however, in the plan he proposes, viz: one delegate to every seventy-two members of the Annual Conference. Why not have only two clerical and two lay delegates?

Now, it seems to me that something must be done. I have no objection to the present plan of entertaining our General Conference, if this is best; but with the large number we send from each Annual Conference, it becomes a burden on our people to bear their expenses. Think of $24,000 to be raised every four years from our different works; and you find it is no little sum.

Now, if each Conference elected only two clerical and two lay delegates, it would not take more than one-third of this amount, and our people would pay it cheerfully. This would give us about 160 members to the General Conference—a body of select men, and large enough to do business properly. It would also lighten the burden of the Committee of Entertainment. Why elect according to membership at all? Why not let each Conference send the same number of delegates, as we are connectional anyway? Of course, each member sent should feel that he was sent to legislate for the good of the whole church, and not for his Conference alone. Our people will groan under this expensive burden as it now stands. Let it be lightened by cutting down our delegation. K. A. JONES.

"Lay Representation."

I noticed an article of Bro. S. S. Keener, which seems to be a lick at lay representation. If lay delegation is of but little or no benefit to the church, I, as one, am willing to walk out, and will so vote if made plain to the General Conference.

But let us go out as we came in; not one at a time. I am not prepared to say that lay delegation has been a success; but the fathers that created it, let them speak, and not their sons, who imagine themselves wiser than their fathers. I would like to hear what their fathers have to say on this subject. A quarter of a century is time sufficient to have demonstrated the benefit of lay delegation. Let the fathers speak, and we will hearken. Lay delegates have plenty to do at home, and it is no great hardship to let us stay at home.

MARVIN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are moving on pleasantly and harmoniously on Marvin circuit. Have had four accessions since Conference, baptized seven children and one adult. The Board of Stewards have made a liberal assessment for the support of the pastor. Notwithstanding we have lost some of our best paying members by death and removal, the stewards raised the assessments for the pastor this year about six per cent. Some of our congregations are large. We are pressing the claims of the dear old ADVOCATE. Its weekly visit is a benediction to any Christian family who will read it. It is one of the best missionary preachers we can possibly secure to aid in lifting our collections. We give the following as a proof: Last year we made a vigorous canvass for the ADVOCATE, and sent up quite a number of new subscribers; and for the first time in many years the circuit paid up all her assessments, and something over. Now we have every dollar of our foreign missionary collection in hand for the ensuing year. We are much encouraged, and are hoping and praying that the good Lord will do great things for us this year. Our first Quarterly Conference was held at Bethel, the fifteenth ultimo, and we had a good time. Bro. Johnston, our presiding elder, looks after all the interests of our beloved Zion and exercises fine judgment in the manipulation of the affairs of a Quarterly Conference. When the pastor read his report on the general state of the church, business was suspended for a short time and we had an "old-fashioned" experience meeting, each one telling how his soul was prospering and the spiritual condition of his church from his own standpoint. It was a delightful meeting, and we felt it was good to be there. At ten o'clock on Sunday we held love-feast, and many testified for Jesus, both Methodists and Baptists. It was, indeed, a feast to the soul. Now, Mr. Editor, our District Conference will convene at the good, old, hospitable and Methodist, town of Brandon, April 17. Can't you come? We would appreciate your visit, and it would be a good time and place to help us drum for the ADVOCATE. God bless you and your paper!

J. F. ROBINSON.

EBENEZER CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We held our second quarterly meeting on March 25, and our presiding elder, Bro. Wheat, could not get there. God was with us, and gave us a gracious outpouring of his Spirit. A revival of religion has already commenced on our work, and the fire of zeal is spreading from one Christian's heart to another, consuming the dry stubble of sin wherever it comes in contact with it. We have five prayer meetings. One brother calls them traveling prayer meetings, as we go from house to house. We have five Sunday-schools in active service. I tell you, my brother, I believe we have the banner circuit. I will tell you what kind of material I have to help me in my work. I heard one of my stewards say that his stock was all busy plowing. As it has been raining here some time, the farmers are behind; and as he could not stop a plow, he left home expecting to borrow a horse, if he could; and, if not, he was going to walk, and it was a distance of six miles to the quarterly meeting. Can any of the circuits beat that?

I have received $161 75 already, and all other collections will be up. I am satisfied. We have organized one missionary society at Bethany, with twenty-one members enrolled; and they have at the second meeting $8 30 in the treasury. I am doing all I can to put the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in every home on this work. I send you three new names to-day, which makes ten names in all for this quarter. I am going to try to do better for next quarter. I preach the ADVOCATE wherever I go. I do not see how any Methodist home could do without it. We have a beautiful parsonage at Ebenezer that is being repaired, and, when finished, it will be nice enough for anybody to live in; and we are indebted greatly to Bro. Sample, of Ebenezer, for the repairing of the parsonage. C. W. PERKINS.

LEXINGTON, MISS.

PLEASANT GROVE CIRCUIT.

I came on this work on January 1. There was no parsonage; but I was nicely taken care of, with my family, by Dr. Cowart, until the eighth, on which day my wife and children and I went over to see the little house we were to occupy until the parsonage could be built. When we arrived, we found a number of the neighbors assembled; went in and found the little house nicely furnished and decorated. Immediately we were confronted by Sister Alice Weathersby, who addressed us with a beautiful welcome essay, after which there followed singing and prayer. There were many eager spectators, for they had never seen anything like that before; nor had I. Dinner was announced, and the table was filled with luxuries. After the people had gone we found plenty of rice, sugar, coffee, flour, meat, molasses in our pantry. We stayed in our little home until March 1, when we moved into the parsonage. It is not completed yet, but we hope to finish it this summer. I must say that the people of Pleasant Grove Church are workers and deserve credit. I have taken up a part of my collections, and am meeting with no discouragements. The work, thank the Master! seems to be prospering. The godly toils of man, approved by the Holy Spirit, will succeed.

LESSON III.—April 20.

FORGIVENESS AND LOVE.

Luke vii, 36-50.

GOLDEN TEXT.—We love him, because he first loved us.—1 John iv, 19.

TIME AND PLACE.—Possibly A. D. 26. The exact time and place of this incident are unknown. Meyer supposes Capernaum; Wieseler, Nain.

36. One of the Pharisees—One of the better class of Pharisees, which had a certain measure of respect for our Lord's teaching, and were half inclined to acknowledge him as a prophet. Sat down to meat—Rather, reclined at table. The old method of the Jews had been that of the East in general, to sit at table generally cross-legged on the floor or on divans.

37. A woman in the city—No city is named, but if the Christian Church is right in identifying this woman with Mary Magdalene, we may assume that the city implied is Magdala, which appears at that time to have been a flourishing place, though now it is only a mud village—El Mejdel. A sinner—The word is clearly used as pointing to the special sin of unchastity. Her presence there is explained by the Oriental custom of strangers passing in and out of a house during a meal to see and converse with the guests. When she knew that Jesus sat at meat—Literally, getting to know. An alabaster box of ointment.—The alabaster box was probably, as in Matt. xxvi, 7, a token that the perfumed unguent was of the finest quality. The "box" was a kind of cruet, having a cylindrical form at the top. Pliny compares these vessels to a closed rosebud, and says that ointments are best preserved in them.

38. Stood at his feet behind him—We must recollect, in order to understand the scene which is here described, that the guests lay with their heads turned toward the table in the center, their feet being turned away from the table, and toward the outer part of the room, where servants waited. The sandals would be laid aside, and the feet of each guest would be bare. The woman would therefore be able to approach unseen, to stand at the feet of Jesus, and to anoint them while he was engaged in conversation with his entertainer. As she bent over his feet her tears began to fall on them, perhaps accidentally at first, and she wiped them off with the long dishevelled hair which showed her shame and anguish, and then, in her joy and gratitude at finding herself unrepulsed, she poured her unguent over them.

39. This man, if he were a prophet—Simon makes a double assumption—first, that a prophet would have known the character of the woman, and next that he would certainly have repelled her. The bearing and tone of the rabbis toward women closely resembled that of some mediæval monks. They said that no one should stand nearer them than four cubits.

40. Answering—Jesus answers the unspoken objection of Simon, by showing his power of reading the heart, as well as by proving to him that the woman, gross sinner though she had been, was now forgiven and accepted, though the Pharisee did not know it.

41. A certain creditor—Rather, moneylender. Five hundred pence—A denarius was the day's wages of a laborer, and is usually reckoned at seven and a half pence, but really represents much more. Hence five hundred denarii would certainly represent as much as fifty pounds in these days.

42. He frankly forgave them—In the original, the one word, "he remitted," involving the idea of that free grace and favor (charis) on which St. Luke, like St. Paul, is always glad to dwell. Tell me—The application of the parable, with a certain irony not unlike that of Socrates, treats the woman as a greater debtor than the Pharisee. She had committed greater sins. Each was equally powerless to pay the debt—that is, to make atonement for his or her sins. Whatever hope either had lay in the fact that pardon was offered to both as a matter of free gift and bounty.

43. I suppose—I take it. "I imagine;" "I presume." The original word has a shade of supercilious irony, as though Simon thought the question very trivial, and never dreamed that it could have any bearing on himself.

44. Seest thou this woman—Rather, Dost thou mark? Hitherto the Pharisee, in accordance with his customs and traditions, had hardly deigned to throw upon her one disdainful glance. Now Jesus bids him look full upon her, to show him that she had really done the honors of his house. Thou gavest me no water for my feet—Simon had treated his guest with such careless indifference as to have neglected the commonest courtesies and comforts. To sandaled travelers on those burning, rocky, dusty paths water for the feet was a necessity. Hath washed—Rather, bedewed. With tears—The most priceless of waters.

45. Thou gavest me no kiss—This also as we see in the case of Judas, was a customary mark of respect to one who claimed the character of a rabbi. So the disciples of Ephesus kissed St. Paul on parting.

46. My head with oil thou didst not anoint—This also, though not so common as the kiss and the washing of the feet, was yet a mark of courtesy due to an honored guest. Ointment—Christ means to say to Simon, "Thou didst not anoint my head, the nobler part, with ordinary oil. She hath anointed my feet with costly ointment."

47. Wherefore I say—The moral of the parable, and indeed of the entire narrative, lies in this verse. Certain points in the interpretation of the parable lie on the surface. The creditor is God himself; the two debtors are sinners, and they are both forgiven. Their love toward their benefactor is represented as springing out of their gratitude for his forgiveness. It is evident, so far, that our Lord teaches that the love of God is the result, and not the antecedent cause, of the forgiveness of sins; in other words, that "We love him because he first loved us." And in verse 50 our Savior distinctly tells the woman that her faith (not her love) hath saved her. To whom little is forgiven—Simon imagined that he had little to be forgiven, and therefore loved little. Had he been a true saint he would have recognized his debt. The confessions of the holiest are also the most heart-rending, because they most fully recognize the true nature of sin. What is wanted to awaken "much love" is not "much sin"—for we all have that qualification—but deep sense of sin. Her love and her forgiveness were mingled with each other in mutual interchange. She loved because she was forgiven; she was forgiven because she loved. Her faith and her love were one; it was "faith working by love," and the love proved the faith. Spiritual things do not admit of the clear sequences of earthly things. There is with God no before or after, but only an eternal now.

49. Began to say within themselves—His words caused a shock of surprised silence which did not as yet dare to vent itself in open murmurs. Who is this that forgiveth sins also?—Better, Who is this that even forgiveth sins? The thought that underlay the question was the same as that which had found utterance when like words were spoken in the synagogue at Capernaum.

50. Thy faith hath saved thee—From the merely controversial point of view, these words have a value in ascribing the justification or salvation of the woman to faith and not to love. Those who go deeper than controversy will find in them the further lesson, that love pre-supposes faith. We can not love anyone—not even God—unless we first trust him as being worthy of our love. She trusted that the Prophet of Nazareth would not scorn or reject her, and, therefore, she loved him, and showed her love in acts; and, in loving him, she loved, consciously or unconsciously, the Father that had sent him. Go in peace—The Greek form is somewhat more expressive than the English. Our idiom hardly allows us to say, "Go into peace," and yet that is the exact meaning of the original. "Peace" is as a new home to which the penitent is bidden to turn as to a place of refuge. Go to enjoy that peace of soul which grows up under an assurance of pardoned sin.

Missionary.

Woman's Missionary Meeting.

At the request of Bro. Buchman, who attended the District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of Sardis district, and for the encouragement of our women engaged in this grand cause, I will write you a short sketch of our meeting, held at Senatobia on March 20. As you are, perhaps, aware, the Woman's Missionary Society of North Mississippi Conference has adopted the plan of having our district secretaries hold a district meeting before the District Conference convenes. Each auxiliary and juvenile society in the district is required to send a delegate to this Conference. Right here, before going farther, I will say that Sardis district has not only been blessed with the best presiding elder in the Conference, but with the best presiding elder's wife also, who is our district secretary—Mrs. S. M. Thames. For zeal, earnestness, system and full consecration in the work, it is doubtful if she has an equal.

Our meeting was opened by Scripture reading and prayer by Bro. Malone, after which the address of welcome to the adult societies by Miss Drew Boyce, of Senatobia Auxiliary, was delivered; responded to by Miss Sallie Ritchey, of Sardis Auxiliary. Then the address of welcome to juvenile societies by Miss Mary Porter, of "Emma Sage Workers," of Senatobia; responded to by Cinnie Short, of "Olive Branches," of McGehee's Chapel, of Melrose, Miss. Then followed the address of our district secretary, urging us to more zealous and consecrated efforts in our work. Did it not occupy so much space, I would ask you to print those child-like and Christ-like addresses delivered by those dear children. Every eye was moist with tears after they were finished, and each heart present felt it was good to be there. God bless our dear children in their earnest efforts to help us!

In our district we have eleven auxiliaries and eight juvenile societies—all of which had delegates present, save one auxiliary and one juvenile society. These delegates were prevented by sickness from attending. The reports showed a marked improvement in our work in all its lines. Since our last district meeting, held here last June, the adult societies have raised $498, and the juvenile societies, $118; total, $616, in less than nine months! Is not this doing well, considering the short crops of the past year?

The kind people of Senatobia extended to us a cordial and heartfelt welcome. We pray "our Father's" blessing on them! Good many of the brethren were at our meeting and encouraged us by their words of advice and hearty endorsement of our work. Most of us remained over to the District Conference, which we enjoyed very much. We heard some excellent sermons by the brethren. The love-feast on Sabbath morning was spiritual treat. Had a fine sermon at eleven A. M. by Bishop Galloway. Our women of Mississippi are proud of him as a Mississippian, as well as the men.

We, with other sisters and brothers, had the pleasure of hearing the Bishop preach to the colored people, which we enjoyed very much. As Christians, we feel a deep interest in these people, and feel that, as Christians, generally speaking, we do not do our full duty in teaching and encouraging them in their Christian work.

Could write you much more of this interesting and, to me, blessed meeting, but will not trespass on your space further. Pray for us, that we may be faithful in our work for "our Father!"

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. W. H. WALL,
Rec. Sec. Sardis Dist'l Conf.

Mexico District, Central Mexican Conference.

I have just held the fifth Quarterly Conference on my second round, and am thankful to be able to report some success. At Toluca we received two members and baptized one infant. I feel very hopeful of our work in this city, as our pastor is intelligent and very popular with the people; and through the kind liberality of three friends in Livingston, Ala., my wife has been enabled to employ a very intelligent and native sister of this congregation as a Bible woman. This is a very important and helpful auxiliary to our work in this field.

At Rincon I baptized two infants. This charge is hopeful in many respects, and in others we hope for improvements. I did not get to my third appointment, as my wife was sick, and I did not think it proper to leave her alone. I regretted the necessity of missing this appointment, as there were matters of importance demanding personal attention; but I hope to adjust them to the best interests of the work.

On the Nochiaca circuit we received eleven members and baptized one infant. On the Texcoco circuit we received four new members, making a total thus far of seventeen members received and infants baptized. There have been two deaths reported, and their dying testimony was indeed thrilling. One died singing, "To heaven I am going." The other said, "Tell the brethren I have not been deceived in my religion, and that I am safe." Tell the brethren at home that we have the same Christ here whom they serve at home, and that we are walking in the same old, old way.

I am making this round alone, as Bro. Watkins is in Jalisco, pushing the battle in his old field of labor. It has been rather hard on me, though I preach and hold my Quarterly Conferences. But I have often, when preaching, felt like breaking away from the restraints of a limited knowledge of the language and tell them of Christ in the old way. J. M. WEEMS.

CITY OF MEXICO, Mar. 25, 1890.

Is This True?

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, superintendent of the now famous Wesleyan London Mission, says:

The highest duty of a Christian minister was not to be a pastor to those who paid their pew-rents in advance, but to the masses who had never yet heard of Christ. The highest duty of a minister was not to coddle the saints, but collar the sinners. The end for which God raised up ministers was not simply to preach two or three sermons a week, but to persuade people and lead them to become like Christ. He did not know any passage in Holy Writ which stated that it was essential for a person to attend twice every Sunday to hear any particular preacher. The first duty of the pulpit was not to look after the pew, but after the millions outside. What was wanted was not some preternaturally pious clergyman, who would preach wonderful sermons—and perhaps read them—but those who would go out among the millions of London and worry the devil so much that the devil would scarcely have time to worry them. They must not leave the devil alone.

Can all this be true, or is the man gone daft? Read it again, brother preacher.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attewell, Sharlot Lake, Ontario.

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1890.

Dr. J. J. Wheat.

We learn from private sources that this eminent servant of the church met with a painful accident on Sabbath evening, March 30. He had held his quarterly meeting for Poplar Creek circuit, and started for the railroad at Rutherford. The mule pulling the buggy, in which the Doctor rode, took fright and ran up a steep bank on the roadside, which turned the buggy over and threw the Doctor out. He fell upon his right side and was very much hurt. The physicians think two of his ribs were broken, and he sustained other painful bruises. At last accounts he was much improved. We sincerely trust Dr. Wheat will rapidly recover from the effects of this accident. He has the sympathies and prayers of the whole church.

Applied Christianity.

We humbly believe that in Christianity is the cure for all the ills, social, personal, civil and political, that afflict the race. We can not conceive of an infinitely wise and benevolent Being promulgating a scheme of salvation that can not operate to the removal of evil from all the walks of life, while at the same time it prepares for the eternal beatitudes. If it appears in any department that Christianity has failed to alleviate and obviate and remove personal or social or civil or political, or any other, evils, we do not believe the failure can be rightly and justly attributed to Christianity itself. We think the failure is the result of not applying the principles of Christianity to the case in hand. Any remedy, no matter how potent, must fail if not applied. A known specific for a disease must be applied to effect a cure!

There are two questions which every Christian ought frequently to ask himself:

1. What is the religion of Christ doing for me? In other words, how is my life affected by it? It is abundantly evident that the religion of Christ is intended to be a rule of life. There is no other rule of life for any man. Then, my manner of living must conform to the rule, or I am out of harmony with my own law of life, and that means incurable evil as long as that condition subsists. Personal application of the religion of Christ as a rule of life to my own living is the only way out of personal ills. The religion of Christ to be of any personal benefit to me must not only be brought into contact with the daily current of my life, but into such contact as shall control that current. The power of Christianity should be exhibited in influencing my daily conduct. In other words, Christianity should be "applied" to my life, or else it fails as far as I am concerned. Life spent in agreeing to and commending a religion that does not control me, is a miserable failure. A Christianity unapplied has no more power than any other unapplied scheme.

2. What is the religion of Christ doing through me? If Jesus teaches anything at all, he teaches that his religion operates upon men through other men. Every man who receives the religion of Christ is brought under obligation to offer the same to others with whom he comes in contact. There is no other way to promulgate it. Those who have it must "apply" it to others. The question of this age is, how to make this "application" in the affairs of domestic, social, civil, business, and political life. The ethics of Christianity are the purest and best. The problem is how to "apply" them to private and public life.

Now, Christ tells me that I am a witness for him. Does this only mean that I am to speak for him? That I am simply to make profession in words? Does not witnessing also include this larger idea of "applying religion" to social and civil and domestic life? Does it not demand that the ethics of religion become the principle by the working of which I seek to impress men with the importance of religion? Is not that the best witness I can bear to Christ, when I let my "light so shine that others may see my good works?" Are men ever led from error to truth by the mere word-professions of others?

The answers to such questions must reveal the fact that "applied Christianity" is nothing but a practice, in all the walks of life, of the golden rule. The things to be "believed have been defined with sufficient clearness," and what the world needs to-day is that the church shall "apply" her faith to the supply of the world's needs. The cry of the whole earth—Christendom and heathendom—to the church is, Practice what you preach. Your doctrine will be the universal remedy, if it is applied. Preaching without practice aggravates the evils. Do as Christ did; go about doing good to the bodies as well as the souls of men. Touch sin-stricken humanity by the application of the divine ethics of the gospel, and then see the glow of spiritual health spread through the whole frame-work! Keep the commandments of God in regard to your fellow-men, and paradise will be regained.

Regeneration.

Regeneration is a change in the moral nature of man by which the perfect principle of life in Christ is imparted by the Holy Ghost. There is a wonderful variety of descriptions of this fundamental change given in the Word of God. These show the relations of the several Persons of the Trinity to this change, and the relation of the penitent faith of the believer to the means employed in effecting it. Regeneration is the work of the Holy Trinity, whose agency is that of generation and creation. These terms are the center of a wide circle of phrases. Of the Father it is said, "Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth." "He quickened." "Who hath begotten us again." It is written, "The Son quickeneth whom he will." He came "that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." This is manifestly the life of spiritual regeneration.

The Holy Ghost is said to be the specific agent of regeneration. "A quickening Spirit." "Born of the Spirit." So what is said of one Person of the Trinity is said of each and of all. It is the work of God as a unit.

Many passages of Scripture refer to this work as generation. "Begat," "begot," "begotten," "quickened," and "born of God," all show this.

Many others suggest the idea of creation, such as "first fruits," "a new creature," "created anew," "renewal." The creating act of God sends forth a new character by a process that uses the co-operation of man.

As wrought in man, it is called, "born of God," "born again," "born from above," and "children of God." The resurrection idea is found in some Scriptures: "Alive from the dead"—"dead in sin;" hence the need of being raised up. In some passages it would seem the new man is raised up in the old to live and grow while the old man sickens and dies.

This work is presented as being introduced into a new world: "Newness of life," "new creature," "old things passed away," "all things made new," "entering into the kingdom of God," and "sitting in heavenly places."

Indeed, as it was in the beginning of our world, "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts." No wonder all things are said to be new.

Other Scriptures speak of this change as intimate life-union with Christ. "Christ in you;" "formed in you;" "I the vine, ye the branches;" "except ye eat my flesh and drink my blood ye have no life in you," and raised from the dead "like Christ to newness of life."

It is also presented as a new law in the heart: "I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them," "righteousness of the law fulfilled in us," and "love is the fulfilling of the law."

No doctrine of the Bible is so fully exhibited, or with such a wealth of language, as the doctrine of regeneration. This means much. God gave great emphasis to what some men minify and others deny. An error here is fatal and will lead to certain destruction. This doctrine is fundamental, integral and indispensable. He who slurs over it, or tinkers with it, is an enemy of God and of his fellow-man.

The Holy Ghost is the Agent, and the Word of God the instrument of regeneration. Some have mistaken the instrument for the Agent, the sword for the arm that wields it. The Spirit uses the Word, and wields the Word, and not the Word the Spirit, as some maintain.

The enlightening and informing influence of the Word is only a preparation for regeneration. It shows the necessity for it, and presents Christ, the Truth, as the object of faith. The Word is God's sovereign and gracious will concerning us: and this word says, "Ye must be born of the Spirit."

Baptism is the sacrament of regeneration, the symbol and sign of it. Some have strangely mistaken the symbol for the thing—the bath for the baptism of the Holy Ghost—the washing as a sign of regeneration for regeneration itself.

Men are naturally averse to dying unto sin and being made alive unto God; hence they are prone to substitute signs for things.

Regeneration, then, is not reformation, nor rectification, nor sacramentation; but it is new life, the life of God in the soul, imparted by the Holy Ghost.

GILDEROY.

Help Our Church at Oxford, Miss.

Having served our church at Oxford, Miss., as preacher in charge for three years, from December, 1882, to December, 1885, I desire to join in the appeal made to our people in Mississippi in behalf of that afflicted and needy society.

Our people were never strong there. About 1850 such venerable and sainted men as Benbury Walton, and Judge A. B. Longstreet, LL.D., then president of the University, and others led in building a suitable brick house of worship. It was a shrine of Christian devotion for the young men of the University, as well as for the people of the town, and Mississippi Methodism had a liberal quota in that student body then, as now. Many of these sons found pardon and peace within those sacred walls, and there gave their hearts and hands to God and the church. The history of that church for the last forty years will embrace much of the most precious life of Oxford.

But time and war spoiled that house of its fitness and comfort for worship. Our cause began seriously to suffer. The young men of the University who belonged to us, as well as many of our friends in Oxford, began to drift to other churches for religious service. A suitable home for their preacher and house for worship were essential to organic life. In the name of the Master they took their resolve to meet the demand of their cause. A parsonage was first secured. The proper repairs of the church was a much heavier financial burden. These two enterprises could not be accomplished for less than $7,000. Year by year the heavy draft was met from their own straitened resources and their credit. When this long-continued struggle was nearing the very crest of achieved success, the parsonage burned. It was a disheartening blow, and seemed to deprive them of the power to support a competent preacher. But the very distress made such a man the more needful. One was sent who threw himself into the breach with enthusiastic courage and glowing devotion. With recovered hope, renewed faith and increased sacrifices, another parsonage was purchased at a cost of $1,500. This transaction was completed on Saturday, March 1, of this year. The hearts of that pastor and his people must have bounded with joyful thanksgiving that night, when they retired to rest in readiness for the glorious day of the Lord. A suitable home for the preacher; a church-building complete in all that taste and comfort required for the aggressive work of the Lord; an expression of their own faith and devotion, of their energy and fidelity. Surely the glory of the Lord would appear in that house to-morrow! But when the morning of to-morrow's Sabbath came, that beautiful house was in ashes; the natural night had deepened into the bitter night of worse disaster. The children did not gather into that Sunday-school on that Sunday morning to study the lessons of God's great salvation; nor did the preacher come with his flock there for the holy service of the sanctuary. The fire fiend reigned there. To some communities, this loss of a house worth $10,000, or $12,000, would be trifling, and would open a place for the unused surplus of abundance. Not so with our people at Oxford. They had exhausted their resources and were more than $1,000 in debt for their church. That demand, though severe, could have been met. But what now is to be done? Either retreat or surrender is death. The very life of Methodism in Oxford depends on rebuilding at once, and in good form. If nothing were needed but a house for the little resident flock there to worship in, we might leave them to take what care they could of themselves; and they might disband if they choose. But the case is not one of indifference. Our friends in Oxford realize this. Out of their deep distress, with a faith and courage quite apostolic, they have resolved to rebuild. What can be reckoned as valid in Oxford for this rebuilding amounts to $5,000. To pay for parsonage and meet current expenses will require $1,500 more. I know that to be a very severe tax on that charge, requiring great industry and self-denial; but they will meet the draft. I hope the Church Extension Board will relieve their debt and give $2,000 on rebuilding. My hope may be cut much short; but if not, there will still be lacking not less than $3,000 to build the house which our cause demands there on the lowest scale of solid economy. I say, "our cause," for Methodism is one. But, besides the interest we have connectionally in any church built anywhere, and hence any church built in Oxford, this case appeals to Methodists in Mississippi because so many young men go from these Methodist homes to the State University, and ought to find in our own church there suitable provision for their religious welfare. To make this provision is as important as to send a preacher to China or build a church in Albuquerque. There is but one grand mission field—the world. Seventy-five thousand Methodists in Mississippi, giving six and two-third cents apiece, will add $5,000 to other funds and build a suitable house. Why, the Methodist boys in the State could undertake this, and have their names enrolled there in a monumental house built by the boys as a memorial to that genuine Christian and great man, Bishop Robert Paine. Bro. J. S. Oakley, the pastor of our church in Columbus, Miss., called the attention of his people to our cause in Oxford on last Sunday morning. Next day in the Quarterly Conference formal action was taken, directing the preacher to call on the congregation next Sunday for a contribution. From the interest shown in the Conference, I hope for a liberal gift. Let all heartily and promptly respond. Chancellor Edward Mayes or the Rev. S. D. Long will receive and acknowledge what you send in cash, or subscribe.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

STARKVILLE, MISS.

Methodism in Jeopardy.

By the authority of the second Quarterly Meeting Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, held March 20, 1890, I was requested to make an appeal to Methodists and the friends of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana for help—money help—to build a new church at Biloxi.

When I first reached this city of five thousand inhabitants, mostly Roman Catholics, and under Catholic influence, I inquired for the Methodist Church.

A brother informed me that it was located on Cow Alley. After twisting and turning and skirmishing about for some time I found it. And what a revelation! Its situation and surroundings were a disgrace to Christianity, and a disgrace to earnest Methodism, the representative of Christianity on this coast. Surely something must be done; and so great have been the growth and changes in this city, and the other churches outstripping us in attraction and situation, that Methodism on this coast is placed in jeopardy. We are compelled to have a new church, and well equipped, or else Methodism must drag its slow length along, literally crucifying every preacher who may be sent here in the future. Hundreds of visitors are now pouring in among us, and with them many Methodists, who shun our church because of its poor appearance and its discreditable situation. Our membership is small, and no millionaires among them. They are about able, with the sale of the old church, to buy a plot of ground sufficient for a new church and parsonage; but they can not build. We have selected a beautiful situation near the centre of the city, and on its main street, at a wonderfully low rate. The possibilities of advancement along this coast are positively inspiring; and to place Methodism in the lead in saving souls and strengthening the Redeemer's kingdom, where she rightfully belongs, we do need, and must have, the help of our friends.

If ever there was an investment that will bring glorious results and rewards to the investors, it will be in building a new church at Biloxi. "He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." If you like the security, down with your money.

We have selected J. H. Keller, of New Orleans, and Dr. C. W. Carter, of the ADVOCATE, to hold the donations of our friends until a sufficient amount is collected.

The brethren of the Mississippi Conference will certainly speak a good word for us, for one of these days the great turbine wheel of Methodism may land you at Biloxi.

J. W. HARMON, P. C.

Notes.

The committee to select the location of Brookhaven district parsonage have selected Wesson, and there will soon be a $1,500 parsonage to shelter Bro. Lewis and his family.

Are you keeping up with "Gilderoy" in his articles on the doctrines of Methodism? This is a good chance to post yourself; and if you don't use it, don't blame anybody but yourself.

One preacher, with analytical turn of mind, has divided his church as follows: (1) The straight-out, pay-as-you-go; (2) the semi-detached; (3) the quasi; (4) the post-mortem; (5) the unclassified. Will that classification suit your church?

Our friends in Arkansas have at last settled upon a location of Hendrix College. Several places competed for the college, and upon the fifty-seventh ballot Conway was chosen. It had offered $55,000, being $2,000 less than had been offered by Van Buren.

A clear case of providential coincidence you will see, if you read the letter from Japan, and remember that the money raised to send that brother to Japan was raised by the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, a paper published within two blocks of where he studied the Bible under the supervision of the sainted Sherry.

One who has studied the statistics, says that of the 250,000 commercial travelers in the United States, sixty per cent. are young men. There are 1,500,000 men in the railroad service; nearly all young men. There are 90,000 young men in the prisons to-day. The same authority says that, according to careful calculation, not more than seventeen per cent. of the young men of our land attend church. If these things are so, is the church doing her whole duty to the young men?

A recent number of the Independent contained an able article by Prof. E. A. Park, of Andover, on the question, "How to Give a Permanent Impulse to Foreign Missions." We simply call attention to the two points discussed. They will bear thought. "1. The missionary movement would be quickened if its friends were more obviously governed by a self-denying spirit." "2. The missionary movement would be quickened if its friends would acquire a deeper faith than they now have in the truths which lie at the basis of the movement."

An exchange has this:

A device which surely owes something to Yankee ingenuity, is that of the church at Webster Groves, Mo., which owns a herdic, and sends it into the suburbs before and after Sunday-school, preaching services, and prayer meetings. It brought in twenty persons on the day when it began its rounds. Here is a hint of great practical importance, remarks The Congregationalist. In many places it would cost less to run an omnibus than a mission chapel. Those whom it would bring to church would get the full benefit of the public services, the preacher would be inspired by larger audiences, and the prayer meetings by more participants.

"A charitable purpose is occasionally put forward as a stalking horse for pretty base ends," is the preface the Times-Democrat prints to a quotation from a St. Louis paper, in regard to the charity of some business men in St. Paul and Minneapolis, proposing to supply the farmers of North Dakota with seed-wheat. Evidently the writer of those lines has been meditating somewhat of late; but his meditations evolved too slowly to enable him to apply the thought to the charity of the Lottery Company, when it offered the $150,000.

Our General Conference will convene in St. Louis in about one month. The body consists of 147 ministers and 146 laymen, 293 in all. The reason the ministers outnumber the laymen by one is, that no layman was elected from the Central Mexican Mission Conference. This body is supposed to represent the wisdom, aggressiveness and conservatism of the church, and to it the church looks for such legislation as will best promote the interests of the cause of God. It will be well for these legislators to remember a saying of a wily diplomat of former times, "A blunder may be worse than a crime"!

Personal and Otherwise.

Rev. Augustus Davieson has been appointed assistant editor of the Episcopal Methodist. He is said to be a man of learning and travel.

The increase of members in the Baltimore Conference during the last year was eight hundred and sixty-nine!

A charitable purpose is occasionally put forward as a stalking horse for pretty base ends.—Times-Democrat.

A country paper stated the other day, that the Lottery Company had sent a boatload of provisions for distribution in the Ouachita Valley. Does the T.-D. refer to that? The Lottery may say, in that case, "Save me from my friends."

The Democrat Star, of Scranton, Miss:

At least $1,000 a month goes from this county to the Louisiana Lottery Company.

"And when it is over, and our feet will run no more, and our hands are helpless, and we have scarcely strength to murmur a last prayer, then we shall see that instead of needing a larger field, we have left untilled many corners of our single acre, and that none of it is fit for our Master's eye were it not for the softening shadow of the cross."

We have just received Wan Kwoh Kung Pao, a review of the Times, edited by Dr. Young J. Allen, and published at Shanghai, China. We thank Dr. Allen for the refreshing we have received in looking over this journal of "news from a far country."

The Tulane University turned out ninety-three new doctors last week. There were also ten graduated in pharmacy.

Bishop Galloway is to preach the commencement sermon for the University of Louisiana, in Baton Rouge, next July.

Mrs. E. E. Brelsford, of Princeton, Ky., has been accepted as a missionary by the Woman's Board, and appointed to work in Piracicaba, Brazil.

Friday, May 2, is the day set apart for fasting and prayer in behalf of the interests of the Woman's Missionary Society of our church.

Rev. F. R. Hill, of St. Louis, has been spending a few days here among his old parishioners of Carondelet Street Church. He was given a cordial reception.

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

According to a census just taken, New Orleans has 236,399 inhabitants; males, 110,551; females, 125,749; whites, 173,198; colored, 62,955; Chinese, 147; Indians, 1. This is a much less number of inhabitants than was generally believed this city contained.

Sergeant Dunn, of the Signal Service Bureau, showed his knowledge of things when he spoke of the water in the Yazoo "muning across the country into the Gulf." If he has been correctly reported, he deserves to be put out because he knows too much. A man that can say the above, knows too much to hold any office beneath the sun.

Notice.

To the Preachers and Sunday-school Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: Bear in mind that the third Sunday in May is to be observed throughout our connection as "Children's Day." See to it that timely and ample arrangements are made for the occasion. Don't delay to send to the Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., or to me at Kosciusko, for prepared programmes. Price, only ten cents per dozen, or sixty cents per hundred.

Should it be more practicable to have the exercises on another day than the one designated, then so elect—even a week day. But by all means don't fail to observe "Children's Day" at every church and preaching-place, whether there be a Sunday-school or not.

I am now prepared to fill, at once, orders for our hymn book—any style and quantity, word or music editions. Please send me your orders, and let us put this most excellent song book—the best in the world for us—into all the churches and homes of our people. We now have a hymn book adapted in quality, style and price to all reasonable demands. It is designed to be used in all of our church services, including the Sunday-school, and is well suited to all occasions of religious worship and work. It only remains for us to circulate and use it, and soon we will have a revival of "old-time singing."

I am yours, dear brethren, for Children's Day and Sunday-school occasions, or any service that I can render in the Master's cause for the good of souls. Address me at Kosciusko, Miss.

A Louisiana Chautauqua.

To the Friends of Education in Louisiana:

The Louisiana Educational Association at its sixth annual convention held in Ruston, August 7th, 8th and 9th, 1889, passed the following resolution:

"That the president appoint a committee of three, whose duty it shall be to devise a plan to establish a summer Chautauqua in Louisiana; to select a site for such Chautauqua, to advance its organization as rapidly as possible, and to report progress to the next meeting."

Upon the passage of which the president appointed the following as the Chautauqua committee, to push forward the resolution: Rev. T. K. Faunt Le Roy, Col. T. Sambola Jones, Col. Thomas D. Boyd and Mrs. Mattie H. Williams.

The committee have secured the donation of the land for the Chautauqua buildings, a beautiful location at Griffin Springs, one and a half miles from the town of Ruston. The water of this spring is chalybeate. The scenery very handsome, corresponding somewhat to that which is to be seen in Southwestern Virginia. The location is most desirable, being about midway between the cities of Marshall, Texas, Shreveport and Monroe, La., Vicksburg, Miss., and Baton Rouge, La.

The committee, in order to meet the spirit of the Chautauqua resolution, have formulated the following plan:

To build between now and the meeting of the association in Shreveport, in July next, a tabernacle, 80x60 feet, octangular in shape, seated in amphitheatre style, clean up the grounds and fence them in. This will be the first year's work, and upon the last day of the meeting in Shreveport the convention will be requested to adjourn to their Chautauqua's Home, and make such other provision as in their wisdom they may deem necessary to beautify and establish their domicile.

To perfect this plan the committee will need one thousand dollars. To raise this amount this plan has suggested itself. Let one hundred persons subscribe at once $10 each, which subscription will constitute them the Chautauqua company of the State. Then at the meeting next July it will be decided what amount of stock that ten dollars subscription shall represent. And for each succeeding year only 10 per cent. of the stock can be called for, and that only when necessary. Friends of education, help yourselves, your children and your beloved State, which has borne long enough the stigma (though false) of illiteracy, and thus advance our educational interest, and brush away the dark cloud that alien school-book makers have placed upon the fair brow of noble Louisiana.

Remittances can be made to the chairman of the committee at Ruston, La., for which receipt will be sent to the donor, and his or her name recorded that it may appear upon the pages of the report of the committee to the annual meeting of the association in Shreveport in July next.

Respectfully submitted.

T. K. Faunt Le Roy,
For the Committee.

In Memoriam.

The following resolutions were passed by the Seashore Camp Ground Association at its recent meeting:

Whereas, On August 23, 1889, it pleased God in his wisdom to remove from earth to heaven our beloved brother, William Otis; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Otis the world has lost a benefactor, the church an ardent supporter and worker, and this body one of its oldest and most valuable members—one who was ever ready and willing to do all that was possible for the advancement of our work; one who spared neither time, talent nor money in the progress of the Lord's cause, but laid his all upon the Lord's altar and did faithfully the work committed to his hands.

Resolved, That we, as a testimonial of our memory of the departed brother, enroll those resolutions on our record, and that a copy of the same be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Alabama Christian Advocate, the monthly church journal of Franklin Street Church, and a copy sent to the family of deceased.

Resolved, That during the coming camp meeting, at such time as the presiding elders and chairman of this Board think proper, some service be held when any and all who desire so to do, may pay their tribute of respect to the memory of our deceased brothers, William Otis and W. H. Foster.

—Rev. W. Wimberly reports from Thibodeaux, La.: "Our meeting in this town promises to be a grand success. The way is clear, I think, for a sweeping and complete victory for Christ. From twenty-five to fifty people inquiring after salvation every service. Glory to God!"

—A brother in North Mississippi writes: "It does seem to me you are putting in some telling blows against the Lottery abomination. Men who read and think after you will quit the nefarious concern, and I wish the masses might all read and be convinced. Your work will tell hereafter, if not now. Success to you."

—Rev. J. D. Harper, presiding elder of the Delhi district, writes as follows: "Much of my district is under water; much more will be soon. Bro. Upton has been partly disabled for nearly a month; Bro. Foust unable to work; Bro. Brown is just recovering from a severe attack of la grippe, and the material and religious prospects of the district are not flattering; but it is God's work, and we will labor on and look to him for reward. Some, if not all of us, are fighting the Lottery with a will, and, in the strength of our Master, we will wage unceasing war against this monster evil."

—Rev. H. Bradford writes: "I write you from Jackson, La., where I am at present waiting on my mother, who is very sick, and has been for some time. My work—Meadville circuit—is progressing in a number of particulars, though there is still room for improvement. Among the items indicative of solid improvement is a steady growth in the number of Sunday-school scholars, with a deeper interest in the work. Congregational singing has improved immensely at Meadville and Nebo, under the tuition of Prof. Coke, of Knoxville, who is 'tuning up' our people all over this part of the State. We are making a diligent effort to systematize our collections, so that each member will pay his assessment to the institutions of the church. We have on this circuit some members who are ready for every good work, and others who are not ready. We need a great deal of prayer and self-denial to keep us straight."

—Rev. William L. Lintield writes from Franklinton, La.: "My work is doing well. I have a good set of stewards, and they are working right faithfully. My congregations are fine and very attentive. I find good sale for "The Man of Galilee," and I have distributed a great many tracts and missionary leaflets. Have organized three auxiliaries to the Woman's Missionary Society, with a total membership of fifty-six. Have secured seven new subscribers to the Advocate, baptized two infants, married one couple and received two members by certificate. I hope to carry a good report to Conference. The Missionary Reporter makes its regular visits to twenty-five homes on this work this year. We are laboring to make this a successful year. Pray for us, Doctor, that our zeal may know no abatement, and that the work of the Lord may abundantly prosper in our hands."

—Rev. T. J. Upton writes from Monroe, La.: "I write to inform you, first, that we are moving along smoothly on this little station. We have a union prayer meeting three times a week—once a week in the Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist Churches—and attended and assisted in by the ministers and members of each. We are at perfect peace and in harmony with each other, and I believe we are improving religiously. One of our oldest members—Sister Narcissa Garrott—was called to her eternal reward a short time since and 'rests from her labors.' I write, secondly, to say that the good people are not forgetting that our material wants must be supplied. The stewards are collecting and paying the pastor's salary, and yesterday the good ladies came around with a wagon-load of supplies for the pastor's larder, embracing almost everything conceivable in that line. Do you wonder that we love these people? Our church has recently been painted on the outside, and we expect soon to treat the inside in like manner, and it was whispered into my ear yesterday that the ladies intended considerable interual improvement soon. May the Lord bless these kind people!"

A charitable purpose is occasionally put forward as a stalking horse for pretty base ends.

A Burning Shame.

1. Is it not a burning shame that in the noon-tide of the civilization of the nineteenth century an almost entire community of Protestants should be without a copy of the Word of Life? Yet it is a lamentable fact that such communities are found. But a few weeks since it was my lot to visit fourteen families where I was informed there were only four Bibles and three Testaments. Those people were living in an isolated place, and for a large part of the year were forty miles from transportation. I learned that they were without preaching, and were trying to conduct a Sunday-school with three little ragged Testaments. Was it not a good work the American Bible Society was doing in sending them a colporteur?

2. Is it not a burning shame that in communities where there is great Bible destitution, for professed ministers of the gospel to be more interested on the circulation of tracts and pamphlets, setting forth the doctrines of close communion and baptism, than in the circulation of the pure Word of Life? Yet in my perambulations through the country I have seen men employed as missionaries more interested in the circulation of such literature than the Bible. I have just finished a field where I found a vast destitution, the average being over one-third without the precious Word of Life. Right here I would ask, Is it not a shame that the circuit rider, perfectly aware of this destitution, never made one single effort to raise money to aid the society in its noble work, even while the colporteur was there at work?

3. Is it not a burning shame that while a colporteur is in a community, hunting out especially the widows and orphans who are poor and destitute, traveling through mud, rain, dust, heat and cold, spreading abroad the precious Word by sales and donations, that he should be denied a night's lodging or be charged one dollar and fifty cents for the same? Yet this has been the experience of your humble writer. Last fall it was the lot of your humble servant to canvass Jonesville, in Catahoula parish. He sold some Bibles and gave away some. He was insisted upon to preach for them, which he did. They got some free Bibles and a free sermon. It cost the colporteur to do that work three dollars and a half. Some of these people call themselves Methodists. I wonder if they are not mistaken in their name?

My work is now in Caldwell, and the people, like the majority of Catahoula, seem to appreciate my services and treat me very kindly. The brethren and sisters of Columbia have been kind to me in the way of patronizing me and in making up a small amount for the society. I am doing all I can, both publicly and privately, against the Louisiana Lottery. I was pained, a few days since, to hear a preacher contend that we have no right to legislate against that monster of corruption. How my man of medium understanding, with a full knowledge of its political and moral evil, can arrive at such conclusions, is a mystery to me.

Winona District Conference.

Dr. Wheat authorizes me to have the time of the Winona District Conference changed to April 25-27, one week later than the previous time announced. The reason for this change is to secure the services of Bishop Galloway, and to give himself time to recover from a severe fall which he sustained on last Sunday, March 30. Just after preaching he started across Big Black to Rutherford, on the G. P. R. R., and his team ran away with the buggy and threw him out, bruising him severely. No bones are broken; but the nervous shock and bruises on the side and hip render him incapable of work for some time. The preachers in the district are requested to notify their delegates. I will take the liberty of saying to the Auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society in the district that Sister Streater will hold the district meeting heretofore announced on Thursday night, April 24, 1890, and not April 17.

Rev. Sam P. Jones' Meeting in Aberdeen, Miss.

Mr. Editor: Bro. Sam Jones, assisted by Rev. G. R. Stuart and Prof. E. O. Excell, will begin services in Aberdeen, April 13. Everything will be ready. A large tabernacle, with seating capacity for more than four thousand people, is being completed. The various committees are composed of men from five different churches. The three railroads coming into Aberdeen are doing all for the meeting one could ask. Great crowds will attend. The revival spirit is manifest. Our prayer meetings are growing in interest and numbers. We have received thirty-one persons into the church since Conference. Some one joins on profession every week. Come to see us. We rejoice in the good work you are doing for Church and State against the Lottery. Pray for our meeting.

Yours in love, J. A. Bowen.

Help for a Disabled Preacher.

Mr. Editor: Seeing from the New Orleans Christian Advocate that the Rev. Mr. Foust has met with the serious misfortune of losing his only remaining leg, and learning also that his first misfortune was sustained while a Confederate soldier, I have interested myself in his behalf to the extent of soliciting from the citizens of this place a small contribution for his benefit, and herein send you a postoffice order for the sum of eighteen dollars and ninety-five cents, which you will please convey to him as a donation from the town of Lafayette. Hoping that enough other Southern towns may be interested in behalf of the unfortunate soldier to secure him against all temporal want, I remain,

Very respectfully,

Thos. B. Hopkins.

P. S.—Would not have troubled you with the transmission of this small sum had I known his postoffice.

The Daily Christian Advocate, to be published at St. Louis during the session of the General Conference.

We hope to give the church the best Daily ever issued from the seat of the Conference. No pains or expense will be spared to give the reports, debates and proceedings of the Conference with fullness and accuracy. The readers of the Advocate will be admitted to the auditorium of the Church's Council. They will be made acquainted with the growth of the church and the expansion of its work in all directions; with the administration of its connectional officers, their successors in office, and the state of its various enterprises, with the fraternal visitors and their messages; with the personnel of the Conference, and with whatever of incident and surrounding that gives character and picturesqueness to the Conference and its deliberations.

We earnestly appeal to our preachers and people to give a hearty support to the Advocate. Send names and money to Nashville before May 1. We want to make up our mailing list in advance, so that all subscribers will get the paper promptly. Price of the Daily Advocate, $1.

"Advertising is to a genuine article what manure is to land—it largely increases the product. Thousands of persons may be reading your advertisement while you are eating or sleeping or attending to your business; hence, public attention is attracted, new customers come to you, and if you render them a satisfactory equivalent for their money they continue to patronize you and recommend you to their friends."—P. T. Barnum.

In the natural course of events the green apple and the green melon and the small boy will soon come in to collision.

Hereafter the New Orleans Christian Advocate will not club with any paper or magazine. Preachers in charge will please decline all clubrato subscriptions.

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

Our Young People.

LITTLE TOES OF LITTLE BOYS.

"By and by" is a cowardly boy;
Shun him at once as a traitor;
For they who travel with "By and by,"
Soon come out to the house of "Never."

"I can't" is a mean little coward
A boy that is half of a man;
Set on him a plucky wee terrier
That the world knows and honors as "I can."

"No use in trying"—nonsense, that
Keep trying until you succeed;
But if you should meet "I forgot" by the way,
He's a cheat and you'd better lose heed.

"Don't care" and "No matter," boys, they're a pair.
And whenever you see the poor sights,
Say "Yes, we do care, and would be "great matter."
If our lives should be spoiled by such blights.

—Selected.

"I Forgot It."

The American Grocer gives the following advice, which every young man will do well to remember:

A successful business man says there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, which were ever afterwards of great use to him, namely, "Never to lose anything, and never to forget anything."

An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it. "But," inquired the young man, "suppose I lose it; what shall I do then?"

"You must not lose it."

"I don't mean to," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?"

"But I say you must not happen to: I shall make no provision for such an occurrence; you must not lose it!"

This put a new train of thought into the young man's mind, and he found that if he was determined to do a thing, he could do it. He made such a provision against every contingency, that he never lost anything. He found this equally true about forgetting. If a certain matter of importance was to be remembered, he pinned it down on his mind, fastened it there, and made it stay. He used to say: "When a man tells me that he forgot to do something, I tell him he might as well have said, 'I do not care enough about your business to take the trouble to think about it again.'"

I once had an intelligent young man in my employment who deemed it sufficient excuse for neglecting any important task to say, "I forgot it." I told him that would not answer. If he was sufficiently interested he would be careful to remember. It was because he did not care enough, that he forgot it. I drilled him with this truth. He worked for me three years, and during the last of the three he was utterly changed in this respect. He did not forget a thing. His forgetting, he found was a lazy, careless habit of the mind, which he cured.

A Knowing Dog.

There is a dog we are acquainted with, Lion by name, who gives daily proofs that he knows what is said to him. A lady called the other day. During her call Lion came in, lay down on the parlor carpet, and shut his eyes. The conversation went on; and the visitor said:

"What a handsome dog you have!"

Lion opened one eye.

"Yes," said his mistress, "he is a very good dog, and takes good care of the children."

Lion opened the other eye, and waved his tail to and fro along the carpet.

"When the baby goes out he always goes with her, and I feel sure then that no harm can come to her," his mistress went on.

Lion's tail thumped up and down violently on the carpet.

"And he is so gentle to them all, and such a playmate and companion, that we would not take a thousand dollars for him."

Lion's tail now went up and down, to and fro, and round and round with great glee.

"But," said his mistress, "Lion has one fault."

Total quiet of Lion's tail, together with appearance of great concern on his face.

"He will come in here with dirty feet and lie down on the carpet, when I have told him time and again that he mustn't do it."

Lion rose with an air of shame, and slunk out of the room, with his tail down.—Boston Record.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old, and as I have seen nothing in the children's column in your paper from this town, I thought I would write a few lines, hoping you will publish them. I am a Methodist, and so are my papa and mama. We have a well-organized college here, with 115 enrolled scholars. I am one of its pupils. I live one and a half miles from town, and ride a nice pacing pony, morning and evening. We have a good Sabbath-school. Our preacher is Rev. R. M. Blocker. Little Jesse Clark Duson wrote a letter for the ADVOCATE, asking, What did Christ ride into Jernsalem? The answer is: a donkey. Now, I will ask the little cousins a question in the Bible: Where was this donkey first discovered? Mr. Editor, please publish this, and I hope you and I will become better acquainted.

Your little friend,
MAMIE H. DUSON.

CROWLEY, La.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from this community, I thought I would write one. Papa takes the ADVOCATE, and I like to read the little letters so much. I have only one brother and one sister, and one sister and brother dead. Bro. Norton is our pastor. We like him very much. He preaches for us every fourth Sunday at eleven o'clock. I have been going to school; but my teacher has quit teaching, and I am sorry. We are going to have a church built at Zachary, and then we will have a nice Sunday-school, I hope. I am a member of the Methodist Church at Deerford; but when we get a church at Zachary, we will move our memberships there. I will ask the little cousins a question. Where in the Bible is the word "honeycomb" found? I will close, wishing the ADVOCATE much success. I hope this letter will be found in the next paper.

Your little friend,
ELLA MONTEQUDO.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters from any of the children in this part of the country, I thought I would write to your valuable paper. I am going to school; my teacher's name is Miss Mattie Houston. I like her very well. I study arithmetic, grammar, reader, spelling and geography. Our pastor is Bro. Huggins. We like him very well. I will answer one of the cousin's questions. "Ague" and "consumption" are found in Lev. xxvi, 16.

Your little friend,
ALMA L. HALL.

MR. EDITOR: We are two little cousins that have come to ask admittance, and hope that you will not send our letter to the waste-basket, it being our first. Our names: Birdie Brown and Lucy Faulk. We are grandchildren of Mr. D. Faulk. Our mamas tell us that you have been to our home, but we do not remember it. Our grandpa is very feeble, but he comes to see us sometimes. We have a new church. We all were so glad that Bro. Munholland was sent back. We love him so much.

Your little friends,
BIRDIE BROWN,
LUCY FAULK.

Household.

Keep Up with Your Children.

It is a sweet remembrance, that of a quiet old farm-house, where a tired mother, after a hard day's work, gathered her seven children about her, her knitting-needles keeping time to the measures of the verses read by one of the group from a great poet. The poetry which she knit into the lives of her boys has outlasted all the stockings, and crowned her memory with a halo of poetic recollections.

The boy whose mother "would not go to bed until she had finished reading Pepacton" with him, is more to be envied with his poor jacket than the elegant lad whose mother, with no time to read, takes time to consult the latest fashion-plates that he may be handsomely attired. There seems to be a settled conviction in the minds of many that children must make intellectual progress beyond their parents, who are fated to lose out of their own lives any interest in books; and we often see stories of toilworn parents who, having educated their children through many sacrifices, are pushed aside and kept behind the scenes because they are not up with the times. Investigations will doubtless show that such parents have had time to gossip abundantly while educating their children, and have shut themselves away from their children's mental life through willful preference. It is not probable that many parents who are "behind the times," or do not keep up with their children, deserve any sympathy. Children crave intellectual comradeship, and the parent who enters into intellectual companionship with his child will not get "behind the times."

An uneducated workingman, deploring his lack of early advantages, was in the habit of taking his little son on his lap at night to hear his lessons. He followed the boy through all of his high school work, and is to-day an educated man through giving the child continued sympathy in his studies.—Mary E. Burt's "Literary Landmarks."

MAKING ACQUAINTANCES.—A lady who was interrogated as to how she made and retained so many and such good friends answered on this wise: "I have always made it a rule in whatever community I lived to attend the Sabbath-school. The best class of people in any place, in my judgment, are those who are members of the Sabbath-school. The strongest tie that can bind human souls together is love for the sovereign good, for its manifestation, its incarnation in Jesus Christ. Once in the Sabbath-school, I had taken the first step; then I made it a point to be there without fail and punctually, to be prepared with the lesson, to visit my pupils, and to cultivate acquaintance with such teachers as I found like-minded with myself. Of course, I always attended the services of the sanctuary, the prayer and class meetings, and, so far as I could, the benevolent societies; but my closest friendships have always been with earnest Sabbath-school workers. They combine in a high degree intelligence with ardent piety. Friendships thus formed are abiding."

If those who come as strangers into a city or town will follow the example of this lady, being animated with her love for God and humanity, they will find ample opportunities to make friends and acquaintances. If they do not, may we not say the fault is not in their circumstances, but in themselves?

Of all the religious organizations, the church in the house is one of the most attractive and salutary in its influence on the members of the household. It brings religion home to the business and bosom of the family. The children feel its elevating and moulding power. The parents are better girded both for their secular duties and the more public worship of God. The ascending incense at morning and eve is a fresh consecration of all to God, imparting a sacredness to the duties of daily life. When rightly viewed, the whole life is a worship—the toil in the house, the shop, and on the farm, not less than the praise and prayer in the temple. The world is a temple; life a psalm of praise.—Zion's Herald.

Why the Compass Points North.

The needle of the compass points north because practically the earth is a magnet, not differing essentially in its magnetic properties from a bar of magnetized steel, says American Notes and Queries.

It has two poles of greatest intensity, and, like most large steel magnets, there are several supplemental poles of lesser intensity. Just as the poles of one bar magnet attracts the end of another, so the magnet poles of the earth behave toward poles of the compass-needle, unlike poles attracting and like poles repelling each other.

But it is not correct to say that the needle always points north; as a matter of fact, there are but few localities on the earth where it does so, and even those are constantly changing.

An irregular line drawn from the mouth of the Orinoco river through the east coast of Hayti, Charleston, S. C., and Detroit, Mich., represents very nearly the line in which there is no variation at the present time.

In all places east of this line the north end of the needle swings slightly to the westward; in all places west of it to the eastward. At the mouth of the Columbia river the variation of the compass is about 22° east; in Alaska it is from 40 to 60° east; midway between New York and Liverpool it is about 35° west.

Of course there is a reason for this variation, and the explanation is that the needle does not point to the North Pole, as many people suppose, but to the magnetic pole, which is something entirely different.

The magnetic north pole is at present on or near the northwestern shore of Boothia peninsula, in the northern part of North America. Its position is constantly changing, and in the last six hundred years it has moved about half the distance round the geographical pole.

During a period of three hundred years, in which observations have been carefully made at the Magnetic Observatory in Paris, the variations have changed from 11° 20′ east of north to 22° 10′ west.

In the United States the rate of the change in variation differs much in different parts of the country. In Washington State it changes at the rate of about 7′ a year; in Arizona and New Mexico it is stationary; in the New England States it is from 1 to 3′ per year.—Golden Days.

SALT MINE WONDERS.—Recent excavations on Avery's Island projected to further uncover the vast body of salt there underlying, revealed new deposits of remains of man and mammal, some of which have been transferred to the museum of the Tulane University by Curator Caldwell, the gift of Mr. I. H. Mellhenny. This is not the first deposit uncovered, early excavations in other years having revealed remains now in Smithsonion Institute at Washington. The bones of mammals found are mainly those of the giant sloth, mastodon and the two-toed horse (equus fraternus)—species now extinct. These are embedded in a bed of blue clay some eight feet thick, overlying the salt. Above the blue clay is a marshland deposit of loam, in which basket-work and pottery of the earliest North American races have been found. The curator also collected green live oak and myrtle leaves, which rapidly lost their color when exposed to air, showing perfect preservation through unknown centuries. It is interesting to note that although the presence of these remains and of the body of salt itself has long been known at Washington, no scientist has evolved a theory to account for the same which science accepts. The convenient theory of "volcanic origin" herein fails, there being no evidence of volcanic action in the delta.—Times-Democrat.

According to the Perseveranza, of Milan, important sponge banks have lately been discovered close to the Island of Lampedusa, on the southern coast of Sicily. These deposits of sponges extend for over a surface of from fifteen to eighteen marine leagues, and are situated about an equal distance from the southeastern extremity of the island. The smallest depth above these banks is twenty ells; the greatest depth is from thirty to thirty-one ells. At the lesser depth rock is met with, on which the sponge grows; at greater depths a sandy soil is found.

FOSTER—On January 31, 1890, John H. Foster fell asleep in Jesus, aged seventy-five years and four months. Fifty-three years of that time he gave to earnest Christian work, as a quiet, earnest, devoted member of the Methodist Church. For the last two years he had wandered in the land of shadows. His mind had failed; but through all the vagueness of this condition no word of doubtful propriety was heard from him.

Uncle Hugh Foster, as he was familiarly called, was born in Jefferson county, Miss., and came to Yazoo county in his boyhood. Here he grew to manhood and married Rebecca Ogden, and reared a large family of children—five of whom survive; six are dead. One of his daughters was the wife of Rev. D. C. Langford, of the Mississippi Conference, and, like so many of those noble heroines, "itinerants' wives," fell at her post of duty. Bro. Foster married again Mrs. L. V. Fryer (nee Lewis), who with five daughters survive him.

He was a good man in all the relations of life; a true and devoted husband and father, a good neighbor and friend, but was most noted for his devotion to his church. He loved his church, his pastor, and his brethren. He believed in doing as well as being; was ever prompt and faithful in attending the services of the church, and ever ready and willing to meet all demands in behalf of the church. His place in Mt. Olivet Church was never unfilled, while he was able to be there, and for many months after he lost his reason his footsteps would turn toward the old church; and often when he was missed his family would seek him in the direction of the church. During service he would go to his place and try to attend to the preaching or singing, as in other days.

Oh, how we all, who knew and loved him, thanked God as we stood beside him after his body was dressed for the grave, to note that dignity of appearance had returned to his form and a sweet expression in his countenance. We could but realize that that was the day and event for which he had lived and labored and waited. He was the preacher's friend in the best sense of the word. To him all preachers were good men, and every sermon was a good sermon. He often declared that he never heard a sermon that did not have something good in it, and he was never heard to criticise a sermon or speak lightly of a preacher. Whoever the Conference sent as pastor was the right man for dear Uncle Hugh. Every preacher who served as his pastor in the years that have flown will bear witness to this, and none will recall it with eyes undimmed. The workmen fall, but the work goes on.

Farewell, my dear old friend and leader, till we meet in the light that surrounds the great white throne.

J. R. B.

PETTY—Mrs. SARAH A. PETTY, wife of P. S. Petty, was born in East Feliciana parish, La., on December 26, 1818, and died December 1, 1890. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1854, under the ministry of W. B. Hines, and was converted the same year, at Pisgah Church, on the Wilkinson circuit.

She was a woman who loved her church, and especially the services of the sanctuary. The young preacher always found in her a loyal and sympathizing friend. In that day many will rise to call her blessed. She had raised a large and interesting family, who mourn her loss.

The writer will ever cherish her memory, as one who was willing to help him in his early days. She suffered very much during her last illness, but rested her soul in God. Her husband and family look forward to a joyful reunion. May the Holy Spirit bless and keep them!

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

GIBSON—The infant babe of Bro. and Sister Gibson, of Williamsburg, Miss., departed this life February 1, 1890. This makes the fourth one which has been consigned to the grave at this place of Bro. and Sister Gibson. Precious babes! they have gone to stay with Jesus and the angels. These sweet little ones are waiting and watching for mother and father in that bright eternal home of the faithful. In the old graveyard at Williamsburg are four little tiny mounds that point to heaven, bid ma and pa come, for there eternal blessedness and everlasting joys await them.

J. H. EVANS, P. C.

ROBERTS—Died, at her residence, in Amite county, Miss., December 5, 1889, Mrs ELIZABETH ROBERTS, aged seventy-five years and three months. She was the daughter of Edward Forman; was married to J. D. Roberts in 1840. She was the mother of eleven children—seven of them went before her to the better world. She was a Christian woman in the best sense of that word. She was converted and joined the church early in life, and lived faithful to her church vows. Her Bible was her constant companion.

A short time before she died she had us to turn her on her back. She called her children around her, and bid them farewell, telling them to meet her in heaven; then thanked her neighbors for their kindness to her in her last illness, saying the Lord would reward them, telling them to meet her in heaven. She noticed her youngest daughter weeping. Putting her hand on her, she told her not to weep, but rejoice, for she was going where Jesus was, and said she would soon see her companion and other children, and she rejoiced aloud for several minutes.

Many of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference will remember her kind words of encouragement. Her house was the home of the weary itinerant.

Thus passed from earth to heaven one of the pure in heart, and one that all who knew her loved her. May we, her children, live so we will meet her in heaven, where parting is no more.

T. J. ROBERTS.

YOUNG—Died, on November 21, 1889, at her daughter's home, Sister MARY AMANDA YOUNG, aged fifty-seven years three months and twenty-three days.

In the death of this sister, a true and tried mother of Israel has gone home to receive her reward. Plaquemine has lost the old and only landmark of Methodism; the church and Sabbath-school have sustained a loss that can only be felt, but not described. She was beloved by all who came in contact with her, for her sweet Christian life. To her influence the success of our Sabbath-school of to-day is greatly due, always taking an active part whenever there was work for Christ. Many a time when the writer of these lines thought it impossible to overcome the difficulties, it was her, by her words and deeds, to give new courage. As her life, so was her death—the death of a true, faithful Christian. Her sickness was but of short duration; but never a word of pain or complaint would pass her lips. Knowing from the first that her Master had called her, she was ready to go to that home not made by the hands of man. But five minutes before death she said, "I hear the angels' wings; they are coming for me." O sweet messenger of death, grant when my time comes to follow thee, I may hear the sound of angels' wings to carry me to my eternal home.

H. C. EMDE.

DERRICK—Mrs. SALLIE DERRICK, wife of Andrew Derrick, was born in Alabama, November 15, 1808, and died at the residence of her son, J. M. Derrick, near Fannin, Miss., March 4, 1890. She was baptized at the age of five years, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of fifteen, and lived a consistent member until death. Thus she was connected with the church nearly all of her remarkable long life, for, by reason of strength, she had reached her fourscore years.

She died in full triumphs of a living faith. Her last words were, "My trust is in God now and has always been." She leaves many relatives and friends. Their loss is her eternal gain. May they all meet in heaven to part no more!

HODGES—Again death has cast a shadow of gloom over the little society at Adams. On Christmas Eve, when our hearts would have been light and happy, they were made sad, indeed, by the removal from this sphere of usefulness our beloved sister, Mrs. FANNIE HODGES. The society has, in her death, lost one of its most zealous members, the Sunday-school one of its most earnest workers, the church one of its most useful members, and her husband a devoted and affectionate companion; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, as our all-wise Father has taken our beloved sister, we humbly bow in submission to his will. Her useful life was soon brought to a close, and at the Lord's appointed time "all was well." Her lamp was ever trimmed and burning, and the "angel band" bore her spirit "away on their snowy wings" to her reward at God's right hand.

Resolved, That we will tenderly cherish her memory, and keep enshrined in our hearts the recollection of her devoted service in this part of God's moral vineyard.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved husband, the darling little boy, and all the relatives in this their sad affliction, pointing them to Christ, in whom they trust.

Resolved, That we offer this tribute of respect, which we so justly owe, through the columns of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,

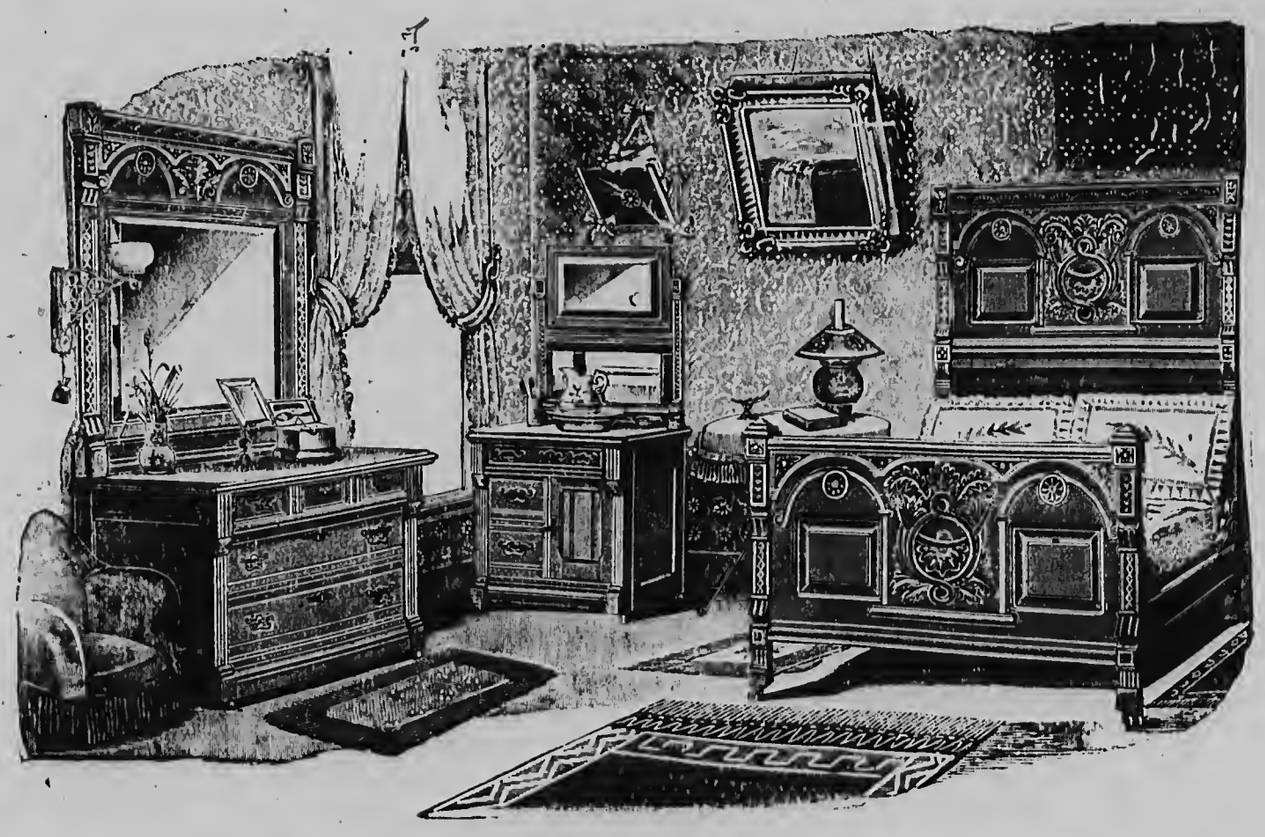
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

READ THIS LETTER.

"For years I have been afflicted with bad Digestion, Constipation and Piles. I have tried all the medicines I could get hold of, but all in vain. Even my physicians could not relieve my costiveness. In the meantime I struggled under great pain. Life was a burden. Two weeks ago I saw the Chicago "Times," and my eye fell on an advertisement of Tutt's Pills. I decided to try them. They have worked wonderfully. They keep me regular, don't make me sick, give me an appetite and are curing my piles. I am strong and can walk any distance. If I had had these pills five years ago they would have saved me $10,000; but they have saved my life. Let the afflicted everywhere know their value, which is beyond expression."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The relief fund for Louisville sufferers by the tornado now amounts to about $135,000. There have been about 800 applications for relief of losses of all kinds. For losses of furniture there are 472 applicants.

It is reported on good authority that a syndicate is being organized in Boston for the purpose of building twenty iron steamships, to engage in a general coastwise and foreign trade as soon as the Furquhar tonnage bill is passed by Congress.

James W. Tuffts, of Boston, manufacturer of soda water fountains, has notified his 450 employees that beginning on June 1 their work-day will be reduced from ten to nine hours without any reduction of wages, and that extra time will be paid for pro rata.

Gen. Comstock, president of the Mississippi River Commission, was before the River and Harbor Committee, in Washington, on April 4. Early and ample appropriations for river work were advocated, and ill-founded opposition to the commission's work was abolished. The Lake Borgne and other outlets were declared impracticable.

The sub-committee of the Naval Affairs Committee, to which was referred the bill to make an appropriation for the Navy Yard at New Orleans, having reported the matter back to the full committee without action, the prospects for any appropriation at this session are slim.

Representative Coleman thinks that if pressure should be brought to bear by sugar men upon the business men in the North and West from whom they get their supplies, machinery, etc., that members of the House from those sections might be influenced in favor of sugar.

The levee at Catfish Point, twenty miles above Greenville, Miss., gave way on April 4, and on the fifth instant the crevasse was about 1,700 feet wide, and widening.

An agent for the Liverpool Trading Company arrived in Galveston, last week, and entered into negotiations for fortnightly shipments of 640 tons of refrigerated Texas beef. The port of shipment has not yet been decided upon. New Orleans is a bidder. A line of steamships will begin running July 1. Cattle men meet in Fort Worth on April 10 to consider another and a larger proposition.

Six hundred and eighty-six foreigners, steerage passengers, landed in New York City on April 6.

Mr. Morrill, of Kansas, in the House, on April 7, moved to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill granting pensions to soldiers and sailors who are incapacitated from the performance of labor, and providing for pensions to widows and minor children and dependent parents. The motion was defeated.

FOREIGN.

The royal palace and the town hall in Brussels are being prepared for the receptions that will be given to Henry M. Stanley upon his arrival there on April 20. He will remain in that city for five days, and will go from there to England.

The Czar has abandoned his proposed hunting trip in Poland, on account of a plot to throw the imperial train off the track. This was discovered by the fact that a decoy train, supposed to contain the Czar and his suite, was wrecked by rocks placed on the rails.

Russia has notified Turkey that the sums paid on account of the arrears of the war indemnity and the securities given for payment thereof is not sufficient, and, therefore, if the new loan which Turkey proposes to raise is subscribed for, she will demand priority for the payment of her claims before the money is devoted to other purposes.

The Emperor of Germany has refused to consent to the publication of Bismarck's letter of resignation.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in a letter on the Irish question, proposes that, instead of continuing coercion, Parliament give Ireland popular local government similar to the English and Scotch governments, which, instead of inspiring despair, will lead to prosperity and contentment. If this were done, a request for British assistance in the purchase of land would come in the natural course of things, and similar demands for other public purposes would follow. Instead of dealing with the tenants directly the state would deal with the local bodies, whose chance of receiving credit would depend upon proper conduct.

The Portuguese government has invited firms in America and several firms in other countries to make tenders for the construction of four new cruisers. No tenders from English firms are invited.

The Newfoundland government has decided to repeal the bait act, and hereafter French, American and Canadian fishermen will be permitted to freely purchase bait in Newfoundland harbors on payment of tonnage and license fees.

The Hamburg Correspondent says that, in contrast with Bismarck's policy, the Emperor William intends to pave the way to an entente with France and thus isolate Russia. The Austrian alliance, it adds, will remain unchanged.

General Boulanger and about thirty-five members of the Boulangist committee held a conference at the residence of the general on the Isle of Jersey, last week. Upon the conclusion of the conference the committee gave a grand banquet to General Boulanger.

"Every Spring,"

Says one of the best housewives in New England, "we feel the necessity of taking a good medicine to purify the blood, and we all take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It keeps the children free from humors, my husband says it gives him a good appetite, and for myself I am sure I could never do all my work if it was not for this splendid medicine. It makes me feel strong and cheerful, and I am never troubled with headache or that tired feeling, as I used to be."

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policyholders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

F. D. VANVALKENBURGH.
106 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

For over fifty years Dr. Harls' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hallenbinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as is the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State

THE CHILDREN WE KEEP.

The children kept coming, one by one,
Till the boys were five and the girls were three,
And the big brown house was alive with fun
From the basement floor to the old roof-tree;
Like garden flowers the little ones grew,
Nurtured and trained with the tenderest care;
Warmed by love's sunshine, bathed in its dew,
They bloomed into beauty, like roses rare.

One of the boys grew weary one day,
And leaning his head on his mother's breast
He said: "I am tired and can not play—
Let me sit awhile on your knee and rest."
She cradled him close in her fond embrace,
She hushed him to sleep with her sweetest song;
And rapturous love still lighted his face
When his spirit had joined the heavenly throng.

Then the eldest girl, with her thoughtful eyes
Who stood "where the brook and the river meet,"
Stole softly away into Paradise
Ere "the river" had reached her slender feet
While the father's eyes on the graves are bent
The mother looked upward beyond the skies:
"Our treasures," she whispered, "are only lent,
Our darlings were angels in earth's disguise."

The years flew by, and the children began
With longing to think of the world outside;
And as each in his turn became a man
The boys proudly went from their father's side.
The girls were women, so gentle and fair,
That lovers were speedy to woo and win;
And with orange blossoms in braided hair,
The old home was left—new homes to begin.

So, one by one the children have gone—
The boys were five and the girls were three.
And the big brown house is gloomy and lone,
With two old folks for its company.
They talked to each other about the past,
As they sit together at eventide,
And say, "All the children we keep at last
Are the boy and girl who in childhood died."

The Lottery Question.

MR. EDITOR: The enclosed article, one of a series, was prepared for publication in the Alexandria Town Talk, which has declined to publish this or anything else opposed to the Lottery. Very respectfully,

ROBT. P. HUNTER.

ALEXANDRIA, LA., April 8, 1890.

A BRIEF HISTORICAL REVIEW.

The Louisiana State Lottery Company was granted its charter by the radical Legislature of 1868, and it was to have a corporate existence for twenty-five years, upon the payment of $40,000 per annum. The Democratic Legislature, which became both the de facto and the de jure Legislature of Louisiana after the collapse of the Packard bogus State government, and the complete establishment and final recognition of the Nicholls State government in the spring of 1877, passed an act repealing the charter of the Lottery Company. The company sought the protection of the United States Court in New Orleans, which was then thoroughly hostile to the people of this State, upon the ground that its charter gave it vested rights, and that the act repealing its charter was in violation of the Article of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that vested rights shall not be divested. The court decided in favor of the company, and an appeal was asked for by the State to the United States Supreme Court. In a similar case from Mississippi that court had already, or shortly afterwards, decided that the whole subject-matter came under the police power of the States; that such charters gave no vested rights, and were subject to repeal by the Legislatures of the State at any time. The Lottery Company foresaw its doom in the highest court in the land, and joined in the hue and cry for a Constitutional Convention, just as it is ready to do now, if its schemes should be defeated in the present Legislature.

Gov. Nicholls and a Democratic Legislature, both hostile to its pretensions, then as now, stood between the people and the Lottery Company. Resort to the courts then was practically cut off, and is now—that it has had, or will have had in 1895, its twenty-five years of corporate existence provided for by its charter—wholly useless. An amendment to the present Constitution, which can only be secured by a vote of two-thirds of both branches of the Legislature and the concurrence of the governor, or its passage over his veto, or another Constitutional Convention, is its only hope. Briefly stated, the position of the Lottery Company is simply this: it must control two-thirds of the present or of the next Legislature, or its boasted "vested rights" divest themselves ipso facto, and its corporate existence becomes moribund in 1895 by the lapse of time.

ITS CONTRACT WITH THE CONVENTION OF 1879.

When the Constitutional Convention met in 1879, Louisiana had just emerged from the horrors and oppressions of the period of reconstruction and radical rule under the Constitution of 1868—ten years of misrule and corruption—which made the people eager to rid themselves of everything pertaining to that period, and anxious to provide by an entirely new organic law against even the possibility of any return to the times or the methods from which they had just escaped. With the prescience which has distinguished its whole career, the Lottery Company had, as rats are said to do with a sinking ship, abandoned its radical friends in time to join the true people of Louisiana in their final struggle with the radical party. Its money and influence had materially helped the people in the establishment of the Nicholls State government, and it went before the Constitutional Convention of 1879, pointing to what it had done for the people, and asking for recognition. It is a singular coincidence that the convention, of the men and methods of the past regime, perpetuated the official life of but two—the Democratic treasurer, E. A. Burke, and the radical Louisiana State Lottery Company. It continued Burke in office, and it "recognized" the Lottery Company.

I quote here, for a proper understanding of the contract or agreement between the Constitutional Convention and the Lottery Company, Article 167 of the Constitution, entire, as follows, viz:

The General Assembly shall have authority to grant lottery charters or privileges, provided each charter or privilege shall pay not less than forty thousand dollars per annum in money into the treasury of the State; and provided further, that all charters shall cease and expire on the first of January, 1895, from which time all lotteries are prohibited in the State.

The forty thousand dollars per annum now provided by law to be paid by the Louisiana State Lottery Company, according to the provisions of its charter, granted in the year 1868, shall belong to the Charity Hospital of New Orleans; and the charter of said company is recognized as a contract binding on the State for the period therein specified, except its monopoly clause, which is hereby abrogated, and all laws contrary to the provisions of this article are hereby declared null and void, provided said company shall file a written renunciation of all its monopoly features in the office of the secretary of State within sixty days after the ratification of this Constitution.

Of the additional sums raised by licenses on lotteries, the hospital at Shreveport shall receive ten thousand dollars annually, and the remaining sum shall be divided each year among the several parishes in the State for the benefit of their schools.

It will be seen that so far as the Louisiana Lottery Company alone is dealt with in the article, its charter is recognized as a contract binding on the State of Louisiana, with two provisos: First, that it voluntarily abandon its monopoly privileges by filing with the secretary of State a written surrender of all monopoly rights it may have had under its charter; and, secondly, that it pay $40,000 every year to the Charity Hospital. There is a third proviso, which applies equally to it and to whatever other companies the Legislature may have meanwhile chartered, viz.: that all lottery charters shall expire in 1895, and after that date all lotteries are forbidden in this State. The date, 1895, was chosen because that gave to this particular company the full period of corporate existence provided for in its original charter—twenty-five years from 1868.

The Louisiana Lottery Company accepted the terms upon which it secured its recognition by immediately filing in the office of the secretary of State its relinquishment and abandonment of the monopoly clauses of its charter, and it has annually paid into the State treasury for the benefit of the Charity Hospital the $40,000. It seeks now to escape from the force and effect of the third proviso. It has managed, despite its solemn surrender of its monopoly rights, to defeat all attempts to charter other lottery companies, and has enjoyed all the rights it ever had under that part of its charter. In other words, of the three provisos, it has openly and continuously violated one, and is now seeking to escape from the effect of another.

In its advertisements it has boasted to the world that it was the only institution of the kind having such a constitutional recognition. It has enjoyed all of the advantages to be gained under Article 167 of the Constitution, and will now seek to evade the penalties prescribed by that article. No rule of construction is better known or more firmly established in law and in morals than that one enjoying the advantages of a contract with another is bound by the conditions upon which the advantages are secured. The article of the Constitution is very emphatic in its declaration that after the year 1895 all lotteries shall cease to be operated in this State. In accepting the advantages secured to it by the article, with this declaration as a prominent feature of the article, the Louisiana Lottery Company is, in law and in morals, as much bound by the condition relative to the year 1895 as it was bound to surrender its monopoly feature and to pay the $40,000 per annum. No one can dispute this proposition. Having then agreed in advance to cease operations, and to submit itself, as all other lottery companies which might be chartered were required to submit themselves, to the constitutional prohibition which was to attach after 1895, it is a violation of good faith and good morals for the Louisiana Lottery Company now to seek a renewal or an extension of the charter which it was to surrender in 1895. Having agreed, with the people of Louisiana, to accept as final, at that time, their declaration of a line of policy which was then to prevail with reference to all lottery companies, it is in bad faith now to ask a reversal of that policy. Having obligated itself that when that time arrived the question of lotteries or no lotteries in Louisiana should be a closed question, it is in bad faith for the Lottery Company now to seek to reopen that question, and to renew a discussion which is obliged to be more or less acrimonious and bitter. These considerations furnish a complete answer to the only possible pretension which the company could make in justification of its attempt to secure an extension or a renewal of its charter, viz: That if it desired, and the people were willing to grant, a renewal of its charter, no harm would be done. Such a pretension on its part begs the real issue. The agitation of this very question was what the people sought to avoid, and what the Lottery Company promised not to provoke. The people declared in advance what was their will, and the company, in advance, accepted that declaration as final.

This article has grown to such proportions that I must bring it to a close, with thanks to you for your kindness in granting me the space.

Papalists or Methodists—Which?

The remarkable letters which Mr. Stead wrote from the Vatican last year, and which appeared in The Pall Mall Gazette and other newspapers, have now been republished in a handy form by Cassell & Co. We need not dwell on the characteristic originality, audacity, and brilliance which make everything that Mr. Stead writes so stimulating and instructive. No problem could possibly be more fascinating than that which this volume raises. Is there any possibility that the Pope—and, therefore, the Roman Catholic Church—may become the leading and controlling force of the new era? We have entered upon a period not dissimilar to the age of transition and confusion which followed the decadence of the Roman Empire. The Roman Catholic Church did produce cosmos out of that chaos, and she reconstructed European society upon an ecclesiastical basis. Can she repeat the feat? Will the Pope of Rome become once more the ruler and guide of men? Mr. Stead says, as we believe quite truly, that the new era has three great and unprecedented characteristics. First, the world is passing into the hands of the English speaking peoples; secondly, society is being reorganized on a 'socialist basis; and, thirdly, woman is beginning to be recognized as a being with a right to equal privileges and opportunities with man. Now, if the Pope can dominate the English-speaking peoples, sanction an equitable social reconstruction, and give woman the position to which she is entitled, Papalism may triumph again, and more completely than ever. In the volume before us Mr. Stead tries hard to persuade himself that the Pope may ultimately be able to accomplish all these results. But, as we have said on previous occasions, Mr. Stead himself is compelled to bring forward various proofs of the difficulties in the way—difficulties so great that they can not be overcome without such a fundamental alteration in the essential structure of the papacy that it would become a totally different thing. We gladly recognize all that is good in the papal system, and especially delight in the beautiful humanitarianism of such men as Cardinal Manning. But it seems to us that Mr. Stead himself furnishes facts which place his hopes respecting the Pope in the new era beyond the range of reasonable expectation.

On the other hand, it is impossible for any well-informed observer to overlook the extraordinary way in which a much younger and smaller organization than the papacy fulfills the three conditions of success in the new era named by Mr. Stead. Some years ago a singularly intelligent and devoted lady said: "I have not yet made up my mind whether I will be a Methodist or a Roman Catholic." That may seem to be an extraordinary pair of alternatives; but those who are familiar with the genius of Romanism and the genius of Methodism will not be startled by it. These systems represent the two ultimate Christian alternatives—faith in the living church or faith in the living Christ; confidence in the visible organization or confidence in the invisible experience of the heart. Nothing in modern history is more remarkable than the unparalleled growth of Methodism during the last hundred years. The youngest of all the great Protestant Churches, it is already the most numerous. It has grown suddenly with the British Empire, and chiefly within the limits of the English-speaking communities. Mr. Stead reminds us that the world is passing into the hands of the English-speaking peoples. Methodism at this moment commands the allegiance of a larger number of English-speaking men and women than any other section of the Christian Church. Of course we include in this estimate the United States of America, where Methodism occupies the position that Anglicanism occupies here. The one great drawback to the influence of Methodism in the English-speaking world is the fact that it is at present split up into so many sections. But already in Canada all the Methodist Churches have united, and have consequently become the most numerous and influential body in that great Dominion. The movement in favor of union is growing and spreading in the Australian Colonies, in the United States, and in the mother country. If the Methodists only acted together, they could already control the destinies of the English-speaking peoples. Some day they will act together for spiritual purposes. And it must not be forgotten that they alone, of all the Protestant Churches, have an organization sufficiently compact to cope with the organized strength of Rome. Again, as to the socialistic tendencies of the age, Methodism has ever been above everything else a "connexion" or a brotherhood. There is a sort of freemasonry among Methodists that distinguishes them from other religious bodies. Their ministers are organized on a socialist basis. No man receives the stipend to which he might be individually entitled. Even so distinguished an orator, for example, as the late Dr. Punshon, never received more than £250 a year, with certain additions for the maintenance and education of his children. The itineracy and the class meeting tend to bind Methodists together, and to produce the fraternization which is peculiar to them. Now this spirit of brotherliness is the very soil in which socialism naturally grows, and of which socialism, in some form, is the inevitable expression. Lastly, as to the position of woman. She has always occupied in Methodism a more prominent and active sphere than in any other community except the Society of Friends. In former generations, as George Eliot reminded the public in "Adam Bede," woman preached; and woman is beginning to preach again. Tens of thousands of women have occupied at every period the semi-pastoral position of class leaders; and in the Salvation Army, which is essentially a Methodist movement, the absolute equality of woman has been recognized from the first. These peculiarities of the Methodist Church are very striking; and they, at least, prove that Methodism is peculiarly qualified to deal with the special characteristics of the era upon which we are now entering. If Mr. Stead had written about Methodism rather than about the Pope, he would not have found it necessary to exhaust all the resources of his audacious imagination in proving that the religious movement he was describing might have before it a period of unparalleled prosperity in the twentieth century. By some divine miracle papacy may be adapted to the new era. But Methodism is already adapted, so far as its potentialities, its genius and its natural tendencies are concerned; although very much remains to be done before it is really ready for its work. Methodists must close their ranks, must frankly accept the principles of democracy, must seek a much higher and broader culture. But all these things are possible and easy if Methodists have the sagacity to adapt themselves and their system to the necessities of the new era.—Methodist Times, London, March 20.

"The Mother of Female Colleges."

In examining some files of old papers in our State Library, and in reading the manuscript of a forthcoming volume on the history of education in Mississippi by my special friend and class-mate, Chancellor Mayes, of the University, I discover that my native State ranks first in providing an institution for the higher education of young women. Unless I am much mistaken, she can claim the mother of female colleges. The first chartered and well-equipped school for young ladies, with a full college curriculum and high standard of scholarship in the Southwest, if not in the United States, was located at Washington, Miss., about ten miles from Natchez. Washington had been the territorial capital, and was then the center of social and political influence. The grounds and buildings were donated to the Mississippi Conference in 1818, by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenfield, and in her honor it was called the Elizabeth Female Academy. The year following, the institution was granted a charter by the Legislature.

The "announcement" for initial term appeared in The Mississippi State Gazette, of Oct. 24, 1818, a paper published at Natchez, and was signed by B. R. Grayson, secretary of the Board of Trustees. Mr. Stiles was president of the Academy and Mrs. Sanderson, governess. Mr. Stiles remained in charge of the institution until his death in 1822, and was succeeded by the accomplished and eloquent Rev. John C. Burruss. At this time Mrs. Caroline M. Thayer became governess, and under her administration the institution achieved its highest distinction, and enjoyed its largest prosperity. Mrs. Thayer was a lady of rare scholarship, and rather extraordinary executive ability. She was the granddaughter of Gen. Warren, the hero of Bunker Hill. In a letter to Rev. John Lane, dated March 2, 1826, Dr. Winans says: "The academy is in a very flourishing condition. . . . Sister Thayer is a tutoress of very superior abilities, both as teacher and governess. We are very sanguine of the future usefulness and respectability of the academy."

The course of study embraced the English, French, and Latin languages; also history, composition, chemistry, astronomy, etc.

The spiritual culture of the students was the supreme concern of the faculty. The Bible was systematically taught, and revivals of religion were enjoyed.

From 1828 to 1832 Rev. Dr. B. M. Drake was president, with Mrs. Thayer as governess. An elaborate notice of the commencement, which embraced August 21, 1829, was published in the papers of the young State—"the first detailed account of such an event in Mississippi." The essay of Miss Anna W. Boyd, who graduated with the honors of her class, appears in full. It will be interesting to many yet living to give the names of the graduates and those distinguished in the several classes:

Graduates—Miss Anna W. Boyd, Ireland; Miss Susan Smith, Adams county; Miss Mary C. Hewett, Washington, Miss.; Miss Mary J. Patterson, Port Gibson; Miss Sarah R. Chew, Adams county; Miss Eliza A. Fox, Natchez.

Honorary distinctions were conferred upon the following pupils for proficiency in study and correct moral deportment:

First Class—Miss Ellen V. Keavy, Pinckneyville, Ill.; Miss Martha D. Richardson, Washita, La.; Miss Mary A. Fretwell, Natchez; Miss Maria L. Newman, Washington, Miss.

Second Class—Miss Martha Cosby, Wilkinson county; Miss Sarah M. Forman, Washington, Miss.; Miss Catherine O. Newman, Washington, Miss.; Miss Susan C. Robertson, Port Gibson.

Third Class—Miss Mary Scott, Alexandria, La.; Miss Charlotte C. Scott, Alexandria, La.; Miss Mary E. Gordon, Alexandria, La.; Miss Emily Smith, Adams county; Miss Emily Vick, Vicksburg.

Fourth Class—Miss Charlotte Walcott, Vicksburg; Miss Mary A. B. Chandler, Pinckneyville, Ill.

Fifth Class—Miss Mary E. Roberts, Washington, Miss.; Miss Matilda J. Nevitt, Adams county.

Sixth Class—Miss Laura J. A. King, Adams county; Miss Martha B. Brabston, Washington, Miss.

Edward Turner, George Potts, Robert L. Walker, James P. Turner, A. B. Johnson, Horatio Smith, J. F. H. Claiborne, J. W. Monett, committee.

In that list of young ladies will be recognized some honored matrons of Methodism in the Southwest yet living, and many others will recall their grandmothers who have long been saints of the skies. In the "committee" of gentlemen will be found those who were among the most distinguished in Church and State.

In 1833 Dr. Drake resigned the presidency, and was succeeded by the Rev. J. P. Thomas. In 1836 the Rev. Bradford Frazee, of Louisville, Ky., was elected president, who conducted the school successfully until 1839, when the Rev. R. D. Smith was called to the headship of "the favored Institution."

On account of several epidemics of yellow fever, the removal of the capital to Jackson, and other causes, after some years of varying fortune the academy suspended. Chancellor Mayes says of this institution: "For twenty-five years it did a noble work. In the decade from 1819 to 1829 its boarders amounted in number annually from 28 to 63." Mrs. John Lane, Mrs. Dr. C. K. Marshall, Mrs. Bishop Kavanaugh, Mrs. Dr. B. M. Drake, and many elect ladies of the Southwest, were educated at that mother of female colleges. On its foundations others have been built, and are to-day doing great work for the church and the world.

Indian Mission.

MR EDITOR: Will you please allow me to add three more names to my Indian mission list? Mrs. Mary McDonald, Rose Hill, Miss., sent me $1; sent by Bro. T. L. Mellen, presiding elder of the Meridian district, with words of encouragement. And Bros. W. M. Lewis, of Union, Miss., and R. A. Nicholson, same office, for $1 a year each, for five years; sent by Bro. J. G. Cammack, pastor of Union work. And just here allow me to put in a sentence or two from his card (he will please pardon me for the liberty): "Dear brother, may God bless you and the cause. When I look around me and see so many that know nothing about God, my heart burns within me. I was talking with one this morning that had never heard of Christ, and asked him if he would go to hear an Indian preach, and he said he would."

Now, just think of it! Hundreds of them that know nothing of Christ or the Bible; and yet I have been one whole year trying to raise five hundred dollars to send the gospel to them, and only have now, promised and cash, about two hundred and seventy-five dollars from a great church having over one million members, and many of them wealthy.

My brethren and sisters, what is the matter? and what will become of us at this rate? Will we ever see the jasper walls or walk the golden streets? I have now about, in cash and subscription that is due whenever we get the missionary, $275, and about $150 running through five years.

Brethren and sisters, please, for the dear Lord's sake and for the sake of the poor, perishing Indians, send on your names with amount you are willing to give. I rather you would not send money till I need it; as if we should fail, I will have to send it back. However, just as you like; I have a safe place to keep it. Now, I expect to try and do my whole duty in this matter. How many others will say and do the same? I will see.

May God abundantly bless all the people, spiritually and temporally! is the prayer of your servant in earnest for the Indian Mission.

THE POWER OF CHRIST.—Rev. Dr. Cuyler says: "When I was a student at Princeton, Professor Henry had so constructed a huge bar of iron, bent into the form of a horseshoe, that it used to hang suspended from another iron bar above it. Not only did it hang there, but it upheld four thousand pounds' weight attached to it! That horseshoe magnet was not welded or glued to the metal above it; but through the iron wire coiled around it there ran a subtle current of electricity from a galvanic battery. Stop the flow of that current one instant, and the huge horseshoe dropped. So does all the lifting power of a Christian come from the currents of spiritual influence which flow into his heart from the living Jesus. The strength of the Almighty One enters into a believer. If his connection with Christ is cut off, in an instant he becomes as weak as any other man."

The totals of missions in China are: 39 societies, 526 male missionaries and 597 women—total, 1,123 missionaries; 162 native ordained helpers, 1,278 unordained, 34,555 communicants in the churches, and 14,817 pupils in schools; $44,173 were contributed by the churches the past year, and the net increase in membership was 2,295.

HEIMGANG.

"Heimgang!" So the German people whisper when they hear the bell
Tolling from some gray old steeple
Death's familiar call to dwell;
When they hear the solemn dirges
Swelling out from chapel doors,
And the singers' chanting surges
"Heimgang!" Always going home.

Heimgang! Quaint and tender saying,
In the grand old German tongue,
That hath stayed Melancthon's praying,
And the hymns that Luther sung;
Blessed is our loving Maker,
That where'er our feet shall roam,
Still we journey towards God's Acre,
Heimgang! Always going home.

Vicksburg District Conference.

The Vicksburg District Conference held its annual meeting at Utica, April 3 and 4; Rev. John A. Ellis, P. E., presiding.

The attendance on the Conference was not as large as usual. This is, in a great measure, to be accounted for by the fact that a large portion of the northern end of the district is overflowed, and the delegates were unwilling to leave their homes. From the reports of the pastors, the spiritual condition of the district is good, and improving. While the overflow may, for a time, retard the work in some places, cripple it to some extent, and have its effect upon the financial interests, it will only be temporary. Most of the preachers are at their posts, and will stay with their people. The churches and parsonages are, as a rule, in good repair; title deeds perfect, and properly recorded. Some new ones are being erected.

Bro. D. L. Mitchel, of the ADVOCATE, was with us during the entire session, and by his words of cheer and counsel rendered us valuable assistance. Rev. Alex F. Watkins, agent of "Millsaps College," was also present, and addressed the Conference. He talks "college" every opportunity he gets. He gave his services to Bro. Roberts in the pulpit, and made a good impression.

The Washington circuit—Bro. R. Selby, pastor—reported all of the Conference assessments paid in full. Bro. Selby seems to have an irresistible way of reaching a man's pocketbook. No other charge is so far advanced in its finances.

Sister E. D. Jones, district secretary of the Woman's Board of Church Extension, read a paper giving an account of the work that has been done along that line in the Vicksburg district. From it we learn that we are in the lead. There are thirty-two societies in the Conference, and fifteen of them are in this district. This is a work that should have the hearty good-will and co-operation of Methodists everywhere. Little by little they gather their money in, a nickle here and a nickle there. But the nickles pile up into dollars after awhile. And the time will be when every church will, through the efforts of these women, own a comfortable home for the preacher and his family.

The session was a pleasant and harmonious one. The good people of Utica made us welcome in their homes, and did all in their power to make our stay an enjoyable one. We found Bro. Roberts in the midst of a revival—the altar full of penitents, and the church filled to overflowing at every service. Fayette was selected as the next place of meeting.

Delegates to the next Annual Conference: T. A. Holloman, Dan'l F. Ashford, Rev. C. K. Marshall and W. A. Gunning. Alternates: R. C. Kelly and R. K. Platt.

The Jackson District Conference, Mississippi Annual Conference.

The Jackson District Conference, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in West Jackson Church, Jackson, Miss., Friday, April 4, 1890; Rev. Bishop C. B. Galloway, D. D., presiding. The Bishop opened the Conference by reading the tenth chapter of Luke, singing hymn 485, and prayer. He then welcomed the Jackson District Conference to West Jackson Church, noting the fact that not much more than five years ago a little Sabbath-school, struggling for existence, was conducted on Sabbath afternoon, under very discouraging circumstances in the upper room of the engine house on West Capital street; but that Sabbath-school had now grown to be a station with a most beautiful church-building costing not less than $2,500, with a membership of one hundred and fifty, and growing; a flourishing Sabbath-school of one hundred and twenty-five, and growing, and the work almost able to dispense with aid from the Mission Board.

The roll was called, and seventeen traveling ministers and twenty-seven laymen answered to their names, or were present during the session. Only one pastor was absent, and he, following the fashion in this part of the country, had taken the measles. Rev. B. F. Lewis was elected secretary, and Rev. W. W. Drake, assistant secretary. The reports from every field were good. In only one or two instances was the spiritual condition reported as discouraging. The finances were, as a rule, paid up to date. In some cases, the presiding elder and pastor were overpaid, and one work had paid nearly one-half the pastor's salary, though only three and one-half months of the Conference year are past. Church buildings generally, are in a good condition. There are good prospects of rebuilding the church at Bentonia, which was destroyed by a storm a few weeks ago. The new church at Yazoo City, being built at a cost of over ten thousand dollars, will soon be ready for use. Most of the charges have parsonages in pretty good order, and on some works improvements are already on foot. Sabbath-schools all over the district are doing well. In not a single instance that I can recall was there a permanent suspension. Some new ones have been organized this year. Some of the young ministers were made to realize the fact that older men, and more experienced in the various duties of life, were watching with great anxiety their methods of dealing with young Methodists. One fact worthy of note is, a pastor reported that every Sunday, at the close of Sabbath-school, he occupied about five minutes talking to the children, and sometimes preached them a little sermon.

There was only one point in the district unoccupied, and the pastors, whose works are adjacent to the territory, are endeavoring to carry Methodism there. There is but one pastoral charge in the whole district drawing aid from the Domestic Mission Board.

On the whole, the Conference was not only pleasant, but profitable. West Jackson Church was much benefited, and it is hoped the influence has pervaded the district. Some very strong resolutions were passed concerning the Louisiana State Lottery, copies of which were ordered sent to Governor Francis T. Nicholls, of Louisiana, Postmaster-General Wanamaker, and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, to meet in Canton, Miss., in December next: R. W. Millsaps, D. Bunch, R. G. Hudson, R. H. Noblin. Clinton, Miss., was elected the place for holding the next District Conference.

Woodville District Conference.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

Temperance, in its widest sense, is self-control. More strictly, it consists in the moderate use of what is good and total abstinence from all that is evil. Few questions in our day more deeply and widely interest the Christian world than that of discovering and applying an adequate remedy for the evils of intemperance. Of all purely factitious curses, the excessive use of intoxicating drinks is, perhaps, the most widely prevalent, and the most deleterious in its consequences. The drink and the appetite for it are the results of man's actions and not of God's works. The maker, the seller and the drinker of intoxicants are partakers in a great sin. The State undertakes now to restrain the two former, while Christian love strives to prevent or cure the appetite of the latter.

It is beautiful to see the State and the Church co-operating in their efforts to destroy the monster of the whisky traffic. So long as it is legalized and made respectable, the habitual drunkard will rarely be cured, even though he be a church member, while countless thousands will annually be gathered from the ranks of the young to swell the funeral procession of drunkards.

The hopes of the future lie in the children of the present. We, therefore, recommend that all children be taught to practice total abstinence, that a generation may be reared who shall be strangers to the fatal appetite. Your committee rejoice in hearing testimony to the beneficial results of legal prohibition wherever it has been faithfully tried, and unhesitatingly commend it to all as the most potent civil restraint yet brought to bear against this monster of the State's creation. It is doubtful whether Satan himself could have devised a better scheme to serve his own purposes than the license system of this country. It has deluded all who have had anything to do with it, and now when the government would check its ruinous results, it finds itself placed in the condition of a parent who had trained a child to practice a vice for pay and then suddenly commands it to quit. The habit of a nation is harder to break than the habit of one man in proportion as the nation is multiplex.

It is very difficult for some citizens to see that what the government so long said was right can now be so terribly wrong. We beg our people never to be deluded by the doctrine of high license as an ultimate policy. Sin and crime should not be licensed at any price. He who signs a petition for another to sell is as guilty as the one who sells or the one who drinks. He who helps to set a snare for his neighbor is guilty of his death if he die by the snare. Whisky does a hundred-fold more harm than good; therefore, let whisky be exterminated.

In view of the immeasurable evils growing out of intemperance and the whisky traffic as its promoter, be it

Resolved, That, as citizens, we will heartily aid in the legal suppression of the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That, as ministers and Christians, we will endeavor to carry out the excellent law of our church for the prevention of intemperance.

Results—Possibilities.

Our books are closing, and we find that over $58,000 have been paid by the church on assessments during the year just ending and about $1,000 have been pledged as special donations, of which about $2,700 have been collected. On our Loan Funds we have collected nearly $5,700, and secured pledge for $4,700 more, which are yet unredeemed. We have helped 361 churches and forty parsonages, being an increase over last year of twenty churches and two parsonages. The increased payments to these over last year are about $20,000. In addition to above, we are ready to pay five other churches as soon as their refunding bonds are received, and if we had $8,000 more we could help eight other churches, whose completion must be deferred till we get the money for them. Can not, will not, the church rally and raise this $8,000 during the month of April, and let us carry to the General Conference the report that our decks are fully cleared and every dollar expected by the churches, we have agreed to help, is paid in full? Generous responses have been made to our former appeals, and these have enabled us to accomplish the results above stated. Now, if every preacher who reads this will take his collection for the current year at once, and send the money to the treasurer of his Conference Board, and if these treasurers will remit to us all that is due us before the end of the month—say by April 25—the hearts of many expectant brethren will be gladdened and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper. Let every man heed this call.

Notes from Opelousas.

We are moving on with some degree of success and encouragement. We have filled every appointment since the first day of January. Our Sabbath services have been generally well attended. We have received several into the church by letter and on profession of faith. Have lifted the foreign missionary collection in cash and subscription, and have forwarded to the agent, Dr. Barbee, the amount assessed against us for delegates to the General Conference.

Our first quarterly meeting services embraced the fourth Sunday of March, and the Saturday before. Our presiding elder, Rev. John A. Miller, was present, presiding and preaching to the satisfaction of all the people. A good collection was lifted for the support of the ministry.

We began a protracted meeting here on Sunday, the thirteenth instant. Bro. W. W. Hopper has promised to assist us during the meeting. The prayers of all of God's people are asked for the success of this meeting, that scores of souls may be converted, and the church abundantly blessed.

Many of our people here commend your effective thrusts at the Louisiana Lottery Company, and the ADVOCATE is finding favor among some who are not in the habit of reading anything religious. We are distributing the extra copies of the ADVOCATE sent us, and will forward some subscriptions in a short time. We wish you a glorious success in the battle you are waging for God, home, and our native land.

An Echo from North Caddo.

There are some things in Bro. Parker's recent article on "Home Missions" that call loudly for explanation, or, perhaps, information. North Caddo is a mission connected with the Mooringsport circuit, and the preacher sent to the latter is supposed to be capable of spreading over, if not filling, both appointments. Situated between Fairy Lake, on the south, and Bright Star circuit, on the north, its proportions are simply dazzling, and its range illimitable. But I want to tell Bro. Parker where we are, for to be ignored would never do. So we are here, and wish to tell him kindly some facts about these home missions.

First, the negro church he referred to as doing such remarkable things in the way of missionary contributions, doubtless, is in the city of Baton Rouge, and has its regular meetings of all kinds, at which collections are taken. The congregation have some ready cash on hand to meet these. They are organized, and meet regularly.

At most of the churches on the home missions of Louisiana service once a month is the rule, and that often prevented by inclement weather. Moreover, the people belong to the agricultural class, and only have money once a year, and not much then. The regions of country embraced by these missions are the poorest and most sparsely populated portions of our State. The people are scattered far and wide over these lands, and a thorough organization is apparently altogether impracticable.

Again, concerning the moneys appropriated and the meager results therefrom, frequently the preacher reports the amounts received from the Board as part of his salary, and not as distinct therefrom. Besides, the salaries reported are not so startling in their munificent proportions after all. If some one will devise a plan whereby we may gather in a compact working body fifty or seventy-five Methodist families scattered over an area comprising as many square miles, then will our home mission work flourish and bring forth more abundant fruit. There is where your facts and figures disagree, Bro. Parker.

Our Organ.

The following paper was adopted by the Vicksburg District Conference, in session recently in Utica, Miss.:

We recognize in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE the greatest instrument for good that we possess. It is patent to every thinking and observing man that the newspaper press is wielding more influence over the minds and characters of the people than any other one power now in existence. Numerically speaking, there can be no comparison between the secular and religious papers, for the balance is in favor of the former. Morally speaking, there can be no comparison, for the balance is notably in favor of the latter. It is a lamentable fact that hundreds of our members will take a one-dollar secular paper, whose columns are filled, to a great extent, with political filth, murder and arson, bloodshed and rape, theft in high places, and marital infidelity, and numberless outrages against virtue, religion and civilization that are being perpetrated daily throughout this land, filling their minds and hearts, and that of their wives and children, with a flood of immoral tinctures that will necessarily stain and corrupt their religious lives, and force them to a lower level in morals, and all this in preference to our Advocates, the institutions of our church, which they have taken a vow to support; which afford pure, clean, healthy food for the mind; which move upon a high plane of morals, and are elevating, inspiring and life-giving in all their influences.

To this end we heartily commend our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and earnestly recommend its introduction into every Methodist family, and insist that our preachers and laymen use more diligence to introduce it into every family. We are Methodist people, and it is our duty to read Methodist papers.

Our ADVOCATE is now putting forth Herculean efforts to suppress, to kill the most gigantic and widespread evil this civilization has yet seen; an evil that is compassing the land and overshadowing with its baneful influences the churches of the living God—the Louisiana Lottery. Words can not express the watchful interest we have in this contest. We gladly endorse the editor, publisher and business manager in the fight they are making for the morals, the lives and the homes of the good people of Louisiana, as well as the nation; and we pray that a glorious conquest may crown their efforts.

Respectfully submitted.

The Lottery.

The Lottery.

Some time since the New York Herald sought interviews with several parties in this city on the Lottery question. Among others, Dr. Carradine was solicited to give his views. This he did, writing them out and handing them to the agent of the Herald in this city. A few days ago this paper was handed back with the information that the Herald wished no more on the subject. We take pleasure in presenting Dr. Carradine's views as written out for the Herald to the readers of the ADVOCATE.

I have devoted considerable attention to the study of the Lottery in Louisiana. I have marked it in its influence upon State, city, church, the home, laboring classes and the young, and unhesitatingly pronounce it an unmitigated evil and curse.

It is beyond all question a gigantic theft and crime producer. It is a gambling made simple and easy, and brought within reach of children and servants and clerks. The daily drawings and the countless tickets fluttering in shop windows all over the city, gradually familiarize the mind with evil, tempt the classes mentioned to invest, and then to steal from employer to carry on their hopeless labor of drawing a prize. It is ruining the rising generation. It is, in my opinion, the greatest political power in the land. It rules the city of New Orleans, and holds the State with the grasp of an anaconda. It treats the notices of our assessor, legally written and served, with sovereign contempt. It takes no notice of public attacks from platform or pulpit. It gains every case in the courts. It has the finest lawyers in the city retained as their counsel. It bribes anything and anybody. The Legislature in its hands is like clay in the hands of the potter. It defies the laws of the United States; for while there is a specific national law prohibiting the carrying of Lottery matter in the United States mails, the Louisiana Lottery, equal to this and all other emergencies, brings the law into contempt by having its letters sent to M. A. Dauphin, and its money to the New Orleans National Bank. The strange spectacle of an organized rebellion is seen in our borders. Twenty or thirty stockholders down here are found to be greater than the whole country combined. They literally bid defiance to State and National law.

It is said to be a legal institution; but the study of the bill passed by the Constitutional Convention of 1879, where the Lottery was allowed to complete its chartered existence, provided it surrendered all its monopoly features—and the utter failure of the Lottery to comply with this exaction—will show that it is not a legal institution.

It swallows up in three years the wealth of a Vanderbilt. It pays for the privilege of financially squeezing the nation, forty thousand dollars a year—and receives over thirty millions a year in return. Three per cent. of this amount, Mr. Dauphin admits, comes from Louisiana, and mainly New Orleans. Nearly a million dollars annually taken from office, store, shop and home, and flung into a great incorporated rat hole explains the financial depression in our city and State.

One of the last works of the Lottery is to silence the press of New Orleans. If any one doubts, let him compare the papers of the North to-day and our city. Columns of matter in New York papers about the Lottery—nothing in our journals. The secret is, that Lottery men have purchased our newspaper stock and are now owners and controllers of, at least, two of our leading papers. In the cases of other papers the Lottery advertisements, amounting to thousands of dollars, constitute too rich a sop to quarrel with. If a king and parliament controlled the press, there would be war; but the Louisiana State Lottery has done this in New Orleans, and nothing is said or done.

B. CARRADINE.

The Louisiana Lottery.

WOODVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

He who desires to get another's property without giving an equivalent is guilty of covetousness; he who, by any means, obtains the possessions of others without their consent, becomes a thief in fact. A lottery is a plan to facilitate covetousness in getting the property of others. The owners of the machine are supposed to appropriate the lion's share to themselves, while they distribute baits to the gullible public in sufficient number and quantity to keep them biting.

A more subtle and gigantic scheme for deluding and robbing mankind was probably never devised than the Louisiana Lottery. For fifteen years it has preyed upon the people of the State and of the nation, and fattened by what it has devoured, till now it presents the magnitude of a stupendous anaconda threatening to crush a whole State in its folds, and swallow it at a gulp. Conceived in covetousness, and born in fraud, it has filched millions from deluded people, veiling its conduct with a show of charity well calculated to blind men's eyes to the enormity of its robberies.

While the Constitution and laws of the United States, and of each of the States, condemn the principles upon which it is founded, the Louisiana Lottery presents the strange spectacle of a great public institution existing in defiance of the moral sentiment, intelligence and honor of the people.

It is understood that the Lottery Company will ask a renewal of its charter at an early day. Some facts in this connection the people and the Legislature of Louisiana would do well to consider. Should the Legislature, under present circumstances, renew the charter, accepting the offer of the company to pay the State debt of twelve or fifteen millions of dollars, the great State of Louisiana will stand convicted in the eyes of the civilized world of being bribed to charter an institution whereby the people generally may be robbed to pay the debt of Louisiana. Should the Legislature renew the charter without stating any consideration for the renewal, then the members of said Legislature can by no possibility escape the charge of personally accepting bribes. So, if the Lottery charter be renewed, either for or without compensation to the State, the noble State of Louisiana, or her representatives in the Legislature, or both, must stand convicted of bribery in the judgment of the civilized world. Is Louisiana prepared to have the world's wonder at her past conduct turned into contempt and scorn while she sells herself for money? May God save the State and her people, whose worthy governor sets his face as a flint against this monstrous iniquity, from so transcendent and humiliating a disgrace!

In view of the foregoing, be it resolved by this District Conference, which is composed largely of Louisiana representatives:

1st, That we most solemnly and positively disapprove and condemn the Louisiana State Lottery as an agent of immeasurable corruption and sin against God and man.

2nd, That any member of our church who buys a lottery ticket should be dealt with for gross immorality.

The Lottery.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Resolutions by the District Conference of the Jackson district, Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

First, That we feel a painful humiliation in that we are compelled to recognized in our midst a great bribery institution illegally acting, as we are informed, under the name of the Louisiana Lottery Company, located in our neighboring city, New Orleans.

Second, That the more immediate practical evils of this great concern are of two general kinds, viz.: First, its opportunity to practice bribery on a most gigantic scale, which opportunities it does not fail to embrace, and so, to the extent of its ability, corrupt private morals and public justice on every occasion. Secondly, By its insidious methods of filching money from the people under the false and corrupting prospect of possible gain, this attack upon public and private morals is very great and widespread.

Third, That we claim, as a matter of simple justice, the protection which can be furnished us in these premises, only by the voters and officers of our sister State, and next-door neighbors, the great and patriotic commonwealth of Louisiana. We respectfully and earnestly appeal to Louisiana for this protection.

Fourth, That we tender our sincere thanks to the governor of Louisiana for his prompt discharge of a high official duty, in his public rejection of an insulting bribe offered him recently by this great bribery concern.

Fifth, That we earnestly appeal to the Congress of the United States and the Postmaster-General for such protection in these premises as lies alone in their hands.

Sixth, That the secretary of this Conference be instructed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to Governor Nicholls, of Louisiana, and Postmaster-General Wanamaker.

Seventh, That we are glad to see the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, as well as religious men generally in New Orleans to-day, manifesting a great interest in this important subject.

BOOKS.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD. By W. C. Black, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference. John B. Alden, publisher, New York.

This is the fourth edition of this popular little work. Dr. Black has added a good deal to the original edition, in that he has developed more fully the deaconess idea. This idea seems to be growing in favor with the modern churches, and the author has added considerably to the value of his book by giving the history of its conception and development. We commended the book when it first appeared, and now it is more valuable and interesting.

PERIODICALS.

—THE HOME MAKER, for April, is on hand, and running over with most sensible articles in regard to every department of housekeeping. You can't find anything better. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, $2.

—If you want to know about new books, the BOOK-BUYER will give you valuable information, such as you can depend on. It is only ten cents a number, or one dollar a year, and is sent out by the always reliable Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

—THE TREASURY, for April, has its usual table for the edification of pulpit and pew. This monthly is ably edited by J. Sanderson, D. D., LL.D., and published in good style and substantial form by E. B. Treat, New York. Price, $2 50. Clergymen, $2.

—THE HOMILETIC MAGAZINE, for February and March, came together this time. There are sermons, expository papers, homiletical commentaries, sermonic outlines, biblical illustrations and practical homiletics. This is a reprint of an English periodical, and, in some respects, is a valuable monthly for a preacher. E. B. Treat, New York.

—THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for April, is on our table full to overflowing with strong and beautiful things. This is a very valuable review, and this number is specially rich. Dr. Samford continues his Reminiscences of the Oldon Time in a fine paper on Ignatius A. Few; Dr. Paul Whitehead gives a charming bit of criticism on Two Anonymous Poems; Dr. Tigert gives his third article on Theism; Dr. Tillett writes about What Books Shall I Buy? H. W. Featherstun contributes a paper on The Origin of Myths. The Editor's Table is unusually rich in the discussion of historical points. J. D. Barbee, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $2 50.

Sunday-School Lesson.

Second Quarter—Studies in Luke.

LESSON IV.—April 27.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

Luke viii, 4-15.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Take heed, therefore, how ye hear.—Luke viii, 18.

PLACE.—On the shore of Galilee.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Matt. xiii, 1-23; Mark iv, 1-25.

4. When much people were gathered together—The cities of all Galilee furnished their contingent to swell the company of hearers of the Lord. By a parable—"Parables" is derived from parabello, "I place beside" in order to compare. It is the evident intention of the evangelist to present these parables as the first which the Lord spoke, this of the sower introducing a manner of teaching which he had not hitherto employed.

5. A sower—Literally, the sower—the man whose form and work were so familiar, in the seed time of the year, to the peasants of Galilee. The onward frame-work of the parable requires us to remember the features in which Eastern tillage differs from our own—the ground less perfectly cleared, the road passing across the field, the rocks often cropping out or lying under an inch or two of soil, the patch of good ground rewarding, by what might be called a lucky chance, rather than skill of husbandry, the labor of the husbandman. Some fell by the wayside—In the fields close to the shore may be seen the hard-beaten paths into which no seed can penetrate; the flights of innumerable birds ready to peck it up; the rocks thinly covered with soil, and the stony ground, the dense tangled growth of weeds and thistles in neglected corners, and the rich, deep loam on which the harvests grew with unwonted luxuriance.

6. Upon a rock—To be understood of a rocky soil covered with a thin layer of earth, so that the seed is repelled as soon as it attempts to shoot out roots. It grows comparatively high, but can only unfold itself above and not below.

7. And some fell among thorns—As fields were often divided by hedges of thorns, this might easily come to pass; "and the thorns sprung up, and choked them," or as Wiclif has, "strangled it," so that, as St. Mark adds, "it yielded no fruit."

8. On good ground—Which, through the care of the husbandman in preparation, has become good. Even here there were different degrees of fertility. He cried. This word—spake with a loud voice—shows, like the "hearken" in St. Mark, the special attention which our Lord called to his new method. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear—In other words, "this teaching is worthy the deepest attention of those who have the moral and spiritual capacity to understand it."

9. And his disciples asked him—They, it would seem, were with our Lord in the boat. What might this parable be—The wonder of the disciples probably included many elements of surprise. Why in parables, instead of, as before, the direct announcement of the kingdom of heaven, and the call to prepare for it by repentance? And why to them, when they were not students with intellect sharpened in rabbinic schools, but plain peasants and fishermen, slow, and dull of heart?

10. And he said—This verse is rather an answer to a question recorded in St. Matthew, "Why dost thou speak to them in parables?" It is given—Better, It has been given, as by the special act of God. To know the mysteries—That is, to grasp the revealed secrets, the "apples of gold" hid in these "networks of silver." The proper use of the word "mystery" is the opposite of its current use. It is now generally used to imply something which we can not understand; in the New Testament it always means something once hidden now revealed. But to others in parables—We are not to supply, "with the rest speak I in parables," but, to the rest it is given to understand the mysteries of the kingdom of God only when they are laid open to them in parabolic form. That seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand—Our Lord wished and meant the multitudes to hearken and understand, and this method awoke their interest and deepened their attention; but the resultant profit depended solely on the degree of their faithfulness.

11. Now the parable is this—The hearers who had gathered round our Lord were represented, roughly and generally, by the four issues of the seed scattered by the sower, and all preachers of the truth, from that day to this, have felt that their own experience has presented analogous phenomena. The "word of God" is obviously to be taken in its widest sense, as including every form by which a revelation from God is conveyed to the mind of men.

12. Then cometh the devil. The devil—The accuser or slanderer. St. Mark has "the wicked one," St. Matthew, "Satan." That the Savior, not in the parable, but in the explanation of the parable to his disciples, speaks so unequivocally of the evil one, is a convincing proof that the New Testament eatanology is to be regarded as something entirely differently from a pedagogic accommodation to a superstitions popular fancy. Taketh away—"Snatches." It is done in a moment; by a smile at the end of the sermon; by a silly criticism at the church door; by foolish gossip on the way home. These are "the fowls of the air" whom the evil one uses in this task. Lest they should believe—Rather, that they may not believe. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip," or rather "drift away from them."

13. They on the rock—Shallow, impulsive listeners, whose enthusiasm is hot and transient as a blaze in the straw. With joy—Inward hardening is not seldom coupled with superficial feeling. These have no root—The "root" is obviously the conviction which ripens into a purpose and strikes its fibers deep down into reason, conscience, and will. The second type of character stands in marked contrast with the first. Rapid change, strong emotion, a quicker show of conversion than in the case where it is more real—such results, it need hardly be said, come under the notice of every earnest preacher.

14. That which fell among thorns are they—The class here described are worldly, ambitious, preoccupied, luxurious listeners, who feel the "expulsive power" of earthly careers and pleasure crowding out the growth of the good seed. The former class was more superficially touched; this class have not "broken up their fallow ground," and therefore "sow among thorns." Cares and riches and pleasures—Here, as in Mark vi, 19, a threefold cause for the miscarriage of the third class, earthly care, possession, and enjoyment. Luke very beautifully describes these hearers as going among the one and the other, after they had listened for a while. A picturesque addition. Riches—"The deceitfulness of riches." Matthew, Mark.

15. Honest—Not in the popular sense, but in the sense of the Latin honestus: noble, virtuous, worthy. Keep it—The opposite of the "forgetful hearers." With patience—Consistently, through the course of a life spent in duties, and amidst discouragements

Missionary.

What a Pastor Can Do for Missions.

It is becoming more evident every year that the present rate of progress in missionary effort can be maintained only by a corresponding increase in interest and liberality on the part of all God's people.

It is equally evident that if this result is ever to be realized its attainment must depend chiefly on the pastors of the individual churches. Special appeals, visits of missionaries, secretaries, and others, may have a temporary effect; but the real work of enlarging the views, awakening the sympathies, kindling the desires, and increasing the liberality of the great body of believers in relation to the great work of giving the gospel to the nations, must be done by the pastors if it is done at all. They only have the ear of their people constantly. They are the divinely-appointed teachers and leaders of the flock.

What then can the pastor do?

1. He can himself embrace the missionary idea, divinely taught, of the missionary character and constitution of the church. This too many pastors utterly fail to do. The local church, its interests, its preservation, or its progress, limits and engrosses their attention. If the thought of missions comes in at all it is only on rarest occasions, and then rather as the thought of two hungry Boards or companies of men who are continually begging, to whom something must be given for the sake of decency or to stop their mouths as often (?) as once a year, but to whom care must be taken not to give too much, lest it be so much subtracted from the strength of the local church. Never was mistake more radical or fatal. These are the churches that dry up down to their very roots; that find it hard to hold their own and make good their annual losses. Wiser than they was he who said, "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth." "Give, and it shall be given unto you."

2. The pastor, impressed with this truth himself, can press it upon his people, illustrate it, enforce it in a multitude of times and ways. He can make it prominent in his prayers and conversations and draw his frequent illustrations from the work and history of missions. He can show how this thought runs through all the Scriptures, and is especially prominent in the last utterances of the Lord, from the first coming after his resurrection, when he said to his disciples, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you," to his last appearance on Olivet, preceding his disappearance in the clouds of heaven, and his last declaration, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." And this the faithful pastor is bound to do if he would "teach them to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded." The responsibility of obedience to these commands he can and he is bound to press upon the individual conscience, whether men will hear or forbear.

3. He can carefully inform himself and then inform his people in regard to the nature, history, methods, progress, and prospects of the missionary work. There was a time, perhaps, when it was not easy to do this. It is easy now. The volume of missionary literature is great and constantly increasing. No branch of literature is more thrilling and inspiring or furnishes richer food for thought or material for discourse. Denominational periodicals are abundant, furnishing details of work and progress in distinct fields of operation, while general publications, such as the Missionary Review, or the Gospel in All Lands, cover the broad field of the world.—Free Church of Scotland Monthly.

SAYINGS OF EARLY MISSIONARIES.—Hear the voices! Jesus said: "Go, teach all nations." Paul: "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and the barbarians." Chrysostom (404): "Although thou didst go into the British Isles, thou shouldest hear all men everywhere discoursing the Scriptures." Patrick (400): "I was reformed that I should concern myself for the salvation of others, pagan tribes, when I used not to care for my own." Gregory the Great: "Glory be to God, out of love to whom we seek our brethren in Britain, whom we know not, and by whose grace we found those whom we sought, without their knowing it." Boniface (700): "Since I am the least and most unworthy of all the messengers sent out for the publication of the gospel, may I not die without having brought forth fruit." Anschar (850), the first medical missionary: "When I was asked whether I would go for God's name among the heathen to publish the gospel, I could not decline such an offer; yes, with all my heart, and no man can make me waver in my resolution." Raimund Lull (1200), the first missionary to the Mohammedans: "To Thee, O Lord God, I now offer myself. Condescend to accept all I give and offer Thee." Erasmus (1500): "Resolve yourself; it is hard work to which I call you; but it is the highest and noblest of all. No one, however, is fit to preach the gospel to the heathen who has not made his mind superior to riches, pleasure, life, ay, and death itself." Baron Von Welz (1664): "Is it right that we keep the gospel to ourselves? that students of theology should be confined to home parishes? that we should spend so much on clothing and eating and drinking, and take no thought to spread the gospel?" Zinzendorf, that truly apostolic saying (1700): "I consider that country my home which is most in need of the gospel."—The Message.

The first missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church to India was Rev. William Butler, who went to India in 1856 and commenced a mission at Bareilly. The North India Conference was organized in 1864, the South India Conference in 1876, the Bengal Conference in 1886, and in the three Conferences there are now 71 male missionaries, 58 wives of missionaries, 12 missionaries of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, assisted by 277 native preachers, and over 890 teachers and other native helpers. There are also 6,517 members, 5,770 probationers, 12,312 Sunday-school scholars in 1,074 Sunday-schools, 1,973 pupils in 16 high-schools, 18,305 pupils in other day-schools. Last year there were 2,838 conversions, 2,250 adults and 1,662 infants baptized.—Gospel in All Lands.

The latest statistics we have of Protestant Missions in India are those furnished by Dr. Badley in 1885. These show one hundred missionary societies at work in India, reporting 781,367 communicants. Of these 439,869 are in the European and 284,438 in the American Missions.

The workers from Christendom number 2,933 ordained, 656 lay, and 2,373 women. The native workers are 30,391, of whom 2,423 are ordained.—Gospel in All Lands.

Temperance.

Mixed Up with Politics.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, in the current issue of the Christian Herald, of which he is editor, says:

The temperance cause is now so mixed up with politics that moral suasion is being sadly neglected. There used to be held a hundred temperance meetings where now there is one meeting. While we are discussing the laws on the subject of liquor-selling, we are letting hundreds of men and women go to ruin for lack of proper instruction on the importance of abstinence. We want in the country ten thousand old-fashioned John B. Gough temperance meetings. But, you say, where are the John B. Goughs? They are now in our schools and colleges and farmhouses, are already in the occupations and professions of life. The eloquence to come is greater than the eloquence passed away. By all means make the laws right, but let us by force of Christian persuasion stop the stampede to death of multitudes who will not wait until we get the laws what they ought to be. We need to work more rapidly on this subject than formerly. In olden times it took most men five or ten years to become thorough drunkards. Now they may reach the foot of that stairs by one jump, because of the worst adulteration of liquors. Young men used to go on a spree and then come back and go to work. Now we have confirmed drunkards at twenty-one. It is the most urgent duty of all ministers of religion and all reformers to put forth unwonted efforts in the direction of moral suasion. Other things need to be done, but this must not be left undone.

Gov. Larrabee, of Iowa, who was by no means an enthusiast for the Iowa law when he was elected governor, in an address in Des Moines, last month, said that he had formerly opposed prohibition as impracticable, but that in eighty counties in the State the jails had been emptied, and the number of persons in the State penitentiary reduced by one-half during his administration, and that court and people were agreed that the cause of this was prohibition. He said that the taxes were less and the markets better, and that observing all these things in the administration of the affairs of the State, he could not help but become a prohibitionist. Gov. Larrabee was distrusted by the temperance people when elected, lest his known opposition to prohibition at the time of its submission should lead to the use of his position as governor to belittle and defeat the law. But his conversion to prohibition while administering a law contrary to his convictions is not less a compliment to the character of the law than to the sincerity and candor of the convert.

MANY A LIFE

HAS been saved by the prompt use of Ayer's Pills. Travelers by land or sea are liable to constipation or other derangements of the stomach and bowels which, if neglected, lead to serious and often fatal consequences. The most sure means of correcting these evils is the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. The prudent sailing-master would as soon go to sea without his chronometer as without a supply of these Pills. Though prompt and energetic in operation, Ayer's Pills leave no ill effects; they are purely vegetable and sugar-coated; the safest medicine for old and young, at home or abroad.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in health."—Mrs. C. E. Clark, Tewksbury, Massachusetts.

"I regard Ayer's Pills as one of the most reliable general remedies of our times. They have been in use in my family for affections requiring a purgative, and have given unvarying satisfaction. We have found them an excellent remedy for colds and light fevers."—W. R. Woodson, Fort Worth, Texas.

"For several years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than upon anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels and those of the ship's crew. These Pills are not severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect for the cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles, and dyspepsia."—Capt. Mueller, Steamship Felicia, New York City.

"I have found Ayer's Cathartic Pills to be a better family medicine for common use than any other pills within my knowledge. They are not only very effective, but safe and pleasant to take—qualities which must make them valued by the public."—Jules Hauel, Perfumer, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Notable Movement.

One of the most notable missionary movements of the times is the proposed union of the Methodist bodies in Japan. These three bodies are the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Church of Canada. Some time ago a joint commission was appointed, composed of four representatives from each of these churches, who met and formulated a "Basis of Union," which they have submitted to the three churches. If this basis is approved by the Mission Conferences, it is then to be submitted to the General Conferences of the three churches, and if approved by them, it goes at once into effect, and the Methodist Church of Japan will be organized. I am indebted to the Rev. C. B. Moseley, of our church in Japan, who was secretary of the commission, for a copy of this "Basis of Union," and it is a very interesting document. The principal features provided for are those of Episcopal Methodism in this country, with two important exceptions. A general superintendent is provided for who shall be called "Sotoku," and who shall be elected by the General Conference for a term of twelve years, without being eligible to re-election. The other radical change is in the presiding eldership. This officer is called "Choroshi," and is to be elected by the Annual Conference by ballot, and may have a pastoral charge. The Sotuku, in consultation with the Choroshi, shall station the preachers with the following provisions, viz.: (1) If any one of the Choroshi shall appeal against any appointment made by the Sotoku, and his appeal be sustained by a two-third vote of the Choroshi, it shall prevail. (2) Should any foreign missionary feel himself aggrieved by his appointment, he shall have the right to present his case to a committee consisting of not less than six missionaries representing the uniting mission, which committee shall consider the case and dispose of it as may be deemed best in consultation with the Sotoku.

As our approaching General Conference will be the first body to act on this question, it becomes a matter of very great interest to our church, as well as to Methodism generally. It is the first movement in the direction of Methodist comity and federation, and I hail it as one of the most auspicious omens of the times. Not only every missionary, but every intelligent traveler who has visited mission fields, knows that one of the greatest obstacles to the success of missions among the heathen is the sectarian spirit. Dr. Williamson, one of the oldest missionaries in China, said before the London Conference that China can never be Christianized on the present system. We have neither funds nor forces sufficient. "Only recently," said Dr. W., "one of the leading native pastors said to a friend of mine: 'We have thought the matter over; we are prepared for union. It is you foreign missionaries who keep us separate. You are to blame.' My friend asked: 'What about baptism?' 'We would immerse those who desired it, and baptize by affusion those who preferred that form.'"

It is very evident that the rapidly changing conditions in mission fields call for new methods, and the church should adjust herself to meet these new demands. In no region of the globe is the need for active, intelligent Christian work more urgent than in Japan. The whole country is in a ferment. The new constitution grants full religious liberty. The first Parliament, which will be the first representative legislative assembly ever convened in Asia, will probably meet in November of this year. Everywhere the people are eager to hear and be taught. New treaties are being made with western nations, from which the hated "extra territoriality" clause and other objectionable features will be eliminated. This means freedom of travel and residence anywhere in the empire; but it opens the country alike to friend and foe of the Christian religion. Now is the church's opportunity, and the wisest plans are needed to reap the largest harvests.

While church unity and autonomy, as far as practicable, are desirable in all mission fields, they are peculiarly so in Japan. The Japanese are an intensely patriotic people, intolerant of foreign interference, and desiring to manage their own affairs. They are the only people of Asia who have never been conquered, and it is their proud boast that they have had an unbroken line of rulers for twenty-two centuries. With very little friction, most remarkable changes have taken place, and since the overthrow of the Shogunate in 1868, the nation has crystallized into a constitutional government. Some of her leading statesmen, recognizing that Christianity is the secret of the power and progress of western nations, have been eager for Japan to declare herself a Christian nation and to establish a state church. This, however, will probably not be done, as there is a strong movement against it. But, seeing the crisis, all the Presbyterian Churches have come together in the United (Presbyterian) Church of Christ in Japan, and this body is moving on aggressively and harmoniously.

A similar demand is upon the Methodist bodies, growing out of the peculiar condition of affairs and the genius of the people, and when this union is effected, I doubt not but that Methodism will achieve the same glorious triumphs in the Land of the Rising Sun that have marked her progress in all her past history.

David and Goliath—A Homily on Missions.

(I. Samuel xiv. 23-50.)

You say that scene of thrift—that model farm, with cozy home, large field, herds of cattle and sheep, with barn, dairy, etc.—had, until recently, been a dense forest? Yes, that home of wild beasts, the favorite haunt of owls, the domicile of serpents, has been converted into a terrestrial paradise. Crops abundant, school-house convenient, the church in sight. Wife and child are happy.

Such conversion would seem miraculous, if it were not of common occurrence. Even as the wild woods, heathenism will be overcome. Light will dispel the night. Let the heathen rage; the people imagine a vain thing, let the rulers take counsel together against the Lord—their impotency will soon appear. Tree after tree will fall; the land will be cleared, fences built; the plow and hoe work wonders.

In David's encounter with Goliath we have an emblematical portraiture of the church's attitude to the heathen world. See:

1. Goliath's challenge. The giant derided God and his chosen people. Parading his physical superiority, he challenged Israel to meet him in bloody encounter. Disdainfully he added: "I defy the armies of Israel this day." The huge braggard's derision filled David with indignation. Though his spear's staff was like a weaver's beam, the shepherd-boy was ready to meet him in mortal combat. The wicked attempt to cast odium on God and God's people impelled the ardent youth to take up the gauntlet.

The various heathen religious systems arrogate superiority over the Christian religion. Buddhism, Brahminism, Confucianism, Islamism, etc., taunt us with their superior excellency. Even Judaism persists in asseverating that Christianity is but an heretical schism. Can we remain silent, passive? Nay. Up, to the fray! We measure lances, cross swords—preach Jesus, the Savior of sinners to all men, and fear not the consequences.

2. The obstacles. Among his own people he met opposition. Reprimanded by an elder brother. Charged with neglect of imposed obligations. That he was guilty of impertinence. His presence uncalled for. His offer to fight Goliath a foolish freak. Saul, too, insisted that he was not competent for accomplishment of the herculean task.

In our missionary enterprises we are frequently antagonized. Many hold that foreign missions are foreign to our true sphere of usefulness. The "Greeks are at our door," they assert. Our effort to improve the Hindu, Japanese, etc., civilization was tantamount to carrying coal to Newcastle. As to the real barbarians, such as cannibals, etc., it is held that they are but little better than beasts, totally unfit to appreciate Christian endeavor. Notwithstanding discouragement, David held on to his design. He referred the king to some of his feats. Had slain both a lion and a bear. With God's help he would succeed in conquering the vaunting Philistine. Thus the church refers to success already achieved. Thousands, dwelling in distant climes, have been made happy Christians. Bishop Taylor and Drs. Allen and Lambuth report of wondrous achievments.

3. The armor. Saul attempts to equip David for the contest. Helmet, coat of mail, sword. Prove cumbrous impediments. Iron-clad fleets, armies, carrying Gatlin guns, much erudition, even coffers full of gold, will fail to win the heathen for Jesus. Subjugation is not evangelization; civilization is not a synonym for Christianity; erudition is not piety; mercenary servility is not discipleship of Jesus. I know of a missionary who conceives it his duty to teach the many millions of Chinese the English language, as a means of winning here and there a few wrecked tramps for Jesus! The English, or any other grammar, is a poor gospel. Away with unscriptural weapons! The sword of the Word of God sufficeth. Let all nations read and hear the gospel in their own tongue, and victory is assured.

4. The victory. The Israelites tremble. Fear defeat. Pessimists predict disaster. That boy should not be permitted thus foolishly to throw away his life. Sinful wastage. His gifts worthy of more thankful tasks. But assured of the Lord's assistance, and conscious of his skill, David valiantly goes forth to meet the giant. Leaning prayerfully on the strong arm of the Lord, he tells the vaunting antagonist: "Thou comest to us with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied." And with the Lord, David did valiantly. It was not long until Goliath lay a corpse at the feet of David. It will not be long until the Lord will give us the heathen for our inheritance.

5. The crown of honor. David cared not for the offered reward. Asked not for the promised riches, nor for the king's daughter in wedlock. Conscious of having done his duty was reward sufficient. Though fair maidens sang, "Saul has slain thousand, but David ten thousand," it added not to his happiness. The crown of honor, yea, the crown of life, consists in the consciousness of enjoying the divine approbation and commendation: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

NEW ORLEANS.

Adoption, or Sonship.

"Adoption" is the term used to signify the divine act by which those who are accepted in Christ are restored to sonship.

This term is used only by Paul, and, perhaps, it was taken from the Roman law. The term indicates that man is taken from under the authority of a natural parent into the family of God. If he were naturally free, then it would be arrogation and not adoption.

In speaking of the Israelites, Paul says: "To whom pertaineth the adoption"—the special choosing from among the nations. Of the children of God by faith, it is said, "that we might receive the adoption of sons." The full manifestation of all the Christian privileges is called, "waiting for the adoption." The Father, "of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named," adopts into his family. All paternity is of God. Adoption has special reference to the Son. In him and through him we become sons, for "if the Son make you free, ye shall be free indeed." All that is implied in sonship is most graciously bestowed upon us.

This relation and its prerogatives are conferred, administered and confirmed by the Holy Ghost, and thus it is the act of the Triune God. The Holy Ghost is called, "the Spirit of adoption."

The angels are "sons of God." All who rule among men are children of the "Most High," and the whole human race are born of "Adam, who was the son of God." The race of man is the "prodigal son," whom Christ, the Elder Brother, is trying to restore to the Father's family. The Father is as glad to take back to his bosom the wayward son, as the son can be to be restored to his Father's favor. "This my son was dead and is alive again." It is a full restoration of paternal and filial relations, fully attested by the "Spirit of adoption." This restored relation gives immediate access to God in the spirit of a son. It is, "Abba, Father, my Father, our Father." Worship, public and private, and communion with God, is of this filial character. It is sweet, confiding, reverent, and full of the spirit of love.

All that is meant by freedom and liberty is found in this restored relationship. "The truth makes us free," and we are "free indeed." Even the "law is a law of liberty."

It is written on the heart, and obedience springs from love. The estate is so gracious that we realize in law the relation of grace, and feel that "we are not under law, but under grace." Indeed it is our "meat and drink to do God's will," because we love him, and not because we dread him.

It must be carefully noted, however, that this blessed estate, gracious as it is, is one of waiting. So far as the body is concerned, we are still in bondage to corruption. The free spirit is trammeled and hampered by infirmities, and will be as long as it is in the body. "We wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." In the resurrection we will find perfected freedom; and not till then.

"We are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ," and hope for a full inheritance which will be given in due time if we faint not. The full estate of manhood will not come until we are raised up in Christ, "until he bring many sons unto glory." We are waiting in hope for this.

In teaching and preaching adoption it may be well enough to remember that we are "sons of God," "born of God," "begotten of God," "partakers of the divine nature." The relation is more real than legal. It is one of birth, more than one of law. The term, "adoption," if unduly pressed, as it often is, tends to obscure a fundamental truth—the new birth. If regenerated, we are the sons of God as truly as was the man Christ. We have a divine parentage and are "partakers of the divine nature." "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." The image and likeness of God comes of divine paternity. I am God's child by birth rather than by a legal transaction. I have been reborn, or born again, into his family. I am a real son of my Father, as well as an adopted child. GILDEROY.

Anti-Lottery Meeting.

The first Anti-Lottery Meeting, under the auspices of the New Orleans Evangelical Ministers' Union, was held, on the night of April 8, in the Felicity Street Methodist Church. The building was crowded to its full capacity, numbers going away, not being able to get seats. The Rev. J. T. Sawyer, chairman of the committee, presided, and the following program was successfully carried out:

Hymn—"Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah."
Prayer—By Rev. M. C. Cole, of the Baptist Church.
Reading of thirty-seventh Psalm, by Rev. A. Gordon Bakewell, of the Protestant Episcopal Church.
Hymn—"Dare to be a Daniel."
Speech—By Rev. W. P. McLaughlin, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.
Speech—By Rev. Robert E. Schwartz, of the Christian Church.
Hymn—"Onward, Christian Soldiers."
Speech—By Rabbi Max Heller, pastor of Temple Sinai.
Speech—By Rev. W. W. Elwang, of the Presbyterian Church.
Hymn—"Stand up, Stand up, for Jesus."
Speech and Collection—By Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.
Benediction—By Rev. Mr. Merrill, of the Baptist Church.

The addresses were all strong, animated and convincing. The effort of Dr. Max Heller was a very polished and telling one, no doubt making a deep and abiding impression upon the novel audience of Jews and Gentiles. One noticeable feature about the assembly was that the men, representing all callings in life, were largely in the majority. The people are surely being aroused to the necessity of rescuing this State from the clutches of the merciless Lottery.

Publishing House Produce and Calvin Bequest.

A small proportion only of the Joint Boards of Finance have reported the number of claimants on these funds, and it is impossible for the Book Agent to make the proper distribution without accurate information on this point. Brethren, please respond promptly to this call, and state the number of superannuated preachers and of widows and orphans of deceased preachers, who died in the traveling connection. All Conference claimants are claimants on the produce of the Publishing House; the widows and orphans of deceased traveling preachers only are claimants on the Calvin Fund. Numbers, not names, are requested. State the number of superannunted preachers, and the number of widows and orphans separately. Will all the church papers please give this notice an insertion?

Our Growth and Strength.

The Book Editor, Dr. W. P. Harrison, has furnished the Nashville Advocate with the following statistics of our church for the year just ended:

Traveling preachers, 4,862; increase, 175. Local preachers, 6,269; decrease, 40. White members, 1,161,666; increase, 38,168. Colored members, 520; decrease, 125. Indian members, 3,833; decrease, 1,125. Total preachers and members, 1,177,150. Total net increase, 37,053. Infants baptized, 34,733; increase, 3,681. Adults baptized, 57,011; increase, 3,648.

Number of Sunday-schools, 12,589; increase, 374. Number of teachers, 88,842; increase, 3,148. Number of scholars, 694,533; increase, 21,637. Number of churches, 11,767; increase, 335. Number of parsonages, 2,561; increase, 203.

Value of Church Property.—Church edifices, $16,878,617; increase, $848,363. Parsonages, $2,876,575; increase, $171,171.

Benevolent Contributions.—Church extension, $56,561 37; increase, $6,199 38. Conference claimants, $132,952 90; increase, $16,239 27. Foreign missions, $227,127 26; increase, $1,275 10. Domestic missions, $193,896 13; increase, $9,422 82. Total for missions, $341,023 39. Total increase, $10,697 92.

Notes.

A Welsh Wesleyan preacher said the other day: "A man's greatness consists not in his external grandeur, but in his capacity for drinking in the lessons of his surroundings."

Rumor says that the agents of the Lottery Company have secured already board and lodging for one hundred and fifty people in Baton Rouge during the sitting of the Legislature. That the Legislature of Louisiana should be watched and manipulated by a band of unprincipled gamblers is an insufferable disgrace! Where is our manhood? The whole world looks on with contempt!

The secretaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church Missionary Society, in an address issued March 15, report that the failure of the church to come up to the appropriations for missions has left a debt of $97,000. They issue a stirring appeal to the church to raise the money to pay off the indebtedness. There is one dismal sentence in this appeal, and that is, "There are fully one million of non-givers in the church"!

The following figures in regard to newspapers we clip from the New York Advocate:

In the year 1700 there was but one newspaper in the United States. In 1870 there were 5,871; this year there are 16,319, the total for the United States and Canada being 17,107. In 1870 there were but 11,000 periodicals printed in the whole world. Now, however, there are in the United States alone 12,791 weeklies, 1,998 monthlies, 1,584 dailies.

The New York Advocate:

Fifty thousand dollars are said to go from Boston to New Orleans every month to be invested in lottery tickets. Large amounts from Chicago, Cincinnati, and all other large cities go into the same whirlpool. The negroes in some parts of Mississippi are kept financially stripped by this wicked scheme. If the loss of money and consequent suffering were all, the case would not be so bad. The moral and spiritual effects of the Lottery, the loss of manhood it causes, are infinitely worse. Let every decent newspaper in the land, every minister, and every Christian deal it a blow. It is time the unclean spirit were cast out of the nation.

A speaker before the General Conference of Missions, in London, June, 1888, produced this:

Many years ago an ingenious English writer dreamed a dream that in a single night every Bible in the land had suddenly become blank, and every trace of the Bible in English literature had been obliterated; and he proceeded to show what effect was produced on one author after another. Many of Shakespeare's sweetest passages were converted into nonsense by the absence of the words which he had appropriated from the Scriptures; Milton was nearly ruined; Scott's novels were filled with prepetual lacunæ; Bacon's Aphorisms were reduced to unmeaning enigmas.

That represents only a small part of the world's loss if the infidels could "have their way."

The Holy Family, a Roman Catholic weekly of this city, says:

Men can be found who will, for complete safety and a monopoly, organize a syndicate for conduction of any one of the many vices. We might have the La. Train-Robbery Co., paying largely for exclusive privileges in the matter of holding up trains. The La. Associated Burglars; the La. Consolidated Highwaymen—either, or both, would cheerfully devote a portion of their spoils to maintaining levees or schools. If it be sound and honorable policy for the State to draw sustenance from gambling, why not put every known vice similarly on tap? If this be at all a matter of mere business, why not have business all along the line? In other words, why not put the entire morals of our people at public auction; and casting off every trammel, turn hell completely loose in our midst?

Personal and Otherwise.

We have learned with profound sorrow of the death of Mrs. T. E. Ellis, of Amite City, La. We have known Mrs. Ellis from our boyhood, and earth never had a saintlier woman on its surface, and heaven never received a purer spirit into its happy abodes. She was seventy-nine years of age.

Pastors will oblige us and our readers by making their reports from the work as brief as possible. Give the facts, and let the readers "draw on their imaginations" for the rest. It is a good thing to cultivate brevity, and by that to cultivate another's imagination. A reader is always pleased when something is left to be supplied by him, for it is a direct compliment to his ability.

Dr. L. C. Garland, chancellor of Vanderbilt University, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday.

Our Bishops will convene in St. Louis, May 3.

Rev. L. L. Pickett has removed to Columbia, S. C. He takes charge of The Way of Faith and Neglected Themes, a weekly journal.

Rev. J. A. Parker, of Baton Rouge, says he has received fifteen new members since last quarterly meeting.

Be sure and read the communication, on first page, from Hon. Robert P. Hunter. Excluded from his home paper, he seeks communication with the public through our columns, which we gladly give him.

If you want your people to have a full and correct account of the doings of the General Conference that is soon to meet, press upon them the fact that our paper will give the best account to them that they can get. Use this point in your canvass for the paper.

One of the commentators on the Acts of the Apostles has this: "A pentecostal shower must precede every sermon, in order that the latter may operate effectually and awaken men."

A man who has a large hearing and a considerable following in England says: "We can secure the triumph of our form of Christianity only by making it more Christ-like than the Christianity of other men."

Our young Bro. Evans writes from Minden, La., that the work of the Lord is moving on well. He has been elected president of the Y. M. C. A., of Minden.

We learn from the Standard that the American Baptist Home Missionary Society closed the financial year with a balance of $10,000 in the treasury. The society has had an unusual amount of legacies during the past year. Fortunate folks, those Baptists!

A Methodist Sunday-school in New York City is reported as a school "every one of which gives something, and nearly every member collects something" for missions. Last year this school collected $4,400. This year the collection reached $5,135 64, of which the infant class reported $700 72. Such training will give a generation of givers and collectors.

The Right Key Struck.

"Congregational singing has improved immensely at Meadville and Nebo under the tuition of Prof. Coke, of Knoxville, who is 'tuning up' our people over this part of the State." Thus writes Rev. H. Bradford in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of April 10. That is striking the right key, and it has a good ring. I wish that Prof. Coke or some one else could have access to many of our churches, and improve the congregational singing—not choir music. There is probably enough of that. Our people need "tuning up" in many places, and the man or woman that can succeed in reviving the practice and spirit of singing in our homes and churches, renders a service for the glory of God and the good of souls.

Let our preachers and churches take the matter in hand, and secure, if possible, the service of a competent vocalist for a time—one who is a devout Christian, and who understands our music and hymnology—to give instruction and training in sacred music and congregational singing. With this and the use of our most excellent hymn and music books, we can and will have a great revival of old-fashion singing—yea, and better than ever. I should be glad to correspond with any person who would like to engage in this service in our congregations during this year.

A Blind Fraud.

A blind man, called "Rev." Harry Wilson, who is well recommended by a number of our preachers, is visiting our churches soliciting money "to enable him to attend college." After a careful investigation of his case by the Kansas City Preachers' Meeting, the undersigned were unanimously instructed to publish him to the church as a fraud.

—Rev. J. C. Carnline writes: "Our first Quarterly Conference was April 5 and 6, at Holly Grove, on Anacoco. The presiding elder was present, and gave a good sermon, on Sunday, from the text, 'The Master is come and calleth for thee.' We think and hope and pray that Anacoco and Bellwood will this year wake up and come to the help of the Lord. Bro. James Franklin was with us with his sweet words of prayer."

—Rev. O. L. Savage reports from Cleveland, Miss.: "Bishop Galloway assigned me to Shelby and Cleveland for this year. We have had thirteen accessions up to date. We are working and looking for a revival. We are trying to build a parsonage; hope to succeed. The water has not overflowed this part of Bolivar county as yet. My Quarterly Conference was held March 16. The salary of pastor is fixed at $800. We have an encouraging outlook for this year."

—Rev. T. B. White writes from Mansfield, La.: "Our protracted meeting is progressing with hopeful indications. To hear the whole congregation 'singing with the spirit, and with the understanding also,' from our new hymn book is inspiring and indicative of a revival of holy song. Bro. A. D. McVoy, Jr., was with us last week, and Bro. Boltz this week—each one ardent in the Master's work. Mrs. Goodale (W. C. T. U.) came along and gave us an admirable address in spirit and matter, and which did not militate against our meeting. Glory to God for the power of the cross!"

—Rev. A. W. Moore writes from Winnsboro, La., April 8: "I have charge of a part of the Winnsboro circuit, and Bro. Grace in charge of a part. Up to this writing the prospects are brightening for better times. I have four appointments, and am now cut off from three of them by the overflow. The water is rising rapidly and spreading over the country fast. From present indications a general overflow is inevitable. The farmers were well advanced with their work. Nearly all had planted corn, and some had planted cotton; but now their work is for naught. Everybody is looking after their stock, getting them out of the water. The water is rising here about four inches. That rise covers many acres of ground daily. The gnats, which usually come with the water or in advance of it, have not reached here yet, but are constantly expected. A general overflow of both water and gnats will almost bankrupt this country. The people are just about recovering from the effects of the high water of 1882 and the gnats of 1881. Where is the protection and security so faithfully promised by and through the levee system? Echo answers, Where?"

Woman's Work for Woman.

Through love for our mission work, Mrs. Sue Adams, wife of the late Dr. T. A. S. Adams, has given to the Mississippi Conference Society a number of her husband's books—"Kuscotideon," and "Aunt Peggy, and other Poems"—to be sold for the benefit of the cause. They can be procured by applying to either Mrs. I. N. Chatfield, 1503 22nd Ave., or Mrs. E. P. Mellen, 1319 22nd Ave., Meridian, Miss. These books are nicely bound in cloth, and will be sold at 75 cents each. Many who know of this gifted man and author will, doubtless, be glad to add these works to their libraries and help a noble Christian cause. Please to send your names and money forthwith, that you may be sure of getting your books.

North Mississippi Votes.

We vote with those brethren of the Arkansas Methodist who say, Repeal the board bill law passed by the last General Conference. If there is a member of this Conference elect, one who ever has been elected to the General Conference, one who ever expects to be, or anybody else in favor of the law, he has not been heard from. We can not see the wisdom of taxing our people to pay the board bill of a General Conference, when three editors were standing with open arms begging us to come without money and without price. We vote, Repeal the law.

PRESIDING ELDERS' DISTRICTS.

The presiding elder's office, as I think, is one of the most important offices in our church, and yet there is and has been for some time friction or dissatisfaction between it and some other parts of our economy, and the dissatisfaction with some amounts to a desire to have the office eliminated at once, and others desire to have the districts enlarged, which will, in my opinion, in the near future amount to the same thing. That there is cause for friction is, to my mind, an evident fact, and just how to remove the cause, and so adjust our economy as to give satisfaction to our people, is a question of great importance.

Now, there is, to my mind, just two causes for friction:

First, The districts, as a general thing, are very much too large. The presiding elders can not do satisfactory work on so large districts, or they can not hold their quarterly meetings at a time to do the most good and give entire satisfaction to the people. Take, for instance, our district (Brandon), and we have nineteen appointments—circuits, stations, and missions, and seventy-six quarterly meetings to be held. Fifty-two from seventy-six leaves twenty-four to be held on week days, and my experience is that, as a general thing, they do not give satisfaction. Neither the preacher nor the people are satisfied with a quarterly meeting in the week, and, in fact, they do not amount to much, only as a business meeting. The presiding elder may be ever so prompt and faithful; but there is no way to get the people to go out, and hence a small crowd and only a few official members, and no experience meeting, no sacramental service, and, it may be, no fast day; or if they have all of these, with a small crowd and few official members present, it does not amount to much; and if a collection is taken, it will necessarily be small. The work is about as hard on the elder. He has just as many miles to ride (unless he holds two in connection with one Sunday, which they very often do), and about as much work to do, and yet it is not appreciated as much and does not do half the good it would at a more opportune time.

Now, for the remedy. As I suggested in an article in the ADVOCATE, last spring, and as some other brethren have suggested, cut down the districts to twelve or, at the outside, thirteen appointments, and let the presiding elder give two full days embracing a Sunday on each work, holding experience meetings, sacramental services and preaching, and I believe this part of the difficulty will be fully obviated. But, says one, a district with only twelve appointments will not support the presiding elder. Well, he may and, doubtless, will get more on a large than on a small district, for the reason that the people will try to support their pastors; and if the district stewards make a large assessment and he gets a certain per cent., of course he will get more; but it will be at the expense of his office, for the people will feel that they are not getting the amount of work that they ought to have, and at a time to do the most good, and hence dissatisfaction is the result.

Second, Our present mode, or manner, of assessing the circuits, stations and missions for the presiding elder does not give satisfaction, and is probably one of the greatest causes of friction. I suppose every preacher and all the people are willing to pay their part of the presiding elder's salary; and if it was equally proportioned, there would be no friction at all; but with our present system it seems that it can not be done, for, doubtless, the presiding elder, with the few district stewards that he can get together, do about the best they can under the existing circumstances, for it is hard to ascertain all the information that is necessary and to know just what the stewards on each work will assess for their pastors, and hence the inequality and dissatisfaction. For instance, we take two circuits last year. One was assessed for the presiding elder $70, and for the pastor in charge $600; the other for the presiding elder $70, and for the pastor in charge $535; and the pastor in charge on the last-named work had a larger family than the one on the first. We take two other circuits: One was assessed for the presiding elder $70, and for the pastor in charge $500; and the other for the presiding elder $75, and for the pastor in charge $500—the preacher on the last having about five in family and the first only two. So you see the inequality; each preacher was assessed $500, and the presiding elder was assessed on the circuit where the preacher only had two in family only $70, and on the other where there was five $75; so, without running the analogy any further, you see there is cause for friction or dissatisfaction.

Now, the remedy. Let the General Conference do away with the district steward's office, and pass a law giving the presiding elder twelve and a half per cent., or one-eighth of all that is collected on the circuits, stations and missions for the support of the ministry; then when the Board of Stewards meet to make their assessments, let them assess so much for both, and divide as above, giving the presiding elder one-eighth. But, says one, that is too much. I do not think so. The presiding elder ought to have more than the average preacher, as he has more work and greater responsibility, and is necessarily away from home more. But, another says, a district with only twelve appointments will not support a presiding elder. Yes, it will support a man with an ordinary family. He need not expect to get rich or lay up much money; and if he has the spirit of our divine Master or of the fathers, he will not desire it; but only get a living, which he will do if he does his duty faithfully. He will get much more than the average preacher.

Let us take a district last year—and we will take twelve average circuits, stations and missions of a district—and they paid for the support of the ministry last year $5,805, and that at one-eighth, or 12½ per cent., would give the presiding elder $725, and that in about the poorest district in the Mississippi Conference. Some would pay from nine hundred to one thousand dollars. But, you say, that small, poor district would not support a man. Well, if not, what will become of the preachers? The circuit paying the highest amount in that district only paid its pastor $660, and the lowest paid its pastor only $300; the average on the district only $483. Now, if the presiding elder can not live on $725, how can the preacher live on $483—their families being about the same. I know they ought to have more, and I think the presiding elder ought to have about one-third more than the average preacher; but as long as there is so much difference made between the preachers and presiding elder, there will be friction or dissatisfaction, and just as long as the districts are made larger in order to give the presiding elder more salary, and cause so many of the quarterly meetings to be held in the week, the presiding elder's office will suffer, and finally will break entirely down. So cut down the districts to twelve appointments, and give the presiding elder one-eighth; and if that will not support him, appropriate some from the missionary treasury, and then our system will work like a charm.

But, says one, if you do away with the district steward's office, how will you divide the missionary and other collections between the different works? Just the same way. After the presiding elder makes his first round, and the assessments are made for the support of the ministry, let the secretary of the District Conference get the per cent., and divide in that way. Let the preacher's assessment be the basis on which all the other assessments are made.

CATO, Miss.

North Mississippi Holiness Association.

This body of consecrated men and women held their Spring session with the good people of Victoria, Miss., March 25-30, 1890. Present: Rev. J. W. Poston, vice-president, and T. A. Bottom, secretary. Ministers from abroad: Rev. J. H. Collins, evangelist; Rev. R. H. Mahon, D. D.; Bro. Ellis; Bro. Harris, of the Methodist Protestant Church, and T. L. Boswell. Others had been invited and expected, but failed to come in consequence of sickness.

The meeting resulted in good success. The whole counsel of God was declared, and the doctrine of Bible holiness, as taught by Wesley and our fathers, was preached and emphasized in earnest, and many Christians, from time to time, came forward to pray for a clean heart through the cleansing blood of Jesus. Sinners also were warned to flee from the wrath to come, and often invited to the altar of prayer—"but they would not come." A few gave their hand, asking thereby an interest in the prayers of the Christians.

Bro. Ellis, one of the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference, came as a spectator, and somewhat in the spirit of Nathaniel when Philip found him, and told him that he had found "him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph," and invited him to "come and see." Our good brother, in coming to see, was greatly blessed and went away rejoicing. Many others would find the blessing were it not that they have too much fear or prejudice to "come and see."

Thank the Lord, the work of holiness is spreading north and south, east and west, and will, ultimately, cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. There is nothing that unites the hearts of the people of all denominations, kindreds, colors and climes like holiness.

The songs, prayers and testimonies of the brothers and sisters at Victoria were prompt, spiritual and intensified to a high degree, and there was great rejoicing among the saints of the Lord. The preaching was plain, scriptural, powerful and convincing, and there was abundance of gospel seed sown that will, in the future, yield a rich harvest in the salvation of souls and glory to God.

The Christian hospitality of the people of Victoria abounded to everybody. God bless them forever!

Camp Meeting.

The nineteenth annual camp meeting, on the Seashore Camp Grounds, will open on Friday evening, July 11, next, and continue for ten days. The trustees have made arrangements to provide ample accommodations for the increasing annual attendance. Eminent preachers will assist as heretofore in the public religious services. Stops have already been taken to secure reduced rates over the various connecting railroads. The camp grounds are located on the line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and are 78 miles distant from New Orleans, and 68 miles from Mobile. They have a width of 1,600 feet frontage on the Mississippi Sound. The sea bathing afforded here is unsurpassed. An abundance of fine shade trees provide shelter from the summer's sun; while pure refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and interior towns.

Parties desiring to rent rooms before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address their communications to W. B. Thomson, Esq., 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. All inquiries regarding transportation should be sent to Capt. A. C. Danner, Mobile, Ala.

The Reception Committee, of which the president is chairman, will secure, as far as possible, lodging accommodations for all preachers free of charge, and tickets for meals at the restaurant at half-rates as heretofore. Private boarding-tents furnish accommodations to visitors at very moderate rates, in addition to those afforded by the trustees. A small gate-fee is charged for entering the grounds, which is employed towards defraying the expense of their care and improvement. The growing attractiveness of these grounds as a summer resting-place, and the experienced management of the public services, have advertised the place to thousands.

As the property of the Southern Methodist Church, only its members can own cottages or tents on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, subject to the rules, and are heartily welcome. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of precious souls. For a copy of the rules and other data apply to

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

CURLING LOCKS.

BY HARRIETTE S. BAINBRIDGE.

Little maid, with golden tresses,
Thou art sweeter than the flowers
Which thy tiny hands are clasping
In the glorious summer hours.

Curling locks, with golden sunbeams,
On thy snow-white shoulders fall,
And thy hazel eyes are beaming
Lovingly upon us all.

Tender hearted little sirlie,
Innocence dwells in thine eye,
And the fragrant flowers thou lovest,
With thine own fair beauty vie.

May the Lord, who loves the children,
And who decks the earth with flowers,
Ever fill thy hands with blossoms,
Ever give thee happy hours!

What I Saw in Town.

MR. EDITOR: Mama read me the funny letter made out of the thirty letters. I wonder if each one who wrote knew his own line. I think David Bingham and Irvine Lewis write good letters, also Ethel G.'s and Lucius McG.'s are good. I don't know them; but mama does, and she tells me about them. It was so nice for Aunt Rina to give Irvine a tool chest, Christmas.

Father took me and brother to Los Angeles the other day, and we saw so many new things. I saw three kinds of street cars—the horse, electric, and cable. You can't see anything that moves the cable car; but father showed me the car works, and the great cables that lie underground and push the car along. A Chinaman said when he first saw one: "No pushee, no pullee; devil pushee allee samee." Carey's brother, Rhodes, told me that. I saw two little boys driving a little grey mule that was no bigger than a young colt. They had him hitched to a small cart, with new harness made to fit the horse. On the back of the cart were these letters—BURROS. I saw a glass bowl in a resturant full of water, and it had frogs in it. Mama said the frogs ate the flies. We saw some large bones near the pavement that somebody said were whale backbones; but they were not the kind ladies put in their dresses. We saw Bro. DuBose's big church—Trinity, and the big pipe organ and the Harper Memorial Window. As we came out of the city we saw two Chinese women. They did not have on hats, but held Japanese fans in their hands, so as to keep out the sun from their eyes. They wore big, long, loose green open-sleeved sacques, and big loose blue silk pants, white hose and very white tiny shoes with wood bottoms, that made them look an inch taller than they were.

I could tell you more; but mama says if I don't stop, this letter will be so long you will burn it up. She writes for me, and I tell her what to say.

Your little niece,
CAROL W. OATES.

MR. EDITOR: I will venture to write again, hoping this will not reach the waste basket. I am glad you are out of trouble with the cousins, hoping it will please all. Bro. Bass is our preacher, and this is his third year on this work. I belong to a preacher family. One of my grandfathers was a Methodist preacher. I have two uncles members of the North Mississippi Conference. My oldest brother is also a member of North Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Winona. I only have one sister. She married a preacher. They are traveling the Okalona circuit. My second brother is at Lexington, Miss., teaching. My next brother is at the Southern University, and is a preacher. Now, Mr. Editor, can you find another cousin that is kin to more preachers? Hoping to see this in print, I will close.

About "Jack Robinson."

Once upon a time there was a farmer named Robinson, who was much annoyed by the bad habit a certain wolf had of eating his sheep. The farmer reasoned with him, and even offered to pay for having him sent to a private asylum where they cured such bad habits. But the wolf said he preferred to remain a slave to the sheep appetite; for he suspected that the farmer (who was of a miserly disposition) might refuse to pay the bills after he had become cured of his appetite for sheep.

Farmer Robinson then tried to overcome him by means of traps, pitfalls, poisoned meats, and other snares; but the wolf was a wary old beast, and for a long time the only way John Robinson knew that his enemy was alive was by the death of his sheep. You can imagine his joy, then, when one morning he came upon the wolf securely caught by the tail in a trap. The farmer approached the wolf and upbraided him. He then raised his stick to beat him to death.

But the wolf, who had borne all his reproaches meekly, stopped him by an imperious wave of his paw, and said, "Prithee, let me say a word."

The wolf, as the discerning reader doubtless notices, was a wolf of the old school, and used a certain stately courtesy even in addressing a farmer about to kill him. But since the narrator's old-wolf English is a trifle rusty, we will translate the remainder of the talk into the language used by common Americans.

"I am," continued the wolf, "caught by the tail in your trap; but with one backward spring—about as backward as the spring of 1888—I can be free. It is true my tail will be in your power, but your sheep will be in mine, and I assure you they shall suffer for it. Now, though my tail is an old one, I am fond of it, and am willing to restrain my love of sheep somewhat if you will let me go tailfully."

Worthy John Robinson was deeply moved by the words of the wolf, and cogitated long, wondering what terms he might propose without bringing on a backward spring. At length he said:

"I will let you go on condition that you agree henceforth to eat no sheep of mine."

"But," exclaimed the wolf, "in that case I shall starve!"

"Not at all," said the farmer. "You may eat my neighbors sheep."

Now, the farmer knew very well that his neighbors had no sheep. The wolf also knew it, but from earliest infancy he had been renowned for his acuteness, so he merely said:

"How shall I be able to tell your sheep from your neighbors?"

"You can ask them to whom they belong, and if they answer 'Jack Robinson,' you must leave them in peace."

"Well," said the wolf, "your terms are pretty hard, but I will do as you say. Whenever I wish to eat a sheep, I will ask her to whom she belongs, and if she answers 'Jack Robinson,' I will let her go in peace."

Thereupon the farmer freed the wolf's tail from the trap and went home rejoicing. But his joy was of short duration, for the wolf developed a remarkable quickness of eating, and whenever he met a sheep he asked her to whom she belonged, and then ate her up before she could say "Jack Robinson."—Harper's Young People.

AFTER THE BOY.—During the recent Chicago Convention, one of the delegates, a young business man from Boston, fell in with a burly, red faced Chicagoan, who had evidently just been patronizing the bar. In the course of the conversation, the man from Chicago said: "What are you fellows trying to do down the Battery? You are hot on temperance I see by the papers. Do you think you could make a temperance man of me?"

"No," replied the delegate, "we evidently couldn't do much with you; but we are after your boy."

At this unexpected retort, the man dropped his jocular tone, and said, seriously, "Well, I guess you have got the right of it. If somebody had been after me when I was a boy, I should be a better man to-day."—Selected.

Did She Answer Wisely?

A certain minister's wife was approached by one of her husband's parishioners and urged to put her shoulder to the church wheel and assist in its revolutions. As this wife was a very capable and efficient woman, and could, if she would, be a power in the church, her reply was listened to with eagerness.

"When I married Dr. Blank," said she, "I married an orphan asylum. There were children by both his former marriages, and I have children. I can not at present attend to duties outside my family without neglecting my duties at home."

This reply occasioned considerable comment and criticism among the church members, some indorsing Mrs. Blank's view, and some condemning it, adding that "charity should begin at home," but should not end there.

Some time after this matter was discussed a gentleman of the congregation freely volunteered his views to Mrs. Blank. "You are exactly right," said he; "my mother, as you know, has been a church worker all her life, and we children—there were ten of us—never had a home; never had a mother. We had a place to stay, and food and clothing, but mother was always off attending to somebody else's family and letting her own shift for itself."

Mrs. Blank had often heard the wonder expressed that the mother of this gentleman, a saintly woman, should have been so unfortunate in her children. They were not church members, and the sons all indulged in wine-bibbing and worldly amusements. If her view as to her duty needed confirmation, which it did not, she had it in the solution of the mystery afforded by the statement of this man.

There are women of so large a mold that they can mother a whole parish and not neglect their own families. There are others whose church work must by their own limitations be confined within a narrow area. The nearest duty it is for us to do, and then the nearest to that. Otherwise we may have to lament, "Mine own vineyard have I not kept."—New York Christian Advocate.

HOW TO MAKE LIFE HAPPY.—Take time; it is no use to foam or fret, or do as the angry housekeeper who has got hold of the wrong key, and pushes, shakes and rattles it about the lock until both are broken and the door is still unopened. The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures. Try to regard present vexations as you will regard them a month hence. Since we can not get what we like, let us like what we can get. It is not riches, it is not poverty, it is human nature that is the trouble. The world is like a looking-glass. Laugh at it and it laughs back; frown at it and it frowns back. Angry thoughts canker the mind and dispose it to the worst temper in the world—that of fixed malice and revenge. It is while in this temper that most men become criminals. Show your sense by saying much in a few words. Try to speak some kind word or do some kind deed each day of your life. You will be amply repaid. Set your work to song. —Post.

A little extra watchfulness on the mother's part, as winter approaches, may save the children from serious attacks of illness. Many cases of throat and lung troubles, croup and influenza, have been traced to the pernicious habit of allowing the little folks to sit or lie on the floor in cold weather. There, if anywhere, a draught will be felt, and the coldest air is always nearest the floor. Rugs afford some protection, but better still are cushions stuffed with hair or excelsior and covered with something like Turkey red or blue denim, which will keep clean a long time. The older children, as they go back and forth to school, should be cautioned against sitting on stone steps, as they are often seen to do when the mercury is at the freezing point. Teach them also, when out of doors, to keep their mouths closed and breathe through their nostrils. The inability to do this may reveal an unsuspected catarrhal difficulty. See to it that the children start for school with warm feet; also, that in dressing and undressing in winter they do not run about the room in bare feet. It pays to give attention to these trifles.—Exchange.

Scientific.

SCIENCE IN SOAP-BUBBLES.—There is scarcely anything in the world which seems more utterly outside the realm of law than a soap-bubble. The delicate film, with its exquisite floating colors, its power of instantly vanishing, leaving no trace behind, hardly seems as though it could form a link in the inexorable chain of cause and effect which we call physical law.

The atmospheric pressure on a bubble six inches in dinmeter is over fifteen hundred pounds, and yet the fragile film lies safely between the opposing forces of nature—the pressure of the outer air, the spring of the inclosed cushion within it, the downward pull of gravity, the upward push of the buoyant atmosphere, and the molecular forces in the film itself—so long as the bubble lasts; it is because of an exquisite adjustment of all the forces, physical and malecular, concerned in its existence.

This is, of course, the merest commonplace, and yet it is one of the commonplaces of nature, which, however well we may know them, never cease to be wonderful when they are in any degree realized. There are other laws governing films which are no less wonderful, though they are less familiarly known. A heap of bubbles blown while the pipe is dipped under the surface of soapy water looks like a chaotic huddle of bubbles of all sizes and many shapes; but, upon careful examination, it is found that never more than three films meet at an unsupported liquid edge, and never more than four edges meet at a liquid point, and that the angles are always equal; that is, films will not meet each other at an unsupported edge or point at an angle smaller than 120°—one third of a circle.—Popular Science Monthly.

THE LARDER OF AN OCEAN STEAMER.—The great steamships which cross the Atlantic so constantly and so swiftly as to make New York and Liverpool seem much nearer each other than they did twenty years ago have been called floating palaces, as indeed they are. Some of the larger ones might almost be called floating cities—the number of people they carry would make a very respectable town, at least, and from this list of edibles carried by and eaten on board of the Umbria in one of her trips from New York to Liverpool we should conclude that either there was not much sensickness suffered by the passengers, or else that it did not seriously affect the appetite. This is the list given by an English paper, the Pall Mall Gazette: 9,500 pounds of beef, 4,000 pounds of mutton, 900 pounds of lamb, 256 pounds of veal, 150 pounds of pork, 140 pounds of pickled legs of pork, 600 pounds of corned tongues, 700 pounds of corned beef, 2,000 pounds of fresh fish, 20 pounds of calves' feet, 18 pounds of calves' heads, 450 fowls, 240 spring chickens, 120 ducks, 50 turkeys, 50 geese, 600 squabs, 300 tins of sardines, 300 plovers, 175 pounds of sausages, 1,200 pounds of ham, 500 pounds of bacon, 10,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk, 700 pounds of butter, 410 pounds of coffee, 87 pounds of tea, 900 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of rice, 200 pounds of barley, 100 jars of jam and jelly, 50 bottles of pickles, 60 bottles of sauces, 20 barrels of apples, 14 boxes of lemons, 18 boxes of oranges, 6 tons of potatoes, 24 barrels of flour.

SLEEP THE FIRST LAW OF NATURE.—Sleeplessness is the result of over-physical or mental effort. When a man works beyond his strength, or thinks or studies more than rest can restore, then, sooner or later, comes that inability to sleep soundly, that wakefulness which is more wearing even than bodily labor, and which feeds the debility which first gave rise to it. The result is, a man is always tired, never feels rested, even when he leaves his bed in the morning; hence he wastes away, and finds repose only in the grave, if, indeed, insanity do not supervene. It is too often a malady remediless by medical means. Avoid, then, all over-effort of mind and body; it is suicidal. Whatever you do, get enough sleep: whatever you do, take enough rest to restore the exhausted energies of each preceeding twenty-four hours.—Ledger.

MCNAMEE.—A letter from my old pastoral charge—Holly Springs, Miss.—where I spent four delightful years, brings me the sad intelligence of the death of Bro. W. J. MCNAMEE. When our Christian friends are taken from this world, it is a comfort to us to think of their virtues and of the glorious inheritance upon which they have entered.

W. J. McNamee was a good and true man. He was converted under the ministry of my beloved friend and class mate, Rev. J. M. Boon. In Holly Springs, where he lived for years, he was a consistent Christian. No one ever doubted his piety or his fidelity to the church. As Sunday-school superintendent he was always at his post. He loved children and tried to give them pleasure, and thus bound them to himself "with hooks of steel." There are many who will, when burdened with the cares and sorrows of life, look back through the mist of tears, and associate his name with bright and happy occasions.

Several years ago he turned his thoughts toward the land of golden dreams, and went from Holly Springs to California. From California he went to Walla Walla, Washington Territory, where he connected himself with the church, and continued actively engaged in Christian work. Here he was happily married, and, no doubt, looked forward to many years of sweet domestic bliss; but these pure hopes perished as the morning flowers. His health failed, and his devoted wife carried him first to Iowa, then to the mild climate of Louisiana; but nothing could arrest the fatal work of consumption.

I know nothing of his last hours; but his life justifies me in the fond belief that ministering spirits hovered around his dying pillow to attend him home. His emaciated form was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Holly Springs, near the church which he had served so faithfully and which he loved so well. Heart-mourners wept at his burial, and for years to come appreciative friends will lay sweet flowers on his grave.

E. H. MOON.

PACKWOOD—Alas! death has visited the home of S. E. and A. M. Packwood, and taken from their presence the beloved little daughter, ANNIE LULA, who died of congestion in St. Helena parish, La., August 18, 1889, aged five years five months and fifteen days.

She was a sweet, amiable, affectionate and obedient little girl. She sank quietly to sleep without a struggle. We deeply deplore the death of our little earth-angel; but we bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that our loss is her eternal gain. She can not come to us here any more; but, thanks be to God (who doeth all things well), we can go to her. We feel that she is safe in the arms of Jesus; and may her father, mother, little sister and two little brothers so live and trust the loving Jesus that in our Father's house we may all joyfully meet to part no more forever!

S. E. P.

HOLLEY—Mrs. SUSAN C. HOLLEY (nee Milburn) was born in Avoyelles parish, La., January 1, 1829. In 1847 she was married to Mr. Nathaniel Holley, whom she survived seventeen years. In 1885 she became a citizen of New Orleans; moved in 1859 to Liberty, Texas; thence in 1879 to Orange, Texas, where she died, February 21, 1890.

Sister Holley was the mother of nine children, of whom three only live to mourn her departure. At the age of sixteen she joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived an exemplary life, until at death she was, doubtless, taken to the church triumphant. Orange has thus been deprived of one of its brightest lights. Among her last words were: "Look unto me, all ye ends of the earth." "We all ought to be good." "He saves." "Trust Jesus." WM. A. SAMPEY.

MORELAND—Mrs. MATTIE A. MORELAND died March 1, 1890, aged twenty-three years eight months and fourteen days, near Homer, Claiborne parish, La., where she was born and raised. She was the daughter of T. A. and M. A. Watson; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when fourteen years old, and lived a consistent Christian life.

She was a model, pure wife, mother and neighbor, and cast a hallowed influence on all who came in contact with her, on account of her amiable, good disposition and smooth temper, mature judgment and Christian integrity. She leaves a devoted husband and three little children (one a small infant), and a multitude of friends and relatives who sympathize with the bereaved, who have another attraction in heaven. ROBERT PARVIN.

PRICE—Died, in Jackson, Miss., February 14, 1890, DURWARD BELMONT PRICE, son of J. F. and Caroline Price, aged eleven years six months and twenty-one days. Durward was a good boy; dutiful to his parents and fond of church and Sabbath-school.

Within less than three weeks after his death, ere the bitterness of grief had passed away, Death again invaded the family circle, this time claiming as his victim the eldest daughter of the household—DORA—aged seventeen years one month and twenty-three days. Dora was a universal favorite among her acquaintances. She was so bright and joyous, so kind and obliging, that to know her was to love her. She joined the Methodist Church at eleven years of age, and was ever afterward true to her vows of discipleship. During her last illness, which was a very painful one, she displayed that meek resignation to the will of God that can only come from the Christian's faith.

Dark are the shadows that have gathered about the hearts of these parents; but they sorrow not as those who have no hope. With fond anticipation they look forward to a blissful reunion with their loved ones in a land where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more.

A FRIEND.

WHITE—Bro. WILLIE L. WHITE, son of Bro. D. L. and Sister R. F. White, was born in Rankin county, Miss., December 1, 1862; was married to Miss Ida Knight, January 11, 1888; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shiloh Church, Rankin county, Miss., the first Sunday in March, 1888, and died at his home, near Shiloh Church, January 23, 1890, being twenty-seven years one month and fourteen days old.

Bro. Willie was one of our best young men, and would, doubtless, have made his mark in the church and world had he lived; but our kind heavenly Father saw best to call him away in early life, and we try to submit to his will, and feel that it is for the best. He was a dutiful son, a loving, devoted husband and father, a consistent member of the church, a valuable citizen and a good neighbor. We shall greatly miss him; but the Lord knoweth best. He leaves a father and mother, a loving, devoted wife, one sweet little child and brothers and sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss. May a kind heavenly Father sustain by his grace his dear companion and host of relatives and friends! is the prayer of their pastor,

A. D. MILLER.

SMITH—WILLIAM ADKISSON SMITH was born in Orange county, N. C., June 8, 1814. He moved to Henry county, Tenn., 1828. He professed religion and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Mt. Pleasant, October 10, 1833. In 1835 he moved to Grenada, and joined the Methodist Church in October, 1836. He moved to Black Hawk, 1837. He was married in 1842, and moved to Bluff Springs, 1845, where he died, February 12, 1890.

His probation on earth was extended beyond his expectations, or the expectations of his friends—he being a man of exceedingly delicate frame, and a great sufferer for many years. These afflictions were endured with great patience and resignation.

Bro. Smith loved the church, and, as proof, his seat was never vacant when able to reach it. One of the best proofs of his true worth and merits is seen in the family he assisted in raising for God and the church. Some of the positive elements of Christian character have left their impress upon them, and they sorrow not as those who have no hope. All the defects of our deceased brother are easily covered with that mantle of "charity that hopeth all things."

R. A. ELLIS.

COWAN—Little LILLIAN, daughter of D. D. and Lillian Cowan, died in Ocean Springs, Miss., March 1, 1890, aged four years and seven months. A bright, beautiful and tender bud has been taken away from that happy home circle. She was only loaned to them for a short time, and God took her to himself. So there is another jewel added to the beauties of heaven to draw her parents there.

The writer will not soon forget that bright little face as she would run to meet him when he visited that home, and how sweetly she always spoke to her pastor as "brother."

May the God of all comfort bless Bro. and Sister Cowan, and make them to feel that he has taken little Lillian for her good and theirs.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

An Honorable Calling.

In all ages, the profession of medicine has been held in honor. Each of the other learned professions is more or less dependent upon this one. The lawyer must be versed in Medical Jurisprudence, and the clergyman must know "to minister to a mind diseased." And just now the writers of fiction seem to be encroaching upon the doctors' "preserves." With slight alterations or additions, for example, a few illustrations, many a modern novel might be made to do service as a medical work. However, doctors' lives are not all sunshine. They must expect many disappointments. The search for the elusive bullet, though, apparently, equally fascinating, is often not more successful than that for the North Pole. Science has enabled them to determine just where it is, but, alas, they can not reach it. Then they are obliged to depend upon the charity of editors and publishers for advertising, their "Ethics" not allowing them to pay for it. And, worst of all, the chronic cases, baffling and setting at naught their skill. This is sad for the doctors, but let us not waste our sympathy upon them, let us rather point out a way of escape to the patients given over by them. This is found in the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. Being inhaled, it is absorbed into the blood, and distributed over the whole body, imparting new strength and vigor, and assisting nature. Over one thousand physicians are using it in their practice. You will find testimonials from these, as well as from great numbers of patients, besides, a full account of Compound Oxygen, in our Treatise of 200 pages, a carefully written work, the result of years of study and experience. Sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

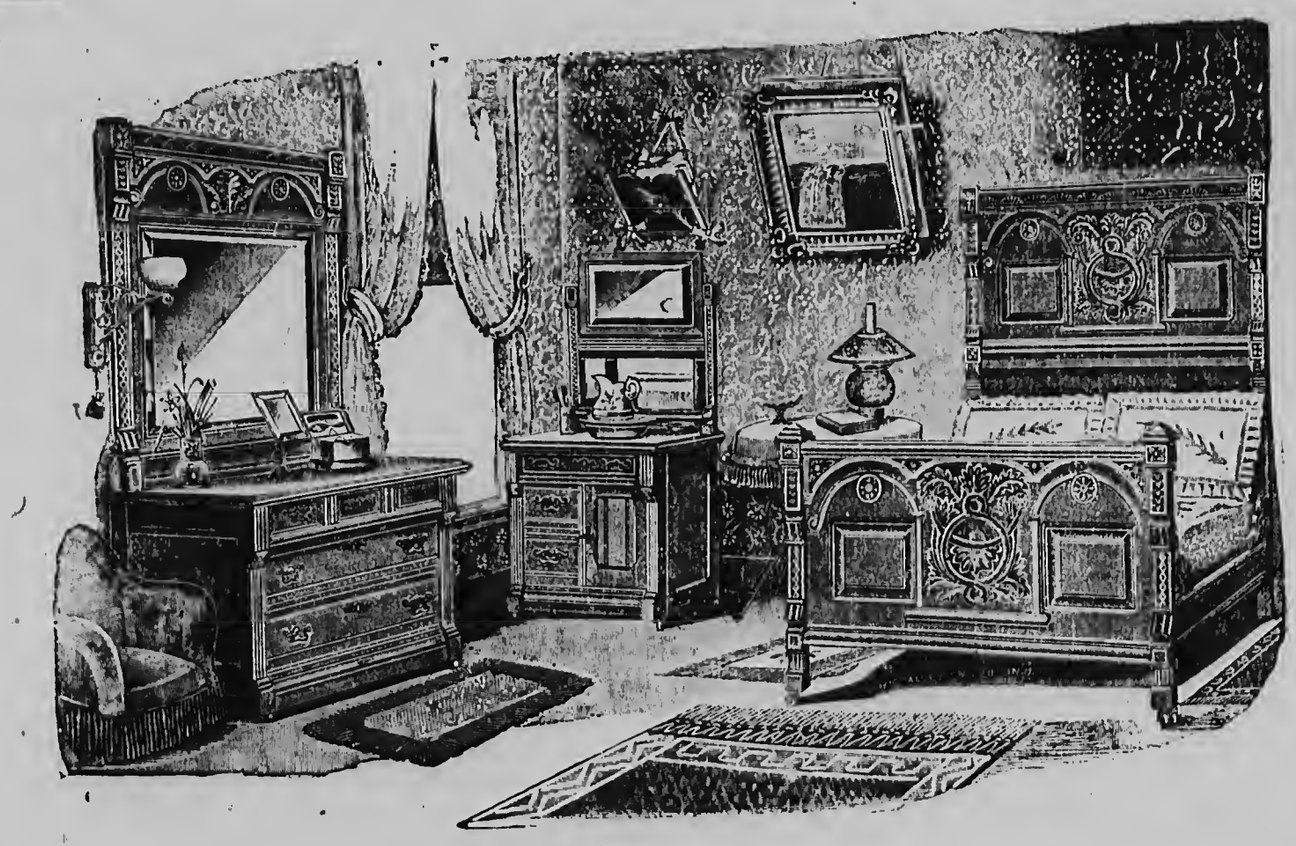
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $10 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The River and Harbor Committee has disposed of the Mississippi river. The river will get $2,000,000 from Cairo to the mouth. The bill, however, is growing in amount from day to day, and it will probably come out of the committee carrying $22,000,000. The Senate will probably add $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 to it, and it will go to the President with $25,000,000.

There seems to be little probability that the present Legislature will disturb Iowa's prohibition law. The license measures that have been advocated are practically dead.

In New York City, on April 11, 1,000 workmen on down-town buildings struck in obedience to the commands of the Central Labor Union.

Four New England breweries, it is stated, have been turned over to Englishmen for $2,350,000.

Acting under instructions of Judge Reyland, the grand jury of Sedalia (Mo.), now in session, has issued subpœnas for a number of members of the "High Five Club," a social organization among whose members are quite a number of young ladies, to appear before that body. It is supposed that an effort will be made to find indictments against the persons at whose houses the club has met during its existence on a charge of gaming or gambling on their premises.

A committee from the New Orleans Cotton Exchange were in Washington, last week, to protest against the Butterworth bill taxing dealers in futures and options. The delegation did what they could in the way of developing a sentiment against the measure; but they did not meet with much success.

President Harrison, on April 12, presented a handsome medal to Joseph Franels, in recognition of his services in the construction and perfection of life-saving appliances.

Secretary Proctor has submitted to the Interior Department officials a proposition to enlist 1,000 Indians into the regular army. It is proposed to officer the regiment with graduates from West Point, the subordinate grades to be filled by pupils who have been educated at Eastern military schools.

Congressman Samuel J. Randall, the great Democratic leader, died in Philadelphia, on April 13. He entered the House of Representatives in 1863, and held his seat there until his death. He was speaker of the House for the short session beginning December 4, 1875, and re-elected speaker in the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congresses.

Seventy persons were arrested in Denver, Col., on April 13, for violating the Sunday law. They were locked up, and bail was refused them.

The business of the International American Conference is so far advanced that there is little doubt that the delegates can leave for the excursion through the South at midnight Friday, the 18th, as originally planned. About one-half of them have already arranged to take the trip, and several others will, doubtless, decide to postpone their departure for home for that purpose, so that the party will consist of about forty persons.

A delegation of the sugar planters of Louisiana secured a hearing before the Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee, and statements were made by all of the visitors in which they declared that the sugar schedule in the McKinley bill, if adopted, would work ruin to the sugar industry. The arguments presented were very forcible, but the indications are that the schedule will be reported as it stands.

FOREIGN.

Two newspaper correspondents have been expelled from Italy on the grounds that they have sent to their papers reports calculated to injure the financial credit of the kingdom.

The committee of the British Miners' Federation adopted a resolution declaring that the question of eight hours for a day's work should form the principal point of discussion at the labor conference to be held in Brussels.

Mr. Stanley, in an interview, said that the Aruwhimi forest, which belongs to the Congo Free State, was enormously richer in everything, especially rubber trees, than the Amazon forests. This section of Africa, he declared, would be the rubber reservoir of the universe.

The military bill which will be submitted at the coming session of the German Reichstag will demand a credit of from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 marks.

The Russian government has granted the Danube Steamship Company a subsidy of 2,700,000 roubles to increase its flotilla, on the condition that the company's vessels be henceforth considered in the active service of the Russian navy.

Mr. Phelps, the United States minister; Sir E. B. Malet, the British ambassador, and Marshal Von Bieberstein, German imperial foreign secretary, met at the Foreign Office in Berlin, last week, and each deposited a formal ratification of the Samoan treaty, and signed the final protocol.

The agitation in Paris commercial circles growing out of the apprehension that the McKinley tariff administrative bill, if it should become a law, would have serious effect upon the business of exporting to the United States, has its counterpart in Berlin. Many of the Berlin merchants interested in the exportation of goods to America are seeking to bring influence to bear for the purpose of having the bill either greatly modified or altogether withdrawn.

The King and Queen of Portugal are about to start on a tour of the principal cities of the kingdom.

Immediately upon his return from Wiesbaden, Emperor William will hold a series of prolonged conferences with the heads of the various departments—Chancellor Von Caprivi, Baron Von Berlepsch and Baron Von Bieberstein successively. It is reported to be the determination of the Emperor to exercise a rigid personal scrutiny over every measure.

The steamer Suetta struck a sunken rock off Thurdah Island, and sank in about three minutes. One hundred and seventy-nine lives were lost.

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

F. D. VANVALKENBURGH.
106 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

W. B. LEWIS, P. E.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art,

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this deparment beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

Centenary College

JACKSON, LA.

Jackson, La., is near Ethel, on the Valley R. R., 113 miles north of New Orleans. The location is beautiful and healthful, the buildings are elegant and ample, and the Faculty is complete and able. The sale of intoxicating drinks is forbidden by law within five miles of the College. Its endowment fund is being rapidly increased, and the college is expected to enter upon a new career of prosperity.

Special attention will be given to the health, morals and biblical instruction of the students.

For terms, Catalogue, or other information apply to Prof. G. H. Wiley, Jackson, La., or to W. L. C. Hunnicutt, President.

CROSSING THE BAR.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark.

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

The Sabbath. Is It Sunday or Saturday?

BY R. ABBEY, D. D.

It is stated to me by some of our Louisiana preachers that our church in certain parishes is disturbed on this subject, and I am requested to explain the subject in this paper.

In the first place, the question itself—that is, that there could be such a general question at all—is the result of such ignorance as we do not look for among people of moderate intelligence in these times. The question itself, without looking an inch into it, supposes a natural impossibility. It supposes that a certain period of time, of twenty-four hours, forms a certain day for all men. This is, of course, impossible. Any given day is the same day only on the same line of longitude. But go west, or go east, and the same period is a different day.

This could not be known until the last three hundred years. Before we discovered the rotundity and revolution of the earth, it was supposed that every day begun and ended simultaneously everywhere. But now we know that while a day is beginning at one place, it is ending at another; when it is midday here, it is midnight yonder.

It ought to be well known that persons traveling from east to west lose time as compared with the time at the point of starting; and if you go far enough, you will lose a whole day. And so, in like manner, if you go from west to east, you gain time. So these travelers, or the local places through which they pass, can not have the same day of the week, or of the month or year. A day is a day for that longitude only. Let me illustrate this so as to make it unmistakably plain.

The following is said to have occurred; but whether it did or not, it makes no difference, for it certainly would occur every time in like circumstances:

Some years ago a London missionary society sent a new company to an island in the South Pacific, about thirty miles distant from an older station. Some time after the new missionaries reached their home, they arranged a visit to the old station, leaving on Friday morning, and intending to return on Monday. They reached the station about midday, and found the people at church on Sunday! What! What is this! Most assuredly this is Friday. And most assuredly it is Sunday. And the matter was inexplicable; each was certain that his count was right. At length one of them, whetting up his brains a little, exclaimed: "See here! Are we all a pack of fools? Surely we are both right. You came the eastern route, and we the western. So, what is Sunday to one, must be Friday to the other. Neither of us can possibly have the London Sunday." And they had a laugh over their own dullness.

Edgar Poe illustrates the principle on this wise: His young friend in London wanted to marry his girl; but the old gentleman hesitated, saying: "When two or three Sundays come together." So the young suitor was put to his wits to bring several Sundays together; and he did it demonstrably. Securing the assistance of two friends, he sent them round, one east and one west, enjoining both to keep the calendar correct. On the voyagers' return they met at the father's house on Sunday. But with one voyager yesterday was Sunday, and with the other tomorrow will be Sunday. So here were three Sundays come together.

It is said that the apostles changed the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday. Whether they did or not, is entirely immaterial to us. We do not care to know what they did or intended to do, in this behalf. They did not arrest the revolution of the earth, and, therefore, they did not fix a Sabbath period for the entire church. Of course, they knew nothing of the earth's diurnal motion; and so, whatever they did could have only a local application. Moreover, the great confusion and uncertainty of dates, until very recently, render it quite impossible that any hebdomadal count from any given period, even at the same place, could approximate certainty, much less be reliable. It is only within the last two hundred years that we have any uniformity in dates even in Europe. To suppose that we began, say 500 years ago, on a particular day then and there called Sunday, and counted by sevens, accurately, to a particular Sunday now, is the extreme of ignorance and superstition. Until lately there was no uniformity in dates anywhere.

Date means a count of years, months, weeks or days from some known and acknowledged period in the past. And there was no such acknowledged period throughout Christendom, in general use, until lately. The general use of A. D. in dates is comparatively recent. To show this plainly, let me copy a little from undoubted authority.

If, for instance, we refer to a newspaper in the reign of Queen Anne, we shall see the Amsterdam Gazette, of February 22, translated in the London Gazette, of February 13, and abridged in the Edinburgh Courent, of February 19—all in the year 1705. (Lib. Use. Know., Art., date.)

Here are three cities very little distant. The London paper copies from the Amsterdam an article a week or more before it was printed. And the same article was copied in Edinburgh several days before. Each city had its own local date. Such irregularities in local dates could be cited by the thousands all over Christendom until about the last two hundred years. From the birth of Christ we count downward with some degree of accuracy by the century; but, as to years, there is oftentimes considerable uncertainty; and as to months or weeks or days, there is no general agreement anywhere; and as to the certainty of a certain day being the same in different places, it is mere wild superstition.

Dates were reckoned from a score of church and other festivals, from the reign of Popes and kings, and other noted events. But dating from certain reigns was very uncertain. Some dated from his birth, some from his majority or election, and others from his crowning. So dates were sometimes several years apart. Thus:

The beheading of Charles I. was reckoned both in England and Scotland to have taken place on the thirtieth of January; but while England held the year 1648, Scotland held it to be 1649. (Lib. Use. Know.)

And if our seventh-day friends could count exactly, amidst this turmoil and confusion, to a certain day, they have no date to count from. They can not tell us the day, week, month or year on which any event alluded to in the Bible took place. There was no such period corresponding to our dates. They reckoned time by the Julian period, which style continued until 1582, when Gregory jumped the calendar from the fifth to the fifteenth of October. This is our calendar now. But it was adopted in Europe only at ten different periods, in as many different places. Ours came in in 1752. So that for 170 years it was mathematically impossible that we could have had a Sabbath corresponding to our Sabbath, call it Saturday or Sunday. And yet we are told of an exact Sabbath period for the entire church.

It is utterly beyond the pale of common information. They seem to know nothing about the necessary change of date on crossing the International Dateline, as it is called by geographers and navigators. Then how can they determine any date? There is some difference between saying something and having something to say. This dateline is formed by the earth's rotation, and is described as, "The line at which dates change, being made later by one day by those who cross the line from east to west, and earlier by one day by those crossing from west to east."

Dates must be reckoned from some place where a local date is recognized. Rome was the center of civilization. We get our date from Rome; and it can but be seen that those going east and those going west must have, one a day earlier and one a day later as to Rome time. Then, as the apostles traveled both east and west, they could not fail to find themselves occasionally in the condition of our missionaries above alluded to. Then they would, of course, fall into the local date. Such things must have happened a thousand times with everybody. If the Saturday men contend for a certain day as Sabbath, ask them how they ascertained it. Not by the Julian period, for that is lost sight of long ago. And not by the Gregorian calendar, for that does not correspond with the other.

Since Copernicus made this world a globe, and set it to rolling over every day—a thing that the apostles never dreamed of—there are as many different Sabbaths as there are degrees of longitude. And there is no possible way to have one identical Sabbath for all men but to stop this rolling over business.

The Sabbath law requires us to keep every seventh day. This all intelligent Christians do. And the law of common sense requires that we do this with uniformity and regularity. The names of these days are artificial. The days themselves are all alike. And which one of the seven days is the Sabbath depends upon where you begin to count seven. It is the same day, call it one or call it seven.

"The Location of Millsaps College."

BY REV. J. W. M'NEIL.

Several communications have appeared lately in the ADVOCATE on the location of Millsaps College; all the writers from North Mississippi, and all favoring that part of the State as its location. As many of us have opinions different, it is time we were expressing ourselves, lest our silence be taken as a tacit consent to their views. I don't presume to dictate to the Board of Trustees. I have the largest confidence in their judgment, and will, with all loyal Methodists of our State, abide their action. Yet opinions outside of their body, if sustained by sound argument, will be weighed by them for all they are worth. Late writers—"Sigma," "Tau," Dr. Cameron, and others—all seem to agree to one view, that first advanced, if I remember aright, by "Sigma"—that it would not be well to locate Millsaps College in South or Central Mississippi, lest its nearness to would affect Centenary College. In other words, colleges of the same denomination should not be located near each other, lest the strength of each be affected by that nearness. With this position taken by these brethren, it is evident, by a careful interpretation of all they have said, that all favor Holly Springs as the location of Millsaps College. For the sake of argument, I will not deny the position taken; yet, is not their argument against their side of the question, that of Holly Springs as the place of location? The point upon which they would like stress to be placed is that Jackson is too near Centenary, and, at the same time, favor the location at Holly Springs. Will it be denied Vanderbilt University is little further from Holly Springs than Centenary is from Jackson?—or, in other words, that it will cost about as much both in time and money to go from Jackson to Centenary as it will from Holly Springs to Vanderbilt? If the time and money are equal in two cases, then the number of miles should be considered nothing—that is, at least the mind of our age. If, therefore, their argument is good against Jackson, it is also good against Holly Springs.

Dr. Cameron started out broad-guaged. He says, "Let us put ourselves as far away as possible from all local prejudices and preferences," and before he closes, is arguing with earnestness in favor of North Mississippi. He does this by endorsing what "Sigma" said in this: "The tendency of our people is to send northward to school." The question arises, Why? There is no other choice, so far as Central or South Mississippi is concerned, as to our State institutions. It is no argument in favor of a northern location to say we send northward to school when it can not be avoided. All our State institutions are located in North Mississippi; hence, if we reap any benefit of our support of these schools, we have to go where they are. Northern Mississippi is the favored spot, so far as the State's action goes in this matter. It may be asked at this point, Why do we not patronize Centenary more extensively? It is certainly not that we have any objections to that school; simply the larger part of South Mississippi is so situated as to be more accessible to northern schools. Most of us can reach even Vanderbilt in about the same time we can Centenary, and only a few years ago at much less, both as to time and money, although Vanderbilt is much further away. This, in itself, is certainly significant.

Dr. Cameron again endorses the writer, "Tau," in favor of North Mississippi, in that he says of the founders of our State University, that the trustees of the university showed statesmanship in its location in passing Jackson and southern points in the State; that a like statesmanship was shown in the location of our other State institutions, and concludes that the phenomenal success of these institutions is attributable to their being located in North Mississippi. This many of us don't believe. These are State institutions; have had the support and backing of the State both in money and her representative or influential citizens. It is no wonder they have succeeded. The wonder would have been if they had not. It is no argument to say they have succeeded because located in North Mississippi. Either would have been as successful, and, in my opinion, would have been, with the same support and backing, more successful if located at Jackson. The reason can be given. It is a fact that the objection has been raised against these institutions; that, as State institutions, they ought to have been located more central. The University and the Agricultural and Mechanical College have succeeded in the same part of the State, because it is understood their curriculum is different; one a literary and the other an agricultural college.

Will Dr. Cameron, or any of these writers, attempt to deny that Millsaps College and the University, both of a like curriculum, will not affect each other if located only thirty miles apart, which is the case if the former should be located at Holly Springs? They certainly will not. Dr. Cameron's broad-guaged liberality, in that he says, "I would suggest that we forget, as far as possible, in what latitude or longitude of the State we have our homes," is not strongly sustained by his earnest arguments in favor of North Mississippi. If he had left his suggestion to the Locating Board, and then made no argument in favor of any particular part, it would have left him in front as the most broad-minded and liberal writer we have had on the matter under discussion. However, saying the least we can of it, he exhibits a weakness common to all of us—that of leaning to human nature when our personal preferences are to be consulted. He certainly fails to come up to the standard of his suggestion. Is it not strange how hard North Mississippi is to satisfy? All our State institutions are there, and yet they crave more. Is it not time South Mississippi should receive, at least, a little consideration? I believe it can be shown we are now increasing more rapidly, in proportion to our former numbers of inhabitants, than any part of the State, and that Methodism is keeping abreast with that progress; therefore, the importance of having our cherished college at least near her borders.

"Tau" takes the position that it would not be well to have Millsaps College located at the State capital. The influences of our public men are such that many parents would prefer their sons were not brought in contact with them. We have never heard it raised as an objection to Vanderbilt, because located at the capital of Tennessee—Nashville. It is presumed the public men of Mississippi will compare favorably with the public men of Tennessee. Again: no one ever heard of parents complaining because their sons might be brought in contact with some of the best talent of the State, before "Tau" suggested it; and that would certainly be the case if Millsaps College were located at Jackson. In a former communication I presented the numerous advantages which would attend the college if located at Jackson. I have seen no better reasons yet advanced in favor of any other point; hence my mind remains unchanged.

Bro. J. W. Honnoll suggests that the location be made upon a moneyed basis. This, in my opinion, might prove to be one of the gravest errors that might be committed in its location. Money is a good thing in itself, and a certain amount is absolutely necessary. It is a fact also, that some men and institutions have been wonderfully successful, and not from the amount they had to start with, but from starting at the right place. Fifty thousand dollars, as Bro. Honnoll suggests, might be more than consumed in a short while, and that, unnecessarily, by parents in reaching the college, for want of centrality and accessibility.

Now, Jackson has both of these, and is more than an equal, in many other respects, than any town that has asked for it; hence, why pass Jackson and go to one of the most extreme northern towns of the State? There is no reason for it, and there can be no advantage; but, perhaps, many disadvantages gain by it. I want it understood I am not pleading for its location at my own town. I am not a citizen of Jackson, and never expect to be. All I say is from no other motive than the furtherance of Methodism and a desire for the success of Millsaps College.

Again: I want it to be understood we are not asking even our northern brethren to come to South Mississippi; only to meet us on the half-way ground. By this we are not violating the principle as taught by Paul to every man: "Not to think more highly of himself than he ought to think."

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Miss.

Our Advocates.

BY "PINE KNOT."

Among the many questions that are likely to be discussed by the next General Conference, there is probably none of more consequence than, "What is the future of our Advocates, and how can their usefulness be increased?"

This subject is surrounded with many difficulties, patent to those who have had much experience in this field of Christian work.

In compliance with the request of friends, I offer you my views with the hope that they may aid in removing some of these difficulties, and lead to a wiser use of the family of Advocates in the building up of the kingdom of Christ.

To one who has carefully observed the steady reduction in price of printed matter during the last decade, it is evident that religious books and periodicals must follow the course of secular publications, which means religious weeklies for one dollar a year, and the employment of the best journalistic talent in the respective religious denominations of our land.

With us, as Methodists, there is another matter of greater moment than the above—that is, how to preserve and more closely develop the connectional character of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which is endangered by the independent position of most of the Advocates of our church. To prevent trouble likely to arise from this fact, it would seem to be indispensably necessary that all of the church organs should be consolidated and placed under control of a central committee selected by the General Conference, which should have entire management, editorial and business, of all our church papers, this committee to appoint editors and business managers; also buy the paper and ink for each of the Advocates. It should also procure articles from first-class Christian thinkers on the various topics of church polity, etc. Said articles should be put in type at the central office of said committee, and stereotyped plates of same be furnished each Advocate for simultaneous appearing. This committee, which should contain some practical business men familiar with the publishing business, should provide the most economical system for securing and maintaining an increased cash subscription patronage, as well as dictate the class of advertising matter to be accepted.

By adopting the above course our church interests would be unitedly and continually pressed upon the laity, as well as ministers, and each new phase of our work receive the most thoughtful and considerate advice and direction of the best informed Christian intellects of our denomination.

Since writing the above my attention has been called to the article, entitled, "What of the Future Policy of Our Church Papers?" in the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, by which I see that our brethren of the Northern Church are sailing in the journalistic sea of difficulty, in which are voyaging our Advocates. The writer of this article advises that one mammoth sheet shall be published in the interest of the Northern Church, subscription price of which should be a dollar, with a subscription list of 500,000; which sheet should contain all the church news of the world, and especially of Methodism, and be filled with articles from the ablest pens in Christendom. The impracticable feature of the writer's plan is that no central paper could possibly give sufficient space or attention to the local matters of our large and growing field; therefore, it seems to me that the plan I have suggested would give to our church at large the best thought on live topics promptly and at cheapest cost, and leave each Advocate full scope to advance the local features of Methodism in its respective fields as its editor should deem best.

It can be demonstrated that any weekly with a circulation of 12,000 can pay its way, including fair salaries to two editors, for a dollar per year, to each cash subscriber.

Of course, this committee would have the selection of places of publication for each of the Advocates, and would have to make satisfactory arrangements with the owners of the present papers now published as organs of our church.

A Bugle Blast.

President T. S. Adams, of the Louisiana Farmers' Union, has issued to all the subordinate Unions of the State the following spirited proclamation. It speaks for itself:

My Brothers: Upon the loyalty of the membership depends the salvation of our order. You have been true in the past, and your allegiance will remain true in the future. You have stood in serried ranks in a conflict of right against might. You have won. Your flag floats over forty parishes of this great commonwealth, unsullied by dishonor, the emblem of truth and justice. Upon its snow-white folds rests the hope of posterity—the destiny of the republic. You will hold up the arms of its bearer, as did the Hebrews of old, when God commanded the sun to stand still.

A contest is before you—a contest that demands vigilance and valor—a fight that requires the last man in the last ditch. The issue of rechartering the Louisiana Lottery will be made at the next session of your General Assembly. No pains will be spared by its advocates for its accomplishment. The muniments of war have been prepared; the army has been mobilized; the officers have been assigned to stations. They await the bugle blast of their leader. It will come in no mistaken notes when the hour is at hand. Unless the brave and true interpose, the star of Louisiana, already shining with dim and doubtful lustre, will pale in the blue dome of Statehood. Brothers of the Union! in this, the hour of her extremity, your State lifts her plaintive cry to you to save her honor! She turns from the populous cities of her fruitful womb to her children of the forest. She knows their virtue and their courage. Traveling north or south, placarded on the walls of every leading hotel, in letters bold and brazen, is the badge of her dishonor, "The Only Lottery in these United States Chartered by the People." With tearful eye your benign mother implores you to wipe the dark and damning blot from her fair brow. As obedient children, you will respond; as freemen, whom the truth has made free.

Now, therefore, by virtue of authority in me vested, it is hereby decreed and ordered that every parish Union in this jurisdiction shall, at its meeting next ensuing, pass resolutions instructing members of both Senate and House, representing them, to vote against all legislation in favor of rechartering the Louisiana Lottery, and declaring that neither excuse nor explanation for any vote to the contrary will be accepted.

THE FARMER FEEDETH ALL.

BY CHARLES GODFREY LELAND.

My lord rides through his palace gate,
My lady sweeps along in state,
The sage thinks long on many a thing,
And the maiden muses on marrying;
The minstrel harpeth merrily,
The sailor plows the foaming sea,
The huntsman kills the good red deer,
And the soldier wars without a fear;
But fall to each whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Smith hammereth cheerily the sword,
Priest preacheth pure and holy word,
Dame Alice worketh broidery well,
Clerk Richard tales of love can tell,
The tap-wife sells her foaming beer,
Dan Fisher doeth in the mere,
And courtiers ruffle, strut and shine,
While pages bring the Gascon wine;
But fall to each whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Man builds his castles fair and high,
Whatever river runneth by,
Great cities rise in every land,
Great churches show the builder's hand,
Great arches, monuments, and towers,
Fair palaces and pleasing bowers,
Great work is done, be'l here and there,
And well man worketh everywhere;
But work or rest, what'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

The Sunday-School—Mixed Classes.

BY MRS. WALTER V. CROUCH.

[A paper read before the Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention, held in New Orleans, March 21-23.]

I have been requested to prepare a paper on Mixed Classes—that is, classes composed of boys and girls. There is much to be said on the subject. The rule is separate teaching. Mine is the exception, for I have a class of twenty-two young people, of both sexes, whose ages range from sixteen to twenty. They meet every Sabbath perfectly at ease, each one with a pleasant greeting. Immediately upon roll-call I have and hold the undivided attention of my class. The great benefit is development. The boy, with his usual bashfulness and carelessness, soon learns to be more attentive to his personal appearance; one boy addicted to the excessive use of tobacco has almost ceased its use, as it was frowned upon and the girls did not use it. In regard to the girls, they become less frivolous, more dignified and courteous to the boys, encouraging them by not noticing their blunders. They equally ask and answer questions.

You will find no trouble whatever if, in the first place, you command the utmost respect, then the affection of your class. To obtain these essentials, you must set them an example, for rest assured that you are studied far more assiduously than the lesson. If you can stand the test, then your words will have due weight. If you can not hold your class and keep up their interest, do not attempt to mix them, for then there will be a tendency to talk, which you will not be able to control.

But, dear fellow-laborers, if you start out with a few fixed principles as planks in your platform, be assured you will find no difficulty in faithful teaching, leaving results to him who demands: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." "And these words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."

These are what I mean by planks in a platform:

1. You must believe what you teach.

2. The Bible, and the Bible alone, must be the law of your life, for "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."

3. You must practice your own precepts.

4. You must "keep yourself unspotted from the world."

5. You must fully realize that you are about your Master's business.

6. You must teach as though each Sabbath were your last, and your next meeting to be in eternity before the judgment bar of God.

7. You must pray without ceasing.

With this, as a foundation, you can build a structure which will be fitly joined together, eternal in the heavens. Together they are complements to each other—what one lacks the opposite supplies. To the boys, you must be a boy; to the girls, a girl; for the power of the Savior was, in his marvelous sympathy—so must it be with us. Under the Levitical law, the line of demarcation was very firmly drawn. One code was for man, another for woman; but, under the Christian dispensation, we see that "the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith;" for "there is neither Jew nor Gentile, neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus;" and, again, "by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." When God makes no difference, dare we? A different era will have dawned on the Christian community when it is universally admitted that there is neither male nor female; but that all stand alike and will receive the same words of commendation or condemnation.

Teach as though your own soul's salvation depended upon your manner of teaching, which it truly does. One of the parents said to me: "My boy repeats to me every word you say, and measures my conduct by your instruction." How far-reaching and inestimable is our influence!

Patiently and faithfully the sculptor chisels away at the cold and passionless marble until, under his skillful hand, the beautiful work of art is complete. How much patience and faithfulness is necessary to remove the angularities of this life along with its prejudices, that life is not mere sentiment, but a preparation for the reality to come. The best opportunity is hereby presented for teaching two most important truths of God's Word that are, alas! too many times passed over. They are: Temperance (or self-control), and its twin—social purity.

In the world's vernacular, these two virtues are to be taught to, and practiced solely by, the girls. Is it not the saddest thought for mortal to entertain that the average church-goer believes the same thing? Right here, let me emphasize the point I made in my platform: The teacher must believe, mark you, every word in the Bible.

I challenge any Christian to make a difference. Why should we be silent (for at times silence is criminal) on a subject which affects the human race for weal or woe?

As we stand, individually, responsible, let them learn together that their bodies are living temples of the Holy Ghost; that they have been bought with a price, which price is the blood of the spotless Lamb of God; and that they dare not take that temple to any place where they must part company with God's Holy Spirit.

Temperance (or self-control, strictly speaking) is best adapted to mixed classes, for there one is forbidden to tempt, the other to be tempted. The girl especially must be warned (for she is the greater sufferer) never to offer the first social (dare you call it such?) glass, which, if never touched, would save many a soul. Often the words of Mr. George Stuart occur to me: "I never see a drunkard but I know that somewhere there is a broken-hearted woman." Dear girls, "be not deceived; God is not mocked: whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Better that your arm should be paralyzed ere you offer the soul-destroyer to any human being, for you can not touch pitch and not be defiled. "Ye are the servants of whomsoever ye obey: but if the Son hath made you free, ye are free indeed."

There are times that I am weighed down with the responsibility, for it comes to me as it did to Ezekiel: "To thou, O Son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore, thou shalt hear the word at my mouth and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it, if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul."

But, as Simon said: "We have toiled all night and caught nothing," we long to go ashore; but, amid the depression, we hear the Master say: "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught."

The boys are made strong by the encouragement of good Christian girls, in whose company, by precept and example, they are stimulated to right-doing. The education of boys and girls, beginning in the family, is carried on in all of social life; why not continue it in the Sabbath-school, when in the church it is the rule? In separate classes you feel crippled, for you can only reach one side; whereas, in mixed classes, your work is certainly nearer to completion. I am grieved that there is occasion to raise my voice against one evil that has invaded the homes of many professors of religion, as Satan did in the garden of Eden. I allude to card-playing. Many a boy has taken his first lesson in gambling at a progressive euchre party, where prizes were awarded. What is the difference between playing cards for a stipulated sum or for an article purchased with that amount? It is not an innocent amusement.

I will close with a few verses from the Word of God, which no Christian can gainsay, and will cover all the ground and fortify the position which I have taken, and none can afford to do less and not be guiltless before God, for the two most responsible positions are those of parents and teachers.

Too many times persons say, "We can not afford to make certain investments which may involve the loss of money." But oh! how insignificant that is to the question, "Can we, as Christians, afford to compromise with the devil? Will it pay?" Let us see what God's Word says: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?..... And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God and they shall be my people..... Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you; and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Sunday-Schools.

There is certainly no interest more important to the church than the Sunday-school. This is the training-school for young disciples, and its curriculum is worthy of study even by those who may be supposed to have compassed the entire course of biblical literature. Not a few mature Christians, men and women, in almost every place are beginning to realize that they are not perfect in knowledge of divine things, but that they may still grow in the "knowledge" as well as the "grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Indeed, I have observed, of late, in some places that the Sunday-school is made up, for the most part, of young men and women, and, as before indicated, those of maturer years, rather than the children of the church. There seems to be in many places, on the one hand, a disrelish, on the part of the children, especially when they get to be "boys and girls," from eight to twelve years old, for the Sunday-school. On the other hand, there is a lack of interest and effort, on the part of parents and guardians, to overcome this spirit in their children, and induce a fondness for this institution. Then, in country places especially, there is often ground for excuse and reasons for neglect that do not exist in populous towns and cities. But there are no difficulties along either of these lines which may not be overcome. It would extend this article too far to mention all the "ways and means." I set out to write of one of many which has occurred to me often in a ministry of more than fifty years, and more than forty years in the pastoral work. The one mean to which I refer, whereby to make our Sunday-school exercises a source of pleasure and profit, comprehends all others, viz: that they be made more spiritual; that they be so conducted as to have all to realize that it is an act of worship, and not a mere routine of questions to be answered, and the singing of a few songs—not in the spirit, neither with the understanding, nor possessing such variety even as to make them interesting.

But how shall the Sunday-school be made more a religious exercise than it is? is the question. I answer:

1. Let all the officers and teachers, from the superintendent down, be men and women of experience in divine things.

2. Let them feel in their hearts that this is their work; that they are "called of God, as was Aaron," to enter this field, to labor in this part of the Master's vineyard.

These requirements are fundamental, and, added to them, there should be such literary qualification as would enable them to instruct, train, educate their classes and the entire school in the principles and doctrine of Christ. The time has come, thank God, when such officers and teachers can be found in almost every place. Intelligent management and direction, taking into account all the circumstances, is essential to the development of the spiritual feature of the Sunday-school.

On this point I do not hesitate to say that the habit of having Sunday-school at an early hour in the morning is not conducive to the spiritual interest of that class whom, of all others, we desire to reach and to benefit. Say that the Sunday-school begins at half-past eight or nine o'clock A. M., and occupies from one hour to one hour and a half; then just before the hour for the morning sermon the school is closed, with all concerned—the children especially, wearied and fatigued by confinement in the house. Who does not know that they will seek refreshment and recreation? If in a town, they prefer to go home, and will go, unless restrained, and their parents are not present to restrain them. But constraint in such a case is more hurtful than beneficial; so the children are left to their own option, whether to remain and hear the sermon, or return home, while their parents enjoy the sermon—that presentation and elucidation of the gospel that the children need possibly as much, if not more, than their parents, and which, under the present plan, they rarely enjoy.

I am fully persuaded that the whole family ought to attend the preaching together in the morning; then in the afternoon, have the Sunday-school, making the services as religious as practicable, and having all the family—aye, the whole community—attend the Sunday-school. In such case let the pastor, if he can, be present; occupy, say, twenty minutes in preaching a sermon to the children especially, and dispense with any service at night.

These suggestions do not claim the merit of originality, but they accord with my experience as the "more excellent way." H. J. HARRIS.

FRENCH SETTLEMENT.

A few weeks since I received a most urgent and pressing invitation from Bro. George W. Huff, pastor in charge of the Livingston circuit, to come over and help him at the French Settlement, stating that the Catholics were without a priest there; and some of them, having heard that I had been a Catholic, and also spoke French, were anxious that I should come and preach for them on the fifth Sunday in March. I was in a quandary. I scarcely knew how to reply, as I spoke but little French, and had never attempted or thought of attempting to preach in French; and the very thought of going into a French community, and trying to expound the Scriptures in their language, seemed to me the height of absurdity. However, I took the matter unto God in prayer, and it seemed as if God spoke unto me, saying, "Go, and I will be with thee, and will teach thee what thou shalt say." So, on Thursday, March 27, I supplied myself with a French Bible, and took passage on the steamer Louise, under command of Capt. Eugene Roberts, reaching French Settlement about three o'clock, Friday evening. Bro. John Fulton met me and took me in his buggy to Bro. Huff's, about a mile distant, where I received a warm welcome from Bro. and Sister Huff. I preached my first sermon in French on Saturday night to a good congregation. All seemed interested; and at the three services on Sunday much feeling was manifested. Bitter prejudice that had existed was done away with, and cordial invitations given to visit them in their homes. The trouble is that scarcely any of the children, and but few of the ladies, speak or understand a word of English; and, without house-to-house visiting, it will be almost impossible to get the ladies and children interested, and thereby build up the church. Bro. Huff has ten or twelve members there who are thoroughly converted—all but one praying in public. He has also a good Sunday-school. Surely there is a great day coming for this earnest little band.

Monday we went to Port Vincent, where I remained till Wednesday morning, and preached three times to interested congregations. We had one accession there.

I shall ever be grateful to God that he gave me the opportunity of testifying in his behalf at these places, and hold a pleasing remembrance of the cordial welcome given me by all; and pray that God may bless them in all things.

Permit me, ere I close, to tender my sincere thanks to Capt. Eugene Roberts, of the Louise, and Capt. J. W. Perkins, of the Alice, for their kindness and courtesy in extending to me the freedom of their boats.

MERIDIAN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My first quarterly meeting in the bounds of Meridian circuit, conducted by our presiding elder, was a treat to all present, while we were made to feel sad by having to separate with Bro. Norsworthy, having traveled under him as presiding elder four years, and spending the hours so pleasantly together. We are glad that God, in his wisdom, has given us Bro. T. L. Mellen for our leader on Meridian district. I feel like God will bless every effort that our presiding elder is making to establish a district parsonage.

On account of sickness in my family the present year, I am unable to help in the many calls that are being made that will result in good. My heart is in the work. I have one little boy who is able to sit up, that has been sick upwards of five weeks—part of the time not expected to live. We have all been sick; but, thank God, we are in the midst of good people, who administered unto our wants, for they waited upon the sick day and night for weeks. Everyone in our neighborhood offered their services to wait on our family whilst sick. I shall never forget these good people.

On my last round on my work many came up for prayer. Everyone seems to appreciate the services and the efforts that are being made for good. Those who have not the Methodist Hymn Book are calling for them. I have sold during the last month several family Bibles, Testaments and hymn books. I am still ordering.

Bro. Thomas Belew, our steward at Chunkey, died on March 21. He said to all present, just before he left, that there was nothing in his way. A good man is gone. L. J. JONES, P. C.

DAVID MORTON, Cor. Sec.

ALGIERS, LA.

For the encouragement of all Christians, let me say through your paper that God is prospering the work here. Congregations are good, prayer meetings well attended, collections up for pastor and presiding elder. Conference collections coming in all right. The good people furnished the house and "pounded" us handsomely when we came; and the other night "pounded" us again. This draws me nearer to the people, and calls to remembrance the fact that they are willing to hold up my hands while I preach the everlasting gospel.

We have had a gain in membership to the church in the last three months of over fifteen per cent. The Sunday-school alone has increased the church membership ten per cent. God bless the Sunday-schools! When manned by Christian men and women (as in ours), they become mighty powers for good.

A parsonage society was organized yesterday with fifteen members.

We feel encouraged to labor with greater activity than ever. Pray for us. H. S. JOHNS.

APRIL 14, 1890.

Wine for the Lord's Table.

My only claim to be heard in this matter is in the fact that I have studied the subject prayerfully and carefully, and with an earnest desire after the truth for twelve years and more. Meanwhile, I have read everything I could find on either side of the question. But specially have I studied the Word of God with reference to it, and tried to be guided to conclusion by its spirit and scope.

I have fully and satisfactorily solved the question raised by our beloved and departed Dr. Summers when he said, "I do not believe there is such a thing as unfermented wine." During the last four years of my ministry I have administered the communion more than thirty times, always using unfermented wine. At first I bought a good article, at reasonable price, from J. N. Stearns, of New York. Later, the same, but cheaper, by express from C. L. White, of Meridian, Miss. This season, 1888, we have made a supply of superior richness, delicious, grapey flavor, and deep scarlet color, from home-raised grapes. The cost was merely nominal. By boiling the grape, straining, carefully pouring off, sweetening very slightly, heating again to boiling point just before bottling, corking and sealing in half-pint bottles, we have it perfectly preserved from fermentation, and well adapted to use in small congregations. I have never heard from one member of my different congregations, embracing about three hundred communicants, a single objection to its use. Many have commended its excellence as a wine, and its superiority to that ordinarily used for such purpose. I am fully persuaded of the perfect practicability and importance of its general introduction. Let, us then, briefly as possible, take up the argument.

Jesus strictly observed the Jewish ceremonial law, not varying "one jot or one tittle" therefrom. He came to fulfill this as well as the moral code. And he did. Among these ceremonies nothing was more fixed and habitual than the exclusion of all leaven (or ferment) from the Passover Feast, which had come to be called the Feast of Unleavened Bread. For proof we refer to Exodus xiii, 7. "There shall be no leavened bread seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters"—during the whole feast. Even to the present day the "orthodox Jews" maintain this point rigidly. Those styling themselves "reformed" scruple not to depart from the exact forms of their fathers. Some of these are found who claim that fermented grape juice (of which they are generally very fond) was used at the Passover in the days when the "Talmud" was written. Passing over the known fact that this book was compiled during the period in which Jesus said their "Scribes and Pharisees make void the law through their traditions;" yet we can prove that the ancient word "Yayin," which these reformed Jews interpret to mean "fermented wine" means simply "juice of the grape"—"pressed out." Dr. Robert Young, acknowledged by Christians as about the highest authority in Hebrew and Greek literature, gives this as its only and complete meaning, and the same for "Oinos" in the New Testament. So also with numbers of American scholars of known ability. In all the controversies I have seen on this subject, I have failed to find a quotation from a single eminent scholar which in the least contradicts this generic meaning of the original word. Our word "wine," as we have it in both Old and New Testaments, is translated from words in Hebrew and Greek, which mean simply grape juice. Those most commonly used, "yayin" and "tirosh" (Hebrew) and "Oinos" (Greek) evidently often apply to the fermented form, but more frequently to the pure, uncorrupted state of the "wine," which is "pressed out" from grapes; and sometimes to the same liquid while it is yet inclosed in the grape, e. g., Isaiah lxv, 8. "The new wine is in the cluster, and one saith, destroy it not, for a blessing is in it." We all know how often, ever since the days of Noah, the other form has proved a curse. This statement throws light on an otherwise obscure subject; the alternate commendation and condemnation of that which is called "wine" in the Bible. In passing let us note that Jesus never gave any indorsement to the use of an intoxicant. Twice we are told of his using and distributing wine: at Cana's feast, and when instituting our Passover. Each time the circumstances demand that it should not have been fermented. Let us see. At Cana the large number of gallons (about ninety) made for a small company of persons already "well drunken" forbids our belief that Christ would have so encouraged debauchery. The "good wine" was kept till the last. Horace, a high classic authority on the wine question, says, The best wine is that which has not been fermented. As to the other occasion we have already shown that Jesus observed the whole law too strictly to use anything fermented at the Passover Feast. But to make the case stronger in regard to the sacramental cup, the only words used in connection therewith in the whole book are: "the cup" and "the fruit of the vine." A "cup" might stand for any liquid, but "fruit of the vine" naturally suggests here the "juice of the grape" in its first and purest state. Considering Christ's omniscience (taking in the present day) we find a strong presumption against his giving any warrant for such talk from liquor advocates as that "Jesus commended the use of an intoxicant by putting it on his communion table." The smallness of the quantity makes little difference to most minds. The use of it is all the saloon-keeper claims to desire—its abuse he professes to abhor. Like adder's poison, it can not be tampered with. Either article in a skillful physician's hands may be of use medicinally.

Again: Fermented wine is rather a fitting symbol of decay, misery, and destruction, than of the purity, life, and immortality brought to light in the gospel. To put it on the sacramental board is conferring the highest dignity possible on it. How much evil may have resulted by thus dignifying an inebriating drink eternity alone will reveal. This evil has been unintentional. Thousands have used it with no conception that it could harm any one. But within these few years I have known of five stalwart men struggling against the appetite for drink, and striving to live Christians, who were kept away from the Lord's table by the fumes of an intoxicating cup, which, to them, had become like fire in a powder magazine. However, to such lengths have the opponents of unfermented wine gone, that it seems they are driven to suggest the Romish practice of withholding the cup from a portion of the laity, lest they should be overcome of temptation. It is scarcely credible by a believer that Jesus would command "all" to drink what is highly dangerous even to a few. This, however, is incidental, and not so grave a reason as the one preceding. With all charity for those who differ with us on this point, we yet insist that the presumption is wholly against the use of fermented wine for such a holy purpose, and that actual experience bids us beware.—J. P. Drake, in Nashville Advocate.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlbart and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

Second Quarter—Studies in Luke.

LESSON V.—May 4.

THE RULER'S DAUGHTER.

Luke viii, 41, 42, 49-56.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Fear not; believe only, and she shall be made whole.—Luke viii, 50.

41. Jairus—The name of one of the Israelite chiefs, Jair, conquered and settled Bashan. "His name lingered down to the time of the Christian era, when, in the same region as that which he conquered, we find a ruler of the synagogue named Jair." A ruler of the synagogue—The synagogues had no clergy, but were managed by laymen, at the head of whom was the "ruler," whose title of Rosh hakkeneseth was as familiar to the Jews as that of rabbi. His functions resembled those of a leading elder. The appeal of such a functionary shows the estimation in which our Lord was still held among the Galileans. That he would come into his house—Jairus had not the faith of the heathen centurion.

42. One only daughter—St. Luke, whose keen sympathies are everywhere observable in his gospel, mentions the same touching fact in the case of the son of the widow of Nain (vii, 12), and the lunatic boy (xi, 38). She lay a-dying—St. Matthew says, "Is even now dead." Perhaps we catch in these variations an echo of the father's despairing uncertainty. Thronged—With the idea of pressing together upon him; stifling. The simple verb is that rendered "choke," as in vers. 8-33.

49. Trouble not the Master—Literally, Worry not the rabbi.

50. When Jesus heard it—The remark was addressed to Jairus, and St. Mark says that Jesus "overheard it."

51. Save Peter, and James, and John—As at the transfiguration and at Gethsemane.

52. Bewailed her—The word means that they were beating their breasts for her. St. Mark gives a graphic picture of the tumult and loud cries and wailings. Even the poorest were expected to provide for a funeral two flute-players and one wailing woman. She is not dead, but sleepeth—The words of Jesus—"She is not dead, but sleepeth"—have been interpreted in these two diverse ways: (a) To mean that this was in no sense death, but only a state of syncope—a temporary arrest of some of the normal functions of life—that is, respiration, the circulation of blood, etc.—from which patients are often restored either with or without the appropriate appliances. (b) That Jesus meant only that the results should not be those of normal death; she was not hopelessly dead, for he purposed to wake her soon, as from sleep. In favor of the latter construction is: (1) The fact that Jesus used the very same words of Lazarus (John xi, 11-14) who had lain in the grave really dead four days, in whose case death was a "sleep" only in the sense of being a transient death-state from which he was raised by miracle. (2) The witnesses of the scene are said to "know that she was dead;" and the historian says—"her spirit came again"—assuming that it had left her. Thus the tone of the narrative sustains the view of a real death. (3) A case of simple resuscitation from a fainting fit could never have found place among these narratives of real miracles. It can not be supposed either that Mark and Luke knew this to be only a fainting fit and yet made up their record as if it were a resurrection from death, or that they were deceived in supposing it to be a miracle when it was not. That Jesus commanded them to give her food shows his full confidence that the processes of life were again in full play, and also illustrates his calmness and self command under most thrilling and exciting circumstances.

53. Laughed him to scorn—Literally, were utterly deriding him. Our Lord could not feel the smallest sympathy for these simulated agonies of people, who (to this day) "weep, howl, beat their breasts, and tear their hair according to contract."

54. Took her by the hand—St. Luke preserves this gentle detail, as well as the kind order to give her food. St. Mark gives the two Aramaic words which our Lord used, Talitha cumi! On these occasions he always used the fewest possible words.

55. And he commanded to give her meat—Nature is God's great instrument, and he delights to work by it; nor will he do anything by his sovereign power, in the way of miracle, that can be effected by his ordinary providence. Without the food, man can not be nourished; and unless he eat the food, it can be of no use to him. So God provides salvation for a lost world, and bestows it on every penitent believing soul; but he neither repents nor believes for any man.

56. That they should tell no man—And as usual the injunction was probably unheeded. Then a limited number only were admitted to witness this resurrection of the dead to life is in principle like the charge that they should tell no man what had been done.

Missionary.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I feel truly thankful to God that, through the earnest efforts of Christian friends, another missionary has been sent to Japan by your fund to aid in this work. Your second thousand dollars has sent us a devoted missionary and his wife from the Pacific Conference. May we not look upon the direction of the funds as under divine guidance? We had no missionary from that Conference; but now we feel confident that the selection will be blessed of God for good. Let our brethren be assured of the fact that the Lord directs his people. Bro. Towson is a man worthy your confidence and your aid, and, if the Lord spares him to us, he will do good work, for he comes to us, in the spirit of the Master, to devote himself entirely to the service of God in this land. And yet the call is for more missionaries, brethren, for we are still in great need of devoted men of God to go into the dark places of Japan.

I thank Bro. Cassity, of Maasfield, La., for his proposition. I have advocated the plan for years, of each Conference having one or two missionaries in the foreign mission field, and I believe I shall live to see that day. I thank Bro. Ashley, of Ada, La., for his support of the proposition. Also the noble proposition of Bro. Pickett, of Dangerfield, Texas, brings great joy to my heart, and I thank God for the deep interest he feels in this glorious work among the heathen in Japan. If he will send me six copies of his "Leaves from the Tree of Life," by mail, I will be responsible for six dollars and the postage, to be paid into the mission treasury in Japan. I feel sure I can find sale for them. Bro. Pickett's proposition ought to meet with a ready response.

Brethren, we need men and women to carry the glad news of salvation to many thousands in Japan who have never heard of the name of Christ. In many places they are begging us to remain with them, so that they might understand more perfectly the way of salvation. In one part of my work on the Island of Shikoku, at the town Tadotsu, they want to build themselves a church; but they are few in number—only seventeen—and for the most part poor. Many of them have no money to bring; so they have brought their armor and their swords for sale to build them a house of worship. They have no more desire to learn the art of war, and are willing to turn their swords and their armor in a way to promote peace among men. Not only that, but some of the Christian women propose to sell their fine clothes, which they say they can do without, and put the money into a church. One widow lady, a member of our church, allows the free use of her house in which to hold our services, and the members have already provided themselves with a pulpit. Their greatest desire now is to have a church of their own. For this they will require five or six hundred dollars. Two weeks since I said to them if they would collect three hundred and fifty dollars, I would try and secure one hundred and fifty. A few days after my return to Kobe a letter came from a dear brother near Meridian, Miss., and in it an order for fifty dollars in gold from five little children, with instructions to use the amount in building a church somewhere in Japan. You can not imagine the great joy this gave, and especially as this noble and timely gift came from five little children, all of one family. This gives us here sixty-four dollars and forty-two cents for this church at Tadotsu, where we hope, through the blessing of God, by this time next year, or before, we shall have a house dedicated to the service of God. At another place they are earnestly pleading for a church, and for some one to go and preach to them. Who will answer this call? If you can not come, who will send them the needed help?—the man and the money.

There are thousands in this land who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and have no hope beyond the grave. A ray of hope has entered into the hearts of many thousands, and they cry to Christians to help them. Surely this is the same Macedonian cry which Paul heard across the sea! Christian brethren and friends, what ought to be done to give the gospel of Christ to these people? What will you do to help spread the knowledge of salvation through Christ among the heathen of Japan and China? Convert Japan, and she will send thousands of missionaries to China, only two days' run across the sea. Is not God preparing this people for that great work?

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, Japan, March 19, 1890.

STARTLING FACTS.—Writers on missionary work necessarily deal with thousands and millions. Who can realize what a million really means? We notice it is calculated that at least 1,200,000,000 people in "pagan, papal, and moslem communities" are without a knowledge of the pure gospel, and that "the whole missionary force of the world, including native helpers, falls considerably below 40,000!" Is this an adequate army for the conquest of the world? It is often said that the churches give as much money and as many men as they can afford. Do they? The incomes of Great Britain, according to income tax returns, amount to £554,022,000. A very small proportion of this is devoted to the greatest of all expenditions. Each individual has only to compare his contribution to his total income, and he will see that it is not in proportion to the claims of the Savior and the perishing 1,200,000,000 of human beings. Dr. Pierson—than whom there is not a more reliable missionary statistician—thinks that during the last thirty-five years 1,500,000 lives have been lost on the battle-fields of the world. When shall we send out armies equal in number and costliness to the armies sent out by the allied nations to the Crimea, by the Northern States to the South in the great civil war, by Germany to France yet more recently? We have not yet realized the magnitude of the enterprise. Our contributions of money and men are out of all proportion small to the greatness of the war in which we are engaged. —The London Freeman.

Temperance.

A Call for a National Temperance Congress.

We, the undersigned, representing almost every shade of anti liquor views, believe that the time has come for representative temperance people throughout the country to assemble together in convention, to look into one another's face, to compare views frankly, to learn the whole ground of our agreement, and to enlarge that ground, if possible, by candid and friendly discussion. The saloon is still here. The fight is still on. The liquor traffic, if anything, is more aggressive, more destructive than ever.

We believe that the holding of such a helpful convention is practicable. Hence we ask all local, State and National Temperance Societies (regardless of sex or politics), and all churches and Sunday-schools, and other associations which hate the saloon, to send representatives to a National Temperance Congress, to be held in New York City, May 14 and 15, 1890, in the Broadway Tabernacle Church (Dr. William M. Taylor, pastor). Mass-meetings will be held in the evening and conferences will be held during the day sessions; the day sessions beginning at 10 A. M. each day.

We urge friends everywhere to take steps immediately to see that every section of the country is fully represented. Let this be both a National Conference and a National Mass-meeting for the overthrow of the liquor traffic.

Every person opposed to the saloon who will present himself at the Congress will be welcomed as a member.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew is no temperance "fanatic," but he is a man of keen observation and broad views. In a recent speech before some railroad men he said: "Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman and child in Peekskill. And it has been a study with me to mark boys who started in every grade of life with myself, to see what has become of them. I was up last Fall, and began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors. It is remarkable that everyone of those that drank is dead; not one living of my age. Barring a few who were taken off by sickness, everyone who proved a wreck and wrecked his family did it from rum and no other cause. Of those who were church-going people, who were steady, industrious and hard-working men, who were frugal and thrifty, every single one of them, without an exception, owns the house in which he lives and has something laid by, the interest on which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day. When a man becomes debased with gambling, rum or drink he doesn't care, all finer feelings are crowded out. The poor women at home are the ones who suffer—suffer in their tenderest emotions; suffer in their affections for those whom they love better than life." —Evangelical Messenger.

Man requires stimulus. It is his spirit's native air. It is like the steam to the engine and wind to the sail. He ignorantly seeks it in the nicotine dream, the hallucination of drink and the brutal delirium of lust. But all the while, voices from heaven were calling him (only he did not listen) to God's modes of stimulation—the threefold loves of the soul: one is the mystic bond that binds two hearts and builds a home; another is the blessed tie of human brotherhood that broadens out into a work beneficent, and, crowning all, the love of God, the Holy Spirit setting the soul aflame for unity with him who is both its Creator, its Master and its Redeemer.—Francis E. Willard.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

The Lottery's Proposition.

On last Friday the Picayune published the following letter without comment:

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 17, 1890.

To the Editor of the Picayune:

At the approaching session of the Legislature of this State I shall submit a proposition for the privilege of maintaining a lottery in Louisiana. For this privilege I will offer to pay the State, quarterly in advance, the sum of $500,000 per annum, or $12,500,000 for the franchise for twenty-five years. This annual license of half a million dollars I would propose to have devoted —one-third to the public school system of the State; one-third to existing charitable institutions and such others as may be created, and the remaining third to the construction, maintenance and repairs of levees. I trust that you will give this proposition calm consideration and let the people of the State know your views on the subject. It is a question which members of the press should consider, I think, without prejudice of any kind, looking only to the best interests of the State.

Yours truly, JOHN A. MORRIS.

Now we know where we are! This proposition certainly has the merit of definiteness. The Legislature is going to be asked to so alter the Constitution of the State as to allow the Lottery to run twenty-five years after its present charter expires, and for this privilege there is to be made the promise of $500,000 a year, to be used for educational, charitable and levee purposes. That is plain enough.

1. We object to the smallness of the sum offered for the privilege. If these "Lottery gentlemen" are really in earnest about their great desire to help the State out of her financial troubles, why don't they offer something decent, and thus show that they are sincere. At this present time, the offer of $500,000 a year is really less than the $40,000 a year when their charter was granted! Do they expect Louisiana to sell out cheaper now than it did then?

2. We object to the smallness of the sum offered as the price of our manhood and honor. To bring ourselves under the scorn and contempt of every other commonwealth in the land, and to merit the dishonor and shame of having sold out, "lock, stock and barrel," to a score of unprincipled gamblers that are fleecing our people day and night without pity, is, we think, worth something more than the paltry sum of $500,000 a year for twenty-five years.

3. In this bold-faced proposition to corrupt the whole State is one of the most impertinent and impudent insults ever offered to any people. It is simply an offer of money to have the privilege of robbing granted by law. A like offer from a train robber would not be any worse.

4. In this proposition the Lottery Company violates its contract with the State Convention of 1879. That contract is the 167th Article of the State Constitution, which the Lottery Company accepted and agreed to. In that Article it is expressly said that all lottery charters "shall cease and expire on the first of January, 1895, from which time all lotteries are prohibited in the State." Having accepted their grant under this 167th Article of the Constitution, they agreed to this prohibition. Now this offer of $500,000 for a renewal of charter before the expiration of the time named in Article 167, is a direct breach of the contract. This may not mean much as far as the Lottery people are concerned, for they have managed to render nugatory the proviso in regard to the establishment of other lottery companies, but it means a great deal to our Legislature. A breach of contract with the State brings the matter before the Legislature upon a basis entirely different from Mr. Morris' proposition. On this point we republish what Col. Hunter said in our columns last week.

In its advertisements it has boasted to the world that it was the only institution of the kind having such a constitutional recognition. It has enjoyed all of the advantages to be gained under Article 167 of the Constitution, and will now seek to evade the penalties prescribed by that article. No rule of construction is better known or more firmly established in law and in morals than that one enjoying the advantages of a contract with another is bound by the conditions upon which the advantages are secured. The article of the Constitution is very emphatic in its declaration that after the year 1895 all lotteries shall cease to be operated in this State. In accepting the advantages secured to it by the article, with this declaration as a prominent feature of the article, the Louisiana Lottery Company is, in law and in morals, as much bound by the condition relative to the year 1895 as it was bound to surrender its monopoly feature and to pay the $40,000 per annum. No one can dispute this proposition. Having then agreed in advance to cease operations, and to submit itself, as all other lottery companies which might be chartered were required to submit themselves, to the constitutional prohibition which was to attach after 1895, it is a violation of good faith and good morals for the Louisiana Lottery Company now to seek a renewal or an extension of the charter which it was to surrender in 1895. Having agreed, with the people of Louisiana, to accept as final, at that time, their declaration of a line of policy which was then to prevail with reference to all lottery companies, it is in bad faith now to ask a reversal of that policy. Having obligated itself that when that time arrived the question of lotteries or no lotteries in Louisiana should be a closed question, it is in bad faith for the Lottery Company now to seek to reopen that question.

This being the case, it will be in order for the Legislature to consider—not the proposition of $500,000 a year—but this breach of contract on the part of the Lottery. Having Mr. Morris' proposition before it, and interpreting that proposition in the light of the 167th Article of the Constitution, the Legislature will have sufficient evidence of bad faith and breach of contract to demand from the Lottery Company an immediate surrender of its charter, and every court in the land will sustain the Legislature!

Cheaper Periodicals.

Let us not be misunderstood on this important point. There are, at least, two ways to cheapen a periodical. One is to lower the price and let the quantity and quality of reading matter stay as it is. This we have never advocated. We see nothing to be gained by it. Our papers and periodicals are cheap enough if we take this view of cheapness. The other way to cheapen a periodical is to better the quality of the reading matter and let the price remain as it is. This kind of cheapening we favor. In this sense we think all our papers and periodicals need cheapening. We do not think the quantity of reading matter should be increased. The church papers give more reading now than our people read. We never knew but one man who read everything in a newspaper, and he is dead long ago. We do believe the quality of our papers should be improved. We have many good ones now; but we want them all to be better. There come to this office every week Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregationalist and Methodist papers, which, in our judgment, are superior to anything in that line which our church sends forth. We do not believe this ought to be. The paper that must struggle along without money to secure the best contributions from good, clear-headed thinkers, will be left, no matter who the editor is. The editor who has to depend upon gratuitous contributions for filling his columns can not make a first-class paper.

Here we think the "produce of the Publishing House" should be used. The law which created the Publishing House gives the necessary authority, notwithstanding the Sixth Restrictive Rule. In that law we find the object of the Publishing House to be stated thus: "To advance the cause of Christianity by disseminating religious knowledge and useful literary and scientific information in the form of books, tracts and periodicals." The duty of the Book Agent is thus stated in the same law: "He shall supply, as far as practicable, the demand of the church for books, tracts and periodicals, availing himself of all the facilities of other establishments for their publication at the cheapest rates." As to where the agent shall get the means to do this, the same law says: "The proceeds of the Publishing House shall be appropriated to no other purpose than its own legitimate business." Here is an act of the General Conference creating the Publishing House, defining its object, prescribing the duties of its agent and prohibiting its proceeds from being used for any "other purpose than its own legitimate business." Here, then, is direct authority in the very words and spirit of the law creating the House to use its proceeds for "disseminating religious knowledge and useful, literary and scientific information." Indeed, the law says the agent "shall supply, as far as practicable, the demand of the church" for such knowledge and information. The very document which brought the Publishing House into existence and defines its object, gives the necessary authority to use its proceeds to further that object. This ought to be enough.

"The Facts."

Dr. Tigert, in the last Nashville Advocate, has an article on the above subject, in which, by a skillful manipulation of figures, he makes it appear that during the two years in which the funds of the Publishing House were distributed among the superannuates and widows and orphans, the collections in the Conferences increased with a higher ratio than at any other times. The good Doctor's figures tell a very different story to this writer. Taking the Doctor's own figures, we find that from 1886 to 1888 the rate of increase for each year was more than during the years since the Publishing House "produce" was distributed. For instance: In 1886 the increase over the preceding year was $4,912 42; in 1887 the increase over 1886 was $8,032 65—that is, the increase of 1887 exceeded that of 1886 by $3,120 23. In 1888 the increase from collections over 1887 was $14,591 47—that is, the increase of 1888 exceeded that of 1887 by $6,558 82. That year the distribution began. Now, if the collections from Conferences had kept increasing at the same rate, we should expect them to report about $25,000 increase. But, lo! they report an increase of $16,239 27—that is, the increase for the year 1889 was just $1,747 80 more than the increase of 1888. The year before the distribution began the increase was $6,558 82 over the preceding year. The year after the distribution the increase was $1,747 80 more than the preceding year. Why that falling off of $4,811 02 in increase in one year? We think that the Doctor will have to manipulate his figures again before he can ask: "Is there any room for dissatisfaction with a policy which yields such results?" When the rate of increase drops down in one year from $6,558 82 to $1,747 80, is there any room for satisfaction with a policy which yields such results? We do not say that this decrease in increase is the result of the distribution of the funds of the House; but it certainly occurs at a time which will justify the suspicion that there is some adverse influence at work. For the Conferences to report an increase of $16,000, when the rate of increase for three preceding years warrant us to expect them to report $25,000, shows that some obstacle has come in the way.

Sanctification.

Negatively, sanctification is purification from guilt; positively, it is the consecration of love to God; and both are of the operation of the Holy Ghost.

Guilt is a bar to the divine acceptance on his altar, and defilement makes the offering unfit. These two meanings of the same term are rarely ever disjoined in the Word of God. "Your conscience purged from dead works," and "hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience," refers to the removal of guilt.

"But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified" manifestly refers to cleansing from defilement. Regeneration, sanctification and justification are bound into one bundle as if they were parts of one indivisible whole.

The term "washing" includes all the processes of salvation from both the guilt and the defilement of sin. Indeed, "by one offering Christ hath perfected forever them that are sanctified"—has made provision for pardon and holiness; so that "where remission is, there is no more offering for sin." "Purifying their hearts by faith" must include the whole work of the gospel in men and on men. It indicates a process beginning, continuing, and finally culminating. The "sanctification of the Spirit is unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Christ." This blood was shed that "he might sanctify and cleanse the church with the washing of water by the Word." Eternal praise will be unto "him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood." "He sanctifies the people with his own blood."

The Holy Ghost consecrates to God just so much as we dedicate to him, and no more. If the principle of love is shed abroad in the whole man, then the man is "sanctified throughout—soul, body and spirit."

The term "consecration" includes the dedication of self to God and the "sanctification of the Spirit."

The self, surrendered to God, is cleansed by the Spirit, and thus we are made "the temple of the living God." "God dwells in us and we in him." Our life is a worship of "spiritual sacrifice unto God." All obedience, resignation and devotion comes of faith that works by love and purifies the heart. This is holiness within, and such living is a state of holiness.

It may be well to note that holiness is relative and not absolute, only in God. Some things and persons have been accounted holy that were only partially and imperfectly so. The "holy city" was awfully impure when called holy.

The church at Corinth, said to be "sanctified in Christ," called "saints," and "called to be saints," was far from having attained moral purity. They were relatively or comparatively holy. They were tending in that direction. This was their character, though they were not yet perfect. There is from the first, where the spirit is not quenched, a daily and hourly cleansing going on, which is approximating "the mark of the prize of our high calling of God"—most rapid, perhaps, in those who are nearest the goal. The fact of having sinned, of having been defiled, precludes forever the possibility of absolute perfection; and yet, by the grace of God in Christ, we may be accounted so. Surely we can never be conscious of being what we will forever be conscious of not having been, absolutely pure. The human heart will never lie to itself in this world nor in the world to come. The fact of sin may be canceled, but it will remain a fact forever.

The whole man—head, heart, body, spirit and soul—must be sanctified. This can not be affirmed of either justification or adoption, only as adoption includes the resurrection. "All who are born of God are first-born," and, as such, they must be "sanctified unto God." To this end, and for this purpose, were they "begotten of God."

Sanctification, then, is the end of a process begun in regeneration and requiring the co-operation of the believer. "Our old man is crucified, that the body of sin may be destroyed, that we may not serve sin." We "put off the old man," and "put on the new man." If we are wholly Christ's, "we have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." The term "flesh" is not the meat, muscles and tendons of the frame, but the innate tendencies of the natural man. We are "not to make provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof." The members of the body are only the instruments of sin—of the old man within.

Where this work progresses by the faith that is of the operation of God, the general bias or character of the soul is more and more turned away from sin and bent on good. As this work goes on, the susceptibility to temptation or affinity for sin grows less and less in the soul's consciousness. Power to do the will of God increases in the same proportion. The vanishing point, where the human is merged into the divine will, is finally reached by faith, when "we are cleansed from all unrighteousness," and "the prince of this world finds nothing in us." This is "Christian perfection," the privilege and the heritage of every first-born son and daughter of God. The natural corruption, the inbred affinity for sin, is depressed to zero, or to where it is not, and the old man is dead. "Thanks be unto God that giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." "We are dead unto sin and alive unto God." The sting of death is gone.

GILDEROY.

Successful Ministry.

Dr. Cuyler, in the Evangelist, writing on "Popular Ministers," says:

To gain the ears of people, and to win the affections of people, is as much a part of every Christian minister's duty as it is to study his Bible. What is the use of studying the Bible if we can not get people to hear us expound it? The secret of a true, legitimate and permanent popularity is this: First, keep your heart strong and sweet and loving and courageous, by a constant life in Jesus Christ, and, secondly, take a personal interest in everybody. To every human being on this globe nobody is quite as important as his own self. This is not vanity, or egotism, or self-conceit; it is an instinct. God's solemn charge to every immortal child of his is "to take heed to yourselves." Self-denial is Christian; self-neglect is destruction. The poor boy who rolls in the ash-barrels from the sidewalk is a more important person to himself than Prince Bismarck. What becomes of the German Empire is of less consequence to that little fellow than that he should earn a dime to buy his breakfast. That instinct is universal. Every ambassador of Christ should avail himself of this instinct and use it. He should aim to find out the personal character, condition and needs of every person within his reach. He should put himself into personal sympathy with everybody. A congregation will stand hard pounding and plain truths from the minister they love. And everyone who is called to preach the gospel is bound to preach it winsomely as well as boldly—whether his parish be in the back-woods, or in the rural village, or in the crowded hive of a great city. Popularity is power. Use it for God.

Notes.

And now comes another invention. The word "manuprint," verb, adjective and noun, for work done with a type-writer. It is accurate and suggestive.

In thinking and speaking and writing about the deficiencies in the salaries of our preachers that are published in our Minutes every year, one sad fact is scarcely ever thought of. That fact is, the deficiency always occurs with the preacher who gets a small salary, and he can least afford a deficit. The churches that pay large salaries are rarely behind in making up the amount allowed their preacher. Think of that!

One of the strangest things to us is that a man who reads the Bible regularly every day, and reads also three or four newspapers during the week, does not learn how to spell correctly! We have just received a communication from a brother who stands among the foremost in his Conference, and yet in this short article there are about a dozen words mis-spelled. It seems to us a reading man would learn to spell by the use of his eyes.

The Daily Caucasian, of Shreveport, published, April 17, a petition signed by two hundred and sixty-three citizens of Caddo parish, addressed to the senator and representatives of that parish in the General Assembly, setting forth in an able manner the evils of the lottery, and asking those assemblymen to "add the weight of your own influence in behalf of the suppression of this great evil in our State." It is a strong document, and will have its weight.

In the death of Samuel J. Randall, of Pennsylvania, the country has lost one of its ablest statesmen, and his party its great leader. Mr. Randall commanded the respect of all parties. We heard him deliver his great speech on the tariff in the House of Representatives in May, 1884. He was listened to by the whole House with profoundest attention, members from all parts of the hall crowding to get close to him. Mr. Randall died a member of the Presbyterian Church.

During the thirty years of Dr. Cuyler's pastorate of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, the Doctor preached 2,750 sermons, besides a large number of public addresses on various subjects; officiated at 682 marriages; baptized 962 children; received into the church, 4,223 persons, 1,920 of whom were on profession of faith; contributed 3,200 articles for the press. In that time the church raised $610,000 for ecclesiastical and benevolent purposes, and $700,000 for the maintenance of its work and worship. A good record that!

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, "in view of Bishop McTyeire's death and some enlargement of the field of episcopal supervision," favors the election of one more Bishop. This is the kind of man the Wesleyan wants:

He should be a man of strong nerves, of good digestion, of a healthy skin; in spirit a brother to the race, and a friend of God, of wide outlook, and with a genius for work, having, under a strain, the equilibrium of a judge, and, in action, the force of a thunderbolt. Not too old, lest he early faint under the burden, and not too young, lest he pull against the yoke and so waste his strength. Find us such a man, and if we are there we will vote for him. Millions for improvement; not one cent for compliment.

The act of the General Conference, creating and establishing the Publishing House, and defining its object and prescribing the duties of the agent, says: "The proceeds of the Publishing House shall be appropriated to no other purpose than its own legitimate business." This act by which the House was founded in our law, and by which it has been governed since founded, has not a word in it about "traveling, supernumerary, superannuated, and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children." Paragraphs 229, 231 and 217, in the appendix to the Discipline, and which are sections of the act by which the Publishing House was established, look very awkward when placed alongside the Sixth Restrictive Rule. It looks very much as if the framers of that act were ignorant of any such rule. We do not see how those paragraphs can be reconciled with the rule.

Personal and Otherwise.

We are requested to give notice that the Woman's Missionary Society of Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, will meet at Vaiden, Miss., April 25, instead of April 17, as previously announced.

A correspondent translates "La. S. L." to mean "Louisiana Satanic Lure."

When persons send money to pay for obituary notices, those notices will have preference in time of publication.

Dr. Cuyler has this:

The elder Dr. Stephen H. Tyng—then at the height of his power and popularity—was sitting at my table one day, and I asked him the question, "What is a call to the ministry?" The Doctor promptly replied, "It is the capacity to preach the gospel in such a way that people will come to hear you."

One of our pastors asks us if it is right to have "a children's tableau to raise means with which to finish ceiling the church, putting window blinds to it, etc;" and we answer, No. The only money the Lord accepts and blesses is that which is given because of love to him.

The Methodist Times, of London, April 3, had this item:

Rev. D. J. Waller, the secretary of the Conference, sails for New York on Wednesday next, by the steamship Germania, to attend the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which will meet in St. Louis.

Our thanks are due the Manhattan Art Company for the Columbus Art Album, a beautiful album containing several pictures of the great discoverer.

The Presbyterian Church, North, with a membership of 722,071, contributed last year $852,815 for foreign missions. Our church, with 1,100,000 members, was assessed only $300,000, and didn't pay that!

The history is, that Asbury was ordained deacon on Saturday, elder on Sunday, and Bishop on Monday, December 26, 27 and 28, 1784.

The fare from this city to the General Conference at St. Louis will be one fare for the round trip; that is, eighteen dollars.

We think Dr. Haygood is a wise man; but we must dissent from his judgment as to four missionary secretaries. We think two is enough. We would put the other two, one in the church extension department and the other in the Sunday-school department.

The following personal we clip from the Brookhaven Leader:

"William Fitzhugh Murrah" was christened at the Methodist Church last Sabbath by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Huntley.

Our mails are very much disarranged by the high water. A card from Amite City, dated April 16, did not reach us until April 21. Five days to come sixty-eight miles!

We are glad to note that Rev. T. J. Newell, who has served the church as president of Grenada Collegiate Institute for the last eight years, has been unanimously elected for another term of four years. Those trustees know when they have a good president, and are determined to keep him.

The anniversary of the Seaman's Bethel will be held in Dr. Palmer's Church, next Sunday, eight P. M. Rev. Dr. Witherspoon, of Nashville, Tenn., will make the annual address. The public is cordially invited.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. C. Ellis, writing from Campsville, Miss., April 13, says: "Nearly all of this and adjacent swamp lands are under water; many of our people making for the hills and nearest peaks or mounds; especially are some women and children. Yet there are enough left to come together to worship God. We got out of our skiffs and dugouts to-day into the place appointed for services. There was a very good congregation. I do not intend to leave my people as long as I can get shelter and foothold. Stock are being carried out by barge-loads. Some negroes were drowned up the river, about seventy-five miles from here. God only knows what the result will be. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. T. Moody reports from Kosciusko and Durant, North Mississippi Conference: "After spending one-quarter with this good people, we report as follows: A hearty reception; a good parsonage, well furnished from kitchen to parlor; a 'New Year's donation' from Durant, which filled the parsonage pantry, and a number of contributions of good things from Kosciusko. Congregations large and attentive. Interest in prayer meetings and Sunday-schools increasing. Eleven additions to the church. Paid for fence around Durant church lot, $200. Paid off an old debt on church at Kosciusko, which amounted to about $240. Raised to insure house at Kosciusko, $25. Furnishing parsonage, $14. Our missionary collections are coming up quite satisfactorily. Our predecessors have trained the churches to meet their financial obligations."

—Rev. J. W. Honnoll writes: "Holly Springs is moving on all right. Congregations large, and all the interests of the church coming up. Our presiding elder has done all of his work; has done it well, and the whole district is advancing on all the lines, and we are expecting a successful year. I have never seen a more harmonious, consecrated and faithful church than we have in Holly Springs. I am having a pleasant time building on the foundation which has been so well laid by another, who certainly did a work which will stand the fires of the last day."

—Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard writes from Homer, La., April 13: "This has been a glorious Sabbath, indeed, with us here. A good congregation at eleven A. M., attentive and serious. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper administered to a large per cent. of the congregation, and it was a precious season indeed; and at half-past seven P. M. we had a missionary service, under the auspices of our Woman's Missionary Society. We had an interesting programme, embracing the reading of Scriptures, prayers, songs, recitations and essays, bearing on missions. We were instructed, and our hearts were moved, as our tears attested. Our missionary society in Homer is a thing of life and a power for good, and is developing our young people in grace, and in the knowledge and love of God. We are praying for and expecting a glorious revival."

—Rev. William Schuhle reports: "Our meeting of twelve days at Craps Street Church closed on Friday night, last. About fifteen persons have professed conversion. However, as I have not been enabled to see all such parties, I would state that seven are perfectly satisfied of a great change of heart. Others are near the kingdom of God, no doubt, and will soon gain admittance. One young brother, converted last year under Dr. Ahrens' ministrations, now takes up his cross and will, in due time, be licensed to preach. Hereafter we will have an extra prayer meeting in English for the young people. Last night we organized a parsonage society. Seven Sunday-school scholars were received into the church on April 20, after being publicly examined in our catechism. Dr. Ahrens is always on hand to help us out on occasions of special importance. Thanks to all the brethren who labored with us during the revival. More later on. Meanwhile let us sing, 'Praise the Lord!'"

—Rev. W. W. Calumack writes from Faunin circuit, Mississippi Conference: "Our second quarterly meeting was held April 5 and 6. Our presiding elder, who is always punctual, was on hand in due time, looking after every interest of the church and preaching in the spirit of the Master. The stewards were on hand with good reports. Our people are responding willingly and liberally to the support of the preacher and to the collections ordered by the Annual Conference. About one-third of all the claims has been paid or secured; and yet only about one-fourth of the year is past. We are moving along nicely and smoothly with scarcely a jar or friction. This people love their preachers, their church and all its connectional enterprises, and in speaking of them they place emphasis on the word, 'our.' Steps have been taken to build a new church near Jackson, Miss., which will add much to this circuit and to that community when finished."

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The Board of Trustees of this Institute met here to-day to elect a successor to the Rev. T. J. Newell, who has been president of this institution for eight years past and whose term of office expires in June, next. After a general review of the work and the condition of the school, he was unanimously elected his own successor for the usual term of four years. They adjourned to meet Thursday, May 1, at half-past nine A. M., at the college to consider applications for the several positions in the faculty. The treasurer of the Board made an exhibit of the financial condition of this institution, which was quite gratifying to the Board.

Bro. Van Valkenburgh informs us that, at last, he has a prospect of a stock of all kinds of our new Hymn Books, sufficient to enable him to fill all orders on file, and any new orders sent in at once.

A Call for Help.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, FAYETTEVILLE, TENN.

No town in the State of Tennessee suffered so much in the storm of March 27 as Fayetteville.

A careful examination of the fact shows that near two hundred dwelling-houses, six churches, five store-houses and three school-buildings are in a more or less wrecked condition. The roofs were torn off of every house on the square, with two or three exceptions; and the torrent of rain that fell immediately after the storm did immense damage to dry goods, hardware, groceries, etc. To add to the loss and increase the gloom of the situation, on Monday, three days after the storm, the rain came down in torrents again, finding a great many poor without shelter and half the business houses still uncovered. Almost every day some one reports more damage than he at first supposed. Many brick walls that at first were thought uninjured are now considered unsafe.

The destitute and homeless must be cared for first; and this has so taxed the already diminished purses of our people that little is left for church building.

Our Methodist Church is in ruins. Nearly all our members have suffered heavy losses in their individual estates. They are anxious to rebuild and will do all they can. In their crippled condition they can secure only $2,000 from the community of Fayetteville to rebuild a church valued at $6,000. From all this it is very clear that help must come from abroad or our congregation remain without a home and become scattered. This must not be. Will a generous public help? Will not those who so generously helped Charleston remember Fayetteville who, in proportion to her wealth, lost as much or more in the cyclone than did Charleston in her earthquake? Think of a town of 2,100 (last census) losing $250,000 in a moment's time. Consider, that those whose houses are standing are entertaining nearly 500 homeless ones. The outside public helped nobly and is still helping to care for the poor and rebuild their houses. But what about the churches of the living God? "Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie waste?" (Haggai i, 4.)

Please send a contribution, and the Lord whose house we build will give the reward. Address

"Therefore, Leaving the Principles of the Doctrine of Christ."

(Heb. vi, 1.)

There is an important sense in which we must leave these first principles. We must not rest in them. Being mere elements, we must not suppose that, abstractly considered, they constitute the whole system. For illustration: We must leave these first principles as the pupil leaves the alphabet, when he is brought to the process of combining letters into syllables, and syllables into words, and of words constructing sentences. We must leave them, as the architect leaves the foundation, and proceeds to erect upon it his superstructure. We must leave them, as the mathematician leaves his axioms, and proceeds to the construction of his demonstration.

To what purpose would the pupil have learned the elements of language if he should rest in them? Where the use of continuing to count them over, without proceeding any further? What benefit would result from the labor and expense of laying the best foundation, if it remain unappropriated—if no building be reared upon it? How long might the mathematician occupy himself in ascertaining the axioms of the science, without coming at a single valuable result? And what advantage will accrue to us, or to the world, from our acquiring the mere elements of Christianity, without reducing them to practice, pushing them out to their ulterior results, and connecting them with the higher principles of a spiritual life?

There are, indeed, no stationary positions in religion. We shall never until we get to heaven, and probably not even then, be able to say, We have reached the summit of excellence and can advance no further. Much less can we consistently take such a position upon our first entrance into the school of Christ. Then especially should we feel that we have but just commenced our course—that we have only started in a race which is to be prosecuted with vigor and perseverance to the end; and the sooner we leave mere elements the better. The great law of habit constantly operates. If we settle down contentedly in our first attainments, every moment's delay there fixes us the more firmly and renders it the more difficult for us to strike our tents and move onward to green pastures and more fruitful fields. We every day become hotter and hotter satisfied with our attainments, until we lose the things which we had wrought; and it may be said, in truth, that having begun in the spirit, we are made perfect in the flesh.

Any foundation, be it ever so firmly laid, if left unoccupied, will very soon go to decay, and finally become a mass of ruins. So the mere elements of Christian character will soon be lost unless we proceed to advanced ground. To a church which had not been sufficiently mindful of this important truth, the great apostle gives a most striking admonition: "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whom Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you? This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are you foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh? Have ye suffered so many things in vain? if it be in vain." (Gal. iii, 1-4.) Again he says: "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace." And again: "Ye did run well: who did hinder you, that ye should not obey the truth? This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you." (Gal. v, 4, 7, 8.) And Christ says to the angel of the church of Ephesus: "I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. Remember, therefore, from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works: or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent." (Rev. ii, 1, 4, 5.) The talent which the servant hid in a napkin was soon taken away from him, and he cast into outer darkness. (Matt. xxv, 28, 30.)

From all this we see most clearly that to come to a pause at the commencement of the course is equal to a retreat. It is, at least, the commencement of a retrograde movement. It has often been said, with great truth, that there is no standing still in religion. Like the vessel in the current without sail or oars, we necessarily glide down the stream. Resting is the fatal decline in religion, and a continued resting will finally result in apostacy and ruin. If we do not wish to end in the flesh, to fall from grace, to lose our first love, to be deprived of the talent committed to us, to have the candlestick removed out of its place, and finally to be cast into outer darkness, we must "leave the things which are behind, and go forward to those which are before."

J. H. HOLLAND.

The Support of Our Church Schools.

The strength, growth and defiant spirit of opposition to the Bible in our day-schools are brought to light by the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, in which the Bible is declared to be a sectarian book, and that the reading of it without comment is to be guilty of teaching sectarian doctrines, and hence is "unconstitutional." Whether the above decision is the growth of unmixed infidelity and insulting hate of Jesus Christ and his system of morality and religion, or whether it is the growth and influence of Romanism, matters but little, since the blighting effects are the same.

We have hints to the effect that this unchristian sentiment is growing in high places. Does it not, therefore, at once demand the most careful thought and action of the Christian world as to how the blighting effects of the godly-trained brain may be restrained or averted? The educated brain of the country is going to exercise a controlling influence in shaping the destinies of the coming generation. The good or evil coming to the people at large will depend upon the character of the education of those who rule. The constitution of things demands that there shall be a court to which appeals may be made to decide the right or wrong, the justice or injustice of a thing. The Bible constitutes that court. When, therefore, it is set aside as the arbiter of these things, anyone can see that in matters of the highest moment to humanity we would be as the horse without bit or bridle, or as the ship with high sail without rudder.

Anyone, without reference to the divinity of Christ or inspiration of the Bible, should concede the importance of the Bible as a book in school, for the fact that it gives the best code of morals known to the world. Its teachings are of great importance to us here, even on the supposition that its threatenings and promises are delusions. The only effect following a belief of the Bible is to restrain the baser passions on the one hand, and to promote and develop the better side of humanity on the other.

As Protestants, we believe that the Bible is from God to the world, and that it is vested with authority, and that to ignore its teachings and claims upon us is to suicide turn away from our highest interest, and to lift the flood-gates and invite every conceivable evil.

We can not prize too highly Christian education. And, as children of light, we should see and understand the conditions and means of preserving to ourselves and to coming generations our Christian institutions. The Bible is the book which should have the first place in our schools, where the training for high position in Church or State is carried on.

The per cent. of the godless hearts and brains elevated to high places, with their influence, will account for the political evils and unrest of the civilized world of to-day. Would we see peace and rest take the place of unrest? Would we see men who have heart-training as well as head, take the places of the godless and immoral in the law-making departments of the country, and by wholesome legislation clear the political atmosphere of its deadly infections? If so; we must take charge of our boys. We must project and maintain as good schools as can be found in the country anywhere. Whether we control large or small possessions, we should feel an interest in this matter.

The excuse, "I shall never be able to send my boy to college," ought not to be repeated; for the reason that the interest of all are involved in the character of those who shall mould, shape and keep in hand the public affairs of the country. You may be sure that "if the wicked rule, the people will mourn," and that they will provide for themselves plenty of "hewers of wood and drawers of water." The conditions of our life, peace, and future prosperity of our country are made to depend upon the proper training of our boys; placing the rule of government in their hands. Then, with men in authority who both fear God and regard men, both rich and poor can rest assured that their interest will not suffer.

We, therefore, as a church in Mississippi, should rise and take away the burning shame which attaches to the sluggish way in which we cover the fifty-thousand endowment fund, proposed by one of our large-hearted laymen, Maj. Millsaps. The church should promptly yield three times that amount to endow a college for her boys in the State, and start at once an influence in the State which in its maturity would reach the high places in State and federal government, and purify the political atmosphere of their corruptions and poisons.

Good men at the head of affairs will give us what we want. The church must furnish them. R. A. ELLIS.

A Girl Worth Having.

A few weeks ago I read in your paper Mr. Moorehead's experience in the Plating Business, in which he cleared $167.85 in a month; but I beat that if I am a girl. I sent as he directed and got a Plater, and cleared $208.17 in one month. Can any of your readers beat this? You can get spoons, forks or jewelry to plate at every house. Send $3 to W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, and they will send you a Plater, and you can make money enough in three hours to pay for it, or address them for circulars. There is plenty work to do in both city and country; then why should any person be poor or out of employment with such an opportunity at hand. I hope my experience will help others as much as Mr. Moorehead's did me.

Our Young People.

THE LITTLE SINGER.

BY SALLIE A. KELLOGG.

A little fair-eyed maiden,
With unaccustomed air,
She wondered at the organ,
And nodded during prayer;
She listened to the reading,
And watched the people, too—
For her first Sunday service
Seemed very strange and new.

And when the congregation
Broke forth in sacred song,
She stood upon the footstool
And tried to help along.
She did not know their music,
And so the choir her own—
Oh, little robin redbreast!
She sang, in cheery tone.

All utterly unconscious
Of many a smiling gaze,
The childish voice rang clearly
In this old hymn of praise.
And when the rest were silent
Still those blithe notes were heard,
Her last long stanza warbling
Like some enraptured bird.

And the gracious pastor waited
Till the lingering echoes fled,
With a touched and tender spirit,
Ere his loving text he read;
For he knew the listening Father
Would accord the chant sublime
No dearer, worthier welcome
Than that happy nursery rhyme.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the letters from the little cousins for some time, and with much interest. Not having seen a letter from this place, I thought I would write one. I am a boy thirteen years old, and am studying stenography and type-writing under Miss Ida C. Hicks. I like my teacher very much. She writes shorthand quite rapidly. I have been taking lessons only two months, and my teacher timed me the other day, and I wrote seventy-two words per minute. One of the little cousins asked a question in the ADVOCATE. It was this: "Where honey-comb is found in the Bible?" I thought I would answer the question. "Honey-comb" is found in I. Samuel xiv. 27. Now, I wish to ask the little cousins a question: Where is the word "corn" found in the Bible? Well, for fear my letter may reach the "waste-basket," I will close by wishing the ADVOCATE much success, and the "little cousins" a happy time.

Your little friend,
HOWARD ROBERTSON.

BLUE SPRINGS, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen but a few letters from this place, I thought I would write one. Papa takes your ADVOCATE, and I love to read the little letters which you are so kind to print. Papa is our superintendent, and Bro. Young is our pastor, and he is a good man. Mama is our teacher. I love to go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Myra Alexander, and she is so good and kind to us, and I hope I can go to her next year. I have two sisters and three brothers; their names are Ruth, Lillie, Ortie, Theo, George. My brother and myself spent the Christmas with our cousins and aunt, and I enjoyed myself very much, and when we started home I stopped with one of mama's friends who lives in Memphis. The levee has broken here, and the water is everywhere. Now, I want to ask the little cousins which is the shortest verse in the Bible. I have two pets; one is a cat, and the other one is a little dog. I am only twelve years old, and I study the high geography and arithmetic, spelling, physiology and the fifth reader and grammar.

Your friend,
MYRA KELLOGG.

AUSTIN, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter in the dear old ADVOCATE from this part of the country, I thought I would write one. I am a little boy eleven years old. My papa is a preacher and takes the ADVOCATE. I have four sisters and one brother. Mama's babies are twins—a boy and a girl. Their names are Luther Burton and Lula May. I have been going to school. Miss Dolly McDowell was our teacher, and we all like her very much. As this is my first, I will close, hoping to see it in print.

Your little friend,
T. A. FERRILL.

Major.

I once visited a pleasant country house, the owner of which had a powerful and sagacious dog called Major. This dog was highly prized by his master and by the people of the neighborhood. He had saved many lives. Once when a swing-rope became entangled around the neck of a little girl, Major held her up until help came.

One day the butcher brought in his bill for Major's provisions. Major's master thought it altogether too large, and shaking the paper angrily at the dog, he said:

"See here, old fellow, you never ate all that meat; did you?"

The dog looked hard at the bill, shook himself all over, regarded the butcher with contempt, and then went back to his rug, where he stretched himself out with a low growl of dissatisfaction.

The next Sunday, just as service began at the village church, into my friend's pew vaulted Major.

Major kept perfectly quiet until we all arose for prayer; then he sprang upon the seat, stood on his hind legs, placed his fore-paw upon the front of the pew behind, and stared gravely and reproachfully into the face of the butcher, who looked very much confused, and turned first red and then pale. The whole congregation smiled and tittered. Major's master at once took the dog home. But the butcher was more considerate in his charges from that time. Evidently he felt mortified and conscience-stricken.—Exchange.

RELIEVED.—A German newspaper reports a case of sudden blindness which was cured by means hitherto unknown to the medical profession:

A young apprentice, while seated at the breakfast table, all at once exclaimed: "I am going blind! Ach! I am blind!"

His master asked, in alarm, how it had happened.

"I don't know," answered the apprentice, "but I'm so blind that I can't see the butter on my bread."

The good-natured master, who had once been an apprentice himself, begged his wife to put a piece of cheese on the lad's bread.

"Well, my boy," said the master, as the two left the table, "how are your eyes now?"

Thanks, Herr Knieriem, they are much better. I could see the bread distinctly through the cheese."

THE SAUCER GARDEN.—Have any of our little readers ever made a garden in a saucer? This is how it may be done. Place your saucer in a sunny window; put in it a piece of sponge or some white cotton, then sprinkle over that about a tea-spoonful of whole flaxseed, and fill up the saucer with water. All the care this garden will need is plenty of water. After a few days you will find your seeds sprouting, and before very long you will have a flourishing green spot in your room.

Some little sick child would enjoy seeing such a garden "grow."—The Child's Hour.

Harry (aged eight)—"Do people hunt lions and tigers, mama?"

Mother—"Yes, dear."

Harry—"Why?"

Mother—"Because they kill dear little lambs and sheep."

Harry—"Then why don't they hunt butchers?"

Minor Faults.

A judicious mother once remarked that one must expect moral disturbances in children, like whooping cough and measles in the physical life, but that it is best not to take too much notice of them. Little faults of manner and transient moods will correct themselves oftentimes if the general home atmosphere be wholesome. A writer in the Christian Advocate comments as follows on this thought:

"Is there not comfort here for you, dear friend, who can not understand why John, carefully trained as he is, sometimes, in the eager heat of play, bursts into the room like a tornado, or forgets to put cap on nail, and books on shelf, as an orderly boy ought? And if Sarah is not so patient as she should be with the younger ones, sometimes has mysterious fits of depression, or is hysterically gay, with no cause that you can see, summon your own gentle self-possession to the front; remember that the period between childhood and youth, like all transition periods, is very trying, and, while you pray a great deal for your darling, do not worry about her or talk to her too much. Do not suffer yourself to too severely censure a sensitive boy or girl to whom judicious praise now and then will be a tonic.

"Line upon line, precept upon precept, we must have at home. But we must also have serenity, peace, and the absence of petty fault-finding, if home is to be a nursery fit for heaven-growing plants. The great safeguard against sin and error is, after all, a clear sense of moral responsibility. It does not require any unusual technical skill as a teacher to make on the youngest child a very profound impression of the immanence of God. Long before your boy has reached the age of five years, he may have as deep a consciousness of God's presence as you have. He may fall asleep every night with the vision of a smiling Savior and attendant angels. He may waken each morning and go about his infantile pursuits 'enduring as seeing him who is invisible,' in as true a sense as Moses did. Not that much theological knowledge can be imparted to infants. Much is not needed. But as soon as they can intelligently grasp the thought of an absent father or brother they can believe in an invisible God. And it is within easy possibility to make this thought of God a check in moments of frivolity, an inspiration in times of timidity, and a source of consolation in childish sorrow. Let a child once grasp and keep the idea of an omniscient loving God, to whom he must render a personal account, and his parent need not worry about minor frailties."

MAKING CHILDREN HAPPY.—"I try so hard to make my children happy," said a wearied mother, with a deep sigh, one day in despair at her efforts.

"Stop trying," exclaimed a practical friend at her elbow, "and do as a neighbor of mine does."

"And how is that?" she added, dolefully,

"Why, she simply lets her children grow and develop naturally, only directing their growth properly. She always throws them, as far as practicable, upon their own resources, teaches them to wait upon themselves, no matter how many servants she has, and to construct their own playthings. When she returns home from an absence they await but one thing—their mother's kiss. Whatever has been bought for them is bestowed when the needed time comes. Nothing exciting is allowed to them at night, and they go to bed and to sleep in a wholesome mental state, that insures restful slumber. They are taught to love nature, and to feel that there is nothing arrayed so finely as the lily of the field, the bees and the butterflies; that there is nothing so mean as a lie, nor anything so miserable as disobedience; that it is a disgrace to be sick, and that good health, good teeth and good temper come from plain food, plenty of sleep and being good."

In order to thrift, children require a certain amount of "letting alone." Supreme faith in the mother, few toys, no finery, plain food, no drugs and early to bed are the best things for making them happy.

The Chemistry of an Egg-Shell.

The shell proper of an egg is made up mostly of earthy materials. The proportions vary according to the food of the bird, but ninety to ninety-seven per cent. is carbonate of lime. The remainder is composed of from two to five per cent. of animal matter and from one to five per cent. of phosphate of lime and magnesia. Now, Mr. P. L. Simmonds asks, where does the hen procure the carbonate of lime with which to form the shell? If we confine fowls in a room, and feed them with any of the cereal grains, excluding all sand, dust, or earthy matter, they will go on for a time and lay eggs, each one having a perfect shell, made up of the same calcareous elements. Vauquelin shut up a hen for ten days, and fed her exclusively upon oats, of which she consumed 7,474 grains in weight. During this time four eggs were laid, the shells of which weighed nearly 409 grains; of this amount 276 grains were carbonate of lime, 17½ grains phosphate of lime, and 10 grains gluten. But there is only a little carbonate of lime in oats, and whence could this 409 grains of the rocky material have been derived? The answer to this question opens up some of the most curious and wonderful facts connected with animal chemistry. The body of a bird, like that of a man, is but a piece of chemical apparatus, made capable of transforming hard and fixed substances into others of a very unlike nature. In oats there is contained phosphate of lime, with an abundance of silica, and the stomach and assimilating organs of the bird are made capable of decomposing the lime-salt and forming with the silica a silicate of lime. This new body is itself made to undergo decomposition, and the base is combined with carbonic acid, forming carbonate of lime. The carbonic acid is probably derived from the atmosphere, or more directly, perhaps, from the blood. These chemical changes among hard inorganic bodies are certainly wonderful when we reflect that they are brought about in the delicate organs of a comparatively feeble bird, under the influence of animal heat and the vital forces. They embrace a series of decomposing and recomposing operations which it is difficult to imitate in the laboratory.—Popular Science Monthly.

MILLIONS OF METEORITES.—Observations of falling stars have been used to determine roughly the average number of meteorites which attempt to pierce the earth's atmosphere during each 24 hours. Dr. Schmidt, of Athens, from observations made during 17 years, found that the mean hourly number of luminous meteors visible on a clear moonless night by one observer was 14, taking the time of observation from midnight to 1 A. M. It has been further experimentally shown that a large group of observers, who might include the whole horizon in their observations, would see about six times as many as are visible to one eye. Prof. H. A. Newton and others have calculated that, making all proper corrections, the number which might be visible over the whole earth would be a little greater than 10,000 times as many as could be seen at one place. From this we gather that not less than 20,000,000 luminous meteors fall upon our planet daily, each of which, on a dark clear night, would present us with the well-known phenomenon of a shooting star. This number, however, by no means represents the total number of minute meteorites that enter our atmosphere, because many entirely invisible to the naked eye are often seen in telescopes. It has been calculated that the number of meteorites, if these were included, would be increased twenty-fold; this would give 400,000,000 of meteorites falling in the earth's atmosphere daily.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

HOSKINS—Mrs. BETTIE HOSKINS, wife of John O. Hoskins, died at Sunnyside, Leflore county, Miss., February 20, 1890.

I have been this good sister's pastor for more than three years. Soon after the session of the North Mississippi Conference, which convened at West Point in 1886 (then the home of Sister Hoskins), in obedience to appointment by Bishop Duncan, I made my way to McNatt and Sunnyside, and on my arrival, or soon after, I met Mrs. Bettie Hoskins for the first time. But I was not in her home but five minutes, before I was made to feel that I was in a Methodist and Christian home, for she had early in life attached herself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and she loved the church and her ministers with a love characteristic of one of her piety. A glance at the walls of her room, and you had an ocular demonstration of her admiration of those preachers that had especially endeared themselves to her. Conspicuous among her pictures was a large and life-like picture of Bishop Paine, whom she seemed to admire greatly, and not only because of the kinship that existed between her husband and the Bishop. Sister Hoskins seemed to me to be one of the most devoted wives and mothers I ever saw. She loved her husband and two little girls with a tenderness, sweetness and anxiety that only glows in the heart of a Christian. She seemed to realize, as but few wives and mothers do, the grave responsibility of this relation. She taught her two sweet little girls, before they could lisp, the name of Jesus, and that it was right to fall in reverence upon their little knees before God.

She possessed a high sense of gratitude. Last fall she lingered in the shadows of death for several days, in her sane moments making strong appeals to the Giver of life to spare her a little longer. He heard; and oh, how grateful she seemed!

A sister said to me, a few days after the death of Sister Hoskins: "We all loved her, but I fear we did not appreciate her as such a woman should be appreciated." We can but say to the sorrowing and bereaved: The same grace that made her so lovely and loveable in this life will enable you to bow in humble submission to the dispensation of him that is too good to do wrong and too wise too err.

Lonely and sorrowing husband, I know how tired and sore your heart strings are. I have personal experience. But listen: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." (Matthew li, 28 and 29.)

Dear brother, look up, fix your eyes upon Jesus. Will you take those precious little girls by the hand, lead them up the path of right and present them to a waiting mother? God help you!

W. S. SHIPMAN.

ALLISON—Mrs. LEDOCIA ALLISON was born November 7, 1800, and died at the residence of her son, Capt. A. M. Moore, Kemper county, Miss., March 1, 1890. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at the age of sixteen. She lived a useful, consistent Christian for over seventy-three years, probably the oldest Methodist at her death in the whole church. She was twice married: first, in 1815, to Robert Moore, who died in 1835; the second time, in 1842, to R. G. Allison, who died in 1850.

Mother Allison's life was long and very useful. Her children can rise up and truly call her blessed. The world is better because she lived in it. Being a woman of strong mind and unflinching integrity, she honored God and was a blessing to the church. She leaves four children and many grand and great-grandchildren, and a host of friends, to cherish her memory. After bidding her children and grandchildren present good-bye, and sending a like message to other loved ones, with the request to meet her in heaven, she folded her hands, closed her eyes, and her spirit took its flight to realms of eternal bliss.

D. C. LANGFORD.

BUTLER—VONIE BUTLER, son of L. P. Butler, was born January 17, 1881, and died December 5, 1889. He was a model of patience and obedience in everything that he was called upon to do or endure. His suffering was intense. He would take the bitter medicine, and say, "Thank you"—except whisky; he protested against that to the last. He would persuade the little boys to save their money for Sunday-school and the Band of Hope, to which he belonged. A short time before he breathed his last, he seemed to have a vision, and spoke of something shining so bright, and called his father and mother and all the family to kiss him good-night. Then he folded his hands across his breast, and said his little prayer. Passing away without a struggle, they could hardly tell when he breathed his last. He was a good boy. All that knew him loved him; and, best of all, Jesus loved him, and gave him victory over death and a welcome in heaven, where he is waiting for those that he loved.

R. PARVIN.

BONDS—R. W. BONDS was born in Marengo county, Ala., March 3, 1829, and died in Morton, Scott county, Miss., December 26, 1889. Bro. Bonds married Miss M. L. Harris, December 26, 1860, in Scott county, Miss., and remained in that county the remainder of his life. There were nine children given them—six of whom are living. He was a kind husband and father, and was regarded with uncommon affection and reverence by his loved ones.

As a citizen, he was in great demand as a county official, filling for many years, first, the office of clerk of the court, and then the office of county treasurer. He was for many years railroad depot agent at Morton, Miss. As an official and business man, he was always prompt, faithful and competent. He was a man in whom we could repose unbounded confidence in his veracity, honesty and entire integrity of character. He was a consistent Christian; one whose light was growing brighter and brighter. His place in the church was regularly occupied to hear God's Word preached; his share, and a liberal share, of quarterage was faithfully paid, and his house was always the preacher's home. For a great many years he was the recording steward of the charge to which he belonged. How long he had been a member of the church and a professor of religion I am not advised; but in the year 1867, when I first met him, he was a pillar in the church in Forest, Miss. Scarcely anyone could be missed more than he, as he was extensively known and almost universally loved by all who knew him.

He had been somewhat unwell for days. On December 26, 1889, while sitting in a chair, he complained of pain in the heart, attempted to arise on his feet, when he fell on the floor and was dead in a few moments. Death came suddenly, but he was ready. May all of his family serve God here, that they may be an unbroken family in heaven! Farewell, beloved brother; we shall meet again.

C. MCDONALD.

HODGE—Sister MAGGIE E. HODGE, daughter of Samuel and Nancy Hodge, was born in Orange county, N. C., October 23, 1827. She grew to maturity in her native State under good religious influences, coming into the Presbyterian Church at the age of twelve years. After the death of her parents, three of the children, including the subject of this sketch, a brother and a sister, all unmarried, moved to Warren county, Miss., 13 miles from Vicksburg, in 1851. Finding no Presbyterian Church in reach of her, she attached herself to the Methodist Church, of which she remained a worthy and useful member until her death, which occurred February 15, 1890, at the residence of her brother-in-law, William Goodloe, in Madison county, Miss.

Her death was unexpected to herself and friends; hence she left no dying testimony as to her spiritual state and future prospects. Paralysis sealed her lips for some time before death; but a life of devotion to Christ and of active service to his church and cause assures her eternal salvation in the judgment of surviving friends. She was so cheerful, kind and sympathetic, that we feel sensibly our loss. To the extent of her ability in strength and means she was ready to minister to the sick and distressed. Her place in the sanctuary was always filled. If not providentially hindered, and her presence was an inspiration to the preacher. May God help us to follow her as she followed Christ!

D. G. W. ELLIS.

SPENCER—Died at his residence, near Terry, Miss., February 15, 1890, EVAN SPENCER. Bro. Spencer was more than eighty-seven years of age, the date of his birth being December 20, 1802.

He professed faith in Christ as his Savior, and united with the Methodist Church in early manhood. He at once became prominent in church affairs. The various lay offices in the church—steward, trustee, class leader and Sunday-school superintendent—he filled at different times with great acceptability and usefulness. He was also for years an exhorter, and did much good in that capacity. Nowhere did he find greater enjoyment than amid the stirring scenes of a great revival. He could sing and shout and pray and exhort and talk to penitents for hours without any apparent fatigue, and with a countenance aglow with heaven-born joy. For work of this character he was in great demand. During his prime, much of his time was spent in attending revival meetings. He knew both how to be abased and how to abound. Prior to the late war he had considerable possessions, but the war, and the troublous times just after the war, reduced him to a condition which made it necessary for him, at a very advanced age, to toil for his daily bread. These reverses he bore as becomes one whose treasures are laid up beyond the reach of moth and rust and thieves. He was thrice married. His end bedecked his life. His faith was such as to rob death of its sting.

A FRIEND.

No man is more miserable than he that hath no adversity; that man is not tried whether he be good or bad; and God never crowns those virtues which are only faculties and dispositions; but every act of virtue is an ingredient into reward—God so dresses us for heaven.—Jeremy Taylor.

"The Burden of Proof."

If it be a burden, it is only because there is so much of it, but we bear it cheerfully, and present it to you, in a book of 200 pages, as well as in our Quarterly, "Health and Life," both sent free. Many of the names you will find there are those of persons well known to you, and to the whole country. Besides, you can verify the statements, by reference to the patients themselves. We court investigation. You may also inquire into our standing as physicians. We desire you to do all this, and will aid you by all means in our power. Send for our treatise on Compund Oxygen. Sent free. There you will find evidence enough to convince anyone and everyone. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

2d Lady.—Why, no! These are the old ones—dressed with

Wolff's ACME Blacking

It makes them look like new; and my shoes, also dressed with it, hold their polish under the rubber, even should the snow creep in. It saves the leather and waterproofs it; and my husband says it is just as good for HARNESS as for Shoes.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,

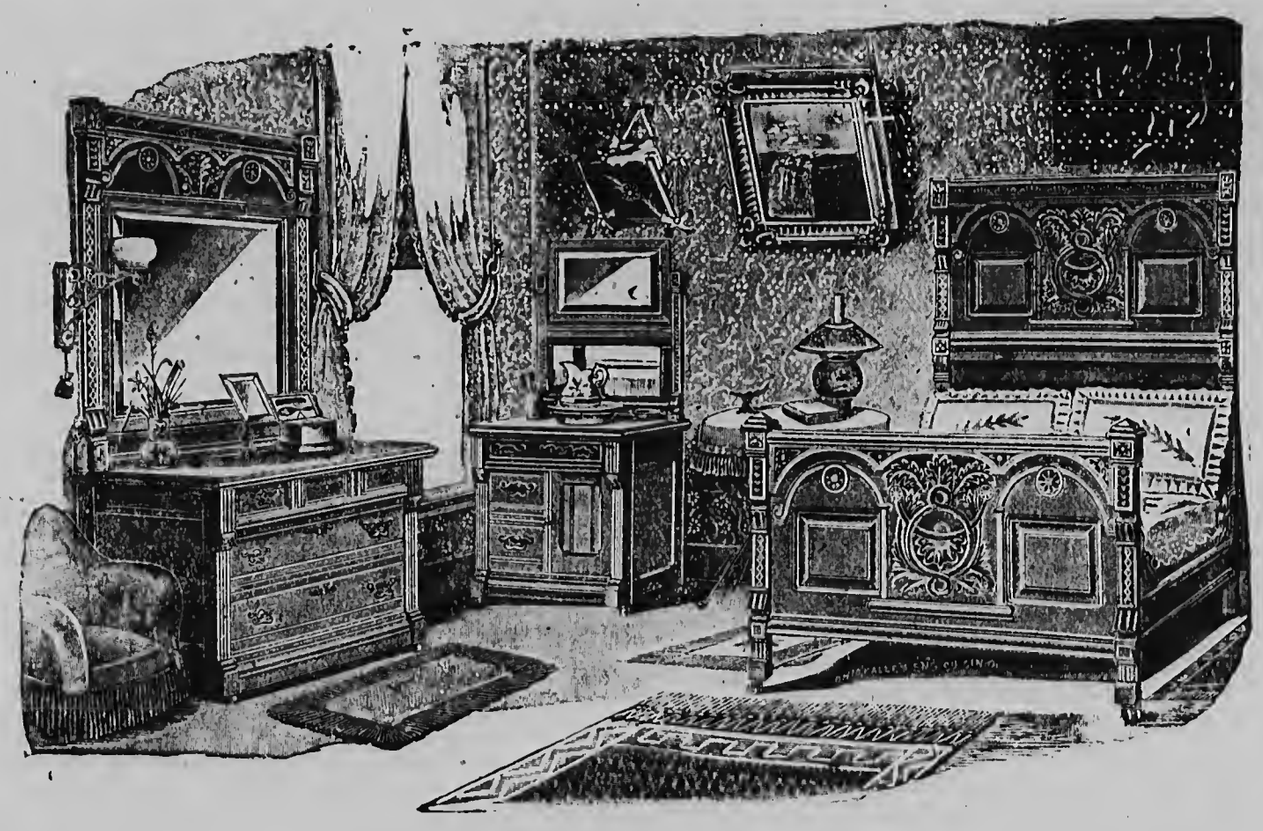
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatello or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Services commemorative of the thirty years' pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Theo. L. Cuyler were held, last week, in the Lafayette Ave. Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. Among the gifts to the pastor was a purse of $30,000.

The Massachusetts House has rejected the bill granting municipal suffrage to women.

The striking carpenters of Chicago, numbering 3,000, paraded the city on April 17, with bands and mottoes.

The River and Harbor bill is about ready to be reported to the House. A total appropriation of $20,000,000 has been provided for. Provision has been made for the repair and construction of necessary levees, and the general continuance of the Mississippi River Commission's work.

The City Council of Kansas City has passed an ordinance providing that eight hours shall constitute a day's work on all city contracts and for all city employees.

The Confederate veterans in South Carolina want increased pensions. For two years past the State has paid a pension of $5 a month to disabled soldiers or their indigent widows. This at a cost of $60,000 a year.

Senator Hiscock has introduced a bill to provide that national banks may secure their circulation by deposits of government, State, railway and municipal bonds of at least par market value, and not in default of interest for ten years past, the amount of circulation not to exceed 90 per cent. of the market value of the bonds, except in the case of government bonds, upon which notes equal to their full face value may be issued.

The eight Annual Session of the W. C. T. U of Louisiana was opened in Ruston on the eighteenth.

It is said that 10,000 negroes will leave Alabama before July 1 to settle in Oklahoma, Ind. Ter. Seventeen hundred colored people left Atlanta, Ga., on the fifteenth for the new country.

A sub-committee of the House Committee on the Judiciary has instructed Representative Culberson, of Texas, to report favorably to the full committee at its next meeting the Senate bill to prohibit trusts, with a recommendation that it be placed in position for speedy action in the House.

By order of Gov. J. B. Gordon, of Georgia, general commander of the Confederate Veterans, there will be held in Chattanooga a general reunion of ex-Confederates on July 13, 14 and 15, next.

Capt. John Cowden has secured a hearing before the Senate Committee on Commerce for next Friday, the 25th instant, on his Lake Borgne Outlet scheme. The matter is before committee in the shape of a bill introduced by Senator Cullom, by request. To make the Lake Borgne an outlet to improve the low-water channel of the Mississippi river.

The Pan-American party, who had started southward, were recalled to Washington after reaching Richmond, owing to the smallness of the number of delegates.

The rear of this city is inundated by the water from Lake Ponchartrain. West End, Spanish Fort and Milneburg are flooded, and Carrollton is menaced.

The levee at Bayou Sara broke, April 21, and the town is now submerged.

FOREIGN.

In the Ostran Karwin districts, Austria, there are 30,000 miners out on a strike. Among other things, the men demand a working day of twelve hours.

Religious instruction in state schools has been suppressed in Brazil.

Mr. Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, has presented the budget in the House of Commons. It shows that the expenses exceed the estimates by £11,600, and that the receipts exceed the estimates by over £3,000,000. The duty on alcoholic beverages realized over £5,800,000. The beer duty exceeded the estimates by £270,000. The duty on foreign spirits exceeded the estimates by £421,000; on home spirits by £1,010,000, and on wine by £12,000. The total receipts from alcoholic beverages, both foreign and domestic, exceeded the estimates by £1,800,000.

A Japanese syndicate has been formed, with the government as a partner, to develop the coal mines of Sorachi and Jubari on the biggest scale practicable. The sum of $7,000,000 has been raised for the preliminary work.

The Duke de Veragna, Spanish minister of public worship, has taken the presidency of a society formed for the purpose of popularizing bull fights among the highest circles of society.

April 19 was Primrose Day and the anniversary of the death of the Earl of Beaconsfield. It was observed by the Conservatives. The Queen sent two wreaths to placed on the grave of Mr. Disraeli at Hughenden. Primroses were generally worn by the admirers of the dead statesman.

Mr. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, and the party accompanying him, reached Brussels, April 19. A great crowd of people had gathered at the railway station some time before the arrival of the train from Paris, and when Mr. Stanley appeared he was given an ovation. The city was decorated in honor of Mr. Stanley and wore a gala appearance. The flags of Belgium, the United States and the Congo Free State were lavishly used.

In the House of Commons, on April 21, Mr. Parnell moved that the Irish Land Purchase bill be rejected. The Parnellites are divided in their opinions of Mr. Parnell's motion.

Notwithstanding the advice of the socialist leaders against a complete suspension of work on May 1, numerous meetings of workmen in Berlin and other cities have adopted resolutions in favor of a holiday on that day. Thirty owners of metal works at Magdeburg have warned their men that they will be dismissed if absent from work on May day.

The Pope, on April 20, received 5,000 Italian pilgrims. He made a forcible speech, in which he indicted the government. Audience cheered and shouted, "Long live the Pope."

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRABIE, 252 SO. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policyholders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

Everyone interested in the missionary movement of this age should read "The Coming Kingdom," by Rev. W. W. Wadsworth; sent by mail, prepaid, for $1. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp St.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art,
MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth Session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

SLEEP.

While children sleep
They know not that their father toils;
They know not that their mother prays—
Bending in blessing o'er their beds,
Imploring grace for all their days.

While children sleep
They never dream that others work
That they may have their daily bread:
When morning comes they rise and eat,
And never ask how they are fed.

While children sleep
They do not see the shining sun—
They do not see the gracious dew,
In daily miracle of love,
Is ever making all things new.

Do we not sleep,
And know not that our Father works
With watchful care about our ways?
He bends in blessing from above—
His love broods o'er us day by day.

Do we not sleep,
And never dream that others work,
Reaping the sheaves that might be ours?
We see not how the shadows fall,
Which mark the swift departing hours.

Ah, still we sleep!
Our drowsy eyes see not the light,
See not the hands stretched out to bless,
See not that waiting for us stands
God's kingdom and his righteousness.

—Good Words.

Men and Brethren, What Must We Do?

BY WALTER R. LAMBUTH, M. D.

Upon the Inland Sea, in the cabin of a little coasting steamer, crouching down upon the floor in the midst of many fellow-passengers, Bro. Towson and I have just left our last mission station, and by midnight will be in Kobe. Kept in the fog when once our captain lost his way, guided by an unseen hand through many nights of darkness while threading narrow straits and island mazes, we have journeyed from city to city, and crossed from shore to shore, preaching the Word, strengthening the churches, and cheering the workers in their toil.

As we knelt beside our brothers and sisters in prayer, we shared with them the burden of their petitions—the gifts of the Holy Spirit and laborers. And now this afternoon, as our little craft stands boldly out from shore and plows the main, being literally encircled by our chain of stations which, stretching one thousand miles, has at last girdled the Inland Sea, the burden of those prayers and of those last messages press heavily upon our hearts. We turn to yonder straits, and, gazing far out to sea, would look into your eyes, and, voicing the question of our pioneer band in Japan, cry out with them, "Men and brethren, what must we do?"

First. Nine thousand Japanese upon the Sandwich Islands have gone from the coast region west of Hiroshima. After several years of work, many are now returning. Upon those islands they have come under the influence of Methodist workers, natives themselves, who urge us, by almost every mail, to follow up their work. Bro. Sunamoto, the converted pilot, our heroic missionary, the founder of the Hiroshima Church, always in the front, has gone, at his own expense, to labor among his people upon the Sandwich Islands; and, sending us names and addresses, urges us to seize the opportunity. But we are overwhelmed with work. We have not the men, and can not strike. Second. Upon this same main island of Hondo, but farther to the east, is a stretch of country tapped by rail and coasted by steamers, which extends over 150 miles. We have been repeatedly asked to come in. A wealthy and influential official wrote us last year that if we would send a missionary to his native town of over 30,000 inhabitants, he would introduce him, and build for him a comfortable house. This gentleman was a Japanese Methodist, and especially requested that the missionary be sent to preach the gospel. Alas! we have no one to send without neglecting other work.

Third. Upon the eastern shore of the island of Kyushu, 200 miles of coast, teeming with villages, is now open to us. A youth, as yet unbaptized, but burning with zeal, is laboring at the southern end of the line. Another, who has denied himself an education rather than enter a Buddhist school, also unbaptized, is reported as having gathered twelve young men around him for Bible study, prayer and work, and stands alone towards the northern end. In vain do they look to us for help.

Fourth. Standing far away across the strait of Bungonada is the island of Shikoku, presenting a rugged line of mountains easily descried from the Kyushu coast. Rarely does the foot of any missionary press upon that western shore. Steadily, from last September until Christmas, J. W. Lambuth, coasting the shore and climbing the mountains, visited towns and villages, preaching on virgin soil. The work was hard, but the privilege sweet. The hours of toil are light, and the lack of food and comforts small privation to a pioneer of missions when he leads not a forlorn hope. These are not our crosses; they are not our burden. The words, "No reinforcements—fall back," sound the death-knell to the missionary's hopes. This is his greatest trial. Upon that same coast one of our most promising churches languishes for want of a pastor. Over yon highest mountain range an old man recently climbed. He had heard that a stranger had come with glad tidings, and now he weeps tears of joy that at last his eyes behold the face of a missionary. Years before, having heard elsewhere, he returned to his family in their mountain fastness, and had led them all into the light of the truth of God. One hundred Islanders, at parting, gathered to speed the missionary upon his way, and prayed his early return.

Fifth. Midway upon the southern rim of the Inland Sea, resting upon the northern slope of a great mountain and overlooking a populous plain, is the idolatrous shrine of the far-famed Kompera, or the Japanese Neptune. Wedded to the sea as Venice was to the Adriatic, thousands of pilgrims from every shore of this island empire flock thither for worship, and bear away with them the badges or mystic charms of this god of individual and national prosperity.

Two years ago Bishop and Mrs. Wilson climbed the hill behind the neighboring town of Tadotsu, and saw the bustling activity of railroad construction. The road is done, the objective point is reached, and now the world has the wonderful spectacle of a railroad especially constructed to carry pilgrims from the sea to a heathen temple. The decks of steamers threading the Red Sea, thronged with pilgrims bound for Mecca, is a sad sight; but sadder still is this prostitution of the great right arm of civilization in the service of the mammon of heathenism. But "God works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." Two hours ago we passed this seaport with renewed faith and thankful hearts. Seventeen believing souls has the Master given us there. Not one sign of swelling germ, of tender sprout or fruitage, two years ago. To-day we hear the truly marvelous news that the seventeen have determined to build a Christian Church—the men having brought their swords and ancient armor, the women their best robes and garments, to cast into the treasury of the Lord.

Brothers and sisters of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, these things stir our hearts to their very depths. Would you could see what our eyes see; would you could hear what our ears hear! Let us go up "to the work, to the work," in the name of the Lord of the harvest! Five great golden gates swing wide open before us; five great lines of coast work inviting occupation before us; five able-bodied, experienced Methodist itinerants the need of the hour. We call for five men who will say, "This one thing I do." Men who will give themselves for life; who are ready for anything, ready to go anywhere, and preach Christ and him crucified.

We call, in the name of the converted pilot, who labors with apostolic zeal upon the Sandwich Islands; in the name of the official who would have dealt so liberally with us had we entered his native city; in the name of the two zealous youths upon the Kyushu coast; in the name of the old man and his hundred islanders, and in the name of our heroic band of seventeen struggling for a church under the very shadow almost of Japan's greatest heathen shrine. Need I say more? The Lord of hosts is with us. The Holy Spirit hath set his seal upon our ministry. He hovers over our mission. Revival fires are burning in our churches. The incense of thanksgiving arises from the altars of our hearts. The Oita Church has received a signal baptism; the Matsuyama Church is thronged with probationers, and every student in the dormitory of our Kobe Boys' School has become a professing Christian.

Upon the first of January the entire church began praying for twenty-five native helpers, ten missionaries, and six Bible women. Five new helpers have been given us, two missionaries, and eight Bible women. "Before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." We expect great things of the Lord.

And now, upon reaching Kobe, I find that at the very hour this letter was begun, the students of our Kobe school were gathered in the chapel about our brother, N. W. Utley, and that their spokesman, with hot tears coursing down his cheeks, begged, in the name of his fellow-students and of his countrymen, that the missionaries would arouse the great Christian Church to immediate and adequate effort for the speedy evangelization of Japan.

Young men of our Sunny South, I can restrain neither voice nor pen. Upon your knees consider the possibility of a nation being born to God in a day. These possibilities are largely in your hands. Should the Spirit prompt you, quench not the Spirit. The youth of a new and progressive Japan look to you for aid. Momentous issues are upon us all. This is the supreme hour for action in Japan. It is the supreme moment for reinforcement in your mission. Who will come over and help us?

KOBE, JAPAN, March 20, 1890.

Kentucky Correspondence.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

I had a snatch of talk with Bishop Keener on the train, as the cars, passing southward, stopped for a little time at our depot, last Monday. He appeared to be somewhat wearied; but the radiance of the light of thought and sentiment was as in the days of editorialing and Ocean Springs Camp Meeting seasons, when it fell to me to come under sway of his genius. He is to me, more than any other I've ever known, in his mental make-up and moral shaping, on the order of the poet-philosopher of Concord—Ralph Waldo Emerson. Every word I ever read or heard from Emerson passed right in upon the ultimate springs of my spiritual being. He, above any other apostle of truth, honor and courage, except those through whom came revelation, has brought me under charm of the love of living—the charm of serving by word and deed, and of indifference to patronage of men.

Bishop Kavanaugh, on hearing a lecture from me a year or two before he died, awaited me in the aisle as the audience withdrew, and said, in his peculiarly emphatic way, as he gave vertical gesticulation with his head: "Cottrell, I enjoyed your lecture! I'm glad I've heard you! That distinction you make between revelation and inspiration is a just one. Some have done you injustice. They didn't understand you."

Now, that men of all ages and in every nation have been under inspiration of the Spirit, who alone discovers the adumbrative significance of natural phenomena in earth and sky, Paul apprehended when he said the Gentiles, who had not the verbal revelation, were without excuse—"the invisible things of God from the foundation of the world being known by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." The sublimity of the truth, as uttered by philosophers and poets, called heathen, witnesses to the fact declared by the apostle: "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding." Religion is the sublimation—the perfection—of naturalness. It simplifies and genializes manners and converse so as to make men and women appear like him who was an offense because there was in his tone and bearing nothing of the theatrical. They deemed him a worldling simply because he was without affectation. As is a uniform to a soldier, religionistic mannerism is to such as deem that the equivalent of thought and speech that are edifying and inspiriting. What terrible excoriation the Master wrought by his criticisms of just this! It is the best calculated to arouse indignation and provoke disgust in lovers of sincerity of all the affectations known to mortals; and blessed is he who can so suppress himself as to avoid judging such with severity of look or language.

Bishop Duncan was with Bishop Keener. He is quite as fully exempt from falling under condemnation of the criticism I make in regard to religionistic conceit and pretension as does the senior, and it was refreshing to greet him.

On Sunday morning last, at half-past four o'clock, the presiding elder of the Bowling Green district, of the Louisville Conference, died at his home here, in Franklin, and was buried from the church on Monday. Several of the preachers of the Conference were in attendance, and acted as pall-bearers. His funeral sermon was preached by the writer to a congregation that overfilled the church. Harrison was a true, devout man, and had the confidence and affection of the people. In a close association with him through years, I never discovered aught that was sinister or oblique in him.

The advocacy, by Dr. Potter, editorially, in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, of having all profits arising from the Publishing House go to cheapening our literature, and developing other periodical agencies and instrumentalities until every demand of intellect is met, is most admirable. His leader in the Wesleyan, of the sixteenth instant, is comprehensive and to the point, and in a tone of manliness well becoming one in direction and control of so important a trust as a religious journal. It has been exceptional when an editor of one of our Methodist journals has, by flippancy and ad captandum smartness, given cause for mortification. The last place for a "smart Aleck" to be put is on the tripod of one of our Advocates.

It is now, as I've repeatedly suggested, through our weekly church journals we mainly "confer" touching matters of interest to our Zion. There must be respect to the divinely indicated order of leadership. The foretop of the horse hangs conveniently to the hand. He has an abundance of hair elsewhere that might be jerked at. To lead the world of mind, and to inspire confidence in such as require truth for authority rather than authority for truth, the ever-the-same, never-the-same questions are chiefly to be canvassed. Am I justified in the distinction I make between creed, doctrine and dogma? It has somewhat facilitated my own thinking. Creed I apprehend to be predicated wholly of fact. Is the evidence sufficient to justify belief in the miracles and other historic statements of fact? Doctrine is that which, like the axiomata of mathematics, is self-witnessing, and, like the axiomata of science, doctrine from initial, primary apprehension thereof, the mind ratiocinates along a line of ever-quickening, uplifting and ennobling spiritualizing of our being. In respect of doctrine, therefore, there is development, notwithstanding a priori certainty of basis principles. Dogma is that which is reached by process of the logical or discursive understanding; and as the logical faculty, unlike the imaginative or intuitive reason, is not direct and immediate and unerring, it has been the mistake of the churches to rank dogma as doctrine. The Presbyterian Church presents just now a sublime spectacle in her enterprise of ridding the grate of old cinders and ashes—for dogmas are after the order of such—that the breath of heaven may be unobstructed. A purer, brighter flame will radiate from that grand old historic craft as she plows the waters of the sea of spiritual life, when the task of cleaning out is accomplished. What is denominated Methodism has wrought such reconditionings among the churches of Christendom, that all of them are approximatively Methodist; so that the full estimate of the work begun by Wesley is by no means compassed in any statistical statement of denominational numbers and amounts. It is in its catholic reach and energy that its most gratifying and inspiriting power is felt. Such as contend for our wearing the swaddling-bands that served its infancy as cravats!—well, I'll not say.

FRANKLIN, KY., April 18, 1890.

Teachers and Their Influence.

BY M'KENDREE M. BLACK.

The blight of war has long damped Southern ardor and retarded the wheels of progress; but the last decade has witnessed a prosperity in our borders hitherto unequaled. While advancement has taken place along all lines, in education it is most marked. Educational enthusiasm is sweeping through the South like a tidal wave. No longer can our Northern brethren taunt us with educational apathy. Even now some of the Southern States spend as much, if not more, money per capita for the education of the young as do the cultured New England States. But the good work has only begun. The next few years will herald even more startling developments. We have entered upon an era when the teacher is to be more influential than at any previous period. Schools and colleges are springing up by the hundred in places that learning has hitherto passed unnoticed. Wherever the light of knowledge hath shined, though but dimly, its light has been modified by the teacher. In proportion as the dissemination of knowledge becomes general, just in proportion do teachers become potent for good or evil. The time has come when the influence of teachers in forming the character of the young is second only to that of parents. It occasionally happens that a man whom the world delights to honor owes his greatness to his parents, or to his own pluck and perseverance; but, as schools multiply, contact with teachers becomes more common, and, consequently, they must be added to the list of transforming agents. A pupil can no more avoid having his character modified by his teacher than a plant can avoid having its growth modified by the seasons to which it is subjected. Since the mental culture of the young is intrusted almost entirely to the teacher, is it strange that they should be responsive to his guidance in things moral as well as intellectual? Is it strange that children should imitate, as they do in many cases, the habits and characteristics of their teachers? That children should come to regard their instructors as superior, in some respects, to their parents, is no mystery. No matter how much they may love their parents, this opinion still finds a lodging-place in their minds. A pupil instinctively forms a more exalted estimate of the person who guides him along the rugged paths of knowledge than of his parents, for oftimes parents are content when they have ministered simply to the bodily wants of their offspring. The teacher, then, appears to his pupils somewhat in the light of a hero. In their eyes he is the personification of wisdom and virtue. His words and actions they accept as models of the highest order. His personality is to them invested with a majesty and halo that time rarely succeeds in effacing. Every teacher who is true to his vocation can, in some measure, succeed in producing this impression.

He who regards teachers as unimportant factors in the development of character has his mental vision seriously impaired. Think you that the "divine Plato" would ever have reached the sublime conclusion that the soul is immortal, had he not been the pupil of the noble Socrates? Think you that an immoral teacher can avoid imparting to his pupils some of his immorality? If so, why do men seek to employ only teachers of sober habits and of good character? It is because everywhere is recognized the power of a teacher's influence and example.

Not long ago a gentleman, on being asked why the graduates of a certain college were nearly always infidels, replied: "The answer is easy. The teachers are infidels." As is the teacher, so are the pupils. The pulpit may speak against infidelity in thunder tones; but if it does not meet with co-operation in the school-room and the lecture hall, the spirit of infidelity abroad in the land will slowly, but surely, spread. Likewise, the faith-destroying doctrine of evolution needs to be combatted by pedagogue as well as by preacher.

Seeing, then, how great are the changes wrought under the hand of the teacher, it is highly essential that teachers should be the noblest types of manhood or womanhood. He is not a true teacher who fails to see that his vocation is an exalted one. Indeed, that of the ministry alone is higher. What the country needs to-day is not simply teachers possessing great learning and ability, but teachers who are in love with their work, and who, in training the mind, also endeavor to train the heart. Mere money seekers are drawbacks to the profession.

History proves that the safety of a nation lies not in education alone. In Greece philosophy and art flourished side by side with corruption and vice. In Rome the story repeats itself. Germany has to-day probably the best school system on the globe, and her citizens, as a class, are more highly educated than those of any other nation. Her government, however, is beset with anarchism and socialism, while her moral horizon is darkened by atheism and materialism.

Plato, Herbert Spencer, and other philosophers, ancient and modern, recognizing the soul's depravity, have offered education as a remedial agency. How has it succeeded? How is it succeeding to-day? Has it banished sin and crime from the earth? Nay, like Banquo's ghost, they will not down at the bidding of the schools and of culture. Moral culture, however, coupled with mental culture, solves all difficulties, and in such a combination we have true education. The two should never be divorced. By the side-light of reason men apprehend only half-truths; in the light of the Sun of Righteousness the whole truth is revealed. The sooner teachers and parents recognize that moral and mental training should go hand in hand, the better it will be for the general weal. At present not all parents are examples of virtue and morality; nor, indeed, will this come to pass for many a day. It is possible, however, for all our teachers to be men and women renowned for their moral as well as their intellectual attainments. With a mighty army of such teachers working together for the elevation of mankind, who knows what transformations might be effected? The good resulting from the labors of a conscientious, God-fearing teacher—who can estimate it?

RUSSVILLE, Miss.

The Louisiana W. C. T. U. and the Lottery.

The Louisiana W. C. T. U., in session in Ruston, La., last week, passed the following resolutions on the Lottery question:

Resolved, That we will use our utmost endeavors, by every legitimate means known to us, to prevent the passage, at the approaching session of the General Assembly of Louisiana, of any act tending in any degree to extend the term of that supreme fraud and disgrace to our State—the Louisiana Lottery Company; and to this end we call upon the women of Louisiana, whether members of our order or otherwise interested in the welfare of our people, to join us in this work. Recognizing the possible passage of such an act as the danger of the present, we also recognize its prevention as the duty of the present.

Resolved, That for the purpose of carrying out the foregoing resolution, a committee from each local Union be appointed, to be known as the Anti-Lottery Committee of the W. C. T. U., who shall be specially charged with the duty of awakening an interest among the women of Louisiana in opposition to the Louisiana Lottery Company, and of bringing to bear in the ways and times and places that seem best adapted to prevent an extension of the charter of this curse of our people.

Resolved, That we tender to Louisiana's noble Governor, Francis T. Nicholls, our thanks and appreciation for his brave refusal of money offered to our State by the Louisiana Lottery Company. We honor him for the stand he has taken. We want no "blood money," even to save us from the floods of the Mississippi. A worse flood is threatening to sweep over our State, and his example will do much to avert the dreaded danger.

A WASTED DAY.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

The day is done.
And I, alas! have wrought no good,
Performed no worthy task of thought or deed.
All well I know my power, and great my need,
I have not done the little that I could.
With shame o'er forfeit hours I brood—
The day is done.

One step behind.
One step through all eternity—
Thus much to lack of what I might have been,
Because the temptress of my life stole in,
And rapt a golden day away from me.
My highest height can never be—
One step behind.

I can not tell
What good I might have done this day,
Or thought or deed that still, when I am gone,
Had long, long years gone singing on and on,
Like some sweet fountain by the dusty way.
Perhaps some word that God would say—
I can not tell.

O life of light!
Thou guest out, I know not where,
Beyond night's silent and mysterious shore,
To write thy record there forevermore;
Take on thy shining wings a hope or prayer,
That hencefore I unfaltering fare
Toward life and light!

An Address.

To the People of Mississippi:

At a meeting of the State Prohibition Executive Committee, held in the city of Jackson, March 25, the undersigned were appointed to lay before the people of the State the condition and the reasonable claims of the prohibition cause within the commonwealth.

The active, organized temperance reform in Mississippi is now about a decade old. During this time the question has been discussed on every side, the public conscience enlightened, and the result has been a great and solid advance in practical reform of every kind. The various Christian denominations have committed themselves, in their great assemblies, to the principle of prohibition. The Masons have outlawed the saloon, as have also many Farmers' Alliances. The saloons have been outlawed in thirty-nine of the seventy-four counties of the State. And in a number of the remaining counties whisky is sold only at the court-house town, leaving the smaller towns and country places free from the curse. It is clear from these facts that the victory is practically won in Mississippi. But the case may be put in a much more assuring light. Claiborne, our own historian, said: "No cause which the ministry espoused was ever lost in any country." This is the teaching of all history. The ministry of Mississippi are practically a unit against the saloon, and public sentiment is so advanced on the subject, that no minister can hold the respect of the masses, if he is the advocate of, or apologist for, the liquor traffic. This mighty force is augmented by the organized womanhood of the State, inspired with the righteous purpose of destroying the destroyer of their homes and hopes. The schools and colleges are also fully in line with the reform move.

A study of the field shows conclusively that the last hope and refuge of the saloon in Mississippi is the ignorant, vicious negro vote. We say ignorant, vicious negro vote, because the intelligent and moral of that race are not for the saloon, but they are few compared to the great horde of ignorant and vicious negroes. The remaining whisky counties are in the black belts, and they are kept wet by the negroes being massed on the side of the saloon. It is a significant fact that the only three counties that have voted for prohibition, and then gone back to the saloon, are heavy black counties, and they were carried back to the wet column by whisky politicians massing the negroes on that side.

It is manifest from these facts, easily accessible to all, clear and indisputable, that the overwhelming majority of the intelligent white people of Mississippi are prohibitionists, and would enact prohibition as the State policy if it were not for the negro vote. It is the unwritten law of the land that white, that is, intelligent supremacy is to be maintained as the only protection for both races. How long will negro rule in the domain of political morals and social order be tolerated by the intelligent, high-toned manhood of Mississippi?

We are approaching one of the most important crises in the history of our State. On August 12, proximo, there will be assembled in Jackson a convention, the business of which will be to frame a new Constitution, upon which our social order and political safety for years to come will depend. It is of the first importance that that convention be composed of our ablest and best men; men with ability to understand what is right, and moral courage to do it. The demand is for broad-minded statesmen, not professional politicians and time-servers.

It is our duty to inform you that already the great whisky trust or combine of the North and West has opened a vigorous campaign in Mississippi, with a view to capturing the convention in their interest. It is declared also that the Louisiana Lottery Company will co-operate with the whisky combine to control the State. Its charter will soon expire in Louisiana, and it is seeking a future home. The recent effort of that conscienceless gambling institution to surprise and capture the new State of North Dakota by the lavish use of money, and its more recent effort to pave its way to popular favor in Louisiana by the donation of $150,000 for levee purposes, may well put Mississippi on her guard. The State is being flooded with whisky literature of the most misleading character, and candidates for the convention, actual and prospective, are being interrogated and committed to the perpetuation of the liquor traffic in the organic law of the State. In many instances this is done in the most subtle way by emissaries of the traffic, so that the parties sought to be influenced scarcely suspect their ulterior object, and good men even are liable to be deceived and misled.

In this contest, forced upon us by the whisky combine of the North and West for the purpose of gratifying their greed at the cost of our morality and manhood, we need to be alert, wise and courageous. They have great sums of money at their command. They will combine with lotteries, gamblers, corrupt politicians and the great mass of ignorant negroes. Like all great combines, only worse than any other, this whisky oligarchy will form alliances with other corrupt and corrupting trusts to carry their point. We can only save our State from perpetual prostitution to the evil forces now arrayed against us by opposing them with all the strength at our command.

Undoubtedly the great question before the convention will be ballot reform. Something must be done to insure white or intelligent supremacy by legal and moral methods. This necessitates cutting off the enormous ignorant negro vote which threatens us with destruction. It will, therefore, be unwise to support anyone for a seat in that convention whose past record or present alliances suggest that he desires to use this ignorant vicious vote. Politicians will not destroy the foundations upon which they stand. Mark for defeat those men who mass and use the negroes to carry out their personal schemes. Men of that character can not be safely trusted with the main work of the convention, if with any part of its work. Beginning in good time, select only such men as measure up to the standard of a well-rounded manhood.

We do not mean to say that no one but a prohibitionist should be sent to the convention. We recognize the fact that there are intelligent, patriotic men who are not avowed prohibitionists. While having no sympathy or alliances with the degrading forces of society, through raising or lack of careful study of the question, they fail to see that prohibition is best. From the ranks of such men the army of prohibition is constantly recruited. We only insist, that no man be sent to the convention who is in sympathy with, and interested in the great evils the convention is called upon to remedy.

As to constitutional prohibition, let us say, that the Prohibition Convention from the first, and on consistently from year to year, has declared for "the legal and constitutional suppression of the liquor traffic." This is our goal; and it ought to be understood fully by our public men and all others that the prohibitionists of Mississippi are unalterably determined to have State prohibition. They have been patient and laborious, they have forborne to jeopardize other interests; but they have never expected to stop short of constitutional prohibition. They have safely passed the seductions of that gilded sham, high license, and other snares, and stand for making an end of the partnership between the State and the crime-producing saloon. Therefore we will insist upon a fair consideration of prohibition in the convention. We favor an article in the new Constitution to the effect that no saloon, gambling house, house of prostitution or lottery shall ever be legalized in the State. All efforts to regulate the traffic have signally failed. Saloons are essentially lawless, and they are the nesting-places of gambling, thieving, murder and prostitution. They have no proper place in a civilized State. It is better for the convention to recognize its duty to protect the homes of the people and make an end of the struggle now, for the question will never be settled till it is settled right. The saloon has long been a dominating and corrupting influence in politics, and must be eliminated, for the liquor traffic is satisfied with nothing less than the full control of the government in the interest of its destructive work.

Fortunately, we can go before the convention with an assured home experience of the benefits of prohibition. Wherever it has prevailed, crime has decreased, social order has been established, labor has improved, court expenses have decreased, vast sums of money have been saved to the people and have gone into home comforts, saloonists and drunkards have become good citizens, and peace and goodwill have prevailed. Moral considerations entirely aside, prohibition commends itself to the statesmanship of the country as an economic measure alone. These are facts known to our people, and are a thousand times more convincing than the reports of failure which come from remote points, circulated by those having a moneyed interest to serve.

We invoke the aid of all good people to make the coming convention one of great and lasting benefit to the State. Let it be borne in mind that virtue and intelligence are the foundations of peaceful and prosperous commonwealths. In this crisis we appeal to the Christian ministers of all denominations to keep their people informed on the moral aspect of the issues before us. We appeal to the noble women of the State, who, in war and peace, have been the helpers of the right, to lend their influence and give their prayers to saving our State from the aliens whose god is mammon and who are now working for our ruin. We appeal to the tillers of the soil, who so largely represent the morality of the State, to resist with their influence and vote this great whisky combine which seeks to beguile them by the free distribution of false and deceptive whisky literature in the form and under the name of farmers' papers. We invoke the aid of Almighty God in our effort to deliver our beloved State from her perilous condition, and secure to all our people, of all races, the benefits of a pure, Christian civilization.

We specifically recommend and urge:

1. Vote for no man whose character and record is not approved by the best people who know him.

2. Vote for no man who is in sympathy with the whisky combine, gambling hells, houses of prostitution, lottery swindles, or the saloon, the foster mother of the quartette.

3. Vote for no man whose political strength lies in his ability to mass and wield the ignorant, vicious negro vote.

In behalf of the committee.

Brandon District Conference.

The Brandon District Conference held its annual meeting at Brandon, April 17–20; Rev. P. A. Johnston, P. E., presiding.

There were present during the session sixteen preachers and twenty-four lay delegates. There were four charges that were not represented.

All our preachers are at their places doing faithful work for their Master. The spiritual condition on all the charges, except one or two, was reported as very gratifying and growing.

The Sunday-school work is well up with the times. Very few union schools in the district. It is gratifying to note the manifest interest among our preachers on the subject of Sunday-schools.

The finances of Brandon district are coming up towards the top. A majority of the charges have paid their foreign missionary collections in full, and a goodly number are up to date with their other collections. We hope the day is not far distant when we shall stand in the foremost ranks of the Mississippi Conference. The great drawback to this district is the want of a financial system on most of the charges.

On Friday, by special order of the day, we had our educational mass meeting in the interest of Millsaps Methodist College. After addresses by Revs. D. P. Bradford and J. S. Parker, and Hon. A. J. McLaurin and Pres. L. T. Fitzhugh, the presiding elder took a collection of $525 for the college.

Bro. D. L. Mitchel, business manager of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, was with us, and gave us the benefit of his wide experience.

A paper on our duty to the Indians in our midst was adopted and ordered sent to the ADVOCATE for publication. Also reports from the Committees on Louisiana State Lottery and Temperance.

Bro. J. W. McLaurin, superintendent of American Bible Society, was with us, and preached one of his soul-stirring sermons.

We had a very pleasant and interesting session. Everyone was pleased and, I think, benefited. Our next District Conference will be held at Hickory Station.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. M. Thornton, Rev. Irvin Miller, G. B. Harper, J. R. Enochs; alternates—A. G. Meyers and A. J. McLaurin.

W. M. WILLIAMS, Sec.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

We are glad to report that there is not a saloon within the bounds of this district, and, while the cause of prohibition has not entirely prohibited the use of liquor, we are certain that its use has been greatly diminished under the operation of prohibition law, and, as a result, crime has diminished fully fifty per cent. We congratulate ourselves upon the fact that the circuit judge of this judicial district within which the Brandon district lies, has given the temperance cause all of his moral as well as official influence, and this has contributed largely to the success of the prohibition cause within our bounds.

While there are exceptions, we are glad to say that the mass of our membership was loyal to this great work, and we urge them to still greater efforts, believing, as we do, that while we are engaged in this grand and noble work which promises so much good to our race, that we are doing the work of the divine Master.

We also rejoice to know that we have the co-operation of the leading and influential men among the laity of our church in our great fight against the saloons of the country.

We conclude our report with the following:

Resolved, That we, as a District Conference, pledge ourselves to use all proper means at our command to prevent the re-establishing of saloons in any part of our district.

IRVIN MILLER,
Chairman.

REPORT ON THE LOUISIANA STATE LOTTERY.

Whereas, We have in our midst, and being entertained by our sister State, the most stupendous fraud and gambling machine of the nineteenth century; and, as a religious body and citizens of this great commonwealth, we recognize the fact that in legalizing this agency of the devil the state of Louisiana does injustice, not only to herself, but to every citizen of this country; And, whereas, We believe that no State in this great Union of States has a right to establish and perpetuate an institution whose baneful influence is so unmistakably felt as that of the Louisiana State Lottery upon the people of our State; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we lift our voices with all the good people of this country in appeal to our sister State to suppress, as early as possible, this great iniquity; and hereby pledge our hearty co-operation with every movement that has for its object the obliteration of this disgrace to our civilization.

Resolved, That we endorse heartily the course which our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, is taking in this great fight, and bid the managers of same God-speed.

Resolved, That we congratulate the State of Louisiana on having a governor who has the courage to reject an offer of $100,000 tendered him even in an hour of public distress by this monstrous gambling monopoly, though presented in the form of charity.

The Lottery.

The Lottery and Those Twelve and a Half Millions.

When a manufacturing or mercantile concern offers an amount of money for the privilege of conducting its business, the source from which comes the proffered sum is clearly perceived to be either the production of some article of value, or the accomplishment of a desirable object in facilitating exchange. So the community receives, in addition to the tax or license paid, another real benefit in the addition to its material wealth—making ten cents' worth of raw material into a dollar's worth of the manufactured product; or, perhaps, keeping within easy access goods which would have otherwise to be obtained at a greater distance and higher price.

The advantage of such an establishment is plainly seen. As its profits are derived only from the increased value it gives to the material it handles, the labor it employs can only be drawn from less productive industry. There is nothing delusive in the source from which its profits come. If an employee is paid more for making a trifling amount of metal into a valuable tool than he could have earned at the labor he pursued before the erection of the new factory, it can only be because the value he has created is greater and more desirable to the community. The result is too tangible to be mistaken. The purchaser of an ax does not expect it to hatch out into a steam engine on the second Tuesday in May, or into a freight train next June.

The element of chance is not eliminated, either to the purchaser or the manufacturer; but use is the foundation upon which any honest manufacturing or mercantile business is erected, and chance is only incidental. That the element of chance is not usually considered a desirable adjunct to business is proved by the large amounts expended for insurance, and the care which the average merchant exercises in granting credit.

It is seen that the manufacturer, merchant or farmer must contend somewhat with chance, which it is his constant effort to minimize. The purchaser of lottery tickets contends against a desperate chance; but the Lottery Company runs no risk at all, as long as even one-third of this country produces a crop. If there ever was a concern which ran no risk in the profits of its business while kept going, the Lottery is one. But let us believe that it runs a great risk of soon being retired, when the fortunes of its stockholders and its handsome reserve fund will be diverted to more useful, if less lucrative, employment. But twelve and a half millions would be useful. True, it would require an annual per capita contribution from the people of this State of almost fifty cents to equal this munificent sum.

Now, the question arises, Where will this money come from? Will the Lottery Company create any useful thing, the sale of which will realize this promised sum? No; this is what it proposes to do. It will withdraw from active production hundreds of people, and employ them in the collection of many times the amount promised the State. Some, no doubt, of this money comes from persons who can afford to amuse themselves thus, and are well able to understand the nature of the transaction. But how many ticket buyers obtain the money invested dishonestly, or deprive their families of scant necessities? The most numerous class, though, are those who invest through a mental inability to comprehend the transaction from a purely business standpoint—that is, that the regular monthly patron, unless his luck is much better than the average, will not win the capital prize oftener than once in 10,000 years, or any considerable prize oftener than once in a thousand years. But it is that mania called "hope" which whispers in his ear: "You are not an ordinary mortal. See your fortune hanging in yonder window; seize it. 'There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune,'" etc., ad infinitum. These are the people who need such protection as a removal of the temptation would give them. Accost one on any corner, and he will admit that he is a constant patron of the Lottery, but is anxious for its removal.

Again, it may be argued that much of this money comes from without the State. So it does; but the material advantage we derive from this source is more than counterbalanced by the unfavorable impression created against us, which must show itself in quiet business boycott of more or less intensity, the extent of which, from its negative quality, we will never be able to measure. But if it could be proved that the Lottery's existence was a net pecuniary gain to the people of this State to the whole extent of fifty cents per capita per annum, and our people could convince themselves that it is morally right, would they stand out boldly and declare to every State in the Union and every reputable country on the globe: "We know that nine-tenths of the civilized people condemn lotteries, but that does not convince us that it is wrong. We will brave your condemnation, defy you, and forfeit all intercourse with you, if necessary; but we must have whatever share you will give us of the fifty cents per capita promised to our mendicant population"?

The Alexandria "Town Talk" and the Lottery.

A CORRECTION.

MR. EDITOR: In a brief communication to your paper, dated April 8, accompanying the manuscript of an article, over my signature, discussing the Lottery question, both of which appeared in the issue of your paper of April 10, there is used by me the expression that the Alexandria Town Talk had refused to publish my article, "or anything else opposed to the Lottery."

Since the date of my note to you, The Town Talk has published resolutions of the Farmer's Alliance strongly condemnatory of the Lottery; and in its issue on Saturday last, the nineteenth instant, it editorially announces that the paper is opposed to renewing the charter of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, and will continue to oppose it, and defining its position on the Lottery question as being distinctly anti-Lottery, but that it sees no necessity for discussing the question at this time in its columns.

In view of these subsequent editorial and other publications in the Town Talk, the statement in my note to your paper, of April 8, that that paper had refused to publish "anything else opposed to the Lottery," was incorrect when it appeared in your issue of April 10, and is still more so since the publication of the Town Talk on the nineteenth instant.

As the statement above quoted from my note to you does not correctly define the position of the Town Talk, and is well calculated to do the paper and its editor a serious injustice, I hasten to withdraw that expression, and ask you, in justice to the Town Talk as well as to myself, to give this correction the same publicity in your columns that the original expression had.

Very respectfully,

ROBT. P. HUNTER.

BEHOLD THE LAMB OF GOD; OR, THE TWO TESTAMENTS. By H. R. Withers, D.D., of the Little Rock Conference. Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For sale by F. D. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp St., New Orleans. Price, $1.

This book, in some respects, is a new departure. It is, in the main features, a discussion of the first and second covenants. The author takes the position that people under the first covenant were merely justified, not regenerated. Those who died justified were regenerated and made holy at the resurrection of Christ, which was the completion of the second covenant. We are not sure that we understand it all, so you had better get the book and read for yourself.

THE TRIAL OF JESUS, FROM A LAWYER'S VIEW. By C. P. Blackburn. Robert Clarke and Co., Cincinnati. Price, fifty cents.

This is a painstaking review, by a trained legal mind, of the trial of Jesus. The charges, the witnesses, the evidence and the law are all analyzed and sifted, and the author reaches the conclusion that "Jesus, considered merely as a citizen, a man, was not tried and sentenced, either according to law, or agreeably to the forms of legal proceedings then existing."

PERIODICALS.

—MUSICAL HERALD, for April, is full of its usual reading matter. New England Conservatory, Franklin Square, Boston. Price, $1.

—THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, for May, is on hand, and full to overflowing with reading matter suited to all ages and sizes of folks. Dr. Talmage is one of the contributing editors of this journal. It is published by the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. Price, $1.

—THE MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD, for May, presents several papers of extraordinary interest. The leading one, by Dr. George William Knox, of Tokyo, Japan, though long, will repay the most careful reading. It is an incisive and intelligent review of the chief political and other changes which occurred in Japan in 1889. His brother's article on Personal Observations in Brazil, is equally interesting, and sheds the most certain light on the Revolution which has recently occurred there that we have seen. Not less stirring in interest is Dr. Pierson's Letter, sketching his missionary tour in England during the month of January. Dr. Morrow continues his valuable historical account of foreign missions in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Dr. Ellinwood's article on Shadowings of Messiah in Heathen Systems, shows careful and profound study of the religions of the world. Dr. Pierson's address before the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, in December, on The Importance of Medical Missions, is a masterly presentation of the subject. Dr. Starbuck's translations from foreign periodicals afford a unique feature of this Review. We question if any of our literary monthlies, for May, will present a richer and more varied table of contents than this missionary magazine. Published by Funk and Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year; in clubs of ten, $1 50. Specimen numbers, twenty cents.

LESSON VI.—May 11.

FEEDING THE MULTITUDE.

Luke ix, 10-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life.—John vi, 35.

TIME.—Spring of 29, A. D.

PLACE.—The plain of Et-Bathah, near the town of Bethsaida Julias.

10. Told him all that they had done—This brief and meager record, to which nothing is added by the other evangelists, contrasts so strongly with the joyous exultation of the seventy over their success, that we are led to infer that the training of the twelve was as yet imperfect, and their mission less successful than the subsequent one. Took them, and went aside—We may, I think, reverently trace as the motives of this withdrawal, (1) the strong personal emotion which the death of one whom Jesus had known and loved could not fail to cause; and (2) the wish to avoid being the center of the popular excitement which the death of John was likely to cause. Two other circumstances, named by the other evangelists, tended to increase the crowd that thronged around him. (1) The twelve had just returned from their missionary circuit (Mark vi, 30, 31), and it was, indeed, partly to give them, too, an interval of repose that he thus withdrew from his public work; and (2) the Passover was coming on (John vi, 4), and all the roads of Galilee were thronged with companies of pilgrims hastening to keep the feast at Jerusalem. Into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida—The "desert place" was either one of the green tablelands visible from the hills on the western side, or more probably part of the rich plain at the mouth of the Jordan. In the parts of this plain not cultivated by the hand of man would be found "much green grass," still fresh in the spring of the year when this event occurred, before it had faded away in the summer sun, the tall grass, which, broken down by the feet of the thousands there gathered together, would make as it were "couches" for them to recline upon. This Bethsaida must be carefully distinguished from "Bethsaida of Galilee."

11. And the people followed—Combining the four narratives, we see that the embarkation of Jesus to sail from Capernaum to the northern Bethsaida had been noticed by the people, and as it is only a sail of six miles they went on foot round the head of the lake to find him. He had barely time to retire with his disciples to one of the hills when a crowd assembled on the little plain, which was momentarily swelled by the throngs of pilgrims who paused to see the great Prophet, on their way to the approaching Passover at Jerusalem, which Jesus himself could not attend without danger, owing to the outburst caused by the Sabbath healing of the cripple. Toward afternoon he came down the hill to the multitude to teach them and heal their sick.

12. When the day began to wear away—The approach of night admonished the disciples that this great multitude would soon be hungry and breadless, for this desert region could by no means furnish them the food they must need. So they laid the case before the Master. Apparently the thought of a bread supply by miracle had not entered their minds. Then came the twelve—They were afraid that, when once the brief twilight was over, the famished multitude might lose their way or come to harm, and some calamity happen which would give a fresh handle against Jesus. John alone tells us that our Lord had compassionately suggested the difficulty to Philip, watching with gentle irony the trial of his faith; and that Philip despairingly said that it would cost more than 200 denarii (as we might say, $50) to procure them even a minimum of food. Philip was "of Bethsaida," but this had nothing to do with our Lord's speaking to him, for it was to the western Bethsaida he belonged. In St. John's narrative, Philip and Andrew are prominent as speakers, and our Lord puts to the former the question, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" As Philip and Andrew both belonged to one of the Bethsaidas (John i, 44), their local knowledge made the question natural. It was apparently after this private conversation that the main body of the disciples came to their Master beseeching him to dismiss the multitude that they might buy food in the nearest villages. They were met by what must have seemed to them the marvelous calmness of the answer: "They need not depart; give ye them to eat." Philip's rough estimate having been passed on to the others, they answer that it would take two hundred pennyworth of bread to feed so great a number. Then Jesus asks them, "How many loaves have ye?" and Andrew, as the spokesman of the others, replies that they have found a lad with five loaves, and two fishes. Into the towns and country—Better, the villages and farms.

13. We have no more but five loaves and two fishes—It was Andrew who first mentioned this fact in a tentative sort of way. The little boy who carried them seems to have been in attendance on the apostles; evidently this was the food which they had brought for their own supply, and it proves their simplicity of life, for barley loaves are the food of the poor. Buy meat—Better, food.

14. By fifties in a company—The vivid details of Mark show the eye-witness of St. Peter. He compares them to parterres of flowers as they sat on the green grass in their bright Oriental robes of red and blue and yellow. St. Luke's word means literally in dining-parties, from klinia, "a couch." This systematic arrangement made it easy to tell the number of the multitude. All the evangelists agree in stating the number of men at five thousand—the number being easily estimated after such a grouping into fifties, making one hundred groups. Matthew (xiv, 21) says the men were about five thousand, besides the women and children. In all Oriental usage, women and children never eat with men, but separately.

16. Looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake—The act was natural and simple enough, the "saying grace" of the head of a Jewish household as he gathered his family around him. The formulæ in such cases were commonly short and simple, like our own, such, that is, as "May God, the ever-blessed One, bless what he has given us."

17. Were all filled—It lies in the nature of the case, as a miracle of the highest order, that the process of multiplication is inconceivable in its details. It was enough for them that the multitude "did all eat and were filled." Of fragments—These were collected by the order of Jesus, who thus strikingly taught that wastefulness even of miraculous plenty is entirely alien to the divine administration. The marvelous display of creative power was not to supersede forethought, thrift, economy in the use of gifts it had bestowed. Twelve baskets—Cophini, probably wicker-basket. Every Jew carried such a basket about with him to avoid the chance of his food contracting any Levitical pollution in heathen places. The baskets used at the miracle of the four thousand were large rope-baskets, "frails." The accuracy with which each word is reserved by all the narrators for each miracle is remarkable.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: Since last I wrote you I have passed through severe trials; but the promise is sure—"I will not leave or forsake thee." The dear Lord has been my strength and help, and I trust him more and more. I have had a letter from a dear young sister, an orphan struggling alone in this world. She sent me a book which had been her mother's, and the sweet Christian spirit that breathed through her letter was as cordial to the fainting spirit. She is ready and willing to join me here if God opens the way. God bless her for her sympathy! The past few days have been spent visiting the sick and trying to comfort them. I failed to-day, being fatigued from walking so much; but a note came from a Mexican woman, telling me she had looked for me and counted the hours, reminding me that "a cup of cold water" given for Christ's sake would not lose its reward. So you see, Mr. Editor, my dear Mexican sisters intend I shall be faithful in the discharge of my duties. Pray that I may never be lax.

Last Sunday night there was an old man, a great Liberal, received in our church. He seemed so glad of a word of welcome, his eyes filled with tears.

Mr. Weems has been wondrously blessed this second round: has received 31 members, making in all one hundred and eighty-seven. I believe the Lord will bless him more and more. He is so tired all the time after getting home, can do little else than rest. We have had our Sunday-school reorganized, and it is now in a flourishing condition. I wish very much some good, liberal-hearted brother would give us a large sum to erect a nice church in the City of Mexico. It would be a monument worthy a Christian. We need it very much. We have a nice little chapel, I think, selected by our dear Bishop Keener. It was wisely located, and has done well. We would like to retain it; but we need another in this great city, and a larger one. I am sure the Bishops who have visited this field will agree with me. Oh! may the interest in this priest-ridden land deepen until we shall have all that is needed to push forward the work as it should be.

S. G. WEEMS.

MEDICAL MISSIONS.—In a recent address in England, Dr. Maxwell, a medical missionary in China, spoke as follows of the missionary hospital at Swatow, and of the incomparable opportunity possessed by medical missionaries of bringing home spiritual truth to the hearts of the people: "Hundreds of patients have left the hospital servants of Christ—there is no question of that. No less than one hundred patients last year asked for baptism in that one hospital. What is the secret of the success which has attended the work of the Swatow hospital? It is that while such brethren as Drs. Cole and Lyon, devoted, skilled Christian men, have done their best, and have shown their own zealous interest in the spiritual welfare of their patients as far as they could, they have been backed up by a number of like-minded men and women. The result is that all through that region one hundred miles to the north, one hundred miles to the west, and one hundred miles to the south of Swatow you will find not only a large number of mission stations planted, with actual prosperous congregations, the direct fruit of conversion in the hospitals, but also all over the adjoining region, in villages here and hamlets there, you will find Christian men and women in ones and twos, living witnesses for the Lord Jesus Christ where there are no stations.

"You must recollect that there are no opportunities in China to be compared with these. I speak strongly; I speak from my own experience and from what I have seen of others. It is my conviction that, considering the time that the patients are with you, considering the spirit they are in while with you, and the quiet in which they live while separated from their heathen friends, there is no opportunity to be compared with the opportunity possessed by medical missionaries and those who are working with them, of seeking to bring home spiritual truth to the hearts of these people."—Spirit of Missions.

Temperance.

Beneficial Results.

Should all the inhabitants of the United States cease to use intoxicating liquor, the following would be some of the beneficial results, viz.:

1. Not an individual would hereafter become a drunkard.

2. Many who are now drunkards would reform and would be saved from a drunkard's grave.

3. As soon as those who would not reform should pass away, not a drunkard would be found and the whole land would be free.

4. More than three-fourths of the pauperism of the country would be prevented; and also more than three-fourths of the crimes.

5. One of the principle causes of error in principle and immorality in practice would be removed.

6. The number, frequency and severity of diseases would be greatly lessened; and the number and hopelessness of the insane be greatly diminished.

7. One of the greatest dangers of the children and youth and one of the principal causes of bodily, mental and moral deterioration would be removed.

8. Loss of property to an extent that seems almost incredible might be prevented.

9. One of the great dangers to our free institutions, to the perpetuity of our government and all the blessings of civil and religious liberty would be removed.

10. The efficiency of the gospel and all the means which God has appointed for the spiritual and eternal good of man would be greatly augmented.

11. Multitudes of every generation through all future ages might be prevented from filling untimely graves; they also might be more readily transformed into the divine image and prepared through grace for the endless.

12. God would be honored, voluntarily and actively, by large additions to his church. All this is possible through self-denial and the law of Christian expediency as promulgated by the Apostle of the Gentiles.—Selected.

"Which of the alcoholic liquors is, in your opinion, the least injurious as a beverage for a man who drinks, or who thinks he must?" The replies to this question from several of the most eminent medical men in this country have been published by the New York Press. Perhaps the most widely known of these as a medical man is Dr. William A. Hammond, of Washington. He declares for beer or a light wine on the ground that "that alcoholic liquor is the least injurious, and hence the best for men to drink, which possesses the smallest proportion of alcohol." He adds: "The use of any form of alcoholic liquor is liable to create a desire for larger quantities, and liquor drinking is one of those things of which it may only too often be truly said that 'increase of appetite grows by what it feeds on.'" Dr. Austin Flint, for several years past professor of physiology in the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, of New York, says: "I am not prepared to state that any one alcoholic drink is less injurious than another. . . . Alcoholic liquor of any description should never be used except when prescribed by an able and conscientious physician in cases of absolute need from sickness." Dr. N. S. Davis, of Chicago, an eminent authority on the effects of alcoholic liquors, and author of a work on the "Influence of Alcohol on the Human System," writes: "There is no such man or person as one who 'must' drink alcoholic drinks. . . . If you ask what kind of alcoholic liquor is the least injurious for a man or person who will persist in drinking, I answer, that kind which has the smallest per cent. of alcohol in it." Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, the author, quotes another man's opinion on the ground that he has "had too little experience with alcoholic liquors to be any authority on the subject." He continues: "It is years since I have practiced medicine, and, except an occasional glass of champagne, I have hardly used alcoholic fluids for these twenty or thirty years."

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Ayer's Hair Vigor

IS the "Ideal" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. La Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. It also promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1890.

The brethren who receive extra copies of the ADVOCATE this week will please distribute them as judiciously as possible.

The second Anti-Lottery Meeting, under auspices of Evangelical Ministers' Union of New Orleans, will be held at Carondelet Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Thursday, May 1, 1890, at 7:30 P. M. An interesting program has been prepared. You are cordially invited.

Then and Now.

We have been looking over some old Minutes of the Louisiana Conference. The Conference, of which these Minutes are the records, was held by Bishop Early in Baton Rouge, La., December 5-11, 1860. Of the eighty-nine preachers whose names were then on the roll of the Conference, twenty appear on the roll December 11, 1889; fifty-one are known to be dead, several are known to be in other Conferences, and several are lost sight of altogether. Three names that appear on the roll that year have since been put on the roll of Bishops—one only of whom still survives—Keener, McTyeire and Parker. One thing that strikes us in these old Minutes is a table giving the number of slaves preached to in each district, the whole number in the Conference amounting to 20,380. And yet we have been represented in some quarters as doing nothing in this respect for the people whom we held in slavery. Some people never examine into history and, therefore, never know the truth of history.

In regard to membership, there was reported 7,761 white members and 2,461 white probationers; 5,834 colored members and 1,655 colored probationers; making in all 13,595 members and 4,116 probationers, and there were 115 local preachers. The members, probationers and local preachers making 18,826. Last year we reported 19,947 members and 101 local preachers. There was collected that year for missions, domestic and foreign, $9,499 95. Last year we reported $8,442 59. That year there was collected for church building $48,103 95, and for parsonages $9,076 25. Last year the money collected for churches and parsonages is put down at $30,845 50. That year the number of Sunday-schools was 209, with 746 teachers and 4,189 scholars, and $2,604 25 collected for Sunday-school purposes. Last year we had 242 schools with 1,428 teachers and 10,431 scholars, and $2,991 73 collected for Sunday-school purposes. That year there was collected for the Bible cause $1,599—one circuit contributing to this fund $1,350. Last year we paid to the Bible cause $625 90. That year there was collected for ministerial support $41,387 96. Last year we paid our preachers $40,432. People in those days seem to have been princely givers, for this wonderful finance report had only about 10,000 people back of it. The true reason is found in the fact that people then were in better circumstances and more able to give.

Some resolutions were passed at that Conference which read strangely in the light of succeeding events. A resolution was passed memorializing the General Conference "to extend the term of the pastorate, discretionary with the Bishops, to four years instead of two." This was adopted by a vote of thirty-two to twenty. Another resolution respectfully recommended the General Conference to remove the word "South" from the name of the church, the preamble being thus:

Whereas, The word "South," appended to our name, is liable to misconstruction and embarrasses us in many respects.

The word "appended" in that preamble is curious. Another resolution was this:

That a committee, composed of three members of the Conference and three laymen, be appointed to perfect a plan of lay co-operation, and report to the Conference at the next session.

On this committee were appointed J. C. Keener, A. B. Fly, B. F. Alexander; laymen, Dr. C. G. Young, Zenas Preston and W. H. Foster.

The report on Church Publications has some expressions that have not been eliminated from present-day reports. For instance, speaking of the Quarterly Review, the report says "it is still alive and evidently breathing more freely than it did one year ago." The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is reported as sending out weekly 8,500 copies, and the report ends, "We will labor diligently to extend its circulation and collect its dues."

When Bishop Early announced the appointments that year he assigned work to 86 preachers. Last year Bishop Duncan stationed 82 preachers. The places "to be supplied" offset each other, being seven on each list. Thus, while the membership of the church has about doubled, the number of preachers is actually less. But the Louisiana Conference never had so many eminent men in it as at that time. J. C. Keener, H. N. McTyeire, H. C. Thweatt, W. E. M. Linfield, Richmond Randle, J. B. Walker, Linus Parker, A. B. Fly, N. A. Cravens were members of that Conference.

The College Canvass—Cullings from Correspondents.

I am in a position to see much of our college correspondence and to keep posted daily with the progress of the canvass. The outlook is most encourning. The preachers generally are taking more personal and active interest in securing an endowment subscription from every Methodist in the State. They will not wait for Bro. Watkins or myself, but urge the matter in each pastoral charge. One of the most cheering reports comes from Braudon District Conference, just held at Brandon. In the absence of both the agent and myself, who expected to be present, the brethren held an enthusiastic and successful educational meeting. Rev. D. P. Bradford, writing to Maj. Millsaps, the treasurer, says:

Enclosed find notes and cash draft for $51. We raised in all $501.

Thanks to Presiding Elder Johnston and the other brethren for such a report. It shows that the college is on the conscience of the church, and each brother is becoming its special agent. I have heard of nothing more gratifying since the canvass began.

Another presiding elder writes:

I am going to work up the college interests on this round.

A young pastor in the Mississippi Conference thus writes to Bro. Watkins:

You will find enclosed four notes for the endowment fund of the worthy contemplated institution of learning of which you are agent. God being my helper, I will send some more notes at an early date.

When our young men enter upon the work with such a spirit we are sure to succeed, and that right early.

A North Mississippi pastor writes:

Send me some more blank notes. I will guarantee $—— per capita for the members of our church here.

This from Dr. J. J. Wheat, presiding elder of the Winona district, written to Maj. Millsaps, just before his recent painful accident, is full of good cheer:

I send you another batch of nine notes and also a check on Durant for the cash received. The name and residence of every person who contributes any amount—even one dollar—ought to be preserved and recorded in a book for that purpose, to be kept forever in the college. In after years it would be a matter of great satisfaction and just pride for the descendants of ancestors to find their names enrolled and ennobled, it may be, in the person of one in humble and lowly life—a factory girl—a seamstress, a poor tenant or preacher. It would be a sort of patent of nobility—a guarantee of blue blood.

The Doctor's suggestion is being carried out as far as practicable. A book is carefully kept with the names and residences of all subscribers and, when known, of all cash contributors.

These are samples of sentiments received by each daily mail. Let all, and altogether, work for this grand cause until our college halls are crowded with young men receiving Christian instruction from Christian teachers.

Sanctification.

It may be helpful to some Christians to show, further, that sanctification is a process, and hence, generally, progressive.

The Spirit was given in fullness to Christ, but he is "given by measure" unto us. It is true that "unto every one that hath shall be given," that he may have more. We are exhorted to be "filled with the Spirit," which implies that we are not full. On the day of Pentecost they were "filled with the Holy Ghost," and, as long as full, they had great power with God and with men.

The Scriptures uniformly present the idea of growth. "That your love may abound yet more and more." "We love God because he first loved us"—and we love him as we apprehend his love for us. A low view of his love for us will beget a low degree of love in us. "Love in us," or love with us, "is made perfect." The love of Christ was a gradual pressure that "straitened him to accomplish his end." So it should grow and culminate in us. As a tree grows, so we become "rooted and grounded in love."

Another class of terms indicate progress: "Perfecting holiness." This indicates effort converging on a point not yet attained. It is progress. "Sanctify you wholly" implies a gradual and growing work. "Continuing in the Word" and "knowing the truth" are essential, indispensable, to the "freedom" truth brings. "He that sanctifieth" and "they that are sanctified," or are being sanctified, convey the idea of progressive salvation. This work need not, necessarily, be slow because it is gradual; though the time element is an important factor in all that concerns human development, both intellectual and spiritual.

That which the Holy Ghost imparts is conditioned on the effort of man. "The progress of sanctification keeps pace with certain conditions." "Cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit," seems to make the cleansing of the Holy Ghost a human work. We have, "Cleanse your hands, purify your hearts," another human work. We are to "mortify our members" while the Spirit "kills and makes alive." We "put off the old man," while the Holy Ghost puts him out, and "put on the new man," while the Spirit puts him in. "The love of God is perfected" in them that keep his word. The condition is essential to the thing. It comes by co-operation, and not by the arbitrary despotism of grace. The love of God to us, and the response in us, depend on fixed and righteous conditions. "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us and his love is perfected in us." The leading characteristic of this blessed progressive work is an increasing love for God and for one another. "God is love," and "our love is made perfect" when we are as he is.

We are required to bend every effort on the attainment of this goal. It is our aspiration, "perfecting holiness," "having the righteousness of the law fulfilled in us," "love the fulfilling of the law," "conformed to the image of Christ," "changed into the same image from glory to glory," "being holy because God is holy," "hungering and thirsting after righteousness," "being pure in heart that we may see God," and striving to be "peacemakers that we may be called the children of God."

Christians are led and not rapt into this blessed estate. The law that governs all the dealings of God with man is not violated, nor suspended, while this work goes on. Just as preliminary grace leads to perfect regenerate life, so preliminary regenerate grace leads to perfect consecration to God. We are born to live, and live to grow, and grow in order to be men.

Sanctification is an end to be sought, and, so, it is a reward for human effort; but we should not forget that it is an act wrought by the power of the Holy Ghost. "Every act and every habit of holiness is of the Spirit." We hang the old man on the interior cross, but the Spirit of God takes his life away. God only knows when sin expires in the soul. God only knows when love is supreme. We may not know—indeed, need not know. All the heart, all the mind, all the soul and all the strength is swallowed up in love until it surpasses our power to say or to know how much we do love. God knows, we don't; but we lie lovingly on the divine bosom and feel the throb of the divine heart.

Lastly, this final and decisive act of the Holy Ghost is his seal on a continuous work, a progressive work. The processes may run through years, or they may be condensed into brief periods; but they must be gone through with. This is God's way, God's method of doing this work, and no man can climb up some other way. The Spirit that regenerates consummates a continuous work when he sanctifies. The "higher life" is the completion of the lower—the superstructure on the foundation. The "second blessing" comes naturally and necessarily from the first—the first was in order to, and the beginning of, the second. God never inverts the order of them, nor does he dispense with either. The preparation for regeneration may be long or short, but the regenerating act is instantaneous. The reason of this is manifest when we remember that the Holy Ghost regenerates. In like manner the preparation for sanctification may run through years, or it may take place at once, but the sanctifying act of the Spirit is, necessarily, instantaneous. The Spirit helps us to get ready that he may perform the act. It is his office and work.

GILDEROY.

P. S.—These articles on sanctification, in part, are culled from Methodist standards, and the subject will not be discussed with anyone by this writer. No word is written to provoke anyone, or to suggest controversy. He who fights will have the field to himself. G.

Visit to Brandon.

The business manager of this paper enjoyed the Brandon District Conference greatly; particularly the reports on the spiritual condition of the respective charges and the prominence given to Sunday-school work. The acceptance by this Conference of the "Montrose" school property, and constituting it the "Brandon District High School," was an excellent movement in an important direction, and should stimulate all District Conferences to a vigorous effort to obtain district high schools.

At the concluding exercises of the Brandon District Conference, the Holy Spirit came down in power, and over twenty-five young people gave Bro. Johnston, presiding elder, their hand, promising to love and serve God. Bro. Peebles, though afflicted, and only able to sit in an easy position during the sessions of Conference, was alive to all the vital questions presented. Through his effective corps of stewards all the delegates were hospitably and elegantly entertained. The writer was most agreeably homed at Sister Julia Jayne's, who belongs to one of the oldest Methodist families of Mississippi, whose house has ever been the preacher's home.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I have time to write only a few lines, as the mail leaves in a few hours. I felt I must write you of the good work going on in Matsuyama, where Dr. O. A. Dukes is stationed.

Two weeks since a letter came, saying there was much interest manifest there in the gospel, and many were coming to hear. A week later another letter came, saying we have about twenty persons on probation, and the numbers attending the services were increasing. To-day a letter comes and brings us the glad news that there are now forty-three persons on probation, and the house will not hold those who assemble to hear the Word preached. This glad news fills our hearts with thanksgiving to God. Oh, for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit of God upon us all and upon all our native churches! Oh, that God would baptize the church at home with his Holy Spirit, and stir the hearts of his people as they have never been stirred, to a deeper and more thorough consecration to his service! Our members in Tadotsu have some armor and swords for sale. Who will buy one armor and one sword for fifty dollars? Would not some Sunday-school like to buy one and help these people build a church? Now, brethren, there is a cry for help, and they need it. Pray for our people and for us, that we may receive a greater blessing upon ourselves and upon the work in which we are engaged!

Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

Letter from Centenary College.

We can scarcely realize that we are so near the end of another session at Centenary. Up to date 137 students have been enrolled. We have had health, harmony and plenty of work for all. Within the last two months we had three public debates at the college; one in each of the literary societies, and a joint debate between the two. On the latter occasion, Col. J. W. Nicholson, president of the University of Louisiana, delivered, by invitation of the two societies, an address which, by the felicity of its conception and delivery, left a most pleasing impression upon the college and community. We hope to see him here again. The young men displayed marked ability in the debate. The Y. M. C. A. has been doing good and faithful work.

The list of young preachers has reached twenty, and others are preparing for the ministry, though not yet licensed. The lessons in vocal culture are a new thing with us, and are a valuable addition to our course of study, especially for young ministers. Our libraries have been enlarged; our apparatus has been somewhat increased, overhauled and brightened up; our museum is soon to be renovated, and our buildings have been made more comely and more comfortable. Altogether, we have cause to thank God and our friends, and to work for the college with renewed courage and joy. Our endowment has been growing even during the high water. At the District Conference at Gloster, and since, one thousand dollars were added to the fund. No one has yet proposed to meet Peter James' proposition to give $25,000. Still I am looking for the man. We can't afford to lose that offer.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Notes.

The Nashville Advocate says: "Not less than one nor more than three Bishops will probably be chosen" by the General Conference.

The Brandon District Conference passed this resolution:

Resolved, That we congratulate ourselves on having such a good church organ as the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and, therefore, do hereby pledge ourselves to work harder for it henceforth than heretofore.

E. A. Yales, writing in our central organ about General Conference work, says:

As far as I know, there is no work for the coming General Conference of more importance than this—a matured, wise system of colportage for the Southern Methodist Church.

Dr. Cuyler and his congregation had an impressive farewell service. Speeches by ministers and laymen were made, and the faithful pastor of thirty years was presented by his loving people with a purse of thirty thousand dollars. That was a handsome thing done in a handsome way.

The latest in the way of watches is one with a device for reminding the wearer of any appointment he may have on hand. On one side of the face is a miniature dial with hands to be set to remain at any fixed time independently of the main dial. A good thing for forgetful folks!

A brother, who has been comparing the last General Conference with the one to assemble next week in St. Louis, points out the fact that in the present General Conference there are only 64 preachers and 29 laymen who were in the last Conference. Out of a membership of 293 there are 200 new members.

This little exhortation from the Watchman we commend to all our stewards:

As the spring opens is it not a good time for our country churches to say: "Can we not do a little better by our minister? He has done good work for us, now let us do a little better by him. It would do us good for him to have a little easier time of it in sending that boy of his to college, and if he felt he could keep a horse or get some more books, or go to the Chicago anniversaries, I think we should feel better about it all around." A few extra oats do a horse no harm. Try it.

Rev. W. M. Green makes the following suggestion in the Nashville Advocate:

In the missionary department I would advocate the appointing of a commission or committee to confer with every Methodism in Christendom, looking to the organization of a general missionary council, which should meet every eight years and divide the mission work among all the branches of Methodism, so that there could be no conflict or clash of Methodist missionaries in any heathen field. This end accomplished, our Methodism, as a whole, teaching the same doctrine in all its divisions, might spread her arms like sens and grasp in all the shore." The world is for Methodism, if the forces are properly divided so as to cover all the field.

The Southern Churchman says:

Clergymen have a better time in some respects than Chrysostom and his contemporaries. His friend Basil was seized in order to be made a bishop. Augustine was dragged, weeping, by the people before the bishop and his ordination demanded. Martin of Tours was torn from his cell and conveyed to ordination under guard. After awhile it became the fashion to show great reluctance to be made a bishop. Dean Stanley says the patriarch-elect of Alexandria is still brought to Cairo loaded with chains, as if to prevent his escape. In old times "nolo episcopari" did not mean what it does now.

Would'nt it be a sight to see a preacher "seized," and "dragged weeping," and "loaded with chains," and "conveyed under guard", to his ordination to the episcopacy nowadays?

Personal and Otherwise.

"One by one" the saints are gathering home. After a long illness, borne by Christian fortitude, Mrs. Helenn Booth, wife of Hon. Edwnrd Booth, of this city, died April 22, aged sixty-four years. An earnest Christian, a faithful wife, a devoted mother, a firm friend, a zealous church member, an interested reader of this paper from the first number, she has left the savor of a good name and gone to enjoy the rewards of the Master's service.

The delegates to the General Conference from Louisiana will leave this city for St. Louis next Monday, May 5, at two P. M., by the Illinois Central road.

Rev. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg, is to preach the annual sermon for the E. A. Seminary, Arcadia, La.

The annual catalogue of the Huntsville Female College, at Huntsville, Ala., has been received. The flourishing school is under the able management of Rev. A. B. Jones, D. D., LL. D.

Dr. W. C. Black, of Jackson, Miss., will deliver the commencement sermon for Lexington Normal College, June 15.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate is now owned by Assistant Editor and Publisher Lowrance and Rev. W. B. Palmore. So says the Southwestern Methodist.

The Book Committee, at their annual meeting, appropriated $17,500 for the benefit of Conference claimants for the present year.

Two hundred and forty-five persons have united with our churches in Memphis, Tenn., since the last session of the Memphis Conference.

A private note from Dr. W. R. Lambuth, dated Kobe, Japan, April 1, says: "Send us a Mississippian and Louisianian. We will welcome them with loving hearts. My father has long looked for a man from his native State. Send us a man. Great revivals are breaking out all along the shore of the Inland Sea. Dr. Dukes writes but last night, 'Forty-three new probationers.' This within five weeks." Is there not a Mississippian who will answer this call?

The secretary has handed us the "Constitution and By-Laws of the Ministerial Brotherhood of the Louisiana Conference." This institution has been organized since Conference, and has already a respectable membership. It is a good thing, and we hope all our preachers who can will enroll themselves as members.

Nashville College for Young Ladies.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. S. A. Steel, pastor of McKendree Church, in the new West End Methodist Church at eleven o'clock A. M., Sunday morning, June 1, 1890.

The graduating exercises of the senior class will be held in the Vendome Theatre, at eight o'clock P. M., on the evening of Tuesday, June 3, 1890, on which occasion the commencement address will be delivered by the Rev. Joseph H. Young, D. D., of Louisville, Ky.

The year just closing completes the first decade of the college, and has been the most prosperous in the history of the institution. The enrollment has reached about 400.

Louisiana Conference Statistics, 1889.

I have waited until this late date before publicly correcting errors in order to give time for the discovery of all inaccuracies in the published statistical tables. I have received but one complaint: Natchitoches circuit—Rev. A. D. McVoy, pastor—was reported as assessed for Conference claimants, $25; paid $25. Natchitoches paid on this claim $30, an excess of $5, for which I gladly give credit, trusting the brethren will deem this sufficient amendment.

Notice.

Owing to the present high stage of water, threatening the different lines of travel, and rendering transportation uncertain and dangerous, it is deemed expedient to postpone the meeting of the Louisiana Holiness Association for thirty or sixty days. Due notice will be given of time and place of future meeting.

Lost Sight Of.

I have three brothers that I have lost sight of—namely, James D. Holland, Ebenezer H. Holland, and Elijah Holland. If anyone will inform me of their whereabouts, I will be very thankful. My postoffice is Stonewall, Harrison county, Miss.

Wine for the Lord's Table.

But the question arises, How came about the general use of such a liquid during all these centuries? Just how far back we can not trace. I believe it to have originated in that dark period of the church's history immediately following the practical union of the heathen and Christian Churches under Constantine. That a general decline from apostolic doctrine and practice then took place, is admitted by all. The priesthood became notable for their excess in wine, etc. Attempts to trace the custom back to an earlier period have egregiously failed. The chief fathers in the second, third, and fourth centuries, who have been quoted as indorsing intoxicating wine, wrote simply against substituting water or milk for "wine." We have shown above that wine means unfermented as much as it does fermented "juice of the grape." When after the lapse of the "dark ages" Luther and his coadjutors undertook reformation, they found so much wrong doctrine on vital questions that it is not wondorful they should have overlooked this. When we consider how careless most church officials have become about unleavened bread for the sacrament, using little blocks of baker's yeast-bread oftener than anything else, simply for convenience, it is easy to see how a similar, or greater, convenience in regard to wine would determine their course. No one, Jew or Christian, believes that Christ used at the Passover leavened bread as a symbol of his body, pure from all defilement. And yet lack of regard for the fitness of things, in this solemn type, has thoughtlessly placed such bread there thousands of times—oftener than the other, the true symbol. St. Paul condemns the drunken way in which the Corinthians sometimes made a mock celebration of this holy rite. He says this is not to celebrate the Lord's death. This proves nothing on either side. The whole transaction is sufficiently condemned to make us certain it is no pattern of heavenly things. Yet this passage (I. Cor. xi, 17-34) has been relied upon as "settling the question" by some of the chief and most distinguished advocates of strong drink for this sacred use. Add to this the fact that four-fifths of the liquid purchasable at this day as fermented wine is not, in any sense, the "fruit of the vine," but poisonous drugs and pigments well mixed with water, and stained with logwood; while a genuine grape juice, untainted with alcoholic and other poisons, can be easily procured by a little forethought. Surely in a matter of such gravity as the due and proper observance of this holy rite, we ought to be considerate beforehand.

But the church of God is awaking on this subject. Its direct and influential bearing on the great question of temperance has arrested the attention of that noble band—the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. All its leading spirits have adopted the view I here put forth. To such cultured and devout souls as Miss Willard, we owe much of the present awakening. The Methodist Church (North), one of the grandest and most intelligent branches of the Christian Church, through its General Conference, ordains that only "pure juice of the grape" shall be used for sacramental purposes. I have lately learned that a similar stand has been taken by that extra-conservative body, the Church of England, and also by the United Presbyterians of America. More than three years ago our Mississippi Conference resolved that we use this kind when procurable. There was then mighty opposition. At our session, two years later, without a dissenting voice, we passed the following:

"Resolved, That in a country like this, where unfermented wine may be readily procured, there is no necessity for the use of intoxicating liquor in the celebration of the Lord's Supper; and that such, or any other, use of intoxicating liquor ought to be forever discontinued."

The sentiment is growing rapidly, and the day draws nigh when we shall all wonder how we could have put such a sword into our enemy's hand. God speed it!—J. P. Drake, in Nashville Advocate.

P. S.—Since the above was written (December, 1888), our Mississippi Conference has renewed its recommendation of the use of unfermented wine in slightly altered language. Further experience has confirmed me in the belief that it is best for small congregations to procure the wine in half-pint bottles, to avoid waste or danger of reproach by fermentation of what is kept over. This size can be had here (Shubuta, Miss.) for twenty-two cents per bottle. It costs much less than that small sum to manufacture and preserve it from native purple or black grapes.

Notice.

During my absence in May my appointments on the Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, will be filled as follows:

At Pleasant Valley, on the Bowerton circuit, May 10, 11, by Rev. Dr. T. S. West, of Wesson. At Georgetown, on the Providence circuit, May 17, 18, by Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, of Crystal Springs. At Mt. Hermon, on the Franklinton circuit, May 24, 25, by Rev. B. S. Rayner, of McComb City.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Miss.

Notice.

It has been officially announced that, owing to conditions growing out of the floods in the delta, Greenville will not be able to entertain the North Mississippi Conference, next fall. As soon as this was known, the official Board in Grenada met, and were unanimous in their request that the Conference be held in Grenada. We would be glad to entertain it.

J. E. THOMAS, P. C.

General Conference Notice.

The committee appointed at the last session of the General Conference "to negotiate for railroad rates and hotel fares," in the plan adopted for its entertainment, has performed that service, omitting no effort and sparing no pains to fulfill the commission entrusted to it. The undersigned were delegated, respectively, to conduct negotiations with railway companies, and to provide for the entertainment of delegates, and other arrangements for the session of the Conference at St. Louis, and with authority to appoint a local committee. The following announcements may suffice for all present need of information, but, if there may be need of further information, it can be obtained by addressing the office at St. Louis.

The session will be held in the main audience-room of the Centenary Church, located at the corner of 16th and Pine Sts., and will be opened on May 7, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Entertainment has been provided at hotels, within convenient distance of the Conference-room, at reduced rates, and by private hospitality. Delegates will each receive notice, before leaving home, of routes and rates of travel and of the location of their home in St. Louis, with directions how to reach it on arrival. The reduced rates, both of transportation and board, are available to the families of delegates. All bona fide visitors are entitled to reduced rates of travel, but not of board. They may obtain information of the location and rates of board at hotels and private boarding-houses, at the office of the local committee in St. Louis, by applying in person or by correspondence.

Arrangements for transportation have been made with nearly all the railways within the bounds of the connection, and with all most used.

Attention is called to the fact that in most cases a rate of one fare for the round trip has been secured, especially from territory from which the larger number of delegates is expected.

In territory from which but few delegates were expected, the roads hardly felt justified in making less rate than fare and one-third, which is all that could properly be expected.

Where rates are named as being applicable on the certificate plan, the passenger pays full fare in going to the meeting, and secures a certificate-receipt therefor from the ticket agent, by request, at time of purchase. This certificate, when properly filled out and signed by the Rev. T. M. Finney, at the Conference, will be honored for return ticket over the same road between same points, either free (if rate is named as one fare for the round trip), or at one-third the regular limited tariff fare (if rate is named as one and one-third fare for the round trip).

Where the journey is made over more than one line, it may be necessary for the passenger to purchase separate local ticket and procure certificate-receipt therefor for each of the lines over which he travels in going to the meeting. Passengers should, therefore, ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of their journey can be covered by the certificate procurable of him, and purchase tickets and secure certificates filled in accordingly. Failure to procure or present certificate invalidates any claim for reduction in return fare.

Certificates will not be honored for return tickets later than May 31.

Public mention is due of the ready favor and liberality with which our application to railway officials and hotel proprietors has been met, and of which, no doubt, it will be the pleasure of the General Conference to make suitable acknowledgment.

—Rev. R. M. Blocker, Crowley, La.: "The Acadia College, located at this place—with Prof. T. C. Cherry, president—has enrolled 123 pupils, and is doing a good work. My young preacher, Thomas Carter, has arrived, and is moving off well."

—Rev. W. M. Alfred writes as follows: "Would it be admissible to say through your 'paper' that while my stay in Monroe, as pastor of the Baptist Church, has been short, it is exquisitely pleasant; made so largely by the pleasant association of Bro. Thomas J. Upton and his amiable wife; also Bro. Harper, presiding elder, and his companion? We have labored together in prayer meetings and other religious gatherings—all of which has been pleasant. Our social meetings in his home and mine have been of the most pleasant character. And last, but not least, we exchange our 'State organs,' Baptist Chronicle and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I am delighted with the ADVOCATE on the Lottery question. That was, indeed, a 'Hannibal' in the last issue. Give us more of the honey if you will 'cut' it that way."

√—Rev. N. B. Young writes us from Mt. Carmel, Miss.: "We are moving on smoothly. I closed a two years' term on this work, seventeen years ago last December. Our first quarterly meeting has been held. Bro. Cooper, our presiding elder, was on hand doing efficient work in the pulpit and in the chair. We are praying and working for good results this year."

—Rev. R. A. Burroughs writes from Okolona station, North Mississippi Conference: "We have just moved into the new parsonage, and are beginning to feel at home. We have one of the best parsonages in North Mississippi, and the good ladies are furnishing it with everything necessary for housekeeping. We are praising the Lord for the success we are having here. Much interest is manifested here in the church; good prayer meeting and one of the best Sunday-schools to be found; congregations good. We are praying and hoping for a revival that will sweep sin out of Okolona and save the people. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis, Campbellsville, Miss., reports: "Sunflower circuit lands are now subjacent by water. We have been submerged for ten or more days. Yesterday and to-day, cool, cloudy and raining. There are several crevasses above us. It is hoped that the flood has reached us, as the water had just about checked before the present rain. Now the water is crescent. Should there be no more crevasses, we expect the water soon to recede. While the disaster has caused my people to be somewhat melancholy, thank God, I still preach to very good congregations. Should the rains continue for a few days, God only knows what the result will be. Health very good. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. R. Whittington, writing from East Feliciana, says: "I have made it a point on my work (which is extensive) to find out how my people stood as to the Louisiana Lottery, and I find that they are unanimous, with one exception, against this great fraud. I have interrogated people of other denominations, who all seem to favor its suppression. I spoke to a Baptist brother, a preacher, as to his status; he said he was heartily opposed to it. My people are very active in securing names to the different leagues. My work is moving along nicely. I have set the time for my meetings, and, as this is your old home, would like to have you to come up and rusticate and help us in our meeting at Olive Branch, commencing the third Sunday in August. The people would be glad to see you. I am now closing my fourth round. My congregation is good and attentive, and we are praying and looking forward for great refreshings from the good Lord. I send you another name for the ADVOCATE, which makes twenty-five to date—renewals and new subscribers. I started out for one hundred names. Do not know whether I will get that many or not. But I do know that it is a great help to the cause of Christ and the preacher where any religious paper is taken and read by the masses."

—Rev. N. J. Roberts, Utica charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We have just closed a Holy Ghost revival, which continued nearly three weeks. The number of conversions not known. Thirty-five additions, and the church has been greatly revived. Twenty children baptized, new family altars erected, an increase of more than thirty in the Sunday-school. It is acknowledged by the people of Utica, even by members of other denominations, that we have had one of the best meetings ever held in Utica. Bro. J. A. B. Jones was with us most of the time, preaching to the delight of the people. He did most of the preaching, and it was with great power, God blessing every sermon to the salvation of souls. Bro. Anders, of Hattiesburg, was with us a few days of the meeting, and put in some of his best work. He knows what to say, and when to say, to get hold of men. During the District Conference, which lasted two days, we had good sermons from Bros. A. F. Watkins, R. J. Jones, W. E. Bradley and our worthy presiding elder, J. A. Ellis; God honoring every sermon to the salvation of souls. Bro. L. S. Jones came to my assistance on Wednesday, the last week of the meeting, and remained until the close, preaching twice a day. He is a consecrated, deeply pious preacher, and uses the sword of the Spirit with great power. Many thanks, brethren, to one and all, for your earnest work. We thank God and take courage."

Red-Hot Anti Literature!

A movement is now on foot to start a series of publications in New Orleans, to be known as the "Crescent City Anti Series." They are to be Anti-Lottery, Anti-Whisky, Anti-Monopoly, Anti-Sin, and Anti-Devil in character, and Red-Hot in disposition. No favors will be asked from the evils that threaten the speedy destruction of our social and religious systems, and none will be shown.

The first number of the series (to be out May 15) will be "Red-Hot Anti-Lottery." It will contain two addresses by the Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., with an addenda of facts, figures, home thrusts, etc., that will make it particularly interesting to the enemies of the La. S. L., and peculiarly horrifying to its friends. It will contain 100 12mo pages, sixteen full-page illustrations, novel and very striking.

The series will be issued quarterly, will be nearly uniform in style and size, and will be furnished to subscribers at $1 per year, or 25 cents a number.

Subscriptions should be sent at once, with cash; or they can be ordered through any preacher or newsdealer.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. 25c. a bottle.

GRATUITOUS ADVICE.

This species of advice is not always acceptable, but in many instances much benefit would be derived were it acted upon. No section of the country is exempt from disease. To know the best means of combatting this common enemy, with the least injury to our pockets and bodies, is certainly a great advantage. We must expect Torpid Liver, Congested Spleen, Vitiated Bile and Inactive Bowels, and all prudent persons will supply themselves with Tutt's Pills, which stimulate the Liver, relieve the engorged Spleen, determine a healthy flow of bile, thus regulating the bowels and causing all unhealthy secretions to pass off in a natural manner. A Model Biography of a Model Man.

Now Ready for Delivery to Subscribers:

Life of Bishop Simpson,
OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.
By GEO. R. CROOKS, D. D.

The early years of Simpson's life are described in a modest and charming style by the Bishop himself. It was fortunate that he was led to do this. Otherwise much that he has written of his boyhood days would have been lost, and we should have missed some very entertaining chapters. The story of how this awkward, bashful young man finally made his way to the topmost round of pulpit fame is a captivating one. His autobiography shows us how unpromising the beginnings were; but for His successors we must depend on the full and glowing descriptions which his diligent biographer has gathered from various sources and woven together with true literary and dramatic skill.

Our Young People.

ONLY A BOY.

I am only a boy, with a heart light and free;
I am brimming with mischief and frolic and glee;
I dance with delight, and I whistle and sing,
And you think such a boy never cares for a thing.

Now oft when I've worked hard at piling the wood,
Have done all my errands and tried to be good,
I think I might then have a rest or a play
But how shall I manage? Can anyone say?

If I start for a stroll, it is "keep off the street!"
If I go to the house, it is "Mercy! what feet!"
If I take a seat, 'tis "There give me that chair!"
If I bounce on a window, 'tis "Don't loiter there!"

If I ask a few questions, 'tis "Don't bother me!"
Or else, "Such a torment! never did see!"
I am scolded or cuffed if I make the least noise,
Till I think in this wide world there's no place for boys.

At school they are shocked if I want a good play;
At home or at church, I am so in the way;
And it's hard, for I don't see that boys are so to blame.
And most any boy, too, will say just the same.

Of course, a boy can't know as much as a man,
But we try to do right just as hard as we can.
Have the patience, dear people, though oft we annoy,
For the best man on earth once was "only a boy."

A Great Oak.

"Nelson Drummond is a great oak," Hans Krug, the wholesale grocer of Liberty street, said to his wife one evening. "If there's anybody of my acquaintance ever sprung from a little acorn, he has. Who would have prophesied ten years ago, when we first saw Nelson—a little ragged lad of ten—that he could ever rise to the position he holds to-day? No one would have imagined such a thing. There he was, poor and neglected, the child of a poor drinking father and a weak mother."

"But I can't see why you call him a great oak," said Mrs. Krug, with some curiosity. "The fact that he is going to be your private secretary isn't saying that he's a wonderfully brilliant 'light,' is it?"

"Well, that depends on what you have to say concerning a little story I am about to tell you. I've just found out that Hiram Gardner offered Nelson three hundred dollars a year more than I offered, if he would give me the slip, but the great-hearted young fellow replied, 'No; I have promised Hans Krug, and I wouldn't break my word for any money.'"

"That sounds good."

"'Sounds good!' It is good. He shall not lose by it, either. I saw old Drummond to-day, and I hardly knew him, he looked so neat and respectable; he's reformed, you know, and is working at his trade. I spoke to him about Nelson's being engaged to me, and I wish you could have seen and heard him. His eyes filled with tears as he said, with a trembling voice, 'That boy—our boy—is one of a thousand. I can't just understand it, but he's been climbing up slow and steady, and he's put a new lease of life in his old mother and father, some way, bless him! We've left our bad ways, and are trying to follow after our Master.' What do you think of that, wife?"

The bell rang.

"You'd better turn down your trousers, husband; it doesn't add to your good looks to have them tucked up above your boots," Mrs. Krug said, hastily.

"I've been wading through the mud—Why, how do you do, Nelson? Come right into this room."

Mr. Krug led the way into his cozy study, a delightful little room, but rather disorderly, as Mr. Krug seemed to enjoy throwing his books around the floor. Nelson Drummond mentally resolved that henceforth the room should be kept in apple-pie order."

"Now, my boy," said Mr. Krug, cheerily, as soon as the study door was shut, "I want you to tell me who ever started you climbing up?"

"'Climbing up,' sir?"

"Yes. Who helped you on the first round?"

"The Master, sir," he answered respectfully.

"How? When?"

"A long time ago I slipped into a church, and I heard the minister read, 'What's that to thee? Follow thou me.' He explained what it meant; and when I got back home and saw all the wickedness around me, I resolved to rise above it; I, too, would follow. This, sir," taking a small Bible from his pocket, "has helped me to climb—has helped me to become a fisher of men."

"Eh? What's that? 'A fisher of men?'"

Nelson turned to the first chapter of the gospel of Mark, and read, "'Now, as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they forsook their nets and followed him.'"

"Is that in the Bible? Let me see. Oh! the print's too fine! Here, find it in this," and Mr. Krug took from a shelf a larger Bible, dusty, as if seldom disturbed.

Nelson found the passage, and Hans Krug read it aloud: then he said slowly, but earnestly: "And so that's the secret of your success, is it? As you climb up the ladder, you don't forget that others ought to be climbing too, and you give them a lift at every opportunity. Not a bad idea, that!"—Forward.

MR. EDITOR: As I see so many letters from this State, but have never seen one from this vicinity, I will attempt to write one. I delight so much in reading your much-prized paper. My mother teaches this school, and I have been studying under her instruction this year. Children, you may imagine that she is strict. If you don't, just visit me this next session and attend school with me, and you can be convinced. I am only sixteen years old, and have only a common public school education. I anticipated attending the college at Columbus, but had some providential hindrances. I am studying now, Robinson's Practical and Mental Arithmetics, Swinton's Advanced United States History, Reed's and Kellogg's Higher Lessons in English Orthography. Robinson's Algebra, Smith's Physiology, Steele's New Physics, and I have finished geography. All children who are situated like myself, and whose father died while they were young, should not be discouraged. There yet may be a bright ray of sunshine that shall lighten up their future. I have no pets, like some of the children. I had a white kitten, but it has wandered away from me and gone somewhere to try the realities of an unknown home. I belong to the Farmers' Alliance. I also belong to the Methodist Church; but I like very much to hear the Baptist preach. Bro. Lovett is our pastor this year, and I like him so much. I have four sisters and two brothers. I am the youngest of the girls; but I have a brother younger than myself. I like to go a-fishing, but there is no good fishing grounds here. I will conclude my uninteresting letter by asking, Where and how many times does the word "reverend" occur in the Bible? I am,

Your well wisher and friend,
DELANIE MABEN.

ANDING, Miss.

A BOY'S TEMPTATIONS.—You have heard of the old castle that was taken by a single gun. The attacking force had only one gun, and it seemed hopeless to try to take the castle; but one soldier said, "I will show you how we can take the castle," and he pointed the cannon to one spot and fired, and went on all day, never moving the cannon. About nightfall there were a few grains of sand knocked off the wall. He did the same thing the next day and the next. By-and-by the stones began to come away, and by steadily working his gun for one week he made a hole in that castle big enough for the army to walk through. Now, with a single gun firing away at every boy's life, the devil is trying to get in at one opening. Temptation is the practice of the soul, and if you never have any temptation you will never have any practice. A boy that attends fifty drills in a year is a much better soldier than the one that only drills twice. Do not quarrel with your temptations; set yourself resolutely to face them.

Household.

A Little Story.

Four stalwart men sat around the fire in the old homestead in Connecticut. They had come home for a family reunion, bringing their wives with them. They were all on the bright side of thirty-five, and altogether a "very likely" set—honest, upright, industrious, Christian. Their mother, a vigorous woman for her years, welcomed them, and could not do enough for them to make their home-coming pleasant. Their father had been many years dead.

One of the daughters-in-law, in moving around the room, paused at the window to look out on the landscape. It was snowing heavily, but there was no wind. Across the road that ran past the house she saw a big wood-pile, and at the wood-pile was a woman using the ax. She looked more closely; it could not be her husband's mother! She looked again through the blinding flakes. Yes, certainly it was the mother of these four stalwart men.

She crossed the room to where her husband was sitting, led him to the window, pointed toward the wood-pile, only saying:

"John, look at your mother!"

John quickly got his hat and went to his mother's aid, while his wife pondered on what had made her wonder through many years. John was kind, true, a "good provider," a just man; but he allowed his wife, unless she protested against it, to bring in the wood, to split the kindling, to wade through the snow in hanging out her clothes, to do any kind of hard, rough work she would do, while he sat quietly by the fire and saw her do it.

She had trained him, in a measure, to do his part of the chores and relieve her, and when she saw his old mother splitting wood in the snow-storm, rather than call on her sons to do it, she understood how her troubles had come about. The mother had not brought up her boys to be considerate and helpful, and to do their part in the general work of the household.—Exchange.

A TRUE WIFE.—It is not to sweep the house, make the beds, darn the socks and cook the meals chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all he needs, a servant can do it cheaper than a wife. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a lady, send him into the pantry to taste the bread and cake she has made; send him to inspect the needlework and bed-making; or put a broom in her hand and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quickly look after them. But what the true young man wants with a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and a man needs a wife to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortunes; he meets with failures and defeat; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has some hard battles to fight with poverty, enemies and sin, and he needs a woman that when he puts his arm around her, he feels he has something to fight for; she will help him to fight; she will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand to his heart and impart inspiration. All through life, through storm and through sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and through favoring winds, man needs a woman's love.—The Lady.

PEOPLE FRET TOO MUCH ABOUT TRIFLES.—Women find a sea of trouble in their housekeeping. Some one says they often put as much worry and anxiety into a loaf of bread, a pie, a cake, into the weekly washing and ironing, as should suffice for much weightier matters. Suppose these things go wrong to-day; the to-morrows are coming in which to try again, and the thing is not worth clouding your own spirit and those around you, injuring yourself and them physically—for the mind affects the body—and for such a trifle. When a thing is beyond repair, waste no useless regrets over it and do no idle fretting. Strive for that serenity of spirit that will enable you to make the best of all things. That means contentment in its best sense.—Scientific American.

The only reliable vegetable substitute for calomel, which acts on the liver, blood, kidneys and stomach, and best anti-bilious purgative is Maguire's Cundurango. Endorsed by Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia; Rev. McNally, of St. Louis, and a host of prominent people.

Fire.

What is fire? We fancy that few persons could answer this question off-hand, although the phenomenon of combustion is perfectly familiar to everyone. The ancients considered fire to be one of the primitive elements, like the earth, air, and water,—all of which last we now know to be compound and not elementary substances,—and this idea of an elementary fiery principle survived under the names of phlogiston, caloric, etc., down to the time of Lavoisier, and was not entirely overthrown until after the beginning of the present century.

We have, in the preceding paragraph, spoken of fire as a phenomenon, and that is exactly what it is. Fire is not a substance; it is not even an immaterial force, like light or heat; but, as generally understood, is simply the sensible phenomena of light and heat resulting from an intense chemical reaction—generally, but not always, a process of oxidation. We may dissolve a piece of zinc in sulphuric acid, by itself, or do the same when it forms a pole of a galvanic battery; or we may heat it until it bursts into flame. In all these cases the process is a similar one,—that of oxidation,—but fire accompanies the process only in the last. There the oxidation takes glance so rapidly that the heat set free is not only sufficient to be detected by our nerves of sensation, but the resulting particles of zinc oxide are heated to such a degree that they become luminous. So if finely divided metallic iron is exposed to the air, it gradually absorbs oxygen and is converted into rust. But if the same iron is ignited with a match, it takes fire, becomes luminous, smoulders away like a glowing coal, and is soon converted into a similar oxide, or rust. Just as much heat is set free in one case as in the other, the only difference being in the rapidity of its development, which determines whether or not it shall become evident to our senses. When hydrogen and oxygen gases are burned together, as in the oxhydrogen blow-pipe, the resulting flame, although one of the hottest known to us, is almost invisible, and to the eye alone there is no appearance of fire; but introduce a piece of metal, or a lump of lime, or other refractory substance, and the brilliant luminous phenomena at once indicate the intensity of the chemical combination which is taking place.

Fire is not always dependent upon a process of oxidation. A mixture of iron filings and flowers of sulphur is readily ignited, forming ferrous sulphide; and sodium, potassium, copper, and some other metals readily burn in the vapor of boiling sulphur, giving rise to the same igneous manifestations as when they combine with oxygen. Nitrous oxide, or laughing gas, also supports combustion, although the reaction is one of true oxidation, the same as with pure oxygen or air.—Popular Science News.

Two cases of a singular ailment called "mind blindness" were recently described in Archives of Psychology. In the first a man of eighty had complained for a month of inability to find his way about, to tell his own position in a room, and to recognize objects, although his perception of light was scarcely impaired. Although he could not recognize objects by looking at them, he at once perceived and named them by means of tactile or auditory impressions from them. He could not read, but he could write. Perception and discrimination of colors in this case were preserved. In the second case the onset was sudden. At first visual memory only was impaired; but the patient soon failed to recognize objects, even when he touched, tasted, or heard them. Color sense was lost on both sides.

I, A. C. Hafflefinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

FOR DYSPEPSIA
Use Brown's Iron Bitters.
Physicians recommend it.
All dealers keep it. $1.00 per bottle. Genuine has trade-mark and crossed red lines on wrapper.

COWARD—JAMES COWARD was born in England, January 8, 1859, came to America in 1872; died at Percy's Creek, Miss., October 22, 1889.

He was born of the Holy Spirit about 1880, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and led a consistent Christian life till called to a higher, nobler sphere. The writer enjoyed the hospitality and lived beneath the roof-tree of Bro. Coward for two years. He was both friend and brother to me; bestowed the faithful service of the one and freely manifested the love of the other. He was a friend in need. It is truly sad to realize that he has "gone to the grave." How deeply we deplore the departure of so true and noble a friend! So many deeds of kindness were done by him in the name of the Master; yet one hand knew not the doing of the other, and both were sowing for the Savior. To the very "least of these" he "did it" as "unto him," and these tokens of pure Christian love and sympathy are gratefully treasured by this itinerant who regards them as something precious—made sacred by his touch—savoring not of that charity which vaunteth itself, but that which was Christ-like.

Love to the Savior is the essence of Christianity. Love is the solvent of all wrong, the cement of all society. It bloomed in the heart and beautified by its presence the life and death of our departed friend and brother.

Here let me say to loved ones left behind: They who have love for Christ will follow him wherever he goes. If we love the Savior, his cross will be dearer than the crown of Cæsar, and any suffering will be sweet rather than the sacrifice of what we believe to be his mind and will. The path we tread, however rough, will feel smooth, and a wreath of thorns around his brow will be dearer than the brightest diadem. Love smoothes the way, illuminates the cloud and kindles in the darkest night the bright beams that are the dawn of a sun of glory that shall know no setting. May Christ, the "Sun of Righteousness, arise with healing in his wings," and send the "Comforter" to bind up the broken heart of the aged mother and pour the oil of joy and wine of consolation into the wound of the grief-stricken wife. May he, in accents sweeter than angelic voices can pronounce, whisper in the ear of the disconsolate mourner the glad music of the gospel: "Let not your heart be troubled." "It is I; be not afraid." Fear not death, for I have taken away its sting; fear not eternity, for the Lamb is its light. "I go to prepare a place for you." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

WHILOM PASTOR.

WALKER—Dr. W. L. WALKER, son of John M. Walker, was born in Marengo county, Ala., October 22, 1834. He removed from Greene county, where he had been brought up, to Macon, Miss., about 1856, and thence to Chickasaw county. He was married to Miss Jannett Moffat, May 4, 1858. He died in Houston, Miss., where he had lived for thirty-two years, March 14, 1890. In all the relations of life Dr. Walker was a man of unflinching integrity. He was, because of his mental powers and moral stamina, capable of filling almost any position. He was a man of large experience, liberal spirit and broad views, and filled many important positions, and always magnified the office rather than the man. As a citizen he was patriotic and public-spirited, and was ever ready to contribute his influence and means for the public good.

He volunteered in the late war, and before leaving home was elected first lieutenant, and later was elected captain, and then promoted, first, to major, and then to lieutenant-colonel. As a soldier, he was brave, but not reckless, always commanding the highest respect and admiration of his comrades. Notwithstanding the peculiar surroundings of soldier life, his war record is clear and unimpeachable.

He occupied no mean position as a physician, for by energy, so characteristic in all his relations, he rose to an enviable place in his profession. He was in this relation, as in every other, gentlemanly and courteous. He was kind to the poor, and many will rise up in the last day and call him blessed.

He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when quite a boy, and while he was not so active during the intermediate years of his life, since 1872 he has been faithful and true. For a number of years he was a steward, and was always anxious to devise liberally for the support of the institutions of the church. He was liberal beyond his ability. As a Christian, he was not demonstrative, but constant and consistent. He died as he lived, a Christian, in full hope of a blessed immortality.

In his own family circle, where he was so genial and affable, he will be greatly missed. His death is a great loss to his family, the church, the community, and to the medical profession. He leaves a wife, nine children, three sisters, and two brothers, one of whom is Rev. John Walker, of the North Alabama Conference, to mourn their loss. May God comfort them!

HESLEP R. TUCKER.

CAMPBELL—We, the undersigned committee appointed by the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school at Fayette, Miss., to draft resolutions expressive of our sorrow and respect for our departed friend, Miss MAMIE T. CAMPBELL, respectfully submit the following:

It is impossible for a child of the Most High to doubt the love and mercy of the heavenly Father, however mysterious his method of executing the decrees of his divine wisdom—however sorely he wounds our hearts by removing from us our beloved ones, and by other seeming afflictions—we must force our rebellious hearts to accept the present dispensation as the result of his foresight into the world of unborn time; and it is with submission to his will that we bid farewell to the sweet spirit of our sister. Her pure, lovely face will never be replaced in our midst. Her young life, so rapidly developing into usefulness in the Master's cause, will ever be sadly missed.

We are consoled and encouraged to labor ourselves more diligently by the hope of a reunion with her in heaven. And since he so loved her as to call her home before she became wearied with the long journey of life, and inasmuch as this Sabbath-school has lost one who was most devoted to her Master's work, proving already her great usefulness by becoming one of our teachers and Sunday-school secretary, performing her duties with fidelity and zeal; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of our loved sister and friend this Sunday-school has lost one of its most useful members, whose beautiful life and triumphant death assure us that our loss is heaven's gain.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to her afflicted parents, feebly expressing our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, with the prayer that God may sustain them, with the blissful assurance of a reunion in the home beyond.

REBECCA CARRADINE,
For Committee.

FOSTER—FELIX JAMES FOSTER was born in the State of Tennessee, October 19, 1845. While a youth he moved to Mississippi, where he remained till his death, which occurred March 6, 1890.

He was an acceptable member of the Methodist Church, and died expressing a firm belief in the Christian's reward and happiness in heaven. He was a quiet, unpretentious man, but of remarkable industry and energy, and was esteemed by all an honest man, a useful citizen and a kind, loving husband. He was colporteur for the American Bible Society nearly seventeen years, and ranked among its most successful workers. He made it a point in his career never to converse with a person, at any length, until he first ascertained the condition of their soul. The hardest and most obstinate sinner he would rebuke and exhort to holiness of heart. His earnest prayers and tear-stained cheeks, while sitting in the pew, was a source of much comfort to the minister. But God, in his providence, saw fit to call him to his reward in heaven. As his mortal life was being extinguished, visible expressions of his soul's grasp on God were clearly and forcibly demonstrated. His last end was peace.

J. C. MIMMS.

TADLOCK—Mrs. EMMA WEAVER TADLOCK, wife of Robert Tadlock, was born December 25, 1858, in Kemper county, Miss.; died February 18, 1890. She was a devout member of the Methodist Church for ten years, and only a short while ago she was seized by that dread disease, consumption. The angel of death knocked at the door of her heart. She recognized the summons, and said: "Dear pastor, God knows I am ready to answer his call. Christ, the blessed Savior, died for me and robbed death of its terrors. I rejoice in the hope of the glory of God.' I shall see my Savior and dwell with him in the mansions of light." She said she had only one regret in leaving this world, and that was in leaving her dear husband and children.

Her life had a glorious setting. When the final summons came she startled the dear watchers around her bedside with a loud shout of, "Hallelujah! Deliverance has come!" With that, her spirit left her body, was borne on seraphs' wings, ushered into the presence of the world's Redeemer and introduced into the circles of heaven's inimitable society. May the grace of God rest upon the sorrowing family in their bereavement! is the prayer of their PASTOR.

On Advertising.

There seems to be an unwarrantable objection to some minds, mostly medical minds, to paid advertising upon certain kinds of paper. All matters of this kind are decided by reference to the "Code of Ethics." This, as we shall see, though, in many respects, strict, is sometimes quite elastic in others. For example, they are permitted to advertise upon tin and other metals, bricks, stone, wood, and cardboard. They are allowed to put out and pay for their signs, and scatter their professional cards with liberal hand. They may write books, which are sold at a high price, giving a full account of their wonderful cures, always by way of illustration, and interesting details as to patients' age, height, complexion, temperature, temperament, respiration, and domestic affairs. But this is not considered "advertising." Their contributions to medical journals, describing, with appalling accuracy of detail, the cases they have cured, are copied gratis by the newspapers. But all this is within the code.

We have often given our views on this subject and defined our position. As the public do not seem to share this prejudice to any alarming extent, we simply point to what has been accomplished by our Compound Oxygen Treatment in chronic cases, and those given over by physicians, and add, that over 1,000 physicians are using it in their practice, and taking it themselves. But you will find it all, evidence, records and descriptions of cases, proof irresistible and convincing, in our book, sent free. Address Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

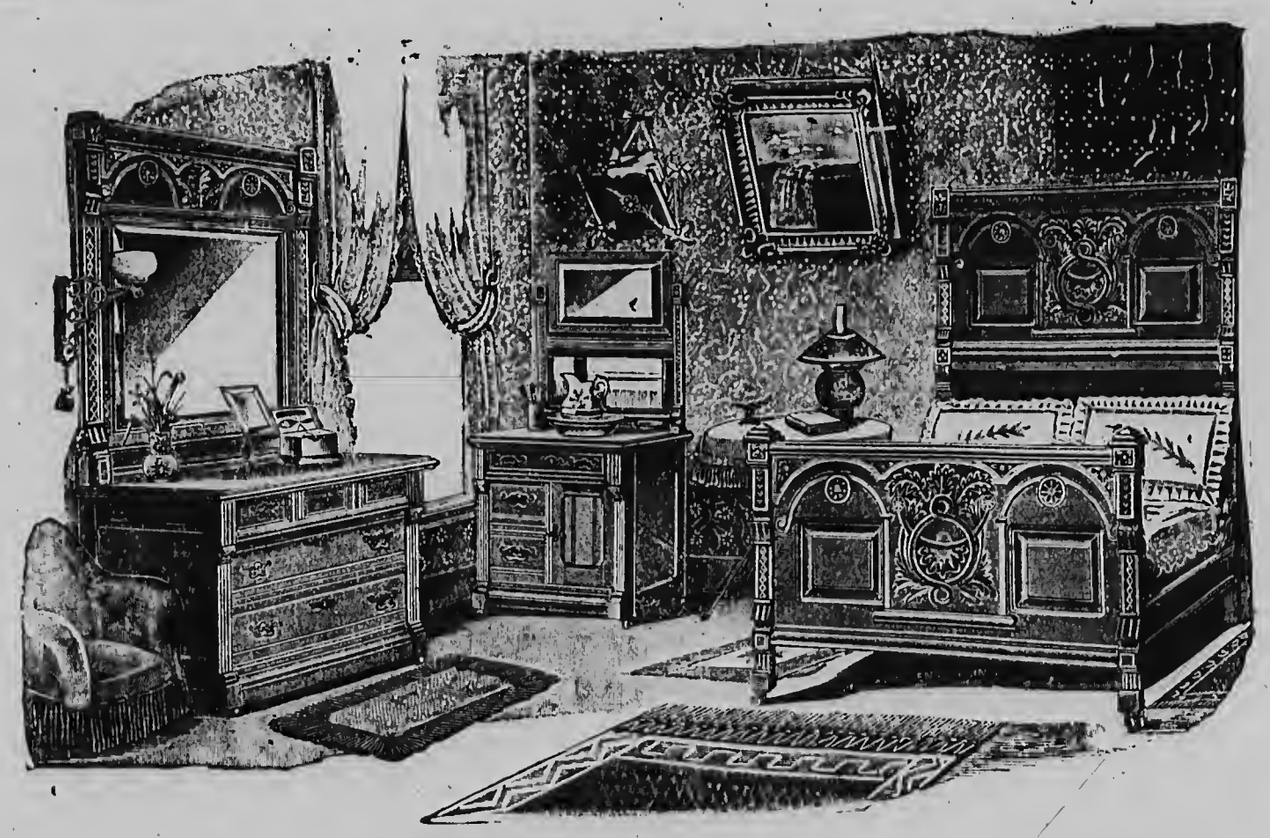
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $10 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A bill was passed in Congress, on April 25, for the relief of the flood sufferers. The bill provides that the sum of $150,000 be appropriated and expended under direction of the secretary of War, for the purchase and distribution of subsistence stores to such destitute persons as may require assistance in the district overflowed by the Mississippi river and its tributaries by the recent flood, and the secretary of War is authorized to use steamers and other boats and vessels now employed by the government upon the Mississippi river and its tributaries in the transportation and distribution of the supplies furnished by the United States or individuals to and among said destitute and suffering people.

Mr. Blanchard has offered a bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi river from the head of the passes to the mouth of the Ohio, which sum shall be made immediately available and shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in accordance with the plans, specifications and recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission.

A grave objection to the bounty feature of the sugar schedule that is being urged in Washington is that it allows no bounty on sugar that does not polarize at 85 degrees, and much of the Louisiana sugar is below that point. It is thought very probable now that the McKinley bill will never become a law, as the Republican Senators have different views on the subject and are preparing a bill of their own.

Captain Cowden had a hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee, April 25, on the preposition to give the Mississippi river on outlet into Lake Borgne.

The American Federation of Labor, representing 500,000 members of various trades, has resolved to inaugurate the eight-hour movement on May 1. Those trades unions in condition for such a course will initiate the strike, and others will follow in the movement, until it becomes general.

The Farmers' Alliance of Buchanan county, Mo., have subscribed $50,000 to start a bank, and are raising subscriptions to build a grain elevator at St. Joseph, in which they can store their wheat until they can get such price for it as they desire.

A cloudburst struck English, Ind., on April 27. The water rose rapidly and flooded the streets and many of the houses to a depth of four feet. Within fifteen minutes the water began to recede with a rapidity equal to its rise. Much damage was done to property in English and the surrounding country.

It is said that the worst part of the overflow on the Mississippi river is over. The crest of the flood is now passing into the Gulf, and the water is declining in all directions.

Representatives of nine of the American republics, on April 28, signed a formal treaty of arbitration in Secretary Blaine's office, at the Department of State, namely: the United States, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador, Honduras, Bolivia, Ecuador, Hayti, and the United States of Brazil.

It is said that a serious mistake was made by Congress in describing the geographical lines and boundaries of the new territory of Oklahoma. This will, doubtless, result in sending the bill back with a message from President Harrison pointing out the errors.

Senator Ingalls has introduced a bill granting a pension of $6 a month to all persons who served in the late war not less than three months nor more than one year; to those serving more than a year and not exceeding 800 days $8 a month; and those who served over 800 days one cent per diem for each day's service. No person who is worth $5,000 at the time of filing his application shall be entitled to this service pension.

FOREIGN.

Emin Pasha, the African explorer, has started for the interior with 600 porters, five German officers and a large body of Nubian soldiers.

The receipts of Egyptian cotton at Cairo this year exceeded those of 1889 by 500,000 cantars.

A French organ declares that the Emperor William is preparing to submit to President Carnot proposals for a reprochement, which would have been impossible while Prince Bismarck was in power.

The deficit in the Italian budget is estimated at 35,000,000 lire. The ministers have agreed upon a retrenchment of 20,000,000 lire in the expenditures for the army and navy.

It is evident from the tone of the English press generally that the English are very much disturbed over the new aspect of affairs in Africa. They daily give tokens of their perturbation, and though some of the government organs profess to minimize the African business and ridicule the idea that such a mild-mannered man as Emin will be able to supplant English endeavors, yet it is plain that genuine surprise and alarm has seized them.

The flower feast was celebrated in the City of Mexico on April 27. About 100,000 people assembled on the route of procession. In addition to nearly 500 unadorned carriages containing sight-seers, there were forty carriages adorned with flowers and ribbons, and fully 1,000 horsemen added gaiety to the scene. The quantity of flowers was enormous, four carriages coming from Jalapa alone.

The Austrian laborers are demanding advances of from 50 to 100 per cent. The committees of the various trades earnestly appeal to the men to preserve order during the parade on May day.

The Brazilian minister to Italy has been recalled because he failed to present to the Italian government the decree of his government forbidding Italian emigrants to enter Brazil.

A good appetite is essential to good health, and loss of appetite indicates something wrong. Hood's Sarsaparilla creates and sharpens the appetite, assists the digestive organs and regulates the kidneys and liver. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla this season. Sold by druggists.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

How I Got to Colorado.

Having read in several papers that they were giving away lots at Montrose, Colorado, I wrote and received the deed so promptly, that a large number of my friends at once sent, and after getting their deeds, they appointed me a delegate to visit Montrose. Through the courtesy of the Colorado Homestead and Improvement Co. I got a free ticket there and back. I had a lovely trip, and while there sold my lot for $127.50. Any person can get one lot absolutely free, by addressing the Colorado Homestead and Improvement Co., Montrose, Colorado, enclosing 25 cents for notary fee and postage. By giving every third lot, they will bring thousands of people there. Montrose, the county seat, is a railroad junction, and a beautiful city of nearly 3,000, and will have ten thousand within a year. Their motto is "Get There, Boys," and certainly free lots and free tickets are sure winners. When property can be obtained free, why should not everyone own real estate. S. S. N.

ELIZABETH, N. J.

REJOICE WITH TREMBLING.—We seem to stand by the Savior's broken sepulcher just as a man stands, upon the shelving brink of the precipice from which some friendly hand has snatched him, shuddering as he thinks of the awful death that he has only just escaped. Look, and see the place where the Lord lay, and tremble—but rejoice with trembling. Is the stone there yet? If it is—if the stone is not yet rolled away, if the grave-stones and spices yet shroud and embalm the corpse—then let the darkness come and blot out the sun, and bid a long, long good-night to all the world's hopes of life; for existence is a feverish dream, and death shall be its ghastly, but its welcome end. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept."—W. Morley Punshon.

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

Inventors of malicious and injurious reports, calculated to injure the foreign credit of Brazil, are threatened with punishment by the provisional government. Criticism of official acts is invited, and liberty of the press is guaranteed.

In the commercial circles in Holland the advisability is being discussed of common European action against American protection.

THE ANVIL OF GOD'S WORD.

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door
And heard the anvil ring, the vesper chime;
Then looking in I saw upon the floor
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"
"Just one," he answered; then, with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammer out, you know."

And so, I thought, the anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet, though the noise of falling blows was heard,
The anvil is unworn—the hammers gone.

A Divine Mosaic.

BY REV. JOEL T. DAVES.

Luther was given to calling little bits of God's Word "little Bibles." Sometimes a clause, a verse, a paragraph or short chapter contained so much of the divine mind—of beauty, love and power—that they were to him as the whole of revelation. Whether such an experience was ever reached before that of Luther's, we know not. But many have felt the same thing since, and many devout students of his Word will continue in the same experience, so long as there is a human life to be saved. God's world of nature is one complete whole, made up of many different things. All are alike, in their sphere and ministry, important and vital. The one thing, to the eye, most beautiful and, in the seeming, most necessary, does not detract from the value of the least; rather enhances its worth. And so it is sometimes that these "feeble folk" in creation tend to magnify the ministry of bigger things. But there is oneness, however, in all things—a perfect unity. And so it may be said of God's greater world of revelation. The devout reformer did not mean that these special "bits" of his Word were more necessary or vital than others. It was the special things in them, at special moments of devotion, that gave them such power over the life; that so inspired and filled the soul that their service had in them the richness and fullness of the one revelation. They became as "little Bibles." And so it is to-day, and so it will remain through time.

One such "little Bible" I write of to-day. It has been a mine of wealth to me in many ways, and for many years. I do not know that I can show the vein to others; but I may give such hints as will help some of the least studious of the Bible to find it, and, finding it, enter in and find a palace of beauty and a "joy forever." This "little Bible" to-day is Psalm xv. It has only five verses. But into this small space the Spirit has pressed so much that it becomes a living fountain. I can think of it only as a divine Mosaic. And yet these words sound earthly and weak. It is God's photograph, God's portrait—a species of supernatural limning—of the real Christian. The first verse has two questions, from man to God: "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" The first question has reference to time—"Who is a true member of the church on earth?" The second has reference to eternity—"Who will, as a result of membership here, be a member of thy eternal kingdom?" The two questions are one. "Who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" The tabernacle is the movable, temporary abiding-place of God. The "holy hill" is the eternal, immovable dwelling-place of God. The two questions are one. The first answered, answers the second. The true member of his earthly kingdom will be a member of his eternal kingdom. The kingdoms are one. We enter the eternal kingdom here below; it is the eternal kingdom let down to man. Still, the one question put in the form of two does not detract from, rather adds to, its strength and beauty. These two questions answered, meets all the demands of the human life. None other need to arise. The man knowing the answer to these, may be ignorant of "systematic theology," of all creeds, confessions, and doctrines; but will be wise unto salvation. And these two simple questions are the only ones asked by earnest men. They are the only ones that have ever been asked by the saved in heaven, or the saved on earth. They have been asked in different ways and from different standpoints; but are the same after all. All distinctions and differences are merged into one. Approaching from different ways, all meet at the common center at last. To this distinct and simple approach of man to God, God comes to man in as distinct and simple a way. He gives three answers. They are in three groups of threes. The first has reference to the man; the second to the man's neighbor; the third to God himself. The work begins in the man; it is continued through humanity; it ends in the divine. In a rhetorical sense, these answers are doubly climatrical—in the ascending scale. Each is climatrical in itself. The three forming the group are climatrical. The work, beginning in the man, is on the lowest scale. Continuing through his neighbor, reaches a higher statement; ending in God, reaches the end of all. The first trinity of things, in God's answer, refers to the man alone—in a distinctively personal way—as much so as if he was the only human being on the earth. It describes the only true life. First, "He that walketh uprightly;" secondly, "He that worketh righteousness;" thirdly, "He that speaketh the truth in his heart." Walketh, worketh, speaketh. The climax is apparent—from the lowest to the highest. Character is wrought out. The picture of a man of principle is painted. "Walking uprightly" is living justly; "working righteousness" is the upright living in practice; "speaking the truth in his heart"—not with his lips only, but in his heart—is the basis of the whole. Now, the man himself described, his neighbor is placed by his side. The second trinity, or group of threes, has reference to humanity. "He that backbiteth not with his tongue: nor doeth evil to his neighbor: nor take up a reproach against his neighbor." The climax is apparent—from the lowest to the highest. "Backbiting"—hiting the back—is the lowest and meanest grade of offense against the neighbor. "Doing evil"—injuring in fortune or property—comes next in grade. "Taking up a reproach"—receiving and carrying forward a reproach—rises higher in the grade of offense. The man is described; his action towards his neighbor revealed, and then follows the third group of threes, relating to God. First, "In whose eyes a vile person is contemned," as Mordecai contemned Haman; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord, though he be poor, ignorant, and powerless. "Who sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not," as Jephthah, vowing to his own hurt; but kept his word. Some see here the climax from the lowest to the highest—contemning the vile, honoring the upright, though the one has the power of life and death, and though the other be a powerless beggar, and being true to the word given, though it be the sacrifice of an only child.

The picture is a perfect one. It is in harmony with man's highest conception of the right. It meets all the demands of the life from every possible standpoint. Man's reason—the logic of his inner life—endorses all God says. The spirit of it is this: loving God with all the heart, and our neighbor as ourselves. This "is more than all whole burnt-offering." How different is man's answer to this question of men! He would begin where God ends. God ends where man begins. Nothing is said of baptism, or any other outward sign. The man being right in his own life, he is to be right with his neighbor, and then be right with God. All other things of the outward, professional life will take care of themselves. As if nothing should be lacking or misunderstood in the answer, two things are thrown in for good measure, in spirit embracing the nine preceding things, "He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent." "He that doeth these things shall never be moved"—in time or in eternity. "He shall abide in my tabernacle" while in this life. "He shall dwell in my holy hill" in eternity. He shall stand amidst storm and tempest, in trial and temptation. He shall die in peace, and reach home at last.

Sanctification.

BY R. CARRADINE, D. D.

Sanctification is a divine work wrought instantaneously.

We are not simply led, but driven to this conclusion. Sanctification certainly does not take place in eternity. Vain is the hope of purgatorial fires. Here on earth is the time and place of probation; here the Spirit strives and purifies, and here is the blood applied. There remaineth no more sacrifice for sin beyond the grave. The writer stood once in the Mechanics' Hall of the World's Exposition. Hundreds of workmen were busy in the midst of flying wheels and cutting saws, and all manner of instruments, in making and shaping different kinds of vessels. Suddenly the six o'clock bell sounded, and at once every wheel stopped, and saws became motionless, and all instruments were laid aside. The workmen put off their working garments and left the building. The Hall was closed and given up to silence and darkness; and I noticed that whatever was unfinished at the six o'clock bell remained unfinished. The complete was left complete, but the unfinished remained an incompleted, imperfect thing. It was a solemn illustration to me of spiritual things. So, I thought, are we being operated on by the instruments of God's grace. He is trying in life to perfect us, to make us holy. But the time is coming when life shall end, probation will be over forever, and eternity begin. The knell of death will be the signal; and when that happens, the Spirit and the blood and the Word will be removed, the divine Worker will withdraw, and the door will be shut. Then it shall come to pass that whatsoever is incomplete shall remain incomplete. The imperfect shall abide in imperfection.

The Scripture settles this question in Revelation xxii, 11. God is looking into the world of spirits in eternity after the work of life is over, and here is what he says: "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still."

Again, sanctification can not take place through death. If we say that death makes the soul holy, then do we ascribe a power to it that the Scripture only attributes to the blood of Christ. This would make death our Savior, and so rob the Son of God of his glory. Indeed, if we wait for death to purify us, we make it even greater than the Savior, for in that we have postponed the obtaining of holiness until the hour of dissolution, we have thereby declared that we looked to death to do what Christ could not and had not done for us.

Let us bear in mind that there is nothing in death to purify. It is not an entity, nor a creature, with intellect and force, but a simple dissolution of soul and body; a mere ceasing to live is called death. What is there in a negative state like this to purify the soul? The Bible settles this second point by two unmistakable verses. The first is in Ecclesiastes xi, 3: "If the tree fall toward the south or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be." Look out, my brother; God says as you fall in death, so shall you lie forever. Death will simply crystallize your character. The other verse that teaches that holiness is to come in life, and not in or through death, is found in Luke i, 73-75: "The oath which he sware to our father Abraham that we might serve him without fear in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life."

It is evident from reason and from the plain Word of God that we can look for sanctification or holiness in this life. Now comes the question, At what time of life? Will anyone say not till old age? Where in the Bible are the young excused from holiness? Will anyone say after a number of years we may expect it? Show me a passage where God's Word teaches such a thing! Will anyone postpone the blessing of a holy heart even until the morrow, or to any time in the immediate future? Show me a verse where God commands us to be holy to-morrow! Point out the passage where he says next week or next year we must be holy.

Does anyone say we will come into it gradually? My reply is, Show me the verse in Scripture that declares we are sanctified or made holy gradually. You at once quote the verse, "Perfecting holiness." But if you turn to the Greek lexicon, you will discover that the prominent meaning of the word is "accomplishing;" so it should read "accomplishing holiness." Again, you quote the verses, "Grow in grace," and "The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

But neither of these passages refer to sanctification. The expression, "perfect day," Dr. Clarke says means the endless felicity of heaven. The words, "grow in grace," bear not the slightest allusion to the work of sanctification. The words are different, have different meanings, and refer to different works. Consecration and growth in grace are man's work, but sanctification is the work of Almighty God. Men consecrate gradually, and grow in grace gradually; but when God regenerates or sanctifies the soul, he does it instantaneously. The necessities of the case demand it should be instantaneous. The very uncertainty of life teaches me that the work should be quickly done. To-morrow I may be gone; the next hour may find me dead—nay, the next minute may witness my soul flying from the body to the God who gave it. If the blessing of sanctification be a gradual work, then would we be undone.

Moreover, our knowledge of the power of God prepares us for the instantaneous blessing. Is anything too hard for the Lord? He speaks, and it is done. He that converts a soul in a second, can he not sanctify in a second? Look at it, reader; if God can take a perfect giant of sin and make him a babe in Christ in a moment, can he not take a babe in Christ and make him a perfect man in Christ Jesus in a moment? If God can instantaneously make a spiritual man out of a sinner, he ought, with even greater ease, make a holy man out of a Christian.

Another argument for the instantaneous nature of sanctification is found in the will of God. The Scripture says: "This is the will of God, even your sanctification." Will anyone dare to say that God wills our sanctification or holiness some time in the future, and not to-day? The one conclusion to which the mind is irresistibly drawn from this last thought is that the present moment is the time for sanctification.

Still another argument we urge to prove that sanctification is the work of a moment, is found in the tense in which the commands for our sanctification or holiness is presented. Study them, and you will find they are all in the present tense, or couched in forms to show an instantaneous work. "Be ye holy" is an unmistakable command for a present state and life. The passage in Hebrews, "Let us go on to perfection," that at first seems to suggest a gradual work, teaches a definite and distinct state to be obtained, while the verb conveys the idea of being borne on immediately into the blessing.

The final proof is the statement of God's Word. Read Malachi iii, 1: "The Lord whom you seek shall suddenly come into his temple." Who is his temple? Paul answers: "Ye are his temple." So has it ever been with those who received this unspeakable blessing; it came suddenly, not gradually.

Now turn to II. Corinthians vi, 2. God in this passage forever settles the question by telling us what is his time. The verse reads: "Now is the accepted time—behold now is the day of salvation."

This removes all doubt, for is it possible that God is willing to pardon me now, and not willing to make me holy now? Does he desire a single sin to remain in us a moment? Is he not willing to give his people a full salvation the instant they will accept it? The Book answers: "Behold now is God's accepted time—behold now is the day of salvation."

Letter from Japan.

Since I last wrote Mrs. Lambuth and I have been to Todotsu, one of our stations on the Island of Shikoku. We were received very kindly by our brethren and sisters there at an entertainment; or a kind of love-feast, it might be called. The meeting was on a hill overlooking the town, and giving us a magnificent view of the Inland Sea, and of the many islands here and there. They began their meeting with reading the Bible, singing, and prayer. They all had their Bibles and hymn books. Then came speeches and addresses of welcome, in which they spoke of the love and goodness of God, which lasted for two hours; and before the close I gave them a short sermon on our heavenly home. Then came refreshments and some native music. All were seated on mats, and it seemed so strange to see little boys marching up to the table, barefooted, to deliver their addresses. All was well done, and reflected a great deal of credit upon all engaged in the entertainment. The next day some of the brethren arranged all their armor and swords in our meeting-room, and invited us to go and see them. There were seven armors, or "coats of mail," and about twenty swords. These they propose to sell, and wish me to do what I can to dispose of them, that they may build a house in which to worship God. Two of these I have in Kobe with me, and I propose to send them on this month, so as to reach the General Conference before the close of May. These brothers and sisters are in earnest about this matter. They have no more need for war, and now desire to turn their swords into plowshares; or, what is better, to use them in laying the foundation of a house of God. Who will buy one "coat of mail" and two swords for fifty dollars, to help these Christian people so lately worshipers of dumb idols? Who can refuse to give them the gospel which they so much desire, and are earnestly seeking for the bread of life? Pray for us and for them.

Quadrennial Report of the Mission Board.

The quadrennial report of the Board of Missions will make the following exhibit of its financial operations:

Appropriations made May, 1886, $158,880 56. Collections from April 1, 1886, to March 31, 1887, $161,495 88.

Appropriations made May, 1887, $181,795 61. Collections from April 1, 1887, to March 31, 1888, $214,581 40.

Appropriations made May, 1888, $214,564 32. Collections from April 1, 1888, to March 31, 1889, $211,176 43.

Appropriations made May, 1889, $265,277. Collections from April 1, 1889, to March 31, 1890, $276,122 21.

Total appropriations, $820,517 49; total collections, $916,378 95.

The debt with which the quadrennium opened has been reduced to $44,000.

There is no draft out for any appropriations made prior to the annual meeting of May, 1889.

While the Board has reduced the old debt of over $100,000 to $44,000, it has enlarged its appropriations for the support of its missions from $158,880 56 in 1886 to $265,277 in 1889—an advance in annual expenditures of $106,396 44.

A Missionary for Japan.

Dr. Walter Lambuth's private note, in last week's ADVOCATE, asking for a Mississippian and a Louisianian for the Japan Mission, gives me opportunity of saying that Mississippi has a man in training for Japan. Up to last December, year, he was a very useful and successful member of the North Mississippi Conference. At that time he located to attend school, with a view to that work. He is now taking a course of medical lectures, and will be ready before long to offer himself to the Board of Missions for work. He will be a valuable man there, as he is here. At the proper time I hope the editor will ask the two Mississippi Conferences for money for his outfit. His name will be given in due time. This much I am permitted to say.

The Greatest Danger.

The fabric of modern civilization is so intimately connected in all its parts that it is impossible to understand it thoroughly or consider it philosophically without making full allowance for this fact. As in the human body every organ and member is more or less dependent for its healthy action and condition upon every other, so our civilization of to-day is but a great political and social organization which is dependent for the well-being of the whole upon the well-being of every separate part. As the blood is the life of the human being, so the domestic and social elements form the life-blood of the community, the State and the nation. If the blood of an individual is poisoned, the whole body will soon be affected with cancerous sores or other evidences of disease, the constitution will give way and death will follow.

No less surely may a State be poisoned in its inner streams of life by the corruption of its social and domestic currents. The United States can never have any enemy worthy of the name but itself, but how formidable are the dangers that threaten it from within is being every day more forcibly demonstrated. More powerful than an army with banners is social degradation and corruption. When rottenness has once gotten into the bones of a nation, it may for a time wear the outward semblance of strength and prosperity; but its fate is irrevocably sealed, and it will fall to pieces like a foul and loathsome thing at the first crisis in its fortunes. Holy Scripture tells us that the love of money is the root of all evil, and it is no exaggeration to say that nearly all the evils which threaten the United States spring from this source alone. The country seems to be growing mad in its hunger for gold; the fierce fever for wealth has gotten into the national blood, and all ranks and classes of people are more or less affected by the wild delirium which it has engendered.

No one nowadays is satisfied with being "comfortable" or "well-off;" everyone wants to be rich. Millionaires are now almost as common as paupers. Men pile up fortunes whose proportions would once have taxed the credulity of the reader of a fairy story. Old-fashioned methods and maxims of business and principles of living have been cast aside as worse than useless. The sober, steady habits of the past, which made the country great and glorious, are scorned in our cities, and are becoming obsolete even in rural sections. Politics, society, even religion, are all bowing down to the golden calf. In our senates and legislative assemblies men whose crimes would have formerly consigned them to the penitentiary, now buy seats and make laws for the regulation of better people; in the churches, too often, the man with gay apparel and ring upon his finger is received with deference as he enters the sacred edifice, though the gold that he drops into the collection box may represent the blood and sweat of the poor whom he has plundered through the agency of some gigantic trust or rapacious corporation. The devil has been known to build churches even within the last few months with the proceeds of some of the immense fortunes which he has helped monopolies to roll up. Religion, however, is not to be blamed for the faults of a few weak brethren, who have forgotten the warning uttered by the apostle at the beginning of the Christian era.

The irrational principles on what is called "good society" is based have much to answer for in the creation of an artificial thirst for wealth. In former years, culture, refinement and intellect were the passports to this "charmed circle," which was then, indeed, entitled to this name. Now a man without money, no matter what his virtues, can not enter it, and a man with money, no matter what his vices, can not be kept out of it. Burns said the rank was but the guinea's stamp; but at present the guinea or the greenback constitutes rank itself. Coarseness, ignorance, moral, political or financial uncleanness, form no bar. The question is not who you are, or what you are, but how much you are worth. If you would succeed socially, you must follow Iago's advice and "put money in thy purse."

No more despicable or dangerous standard could be imagined than that by which American society is now measured, and as this unit of measurement gradually finds its way through all classes of people, and from society proper into the domestic circle and the household, it can be seen how full of menace and evil it is to the whole nation. It poisons the social and political fountain at its very source, and makes healthy life impossible. The numerous embezzlements and defalcations which have become a national shame and reproach are due in the great majority of instances to the effort of the offender to conform to a false social standard, to buy his way into the gilded and corrupt circles of fashion.

It is time that parents and religious pastors turned their attention seriously to this evil. Let them teach their children and their congregations that the getting of money is not the chief object of existence. One noble, honest, true life is worth more than all the treasure that was ever dug from the bowels of the earth. Such a noble life was that of the late Samuel J. Randall.

The rocks around and ahead of our ship of state are all the more dangerous because they are golden and seem to promise prosperity and greatness.—Baltimorean.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The most common thing in life
Is what the neighbors say.
The thing that stops or starts the strife
Is what the neighbors say.
No matter what the case may be,
Just look around, and you will see
The thing that governs you and me
Is what the neighbors say.

Your wife thinks, when she gets a dress,
What will the neighbors say?
She almost tests her happiness
On what the neighbors say.
The girl with a new diamond ring,
A sealskin sacque, or something thing,
Thinks as she gives her head a fling,
What will the neighbors say?

You know yourself how much you care
For what the neighbors say.
Sometimes the hardest thing to bear
Is what the neighbors say.
You may pretend that you don't mind,
But still you wince when they're unkind—
The chief thing in this life, you'll find,
Is what the neighbors say.

Advocate Friends.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

Often a sad heart is cheered by the call of a kind friend. To those we know and love we say:

"Come in the evening, or come in the morning,
Come when you're looked for, or come without warning."

Welcome will meet you at the threshold, and joy greet you with loving smiles.

But when a stranger is announced the question arises in the mind, Who can it be? Sometimes you can tell the caller is a preacher by the same sign that a little four-year-old boy did, who had been riding in a stage with his parents and several other travelers. When they arrived at their destination a gentleman laid his hand on the boy's head, and said some kindly word. The boy said: "Papa, that preacher laid his hand on my head." "How did you know he was a preacher?" asked his papa. "Why I knew by the cut of his jib." The boy's father was a captain, and sailor phrases had inspired the jest.

When thus a preacher is known and the name is given, the question is answered. It is an ADVOCATE friend. The stranger vanishes and you sit and talk with the freedom that ADVOCATE friendship inspires. Congenial topics are touched upon until the heart-burnings within you make you wish a Joshua were near to forbid a look at a timepiece or else forbid the little pointers' circular motion. But this can not be, and soon the pleasant communings of Christian friends must come to a close, like all things earthly, and you feel the cordial hand-grasp, say "good-bye" and "God bless you" to one you had never seen before and may never meet again "till you meet at Jesus' feet."

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love."

Not long since Bro. G. D. Anders, of Hattiesburg, was sent to fill Bro. Cooper's appointment as presiding elder, and he called on several families and found some ADVOCATE friends, wrote his name on the hearts instead of in the album, and we felt like it was a good thing to have the lines fall to us in the places that he passed. Last week another ADVOCATE friend, Rev. W. P. Meador, called and spent the night with one ADVOCATE family, and an hour or so with another, much to their enjoyment. He seemed to feel at home among the ADVOCATES. The preachers say they are sure of a welcome where they find the ADVOCATE. God bless all the ADVOCATE families and friends!

The Indians Among Us.

(Adopted by Brandon District Conference.)

"The Indians among us" is a subject that has provoked some discussion in this Conference, and has elicited a few articles to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; but still our people are not fully awakened to the responsibility upon them as respects this subject. The Indians must be saved, or they will be lost; and, if lost, God will require their blood at our hands. If any of them are saved by their living up to the light that may be in them, or through the instrumentality of other churches solely, the responsibility of their salvation will not be lessened an iota upon us, and, therefore, we shall be held strictly accountable for what we might have done. Many of them have died without our having made an effort for their salvation, and, of course, in order to have the responsibility of their salvation lifted from off of us, we must do our utmost to save those who are yet alive. It has been suggested that the best move that we can make for the salvation of the Indians is to emigrate them to the Indian Territory, where we have missionaries, native preachers, schools and churches. But to announce to them that we want them to go from among us—from their native land to a strange land—is to convince them that we are not their friends; and, if once convinced that we are not, all our efforts to save them will be useless. Why not say to the scattered Chinese in our country that they must go to those Territories densely settled by their people, or say to all the Chinese that they must emigrate to China, where we have missionaries, native preachers, schools and churches, in order that we may give attention to their spiritual welfare? Because it would be requiring a surrender of their liberty of choice as to where they may choose to make their earthly home; requiring of them what we would not like if the same was required of us; and why not, therefore, have as much regard for the choice of the Indians, for the principle is the same? We must respect their choice in this matter, and to have an ardent desire to save them; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will give as much of our means for their salvation among us as we can without material damage to the church work that we have already in hand, and also endeavor to inspire all who may be indifferent to this matter by private and public discussions of the subject, that they may see the necessity of their giving freely and at once of their means to this great work.

Resolved, That we will, without delay, endeavor to raise the amount necessary to secure the services of a missionary immediately.

Resolved, That we indorse Bro. A. D. Miller's plan of each person paying what he can, or may feel disposed to pay annually, for the support of a missionary or missionaries among the Indians, and, therefore, recommend that all funds for this purpose be sent to Bro. A. D. Miller, at Cato, Miss., during this year, and to him wherever sent next year, should he live until the next meeting of this Conference.

Resolved, That the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be requested to publish this paper.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

P. S.—We are hopeful that the brethren and friends within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, especially, will send money at once to Bro. A. D. Miller, Cato, Miss., for the support of a missionary or missionaries to the Indians in Mississippi, for they have been neglected too long already. No person should feel that this is a work for some one else to do, but feel that God is holding him personally responsible; and, therefore, he must do what he can. No person should be afraid of this movement to save the Indians, for it has been indorsed by the Mississippi Conference. There is not much danger of too much money being paid to this movement, for the more we have the more force we shall be able to put in the work at once. Let us save the Indians this year, if it be possible.

Winona District Conference.

The Winona District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, met at Vaiden, Miss., Friday morning, April 25, 1890. In the absence of a Bishop and the presiding elder of the district, J. B. Streater was elected president. Though a layman and a man of retiring manner, yet Bro. Streater filled the chair to the satisfaction of all. J. R. Bingham was elected secretary. Every pastor in the district was present at some time during the Conference. On account of the incessant rain and muddy roads, the attendance of laymen was small. Every interest of the church was inquired into carefully and minutely. The spiritual condition of the district is on rising ground. The preachers report larger congregations at regular services, better prayer meetings, more and better Sunday-schools, and less worldliness among our people. Some of the preachers reported a small decrease in the assessment for their support. Winona station, Kosciusko and Durant, and Greenwood station assessed $800 each for the support of their pastors. Richland and Black Hawk $750 each. Vaiden $700, and the other charges from $600 down to $365.

On Saturday morning Bishop Galloway appeared and took the chair. The Conference had committees on public worship, on education, on Sabbath observance, on temperance, on Sunday-schools, on Quarterly Conference Records, on religious literature. When the report on education was read, Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, delivered a short address on education, calling special attention to our only Conference school, located at Grenada.

Bishop Galloway made a few remarks concerning Millsaps College, and said if anyone wished to contribute to the endowment fund of the proposed college, now was his opportunity, and $162 50 was raised in a few minutes. Excellent sermons were preached during the Conference by Revs. J. C. Lowe, B. F. Phillips, T. B. Hargrove, J. T. Moody and Bishop Galloway. On Sunday afternoon Rev. J. E. Buck, R. A. Ellis and Bishop Galloway delivered lectures to the children. Sunday night Bishop Galloway delivered a very interesting and instructive address on Mexico and her people. Rev. S. D. Long presented the necessity of Oxford, and took a collection to help rebuild our church there. Delegates to the Annual Conference: J. B. Streater, M. T. Boswell, J. R. Bingham and S. C. Conley; alternates—O. J. Moore and A. H. George.

The District Conference adopted a strong paper condemning the Louisiana Lottery, and commending the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for its bold stand against that evil. The citizens of Vaiden entertained us handsomely. The next session will be held at Lexington. Resolutions of sympathy for our beloved presiding elder, Dr. Wheat, were passed. I will not close without making special mention of the Woman's Missionary district meeting on Thursday, April 24. Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, assisted by Mrs. J. B. Streater, presided, and Miss Carrie Gillespie, of Greenwood, was secretary. My recollection is, there are nineteen adult and juvenile missionary societies in the Winona district. These godly women and lovely children are doing a grand work.

Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference

I have just returned from Holmesville, Miss., McComb City circuit, where I held Bro. Rayner's second Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday. The interest of the meeting was such as to deserve mention. The pastor reported that he had received twenty persons into the church by the ritual, besides several by letter, and that he had baptized twenty-nine children during the quarter. It was manifest that he had been "diligent in business," and that the spiritual state of his charge was excellent. At the quarterly meeting two adults and nine children were baptized, and four persons joined the church.

On Sunday morning, after the sermon and before the communion, the pastor asked for $60 to cover Holmesville's pro rata of the assessments on the circuit for missions, Conference claimants, church extension, etc.; and they gave him, in cash and good subscriptions, $125 35. It was done promptly and cheerfully. Then followed a delightfully edifying communion service, several young persons taking their first communion on that occasion. Bro. Rayner is doing a great work in this circuit by his faithful preaching and diligent pastoral attention to all the details of his charge. My visit to Holmesville was specially interesting to me. It was the home of my boyhood. There I was recommended for license to preach in the year 1857. The mortal remains of my father and mother lie buried there. The visit to the old family homestead and the cordial greetings of friends of former years were a means of grace. Holmesville was then a flourishing town; but now there is but little of it left. The railroad, the adjacent towns that have sprung upon its line, and the removal of the court-house to Magnolia, have well nigh wiped it from the face of the earth. It is a beautiful place for a town, situated on the west bank of Bogue Chitto river, in a grove of oak trees, with excellent water and unsurpassed healthfulness. It is the site of Kavanaugh College, over which Rev. H. Walter Featherstun presides. This school is doing a good work. It is positively Christian in its influence. All the teachers are pious, and I learned that there are only two pupils in the school who do not belong to the church. I have never seen a nicer set of boys and girls collected together in a school than they have in Kavanaugh College. They have already turned out several preachers.

It is the rule of the school for the larger pupils to recite Monday morning on the sermons of the previous day. This is a capital idea. It secures the attention of the pupils to the sermon, and "faith cometh by hearing." I was present at the opening of school Monday morning, but did not stay to hear the first recitation, though invited to do so. Some suggested that I was afraid to hear the comments of the pupils on my sermons.

Faulty Interpretation of Law.

MR. EDITOR: I beg to join issue with you on your interpretation of the law governing the scope of the operations of the Publishing House. There are several provisions of the law, and you and Bro. Burke—the Wesleyan Advocate—so interpret one clause as to make it contradict another clause. The rule, universally followed by jurists, is, when two principles—or more than two—seem to be implied in a law, that principle which is in harmony with other laws shall be accepted; and only where irreconcilable differences exist, shall the interpretation be in conflict with other plain laws. This is also the well-established rule for the interpretation of the Scriptures.

The "legitimate business" of the Publishing House, as defined in the charter, is, in brief, to make and sell books and papers, paying all its just debts, and, if any "proceeds" are left over after so doing, to pay out this surplus to the supernannuated preachers, and the widows and orphans of deceased ministers. The requirement that "the proceeds of the Publishing House shall be appropriated to no other purpose than its own legitimate business," excludes missionary operations, church extension, etc., because by no law do these come within the range of "the legitimate business" of the Publishing House. But the very charter makes the helping of a certain class a part of the business of the House. By the written law all preachers who are needy may be helped by the surplus, but there is a stronger principle—an unwritten law—which makes the worn-out preachers and widows and orphans prior claimants.

I beg to enter my humble protest against office making in our church. I do not think the church needs any more officers. Dr. Haygood is a wise man; but he is a very aggressive man. In the matter of so many secretaries he is, I think, drawing from the same dry fountain the Missionary Board has been drawing from for years, and has kept us constantly in debt by such drawing. You have brought about as much pressure to bear on the church as you can, and still suppose more can be pressed out. The money for the support of these additional secretaries would more than support an equal number of missionaries—at least, two to one. Office making is an easy thing; but in the matter of taxes it is always burthensome, and not always beneficial. The United States government has found out that fewer collectors secure more revenue. Let us profit by the experience. Respectfully,

J. A. PARKER.

"The Location of Millsaps College."

Bro. J. W. McNeil misunderstands me when he says that I favor locating our college on "a money basis." Money is but one of many things to consider. There are places to which the college should not go if they were to offer a half-million; but money is one consideration, and a very important one to our success, and one which we have it in our power now to control; and I suppose that there is not one of all the places mentioned for the college which would not give, at least, fifty thousand, if this be required as one of the conditions, so this can be considered in connection with all the rest of the necessary conditions. It is just to all parties that the place which reaps the local benefits should pay the local bills, and the town which has not enterprise and liberality enough to do this, is not a suitable place for the location of the college. We can not build houses on or with what men ought to do, and the sooner we recognize and state the fact that the place which gets the location shall foot all the local expenses now and forever, the better it will be for all concerned; for whenever we locate this college without first securing a sufficient sum to meet expenses, and begin to drag an unfinished building before our people in other sections of the State, we do ourselves great injury. For every dollar which we can get outside the town which gets the college should go into the endowment fund.

Macon Bids for the Conference.

I see from the ADVOCATE that Greenville asks to be relieved of the task of entertaining the next session of the North Mississippi Conference. We want, through the ADVOCATE, to invite the Conference to hold its next session in Macon, Miss. We ask those who have the deciding of the question to consider the following facts:

First, the people of Macon are very anxious for the Conference to meet with them. Macon was put in nomination at the session of our last Conference, and, if I am not greatly mistaken, was next to Greenville in strength, was withdrawn in Greenville's favor, with the understanding that the next Conference should come to Macon. I understand that there are but two other places asking for it—Water Valley and Grenada. Macon should have the preference over both of these places: first, because they have both had the Conference since Macon; again, because the Conference met last fall at Holly Springs, in the same section of our Conference that Water Valley and Grenada are in; and we think it fair that it should meet on the eastern side of the Conference, as it did not go to Greenville. If the brethren will give us the Conference, we will appreciate it, and give them a hearty welcome, and the best entertainment we are capable of giving.

Fraternally,

J. H. MITCHELL, P. C.

General Conference Work.

Will it not be well that our General Conference, at its approaching session, order the thirteenth and fourteenth of Wesley's sermons either expurgated from future issues of his sermons or pass an act stating plainly that they do not teach the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, nor Wesley's views, as expressed in his later writings? Twenty-one years had elapsed from the writing of these sermons when he prepared the Creed of our church in America, and wrote his sermon on "Perfection." I would also be glad to see the "Problem of Methodism" placed in our "course of study" for young ministers, and would (if able) put it into every Methodist family.

ALEXANDRIA, La.

Vancleave Circuit, Mississippi Conference.

I am glad to report that Vancleave circuit is still moving onward and upward. Our second Quarterly Conference has been held. Bro. Cooper was with us, and did some very excellent preaching. He endeared himself to my people. He makes an excellent presiding officer; makes a Quarterly Conference interesting. My circuit is some ahead in finances, so far, over last year. The local preachers are at their post; class leaders and Sunday-school superintendents are at work; Bro. Pierce is at his post preaching with power. The whole circuit is on the up-grade. Will make a full report at Conference. One of our oldest citizens, and one of the strongest supporters of our church here, is dead. Bro. William J. Ramsay has been a subscriber to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE from the first of its existence. Several of our members have gone to the better world this year. While God is taking some away, he is causing others to fall in line. I thank God I was sent to labor with this people; they know how, and do take care of their preacher.

The Lottery.

Some Workings of the Lottery.

For two years and more, closing up my observation more than a year ago, without any preconceived design to do so, I took some data as to the workings of this monster evil in the land. I saw the selling and buying of lottery tickets on a scale I had never before conceived of, touching circles of which I had had no dream. The centre of observation was a little city of eight or ten thousand inhabitants. I made sure that not less than five thousand dollars passed monthly through this place of business into the treasury of the Lottery Company. In consultation with one or two friends, who were not ignorant of the workings of this gambling institution, they thought five thousand dollars per month was a little extravagant, but that it might safely be put at three thousand dollars average for each month in the year. After that conversation some other facts coming under my notice, which were not taken into the account in the conversation referred to above, decided me that, without any violation of the judgment of my friends, I might safely put the amount at $3,500 as the sum in round numbers paid monthly by this little city and surrounding country for Lottery tickets. This $3,500 multiplied by the twelve months of the year gives an annual aggregate of $42,000, swelling the yearly stream of gold flowing into that vast reservoir from a source so narrow. These figures again multiplied by the twenty-five years' life of the company, and we have the enormous sum of $1,050,000 going from a population of not more than thirty or forty thousand inhabitants—going into the coffers of this company, whose greed for the hard-earned wages of our laboring millions is as great as the greed of the grave for their bodies.

The money coming back to this region of country for successful drawings is to three men five thousand each, to one man fifteen thousand. Add to this for small prizes and parts of successful tickets, and then make some allowance for future winnings, it will not be extravagant to fix the returns to the people at $50,000. This gives $1,000,000 as the gleanings of this company off of a population of, perhaps, not more than thirty-five thousand. Still, it is like the "two daughters of the horse-leech which cry, 'Give, give.'" The $1,050,000 paid into the ever-extending and gaping maw of this monster is not by everybody; but it is paid by every class of persons—black and white, men and women, lawyers, merchants, clerks, mechanics, farmers, members of the church. Stewards in the Methodist Church have, seemingly without hesitation, staked their money on the turn of the "Beauregard-Early wheel." One poor man, with whom I had some dealings, paid monthly from one to three dollars for a chance in a part of a ticket; regularly went to town to learn he had drawn a blank; then to relieve his disappointment, he must get drunk. At one time I became responsible for his doctor's bill. For three years he has been expecting to settle that bill at next drawing. During my enquiries one case—not of the above community—was reported to me who drew a nice sum. He said, "The Holy Virgin sent it to him." Another, also, of a different section of country, a Protestant minister, who drew a handsome sum, said: "The Lord gave it to me." At present I have no criticism to offer on the sacred (?) gifts, only that I should receive with decided distrust a package handed me by the devil.

The above figures will, doubtless, apply in principle, if not in fact, to any community of thirty or forty thousand inhabitants lying on any of our navigable rivers or penetrated by our railroads, especially those leaning to our great trading centres. Perhaps they will apply with less exceptions to the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas.

A renewal of the Lottery Company's charter depends upon the action of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana. It is believed, to some extent, at least, that not only the honest people of the State, but numbers who gamble on the chance turns of the wheel of the two division commanders, are opposed to continuing the life of the concern. The fear of its perpetuity does not lie so much in the want of an honest conviction in the mind of the voting public, as in the effrontery of the company to offer and distribute bribes, and the disposition of men—not to say, legislators—to receive bribes. Certainly at an early day of the session every member of the Legislature will know that he can sell his vote. The openness with which bribes were offered to and distributed during the threatened flood of the Mississippi river, exemplifies the boldness with which they will offer to buy. The coolness with which some of these bribes were accepted, reveals that men high in the confidence of the people have a price on themselves. Their forces are already in hand and are being carefully drilled; nothing but policy will prevent their approaching any man uncovered upon whom they wish to make an advance. Should the Legislature fix this terrible encumbrance on the public, the ayes and nays will go out to the world, and in the minds of millions every aye will be associated with the money of the Lottery Company.

J. D. NEWSOM.

The Louisiana Lottery.

As we said in The Commercial, of yesterday, was likely to be the case, the question of rechartering the Louisiana Lottery is to be laid before the Legislature of that State when it meets on the sixth of May. Mr. John A. Morris, acting for the Lottery Company, so announces in The Times-Democrat, of Friday, which did not reach us until last night. What he says in a short communication to that paper, together with its comments, we publish on another page. At some length, as our readers will see from the editorial of The Times-Democrat, it argues itself into an agreement with Mr. Morris, who offers to pay $500,000 per annum in quarterly installments, for twenty-five years, for the privilege, to be divided equally between the public schools, the public charities, and the public levees. "The Times-Democrat believes that for the State of Louisiana to reject this munificent offer would be unwise," and for the reason (1) that the State is not in a condition financially that would justify it in declining "so large a sum of money for purely sentimental reasons;" (2) the public schools are suffering from poverty of means; (3) the levees "are utterly inadequate barriers to protect the farms from flood; and (4) there is not an institution in the State that is fully provided for." This is the whole argument, and, it must be confessed, is a very sorry one for a State, the prosperity of which The Times-Democrat and the other influential newspapers of New Orleans have been making plain in articles well fortified with convincing statistics. It is a confession of inability to fulfill the most sacred of the obligations of the State that is tantamount to saying that the people of Louisiana can not support their institutions, and are by so much defective in the qualities necessary to self-government. It is a confession, not only of present and pressing poverty; but worse, it is an admission that for twenty-five years to come the necessities of the State are likely to be such that money raised by means that are repugnant to the moral sense of the people of the whole Union will be needed to pay for the education of the children, to maintain the eleemosynary institutions, and build and keep the public levees in repair. Surely there can not be any real basis for so humiliating a confession. We do not believe there is. And to prove that there is not, we have only to adduce the fact that in 1880 the population of Louisiana was 939,046, and according to the present mayor of New Orleans, it was estimated to be 1,050,000 on the first of January of this year. Here we have a gain of 111,000, the capitalized value of which, according to the basis of the English economists, would be at $1,000 per head, $111,000,000. The estimated true valuation of the State was in 1880 $422,000,000, the per capita being $449, higher than the average of Georgia, which was $359 per capita; higher still than that of Mississippi, which was only $286; higher than that of North Carolina, which was $319; than South Carolina, which was $297, and higher than that of this State, which was $122. This comparison does not afford any pretext for a lottery. But, again, the public debt of Louisiana was, on the thirty-first of December, 1888, $11,759,000; the receipts from all sources were $1,437,696, the rate of taxation being 60 cents on $100. There is nothing like poverty in these figures, which were not long ago reinforced by others in regard to New Orleans itself, over which the newspapers were justly jubilant. These figures and facts prove that Louisiana is not in a condition of poverty, requiring the aid of the Lottery Company, which would largely depend upon the people of the State to contest for its premiums, payment of tickets being but another form of tax, to be wrung, in large part, from those who are least able to bear it. So far as the sentiment is concerned, of which The Times-Democrat speaks so slightingly, the force of what there is beyond the limits of Louisiana may easily be measured by the effect it had to prevent the Legislature of North Dakota from chartering this same Lottery Company to do business in that State. That sentiment is stronger now than it was two months ago, and is likely to be re-aroused in its intensity by the declaration of Mr. Morris and the attitude of The Times-Democrat.—The Daily Commercial, Memphis.

Sunday-School Lesson.

(Hurlburt and Simpson's Lesson Commentary, Phillips & Hunt, New York.)

Second Quarter—Studies in Luke.

LESSON VII.—May 18.

THE TRANSFIGURATION:

Luke ix, 28-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Luke ix, 35.

28. About an eight days after. This is merely the inclusive reckoning which St. Luke saw in his written sources, and means exactly the same thing as "after six days" in Mark ix, 2. This explains Matt. xxvii, 63. St. Luke's way of reckoning—"about an eight days"—where the other gospels give "after six days," is interesting as throwing light on the mode of reckoning which sees three days interval between our Lord's death and resurrection. Peter and John and James—These three apostles retain their position as the elect among the elect. Comp. also Matt. xxvi, 37; Mark xiii, 3. The object of this occasion was to fill their souls with a vision which should support their faith amid the horrors they afterward witnessed. A mountain—Rather, into the mountain. The others say "into a lofty mountain." There can be little doubt that Mt. Hermon is intended, in spite of the persistent, but perfectly baseless, tradition which points to Tabor. For (1) Mt. Hermon is easily within six days' reach of Cesarea Philippi, and (2) could alone ho called a "lofty mountain" (being 10,000 feet high) or "the mountain," when the last scene had been at Cesarea. Further, (3) Tabor at that time in all probability was, as from time immemorable it had been, an inhabited and fortified place, wholly unsuited for a scene so solemn, and (4) was moreover in Galilee, which is excluded by Mark ix, 30. To pray—The characteristic addition of St. Luke. That this awful scene took place at night, and therefore that he ascended the mountain in the evening, is clear from vers. 32, 33.

29. As he prayed—We again note, as characteristic of St. Luke, the stress laid upon our Lord's prayers here, as before in chaps. iii, 21; v, 16; vi, 12; ix, 18. The fact is profoundly significant. Following the narrative in its details, we may trace its several stages in some such sequence as follows: After six days, spent apparently with their Lord in the mountain district near Cesarea Philippi, but not in the work of preaching or miracles of healing, the rest of the disciples are left at the foot of the mountain, and the three follow him, as the evening closes, to its summit. There, as afterward in Gethsemane, he withdraws from them about a "stone's throw" (chap. xxii, 41), and they "watch with him," and gaze on him, as he, standing or kneeling (the first was, we must remember, the more common attitude of prayer, chap. xviii, 11), intercedes for them and for Israel, and, we may add, for mankind. And then, as they gaze, form and features shine with a new glory, bright as the sun, as though the Shekinah cloud had wrapt him round. Even his garments are "white as the light," "white as snow," as St. Mark adds with his usual descriptive vividness, "so as no fuller on earth can whiten them." Nothing, however, it may be added, suggests the vision of three forms floating in the air with which Raphael's glorious picture has made us familiar. His countenance was altered—The inquiry whether this heavenly brightness came from within, or—as when the face of Moses shone—by reflection from communion with God, seems irreverent and idle; but we may say that the two things are practically one. White and glistering—Literally, lightning forth, as though from some inward radiance. "Sparkling white," Mark adds, "as snow." Matthew alone tells us that "his face did shine as the sun."

30. Two men, which were Moses and Elias—The great lawgiver and the great prophet, of whom we are told that God hurled the one and the other had passed to heaven in a chariot of fire. The two were the chief representatives of the old dispensation. The former had prophesied of Christ; of the latter it had been prophesied that he should be his forerunner. One was the great representative of the law, which was a "school-master" or "servant tutor" leading men to Christ, the other of the noble line of seers; of the one it had been said that a "Prophet like unto him" should come in the latter days to whom men should hearken; of the other, that he should come again to "turn the hearts of the fathers to the children." Their presence now was an attestation that their work was over, and that the Christ had come.

31. Spake of his decease.—The other synoptists state that Moses and Elias were talking with Jesus. St. Luke alone tells us the subject of their conversation. It was the "decease" (literally "departure" out of this world) which Jesus should fulfill at Jerusalem. The use of the word "decease" instead of "death" is remarkable: (1) because it had not been commonly so used by Greek authors; (2) because in its wider range of meaning it covered all the special phenomena connected with the close of the ministry of the law giver and the Tishbite and, not less so, the resurrection and ascension of our Lord, as well as the crucifixion; (3) as meeting us in close connection with a reference to the transfiguration in II. Pet i, 15.

32. But Peter—This verse also is peculiar to St. Luke. He alone tells us that the disciples were "heavy with sleep." The next words, however, may be rendered, "but having kept awake," implying a successful struggle against the heaviness. A different construction of the verse is now adopted by nearly all the best critics—in sense thus: "Peter and they that were with him were hardened with drowsiness; but keeping awake through the night, they saw his glory," etc. In support of this construction we have: (1) The clear, undisputed sense of the participle—having kept awake through, etc., instead of awaking. (2) The very natural purpose of the historian to show that this was not a dream, nor an illusion upon minds not thoroughly awake and not in the full exercise of their senses. (3) Again, neither Matthew nor Mark makes the slightest allusion to sleep—an omission which is at least improbable if they did in fact sleep, and only awaked at the moment of its close. Adopting this construction of their drowsiness as not resulting in real sleep, we may study the attitude of their minds: the sense of awe; the thrill of delight; the feeling that it would be blessed to prolong this scene—a rush of emotions which found utterance from the susceptible soul of Peter, who scarcely knew what he was saying; but all suddenly a cloud closed over them; a strange fear came upon them; there issued from the cloud that voice so distinctly audible, so awe-inspiring, so significant they never could forget it—"This is my chosen Son: hear him."

33. Good for us to be here—What the words seem to imply is: (1) An abounding joy at being thus brought into a glory which fulfilled the apostle's brightest hopes. (2) His thoughts traveled back to the records of the exodus, when the Lord talked with Moses in the tabernacle. What if like tabernacles could now he made for those three glorious forms, that all Israel might come and gaze, and hear and worship? Would not this be a better consummation than the shame and death at Jerusalem? Would it not meet the belief of the scribes and of the people that "Elias must first come?" Tabernacles—Like the little wattled booths which the Israelites made for themselves at the feast of tabernacles. Not knowing what he said—Not knowing that the spectacle on Calvary was to be more transcendent and divine than that of Hermon; not knowing that Jesus was not to die with Moses and Elijah on either side, but between two thieves.

34. Overshadowed them—That is, our Lord, Moses, and Elias. To the disciples this would, we cannot doubt, recall the "cloudy pillar" which had descended on the first tabernacle, the "cloud" that "filled the house of the Lord" on the dedication of the temple. It was, in later Jewish language, the Shekinah, or abiding presence of Jehovah—the very form of the words connects it with both the Hebrew mishkan, and the Greek skene, words for tabernacles—which was the symbol that God was with his people. Its appearance at this moment, followed by the voice out of the cloud, was a witness that no tabernacle made with hands was now needed, that the humanity of Christ was the true tabernacle of God, and that it was in this sense true that "the tabernacle of God was with men," and that he would dwell with them. So also St. Matthew and St. Mark; the former alone says that it was a bright cloud. St. Luke here adds that "they (the disciples) feared as they (Moses and Elijah) entered into the cloud." The cloud came and concealed the forms of the prophets from the eyes of the disciples, even as Jesus himself was afterward received up to glory in a cloud which hid him from their sight.

35. There came a voice—As in two other instances in our Lord's ministry. The other synoptists add that at this voice they fell prostrate, and, on Jesus touching them, suddenly raised their eyes and looked all around them, to find no one there but Jesus. This is my beloved Son—The words were in substance the same as those heard at the baptism of our Lord (see Matt. iii, 17), but the difference in their form is suggestive. Then they were addressed to the human consciousness of the Son of man, as declaring to him the greatness of his being. Now they come addressed as to the disciples, and in close connection with the "decease" which was to be accomplished at Jerusalem. It was, if we may so speak, because the Son of man became obedient unto death that he was showing himself worthy of the Father's love. In the hour of darkness and seeming failure, and agony and death, he was "satisfying" his Father's "good pleasure," and accepted by him as the one perfect sacrifice. And so the command, "hear ye him," gained a new significance. Not the traditions of the elders, or the doctrines of the scribes and Pharisees, not even the teaching of Moses and Elias, of the law and of the prophets, but the words of the Son of man were henceforth to command their allegiance, and to be the guide of their faith and of their lives, for of them only it was true that the Father was revealed fully in them, and that they should never pass away.

36. When the voice was past—St. Matthew and St. Mark recount what followed somewhat more fully. The former tells us that Jesus charged the three disciples to conceal what they had seen until after his resurrection from the dead. St. Luke, in this verse, tells us that they did so, but does not mention the command. St. Mark mentions both the command and the disciples' observance of it. St. Matthew and St. Mark subjoin to their account of the transfiguration a short report (here wanting) of a conversation which took place between our Lord and the three favored disciples, on their way down from the mount, on the expected return of Elijah, whom he declares to have come again in the person of John the Baptist. Told no man—They spoke not in those days of this wonderful manifestation—doubtless, for the reason that Jesus enjoined silence.

Missionary.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: Doubtless, when this meets the eyes of the readers of the ADVOCATE, the great legislative body of our church will be in session. The editors and many well-known laborers in the vineyard of our Lord will be together in St. Louis. The noble women of our church also hold their meeting there. We are waiting with anxious hearts to learn when and where they will open work in Central Mexico, and what the Board will do for us—what Christian men are to be our co-laborers in this harvest field.

The ever-increasing demands for Christian teachers I trust will be answered by our noble women. The appeals come stronger day by day. The hindrance to the progress of the cause is certainly not a lack of desire on the part of the heathen to learn of our blessed Lord. Are there not Christian men and women ready to yield a loyal response to the call, "Come over and help us"? Let nothing—love of home and loved ones—tempt you to refuse to do the loving Savior's bidding. Oh! that all whom the Lord has called may feel it a glorious privilege to be the messengers of his light to the people living in darkness and in the shadow of death! I do not think it right for missionaries to dwell so much on the sacrifices we must make. Rather let us think on what Christ has done for us, and say,

"My life, my love, my all
To thee I bring."

In a week I shall be the only Southern Methodist missionary woman in this great city. Bro. Carter goes to the General Conference, taking his whole family to the States, where they will all remain six months. Mrs. Watkins goes with her only daughter, Lizzie, to Canada, in search of health. I shall sadly miss her, for she has always stood by me in sickness and sorrow. Now I shall have no one to look to but my Mexican sisters. I shall be constantly occupied, and when in health have little time to think of my forlorn condition. The Lord has been good to me thus far, and for nearly two months I have not been sick in bed, and I can stand to do a good deal of work. During Mrs. Watkins' absence I shall have double duty.

Mr. Weems told me that at his last quarterly meeting he received the twelve members, completing the number he prayed so earnestly for at the beginning of his missionary work. The native preacher began singing, with great zest, "The year of jubilee has come," keeping time with his hands. Indeed, it does seem a season for rejoicing.

"With such a God to love,
Who hears our faintest cry,
And meets our every need."

We can trust him for the help needed in this important field. Unite your prayers with ours, that we may not be disappointed, for the cry of the heathen is heard on every hand. They need the comfort of the knowledge of a Savior's love. S. G. WEEMS.

MR. EDITOR: I have now finished my second round of Quarterly Conferences, and will give the readers of the ADVOCATE the results. At Tulyehualco we received eight members into the church. At Ameeameca we received four members and baptized four children. At Tepitlixpa we received one member and baptized one child. At San Sebastian, on the Tula circuit, we received twelve members and baptized four children. In this city we have received two members. This makes a total of two hundred received into the church and of fifty-two infants baptized in the Mexico district since our last Annual Conference.

Yours, J. M. WEEMS.

SAVE THE BOYS.—Recently, when two hundred or more drunkards were gathered in a meeting by the Breakfast Association, a speaker asked that all who had begun to drink after the age of twenty-one would raise their hands. Six responded. He then asked that all who had begun to drink before twenty-one would raise their hands. A sea of hands were raised. By saving the boys from the saloon we can go far to save the next generation. It is not the drunkards who sustain the saloons. The real drunkard earns nothing, and has nothing to spend. The saloon is sustained by the moderate drinker, the man who works one day that he may drink the next, who works six days that between Saturday night and Monday he may pour his earnings into the gorged till of the saloon. It is sustained by the young man, just beginning to drink, who, in his new found enjoyment, is eager to treat all his friends, and to be in turn treated by them. It is these that sustain the saloons.—National Baptist.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Daugherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

Quick Work.

This telegram was printed in last Thursday's Times-Democrat:

ATLANTA, April 30.—Rev. W. A. Candler, who is now president of Emory College, a Methodist State institution, was to-day tendered $25,000 as an endowment for the college by W. P. Patillo, of this city, conditioned upon $75,000 being added by others. Inside of an hour the whole sum was made secure, and thus Emory will have an endowment of $100,000.

We congratulate Dr. Candler and Emory College on this accession to the endowment fund to the college. That was quick work, but it was well done. Such work and such a way of doing is not only worthy of commendation, but in every way worthy of imitation. Evidently the Georgians have waked up to the value of their college, and have determined that it shall begin right away a new life and enter immediately upon a higher career of usefulness. They will soon begin to receive dividends from this investment in the higher character of the educational work done, and the broader culture of the young men Emory sends out into the world.

We can not help contrasting this offer of Mr. Patillo's, and its ready acceptance, with two offers made by generous men in Mississippi for Christian education. The dispatch says that the conditions of Mr. Patillo's offer was met inside of an hour's time. More than a year ago Bro. Millsaps proposed to give $50,000 to endow a new college in Mississippi, provided the church would give $50,000 more. We understand the church has not yet met the conditions! Last July Bro. James offered to give $25,000 to the endowment of Centenary College, provided the church would raise $25,000 more for the same purpose. The conditions of this gift have not yet been met! Are Mississippians and Louisianians less generous than Georgians? Do they value Christian education less? Are they less able? Or do they "care for none of these things?" Which?

Church High Schools.

Our greatest educational need at this time is an adequate supply of high schools. We have plenty of primary schools, and colleges and universities are multiplied as they are needed; but of intermediate and preparatory schools we have almost none. The discontinuance of such a school as was Prof. Magruder's, at Baton Rouge, is an educational calamity. Few youths can spare the time and means to spend two or three years in the preparatory department of a college, and then take a four years' course in the college. If the Methodists would inaugurate and maintain a good high school in every presiding elder's district, hundreds of young men would get a fair academical education who now have access to nothing more than the meager course in the public school, and hundreds more, thus prepared, would finish in the college.

The church is losing a golden opportunity by not supplying these schools, especially in the country. In towns the public school would sometimes be rivals of such schools as are here suggested; but in the rural districts they would be a God-send without precedent and without competition. It will be a dark day in her history when the church shall relax her energies or contract her sphere as an educator. She alone holds in trust from God those saving elements, without which all education is a curse, and she alone is qualified and commissioned for their impartation to the young. Our General Conference could not do a better thing in this behalf than to take such steps as shall lead to the establishment of a good high school in every presiding elder's district in our church. Such schools would fill a calamitous vacancy in the scholastic system of our country, and be, at the same time, a much-needed and welcome feeder to all our colleges. Where there is a will to do a good and practicable thing, there is a way. Will the church embrace this opportunity? Will she heed this call?

W. L. C. H.

Church Papers.

There is no argument against a fact. And from the universal outcry of our church papers it seems to be a fact that they are not circulated as they should be, and, consequently, their influence for good is greatly restricted. This is fact No. 1.

Appeal after appeal is made to increase the circulation, so that funds may be obtained to enable the papers barely to live. This is fact No. 2.

That it takes money to publish a paper is agreed to by all, and that our pastors are working for the welfare of the paper, financially and otherwise, may, I think, be classed as fact No. 3.

That the Advocates are not taken as extensively by our people as they ought to be, I know is fact No. 4.

And that the complaint is that the Advocates are too high as compared with other papers, as every pastor has heard, to his great mortification, is fact No. 5.

Now, one of the greatest questions with which we have to deal is, How shall we meet these facts? for no church in this day can hope to live without an aggressive, vigorous press. Ignorance means death. The arguments made by the editor in the issue of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of April 24, are sound and worthy of consideration, but are not appreciated by the masses in the church; and there are not enough who are willing to pay higher prices—even to secure better papers—for the papers to live. My experience has been that it is not the deep abstruce, abstract, theological communication that is most enjoyed by the readers. Metaphysics in small and broken doses is most desired.

Sharp, crisp editorials on living questions and religious life, free interchange of thought in short articles by the readers of the paper, newsy notes from the field and choice clippings concerning missions and other great enterprises of the church are, according to my observations, most appreciated. One grand central organ and a Quarterly Review to discuss these deeper, graver, vexing questions are enough, and all others should be content to be strictly religious newspapers. Our masses are neither metaphysicians, theologians, scientists, nor even critics.

Now, what we want is papers for the masses. How shall we secure this end? To argue that the appreciative man will pay the price without murmur will not meet the case. Neither will it do to argue that the loyal member will support his church paper. Facts prove that there are not enough of these two classes combined to help the papers out of constant embarrassment.

Appeals to church pride, arguments in behalf of family training, and persuasions on the grounds of personal growth in grace and knowledge have all sadly failed.

Other weeklies, "full of news and larger," we are told, can be bought for one dollar, and "why can't the Advocates be sold as cheap?" This question can not be met and overcome by reasons, no matter how good.

The demand is for the church weeklies to come down to the same price of the great secular weeklies—all of your good reasons to the contrary notwithstanding, Mr. Editor.

The living question is, How shall we get our people under the influence of our religious press? (And not only so with the Methodists, but with all other denominations of which I have knowledge. Other pastors and people complain.)

Whether "Pine Knot's" plan is best or not, I leave to the judgment and decision of those who know more about conducting a paper than I. Whether the proceeds of the Publishing House may be used to aid these periodicals, I leave to the decision of the General Conference. One thing I do know: the demand is upon us for cheaper papers, and we can not ignore the fact. Cheaper, not in material; cheaper, not in matter; cheaper, not in thought; but cheaper—one dollar; cheaper in price.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

CANTON, Miss.

Dr. Tigert's Answer.

MR. EDITOR: My attention has just been called to your courteous criticism, in the last issue of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of my brief statement of "The Facts" concerning the Conference collection, in a recent number of the Nashville. Your remarks rest, I think, upon a misapprehension (no doubt, innocent) of the principle which, by common consent, underlies such estimates. If you will allow me a little space in your columns, I think I can show that I did not "skillfully manipulate" the figures, but allowed them to stand in their naked simplicity. I clip your statement as follows:

Dr. Tigert, in the last Nashville Advocate, has an article on the above subject, in which, by a skillful manipulation of figures, he makes it appear that during the two years in which the funds of the Publishing House were distributed among the superannuates and widows and orphans, the collections in the Conferences increased with a higher ratio than at any other times. The good Doctor's figures tell a very different story to this writer. Taking the Doctor's own figures, we find that from 1886 to 1888 the rate of increase for each year was more than during the years since the Publishing House "produce" was distributed. For instance: In 1886 the increase over the preceding year was $4,912 42; in 1887 the increase over 1886 was $8,032 65—that is, the increase of 1887 exceeded that of 1886 by $3,120 23. In 1888 the increase from collections over 1887 was $14 591 47—that is, the increase of 1888 exceeded that of 1887 by $6,558 82. That year the distribution began. Now, if the collections from Conferences had kept increasing at the same rate, we should expect them to report about $25,000 increase. But, lo! they report an increase of $16,239 27—that is, the increase for the year 1889 was just $1,747 80 more than the increase of 1888.

Now, if I understand your idea of comparing increase with increase, you argue that because the increase of 1887 was nearly double that of 1886 ($8,000 against $4,000, in round numbers) and the increase of 1888 stood in about the same ratio to the increase of 1887 ($14,500 against $8,000), we could expect another such approximate doubling in 1889—namely, an increase of $25,000. But a moment's consideration will show the impossibility of permanently maintaining an increase according to such a law as this. For the sake of simplicity in the calculation, we may take doubling to be the exact ratio. For ten years only the increase, according to this law, would be as follows: (1) $4,000; (2) $8,000; (3) $16,000, (4) $32,000; (5) $64,000; (6) $128,000; (7) $256,000; (8) $512,000; (9) $1,024,000: (10) $2,048,000. If anyone is disposed to maintain that unless the Conference collections increase at this rate, the Publishing House appropriation is a damage to them, he can easily make out his case.

You do not make entirely clear whether you compare increase with increase, or excess of increase with excess of increase. In 1888 the excess was double that of 1887 ($6,000 against $3,000), and, according to this law, we ought to have had an excess of $12,000 in 1889. $12,000 added to $14,000 (the actual increase for 1888) would give $26,000—or $25,000, in round numbers—to take your figures. But the actual increase was only $16,000, which, according to your calculation, was a relative falling off of about $10,000. But this principle is as impossible of practical application as the one first examined. For ten years the excess of increase, to satisfy the ratio maintained by you as just, would have to be as follows: (1) $3,000; (2) $6,000; (3) $12,000; (4) $24,000; (5) $48,000; (6) $96,000; (7) $192,000; (8) $384,000; (9) $768,000; (10) $1,536,000.

When I made my column of annual increases, the fact that $16,000 does not exceed $14,000 as much as $8,000 does $4,000, struck me, just as I see it did you, and, for a moment, I thought this fact indicated a relative falling off. But the fallacy of this view is evident. For the true basis and method of calculation, as all statisticians will agree, is to find the percentage of the actual increase as compared with the collections of the preceding year. I thought once of including a column of percentages in the table published in my original article; and had I done so, I think, dear Doctor, your criticism would never have been written. If you will make the calculations, I think you will find the following table (taking round numbers) approximately correct:

Year.	Collection.	Increase.	Percentage.
1885	$ 89,000
1886	94,000	$ 6 000	5½
1887	102,000	8,000	8½
1888	116,500	14,500	14
1889	133.000	16,500	14

Do you not think, Doctor, that, according to all recognized principles of comparison, "the collections in the Conferences increased with a higher ratio" after than before the House began to make appropriations? In view of these facts, may I not ask that you withdraw the unmerited honor, bestowed upon me in your editorial, of being a "skillful manipulator" of figures.

Observations in the Winona District Conference.

All the traveling preachers were present at some time during the Conference except Dr. Wheat. All the local preachers—eighteen or more in number—were absent during the Conference.

There are one hundred and eight who are entitled to seats in the Conference besides the traveling and local preachers, and only eighteen were present. The family altars and Advocates are about the same. The spiritual interests of the church are better than formerly, as shown by their reports. Bro. Evans said he wrote his report while it was raining and his crippled limb was hurting.

The women had the most religious time. One brother said they had a glorious time. Sister Hargrove presided with about as much dignity as Bro. Streater; and Sister Streater read her report like she might have been an itinerant preacher as well as a "portable secretary." Sister Hargrove's address was fine. She is not afraid to talk to a crowd of men on missions.

Vaiden's hospitality abounded. Presbyterians and everybody else said they meant to do the handsome thing in entertaining the delegates.

Bishop Galloway took no collection, but he got $162 50 for Millsaps College. Uncle Joe Brooks was requested to preach a semi-centennial sermon at our next Annual Conference.

Anti-Lottery Meeting.

The second Anti-Lottery Meeting, under the auspices of the Evangelical Ministers' Union, was held, on Thursday night, in the Carondelet Street Church. The audience was large, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, and the speaking was of the first order. Rev. Mr. R. W. Merrill, of the Baptist Church, was earnest, clear-cut and impassioned in his statements, and made a strong address. Judge Frank A. Monroe, logical and eloquent, produced a profound impression by his masterly effort. Rev. Dr. Carradine made a very happy and forcible speech, though, owing to the lateness of the hour, he declined to make the extended address he had intended. The meeting, like the one at Grunewald Hall, on the previous Monday night, was a grand success. "The combat deepens—on, ye brave."

Louisiana Lottery.

Resolutions passed unanimously by the Winona District Conference:

Whereas, Our brethren in Louisiana are making a brave fight against the Louisiana State Lottery Company, in order to prevent, if possible, an extension of its franchise beyond the time definitely fixed by the people for its expiration; And, whereas, we regard the war now being made against the Louisiana State Lottery as altogether proper and right; for it is conceded that this company has violated its promises to the State, that its donations to charitable and educational institutions are designed to mislead the people as to its real nature, and that it is a gambling institution of enormous proportions. We believe that the existence of the Louisiana Lottery tends to cultivate the gambling spirit of this age, and hence an expression of our hearty condemnation of its pernicious influence is necessary; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend to the earnest men and women of Louisiana, who are trying to stamp out this evil, our hearty sympathies, and assure them that we approve their efforts to rid their State of this evil.

Resolved, That we will labor more earnestly to discourage the purchase of tickets for the various drawings, believing that such drawings are sinful in the sight of God, and the purchase of tickets demoralizing to our people.

Resolved, That we fully endorse the outspoken manner in which our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, has condemned the Louisiana Lottery, and it gives us special pleasure to know that Gov. Nicholls, of Louisiana, refused the offer of $100,000 from the Louisiana Lottery for the levees.

Resolved, That a copy of this paper be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and Clarion-Ledger for publication.

Notes.

It is said that Boston is opposed to the McKinley bill because it proposes to raise the tariff on beans. Mr. McKinley ought to remember that Boston once had a famous tea-party.

Martha Washington College has been loaned for ten years to Rev. S. N. Barker, of the Holston Conference. Mr. Barker is an educator of experience, and we wish him success in his new field.

What sort of a place do people generally think New Orleans is? Even the staid old "Central" at Nashville said last week, "The mad waters are threatening the safety of the fair city of New Orleans." Well, well!

A writer in the London Methodist Times has this sentence: "The constant, everlasting picking at the fundamental doctrines of the Word of God is a sign of weakness, and not of spiritual strength."

The Sixth International Sunday-school Convention of the United States and British North American Provinces will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., June 24-27. Delegates from this point go by the Louisville and Nashville road, and return for one fare.

May 18 is Children's Day. Let all our pastors and Sunday-school workers make proper preparations for appropriate exercises on that day. Let our children on every circuit and station see that we care for them and their spiritual welfare by the manner in which we celebrate their day!

The Evangelist says:

Giving his impressions gathered during his recent trip South, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew said the negro is really in a better position to earn his living in the South than he is in the North; that he would make more progress if he meddled less with politics; that the remedy for the negro question is in the education of the black man, and by his acquisition of property. "Give him government savings banks, teach him that he must work six days a week and save a part of what he earns, and the Southern race question will rapidly work out its own solution."

The Watchman has this paragraph, which will afford food for meditation:

We have lifted no voice against the so-called "short-cut" training-schools, because we believe that the more education those with least advantages can secure, the better; but one of the evil signs of the times is that so few, comparatively, of the graduates of our colleges are embracing the work of the Christian ministry. Educated ministers are called to the work of preaching the gospel in its fullest and largest sense, in the sense that makes it not merely the publication of news, but the commendation of the truth to the human conscience in the sight of God.

"There are two errors abroad. One is, that because of the rough and humble character of public life, because of the keenness of its criticisms, religious men should hold themselves aloof from every form of secular beneficence. The other is that the church was founded to clothe the naked and to discharge only such humane tasks. No; our work is not distributing silver and gold, but something nearer to the heart of God; something involved in the divine compassion had been entrusted to the church. Let us try to help men all we can; let us do our utmost to improve their environment. But, after all, our first and great duty as Christians is to renew the man."

Methodist Times:

It is an awful thing to say that "unbelief is the greatest of all sin" unless you carefully explain that by unbelief you mean willful and deliberate refusal to submit to Christ after you have realized his divine claims. As the late Bishop of St. David's explained in one of his ever-memorable charges, purely intellectual unbelief can not be sinful; on the contrary, a man would be a liar if he professed to believe when he did not. Our Lord always dealt most tenderly with intellectual difficulty. His strong condemnations were reserved for the selfishness and hardheartedness of the intellectually orthodox. We know how easy it is for the perverse will to affect the intellectual attitude. But that ought to make us the more careful to define our terms, and never to condemn intellectual honesty when what we really wish to denounce is moral perversity.

Our neighbor, the N. O. CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Methodist journal, in its issue of April 10, publishes a communication from J. M. Weems, missioner in Mexico, from which we take the following:

"At Rincon I baptized two infants. This charge is hopeful in many respects, and in others we hope for improvements. As my wife was sick, and I did not think it proper to leave her alone, I regretted the necessity of missing this appointment, as there were matters of importance demanding personal attention; but I hope to adjust to the best interests of the work."

This does not seem hopeful work: baptizing at Rincon two infants, possibly children of American residents. But, the point we wish to make is, had the early apostles loving wives and tender children, whereof the Illness could interfere with appointments involving "matters of importance demanding personal attendance," how long would it have taken to convert the Roman world?—The Holy Family.

How about St. Peter, who, according to St. Paul, "led about a wife?"

Personal and Otherwise.

Rev. T. S. West, M. D., of Wesson, Miss., will preach the commencement sermon at Kavanaugh College, Sunday, June 8. He will also deliver the anniversary address of the Kavanaugh Christian Association in the evening of the same day.

News from the work and postal card reports should be mailed in time to reach this office by Saturday or, better, by Friday.

For the variety of sizes and bindings in which our new hymn book can be had, and the prices, see the Agent's advertisement in this paper. The House is up with its orders for this book, and can now serve all comers on call.

These delegates left the city last Monday to attend the General Conference at St. Louis: Rev. J. B. Walker, Rev. J. T. Sawyer, Rev. C. W. Carter; C. T. Blackshear, W. H. Goodale and wife, of Louisiana Conference, and Robert Buhington, of the Mississippi Conference.

The delegates to the North Mississippi Conference from Winona district are: J. B. Streater, M. T. Boswell, J. R. Bingham, S. C. Conly; alternates —O. J. Moore, A. H. George.

Rev. John Barcroft writes: "The brethren of the Winona District Conference spoke and resoluted greatly for the ADVOCATE, especially in view of its brave fight with the accursed Lottery."

Mrs. Mary Read Goodale left on Monday last to attend the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as a fraternal delegate from the National Christian Temperance Union, and bears the special greetings from the latter to the General Conference.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. Thomas Cameron writes: "I take the outlook for Batesville and Wesley to be very encouraging. Parsonage recently nicely furnished."

—Rev. J. W. Honnoll reports as follows: "We are having a glorious revival in Holly Springs. Bro. George S. Inge is with us, preaching and working as but few men can work and preach. Saints and sinners are crowding to hear him, and we are having many bright conversions. Bro. Inge uses chaste and pure English, and preaches the truth as it is held by our church."

—Rev. J. A. Bowen writes from Aberdeen, Miss: "Dr. Sterling S. Paine died in great peace last Monday morning, April 28, at the residence of his son, Dr. Frank Paine, Muldon, Miss. Dr. Sterling was half-brother of Bishop Paine. He was a Christian gentleman. Suitable obituary will appear soon. Next week we will send you a full report of the great 'Sam Jones' Meeting' here. Aberdeen has surrendered to Christ. The results are wonderful! Seventy-four persons joined our church last Sabbath at one service! Rejoice with us."

—Rev. Geo. H. Thompson writes: "Our protracted meeting at Scranton closed April 6. The church was greatly awakened and the church membership was more than doubled. Young ladies were converted from the ball-room to the prayer meeting. I have since the meeting organized a Woman's Missionary Society and a Young Woman's Christian Association. I was assisted by Dr. Harmon, of Ocean Springs; Bro. Brown, of Bay St. Louis, and Bro. Chappelle, of Mobile. A Paul may plant, an Apollos may water; but God only can give the increase. This harvest is largely owing to the faithful labors and earnest prayers of my successor and our senior brother, B. Jones."

—Rev. G. E. Greene writes from Vernon, La.: "I send you a memorial against Louisiana State Lottery, with sixty-four names. More could have been secured had I had the opportunity. My people who live in Jackson and Lincoln parishes are, I think, wholly opposed to this abomination. I find Farmer's Union men all against it. We have a new church nearly built at Oak Ridge, near the old camp ground, where you preached some years ago. Bro. Hancock, one of my stewards out there, and a member of the Legislature, has spent a goodly part of his time, out of the 'House,' carpentering on this house of God. He is an anti-Lottery man, out-and-out. Our Sunday-schools are re-opening very promisingly. We have some discouragements, however; a 'hibernation' of Sunday-schools to be warmed out in spring, some drinking, and a little dancing. Yet the churches generally are living blameless. My stewards have looked to my temporal needs very diligently. I find my people remember their preacher. Bro. J. L. Wright, my worthy predecessor, and superannuate, is a great comfort and help to us all. He lives almost next-door."

An Important Convention.

Last week, in the city of Vicksburg, there assembled one of the most important conventions that has been held in many a day. A truly representative body, composed of foremost men from every section of the Mississippi Valley, met together to consider the levee question. After a harmonious and enthusiastic session, the convention unanimously adopted the following paper:

Whereas, The duty and obligation are imposed by the Constitution upon the federal government of controlling and regulating commerce among States, and jurisdiction is also given it over the navigable waters of the country and on the lower Mississippi, under its constitutional direction the construction and maintenance of levees has been adopted as a means of flood confinement and navigation improvement. This flood confinement and navigation improvement, therefore, subserves a dual purpose, to-wit: Improvement of navigation and the reclamation of the Mississippi Delta. In view of this fact the cost and control have been in the past divided between the general government and the levee authorities of the various levee districts in the lower Mississippi Valley. This principle of co-operation in the work of levee building, recognizing a community of interests between the United States government and the people of the Delta which has been inaugurated by the Mississippi River Commission and gives practical effect in the distribution of funds for this work, received the indorsement of President Arthur in his special message to Congress during 1883, and has recently received the emphatic approval of his Excellency President Harrison. In the light of nine years' experience the Mississippi River Commission and the United States engineers, jointly in charge of the work, have affirmed their faith in the plan by the tests of result and success.

Therefore, we, the people of the Mississippi Valley, in convention assembled, interested in the ultimate success of this work in both of its phases, now reaffirm our faith in this plan and express our willingness to continue in future to pay our fair share of the expense of building and maintaining said levees, and through our levee organizations to co-operate with the Mississippi River Commission; and by way of further indorsement of the Mississippi River Commission and their plan we quote, with emphatic approval from the resolutions of the Mississippi and Ohio River Pilots' Society, passed at St. Louis, April 25, 1890, and submitted to this convention, as follows:

Whereas, The present is the only complete system of levees we have ever had between Cairo and New Orleans, thus affording for the first time, until the said levees gave way under the flood, an opportunity of proving the engineers were correct; And, whereas, We observed the greatly increased current caused by said levees confining the surplus waters to the natural channel, thereby clearly showing that this is the quickest way to get rid of the surplus water, while at the same time the friction is greater on the bottom than on the banks in flood time, as the banks cave very little when they are full, as the water is aiding as a support to save the banks. The national character and national importance of this problem, as well as the nation's duty in relation to it, is shown in the fact that the Mississippi Valley and river is the receptacle and channel to the sea of the entire drainage from the twenty-five States and Territories between the Alleghenies and Rocky Mountains. This drainage is each successive year precipitated into this channel by reason of the changed and changing settlement and cultivation of many States about the headwaters.

Furthermore, we recite that the Mississippi river is a prime factor in controlling for the best interests of the whole people of the Union the transportation rates of the whole country, and that there is a greater obstruction to commerce by the floods than by low water, by reason of impossibility of access to the river in times of overflow.

Resolved, That the free perennial navigation of our great rivers, wherever possible to be effected by legislation, should be demanded of the government, and receive its attention as promptly and as uninterdictly as harbor improvements on the Atlantic, Pacific, gulf or lake coasts; that the recent floods in the lower Mississippi river, which have proven to be beyond the control of the most determined State, municipal, district and county efforts combined, should emphasize once more the great fact, always true, and heretofore always overlooked, that the Mississippi river is the nation's river, or, as called by one of the greatest constructionists of the Constitution, the nation's great inland sea, and as such it "comes as much within the purview of the Constitution as do the harbors of the Atlantic, Pacific, gulf or lake coasts."

Resolved, That we receive with the greatest satisfaction the unqualified indorsement of the plan of the Mississippi River Commission for the improvement of the Mississippi river by the use of the levees by the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, the New Orleans Board of Trade, the Commercial Club of Louisville, and the Mississippi River and Ohio Pilots' Society, as shown by the resolutions submitted to this convention, and that they concur in the opinion of this convention that if the United States government would make a liberal appropriation for the construction of larger and stronger levees on the banks of said river; said plan would approximate perfection, and that the channel of said river would be improved for the purposes of commerce; the alluvial lands on the banks of said river be protected from overflow, and the government spared the annual outlay made by it for the repairs of crevasses and the relief of individual sufferings occasioned by overflow.

Resolved, That it is the deliberate judgment of this convention that the outlet theory of improvement of the Mississippi river is impracticable and would ultimately be destructive of both navigation and the alluvial territory bordering on the Mississippi river.

Resolved, That this convention form itself into a permanent Interstate Levee Association, auxiliary to the Water Ways Association; that it elect a chairman, secretary and treasurer to serve for the term of one year, or until their successors are elected and qualified; that it have a permanent committee on statistics, to be composed of the division of engineers of the various districts of the Mississippi Valley, to collect all data bearing on the subject of levees; that the Interstate Levee Association meet annually on the first Tuesday of ——— in each year, in first one and then the other of the cities of the Mississippi Valley, or elsewhere, as it may be deemed best, and that it send delegates annually to Washington to press levee interests in proper ways before Congress, and that it take such other action from time to time as is deemed proper to promote levee interests, and to induce Congress to take national control thereof; that an executive committee of twenty-four be selected from each of the alluvial States, to be appointed to serve for one year, and whose duty it shall be to raise all necessary funds, and do such other things as may be necessary to insure the success and object of said organization.

Resolved, To give proper effect to the joint care and purpose of levees, that Congress be requested at its present session to pass an appropriation bill supplementing the sum contained in the present river and harbor bill of an amount sufficient to repair the damage and strengthen the levees in accordance with the lessons of the recent flood and the facts hereinbefore set forth, the sum in said river and harbor bill having been fixed prior to said flood.

CHURCH HISTORY. By Prof. Kurtz. Authorized Translation from Latest Revised Edition. By Rev. John MacPherson, A. M. Volume III. 12mo, 544 pp. Price, per volume, $2 00. New York: Funk and Wagnalls.

The volume before us completes this laborious work on ecclesiastical history. It carries the Roman Catholic and Protestant Churches through the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries to the present time. The learned author compares these two systems as they have operated side by side, giving special attention to the Lutheran Church, the Reformed Church, the Moravians and the various "new and fanatical sects." Coming to the nineteenth century he first takes a general survey, then calls particular attention to Rationalism and Pietism; Evangelical Union and Lutheran Separation; Evangelical Confederation, Lutheranism, Melancthonism and Calvinism; the Disputes and Forms of Worship; Protestanism in Germany; Home Missions and Foreign Missions. In discussing Catholicism the author considers the States of the Church; her various Orders; the Liberal Catholic Movement; Catholic Ultramontanism; the Vatican Council of 1869; the Old Catholics; Catholic Theology, and the Relation of the Romish Church to the Various Countries of the World. Professor Kurtz has laid the religious public under great obligations by the many facts and incidents which he has collected and recorded. The translator is also worthy of a grateful tribute from English-speaking people for the part he has borne in making these treasures available. The last 95 pages of this volume are devoted to Chronological Tables and a General Index, covering the three volumes and adding much to their value.

BEHEMOTH AND LEVIATHAN. Avil Printing Company, Philadelphia.

This book claims to set forth a wonderful discovery in the book of Job. That discovery is that "behemoth and leviathan are found to refer to the stationary and self-propelling steam engines of our days." It is written by Samuel O. Trudell. It is a very ingenious philological argument. The author shows considerable knowledge of the ancient languages, as well as intimate acquaintance with commentators. He professes to have found in the book of Job minute descriptions of the steam engines of our time. There is no doubt that the behemoth and leviathan of Job have given the exegetes a deal of worry, but whether Mr. Trudell has settled the question can not be said yet. We have seen this same theory years ago going the rounds of the newspapers.

CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE. A Comprehensive view of Doctrinal and Practical Theology. By thirty-seven different writers. Edited by Bishop Jonathan Weaver, D. D. Price $2 25. Usual discount to ministers. W. J. Shuey, Dayton, Ohio.

This volume is not intended to be a complete discussion of Christian Theology, but is a series of valuable papers covering thirty-seven different phases of Christian thought and work by as many writers. It includes such topics as the following: Theology, The Existence of God, The Divinity of Christ, The Atonement, Faith, The Resurrection, Future Life, The Church, The Sabbath, Duty to Parents and Children, The Sunday-school, Missions, Education, etc. These various articles are written by prominent ministers of the church, and are all "clear statements of truth."

The book has received the highest commendation. It is a handsomely made, small octavo book of 600 pages.

Notice.

Miss Helm requests me to distribute the literature for this quarter. If any fail to get their supply, please notify me at once. Letters and literature have been sent to the district secretaries, and to the presidents and secretaries of the societies.

The Woman's Department of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference numbers three in the home prepared by the dear Savior; two of whom were presidents of societies. May this bind us more lovingly together, and prove a fresh inspiration to us, whilst we labor for homes for him on earth!

Notice.

The Board of Trustees of Grenada Collegiate Institute met to-day, and after having made such arrangements as retain the Rev. Thomas J. Newell as president of the Institute, Mrs. Kate F. Payne was elected principal of the Preparatory Department, and an Executive Committee, consisting of Rev. T. W. Lewis, R. P. Lake and Rev. T. J. Newell, was appointed to employ teachers for the ensuing scholastic year. They desire teachers for the following places: music (instrumental and vocal), art combined with elocution, a Principal Hall teacher for the Collegiate Department, and a matron with good literary culture. Applications for these places will be received until May 20. An applicant should state for what salary she is willing to work.

WHERE DO YOU LIVE?

I knew a man, and his name was Horner,
Who used to live on Grumble Corner;
Grumble Corner in Cross Patch Town.
And he never was seen without a frown.
He grumbled at this; he grumbled at that;
He growled at the dog; he growled at the cat;
He grumbled at morning; he grumbled at night;
And to grumble and growl were his chief delight.

He grumbled so much at his wife that she Began to grumble as well as he;
And all the children wherever they went.
Reflected their parents' discontent.
If the sky was dark and betokened rain,
Then Mr. Horner was sure to complain;
And if there was never a cloud about.
He'd grumble because of a threatened drouth.

His meals were never to suit his taste;
He grumbled at having to eat in haste;
The bread was poor, or the meat was tough.
Or else he hadn't had half enough.
No matter how hard his wife might try
To please her husband, with scornful eye
He'd look around, and then, with a scrowl
At something or other, begin to growl.

One day, as I loitered along the street,
My old acquaintance I chanced to meet,
Whose face was without the look of care
And the ugly frown that it used to wear.
"I may be mistaken, perhaps," I said,
As, after fainting, I turned my head;
"But it is, and it isn't, the Mr. Horner
Who lived for so long on Grumble Corner!"

I met him next day, and I met him again,
In melting weather, in pouring rain,
When stocks were up and when stocks were down;
But a smile somehow had replaced the frown.
It puzzled me much; and so, one day,
I seized his hand in a friendly way,
And said: "Mr. Horner, I'd like to know
What can have happened to change you so?"

He laughed a laugh that was good to hear,
For it told of a conscience calm and clear,
And he said, with none of the old-time drawl:
"Why, I've changed my residence, that is all!"
"Changed your residence?" "Yes," said Horner,
"It wasn't healthy on Grumble Corner,
And so I moved: 'twas a change complete,
And you'll find me now on Thanksgiving Street!"

Now, every day, as I move along
The streets so filled with the busy throng,
I watch each face, and can always tell
Where men and women and children dwell;
And many a discontented mourner
Is spending his days on Grumble Corner,
Sour and sad, whom I long to entreat
To take a house on Thanksgiving Street.

Mr. Editor: It has been a long time since I wrote a letter to the Advocate, and I thought I would write again. I am a little girl thirteen years old, and go to school, and like to read the children's column very much. I have no pets. We had a little squirrel named Noody, and he got so he would bite us all, and he went off and we have not seen him since. Our preacher is Bro. Hill, and I like him very much. They have got the parsonage built now, and he has moved down here in the parsonage. We have no Sunday-school now, but will have one as soon as the roads get a little drier. Mr. J. P. Barron was the superintendent last year, and offered a prize in the Sunday-school for the one that attended the most and for the one that had the most best lessons, and two of my cousins got them. They were two nice books. Can any of the little cousins answer this question: How old was Noah when he died? Your friend,

Alice Barron.

Holloway, La.

Mr. Editor: I love to read the nice little letters in the children's corner; so please let me in this time. I want to tell you and the little cousins about our Juvenile Missionary Society. We have seventeen members, with the officers. We have a president, vice-president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary. I was elected treasurer. I feel very proud of my office. We held our first meeting last month, and, of course, you can not expect me to tell much about it yet. Our dues are five cents per month. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I always try to have good lessons and a verse to say. Our pastor is doing lots of good on his work. We all think so much of him and his wife. We have prayer meeting every week in this neighborhood. I will close. As this is my first letter to the Advocate, I hope to see it in print.

Your little friend,

Beulah P. Ferguson.

Vicksburg, Miss.

Mr. Editor: This is my seventh birthday, and as I have never seen many letters from the little cousins of Meadville, I will write one, hoping it will not find its way into the waste-basket. Bro. H. Bradford is our pastor. We have a nice Sunday-school. Papa is the superintendent. We expect a nice time on Children's Day. I have a little sister named Edna. She is four years old, and she has a pretty speech for Children's Day. Can any of the children tell me how often we have any account of our Savior riding. Please publish this for

Your little friend,

Olive O. Sullivan.

Meadville, Miss.

Mr. Editor: As it has been some time since I wrote to your dear paper, I thought I would write again. I was so proud to see my letter in print. I am always so anxious to get the Advocate. I think it is a long time between times. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. Mr. Henry is our superintendent. We like him very much. He is equal to Sam Jones to talk. Mr. W. M. Stevens is our pastor. We all think so much of him and his wife. I can not tell how much I love her. She calls me her little pet. We have prayer meeting in this neighborhood every week. Mr. Stevens and Mr. Harmon preached two splendid sermons last Sunday in our little church. I fear I have taken more space than belongs to me; so I will close, hoping to see my little letter in print. God bless the Advocate!

Your little friend,

Sarah B. Ferguson.

Mr. Editor: As I have never seen a letter from this place, I thought I would try and write a little note to join the children's column. I am a little girl nine years of age. My father takes the dear Advocate. I like to read the young folks' column. We have not got either school or Sunday-school, as we live in the country. It is six miles from where we live to the railroad. I have no mother. She stayed with me until God called her away. I will close by asking a question: Who were the sons of Isaac?

Mary Burton.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl ten years old. I go to Sunday-school at the Methodist Church every Sunday. My teacher is offering a prize to the one who gets the most perfect marks. I go to school, and am in the third grade. My grandpapa, Rev. D. W. Dillehay, was a minister; he was taken from us December 29. We miss him so much. Your little friend,

Mattie Dillehay.

Meridian Miss.

Mr. Editor: As I have never seen any letters from this community, I thought I would write a little piece. I have a calf, a pig and a cat. I have a papa and brother and step-mother and half-sister and half-brother. I will ask a question: Where in the Bible is "river" found? So good-bye for this time.

Josephine Sewell.

Victoria Mill, La.

A father gave his son a silver dollar for a Christmas gift. The little boy went to his mother and asked her how he could get another dollar. She told him she didn't know, unless he took the Bible plan, "Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure." The little fellow went out on the street and found a boy all in rags and hungry, and gave him the dollar. He then came back and told his father the pitiful story of the poor boy, and the father was so affected by it that he gave his boy two dollars. The little fellow then went to his mother with the exclamation, "The Bible plan gets the money!"—Presbyterian.

Household.

HOUSEKEEPING MELODIES.

BY CARRIE W. BRONSON.

Sing a song of cleaning house!
Pocketful of nails!
Four and twenty dustpans,
Scrubbing-brooms and pails!
When the door is opened,
Wife begins to sing:
"Just help me move the bureau here,
And hang this picture, won't you, dear?
And tack the carpet by the door,
And stretch this one a little more,
And drive this nail and screw this screw;
And here's a job I have for you—
This closet door will never catch,
I think you'll have to fix the latch;
And oh, while you're about it, John,
I wish you'd put the cornice on,
And hang this curtain, when you're done
I'll hand you up the other one;
This box has got to have a hinge
Before I can put on the fringe;
And won't you mend that broken chair?
I'd like a hook put up right there.
The bureau drawer must have a knob;
And there's another little job—
I really hate to ask you, dear—
But could you fix a bracket here?"

And on it goes, when these are through,
With this and that and those to do,
Ad infinitum, and more too,
All in a merry jingle—
And isn't it enough to make
A man wish he was single? (Almost.)

Our Every-Day Duties.

BY JULIA H. THAYER.

The fine, finishing touches, that none can see, redeem the statue from crudeness, and give it the desired perfection. The atmosphere quality that covers the artist's picture imparts to it a reality, and distinguishes it from the "hard" work of the novice. The delicate shading of the musician's touch separates him from the amateur. The huge blocks of stone upon which the cathedral rests, its massive walls and columns, exist only to support the world of lovely detail for which the structure is designed. The great forces of nature are seldom called into requisition. Cyclones are furled, earthquakes sleep, and fires smoulder through long seasons of rest. They are needed only now and then; but the vital forces, those that the world can not do without, are the tempered sunlight that usually falls unnoted, the soft atmosphere of whose presence we are unconscious, and the unseen vapors that rise to heaven and descend to earth with untold blessings.

Without the performance of constant, minute duties there can be no desirable results. Only God can estimate the value of the so-called trifles that make up the ordinary life. How few are the great things given us to do. It is our faithfulness in the dull, tedious routine of our work that is to make us rulers over great things by and by. We have not time to stop and dream of what those great things shall be; it is enough to know that when we "awake" we "shall be satisfied." This is the Alpha and the Omega of all desire.

While still at our earthly tasks, what comfort is to be found in the knowledge that the work we are doing is the exact work that God thinks we can do better than anyone else in all the world. He has made no mistake about it, and he does not wish to employ a substitute in our place. Our hands are fitted for our duties, as no other hands are, or can be. If we fail to fulfill our mission, will a something of infinite worth be lost forever out of the grand economy of the eternal plan? Who shall answer?

God has always used the little things with which to work his wondrous will. The weak are made to confound the strong, and the wisdom of this world is foolishness in his sight. We, his servants, act "not by might, nor by power, but by his spirit." If there is any might, it is God's, not ours.

The smallest, most unfavorable place in which we can find ourselves, is yet large enough and sightly enough for the building of a character-temple worthy to be the dwelling of the Lord of glory. What higher distinction can we crave? Dare we ask for more than this?—Advance.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. Chas. Heiner,

Electricity vs. the Horse.

The operation of street railways by electricity, although even now completely demonstrated to be more economical than by either horses or cables, is yet too recent to afford the more reliable figures which can only be obtained after extended use; but from an investigation recently made on a number of roads by O. T. Crosby, some very interesting data are developed. The results of Mr. Crosby's investigation show that the average cost of motive-power for the roads in Washington, Richmond, Cleveland, and Scranton, was about 5.09 cents per car mile, and the relations of the various items which go to make up this total cost are exceedingly interesting. Thus it is shown that the interest on the investment constitutes about one-fourth or one-fifth of the whole; that is to say, about one cent per car mile; coal, as a rule, about twelve per cent; attendance, about forty per cent; and the machinery and line, without interest, the remaining twenty per cent. But with all these manifest advantages of the electric railway, the best proof of its superiority is to be found in the experience of those who are using it; and if the unsolicited praise from that quarter is to be relied upon, then certainly the electric railway is an unqualified success.

At the eighth annual meeting of the American Street Railway Association, held last September at Minneapolis, the committee which had been appointed for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon electric railways, submitted a report which should finally set at rest the doubts of those who still believe the electric railway to be in the experimental stage. This committee reported in fact that "if it is desired to make a change from horse-power, electricity will fill the bill to perfection, no matter how long or short the road, or how many passengers are carried. In the investigation of the subject the most satisfactory results have been shown; it not only increases the traffic over the road, but reduces expense, and actually enables us to operate a line, which heretofore entailed a loss, at a profit."—Scribner.

Northern Lights.

Auroras are most frequently seen in the cold and in the northern temperate zone, rarely in the southern temperate zone, and hardly ever in the tropics. The places where they most frequently appear lie between the sixtieth and twentieth degrees of north latitude. In the form of an oval, they include the geographical as well as the magnetic north pole, which is to be found on the peninsula Boothia Felix, Iceland, the Kara Sea, northern Siberia, Bering Strait, Hudson Bay, Labrador and Greenland. Northern lights have been seen as far down as the twenty-fifth degree of north latitude. In full splendor, however, they may be seen only in the northern polar regions to the seventy-fifth degree of latitude. Here nature is displayed in all her grandeur. When the sun has set, and the gray veil of twilight is cast over the earth, the northern horizon grows darker and darker. Soon there may be distinguished a segment of the sky more somber than its background; this is hemmed in by white concentric arcs of light. Colored rays shoot forth therefrom in all directions. They interlace and intertwine until they seem to be woven into one fluttering band of color. And anon it changes to a sea of fire! The rays leap upward far above the zenith, form there a flaming crown, and then sink back, to begin anew the wondrous play. The most beautiful descriptions and trustworthy observations we owe to Nordenskjold and Ekama. All explanations which have been attempted as to the origin and the cause of northern lights are based on analysis by the spectroscope, on the determination of the elevation, and on observations of the peculiar behavior of the magnetic needle.—Popular Science Monthly.

of deaths that result from malaria is frightful. There is no disease that is so insidious in its attack. Its approach is stealthy and it permeates every fibre of the body, and romedies, which if applied at the outset, by delay lose their power. Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills have proven the most valuable malarial antidote ever discovered. A noted clergyman of New York pronounces them "the greatest blessing of the nineteenth century," and says: "In these days of defective plumbing and sewer gas, no family should be without them." WRIGHT—Little HENRY TATUM, infant son of Henry and Annie Wright, was translated April 28. One year of bright sunshine. One year of joyous happiness the little fellow gave his parents, and that was enough to fulfill his mission on earth, and the Savior took him to himself. Now he is safe forever, having escaped all the snares and risks of an evil world. His little life developed a pure and holy love in the hearts of the members of the family, which could not have otherwise been called forth. The strain is on the faith at such a time; but the Savior assures us, that the little ones, in life and in death, are his peculiar care. He takes them to himself to attract us to a better life and a happier world. EDITOR.

HOWELL—Mrs. LUCINDA A. HOWELL was born March 17, 1841; was married to Bro. B. W. Howell, who survives her, April 30, 1862, and died at her home, Oakley, La., March 5, 1890.

She joined the church very early in life. The writer has known her since 1855. She was raised by truly pious parents, who taught her, by precept and example, the principles and practice of the Christian religion. So effective were those parental teachings that they moulded her character, so that her future life developed itself into a full-grown and mature Christian.

She was not of a complaining disposition, never murmured at her lot or fortune, and was ever resigned to the ways of Providence. She was charitable almost to a fault. Her heart was ever ready to sympathize with the suffering, and her hands to administer to their necessities. Of her own children she leaves two daughters and one son—all now grown; but there are three little motherless children who were sharing the hospitality of her home and for whom she was caring and acting the part of a mother. Not only will her own children "rise up and call her blessed," but others for whom she has cared will chime in with their testimony, and "her husband also, and he praiseth her." This will be the burden of their song: "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."

The home of Bro. Howell, presided over by his good wife, was a home and resting-place for the weary itinerant preacher. Many members of the Louisiana Conference can testify of the generous hospitality and sumptuous repast of which they have partaken with that happy family. Sister Howell was a lover of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and had been a reader of it for a number of years. She was a constant reader of the Bible from early childhood. The latter years of her life the most of her reading was in the New Testament, from which she learned the rules of faith and practice, and to which rules she conformed her life. She died, as she had lived, in the triumphs of saving faith and full assurance of her acceptance in Christ, beloved and lamented by all who knew her.

A. W. MOORE.

ADAMS—JULIA A. WINBURN was born near Leaksville, Greene county, Miss., October 22, 1863, and died at DeSoto, Miss., on February 14, 1890, in a relapse from an attack of the prevalent disease known as la grippe. She lost her parents when only seven or eight years of age; was reared by an uncle, Mr. Robert Weems. To him and his family she greatly endeared herself by the kind and unselfish ways that marked her course in life so plainly. As a girl, she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the pastorate of Dr. T. S. West, and remained a faithful member till called to her reward. When quite young—November 26, 1879—she became the beloved wife of Mr. George H. Adams. To him she was an helpmeet indeed—carefully tending and training the four lovely young olive plants that grew up around their table. During the last year the business of the husband called him much away from home. She proved her worth as a home-keeper and justified the confidence he reposed. The kind and warm hospitality to her preacher will not soon be forgotten by those who have so freely enjoyed it.

Her life was sufficient testimony without dying words. These were precluded by the suddenness of the summons. HER PASTOR.

BRASHER—Again the angel of death has been among us, gathering sheaves for the Master. Little GUNBY BRASHER, the jewel and treasure of his parents, breathed his last on December 8, 1889, aged eleven months and twenty-three days. With an almost broken heart, and voice filled with tears, the mother cries, How can I give my baby up? God wants your baby, mother dear, and will keep him safe till you come!

May the kind, loving Father, who sent this grief, so sanctify it to the parents' hearts that they can submissively say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" is the wish of a friend. KATE MCHENRY.

WINBORNE—Mrs. TEMPERANCE WINBORNE (nee Brister) was born in Greenville district, S. C., February 29, 1809. When seven years old she moved, with her father, to Mississippi. When ten years old she was converted and joined the Methodist Church, in which she remained all her life. She was married to Rev. John H. Winborne, October 6, 1836, and died March 9, 1890. Thus ended a long life, seventy-one years of which were devoted to the service of her Savior.

Religion with her was a living, practical principle. It formed the basis of all the virtuous traits in her character, and sustained her in all her afflictions. She was a good neighbor, a devoted wife, and an affectionate mother. She esteemed it a privilege to visit and relieve the suffering. She reared eight children—seven of whom are in the church of her choice. Besides these, she reared five orphans. About the last words she uttered were that "her way was clear. I have lived as near right as I knew how." Her work on earth is done; her sufferings are over; she has gone to her reward. Eternity alone will reveal the good done by this quiet, consecrated woman. Beginning early in life, she had a long life in which to serve her God. May the grace of God that supported her so long sustain the bereaved husband and children she leaves behind!

Her pastor, M. H. MOORE.

SPICKARD—Mrs. PERMELIA A., wife of Mr. J. Harry Spickard, was borne in Greene county, Miss., January 3, 1850; married September 4, 1869, and died at DeSoto, Miss., February 24, 1890. The immediate cause of her death was double pneumonia. This was preceded by prevalent influenza. No doubt, too early return to her household duties caused this relapse—for our sister was a veritable Martha. With a large family to care for, and nearly everyone in the community more or less sick, this was but natural. She died in the communion of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which her afflicted husband and older children were also members. She met death without any apparent alarm, being fully aware of its approach. Her only regret seemed to be in leaving her fond family behind. She seemed greatly to enjoy religious service at her bedside, and expressed unwavering faith in the Redeemer. May all that sorely stricken household find comfort and final salvation through his name! J. P. DRAKE.

BOSWELL—Little MARY, daughter of M. T. and B. H. Boswell, died at their home, in Kosciusko, Miss., April 5, 1890, aged four years two months and eighteen days.

Mary was a bright, beautiful and sweet little girl. She loved the Sunday-school and services of the sanctuary. We thought that we could see in her the budding of a beautiful character and useful life. But the Lord plucked the flower before it matured and transferred it to heaven. Without hate, suspicion or care, she fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, who said, "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven." And now, in all her childish innocency and angelic purity, she is where there is no more separation, pain or death.

The funeral services were conducted in the church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers for Easter service. May the bereaved loved ones have a sweet reunion in the better land! J. T. MOODY.

WALKER—CLARENCE BENJAMIN WALKER, son of J. A. and O. B. Walker, was born in Harrison county, Miss., November 20, 1888, and departed this life March 29, 1890, aged one year four months and eight days.

It seemed to be a great struggle with father, mother and the little sisters and brothers to part with little Clarence Benjamin. But you should not weep for him, for he is now enjoying that grand kingdom that our blessed Savior spoke of when he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." Yes, little Clarence is in the sweet by-and-by, waiting for father and mother, sisters and brothers. May the good Lord bless the father and mother, and help them to train those children who are with them for Christ and his church, that they may meet their little brother in heaven! J. H. HOLLAND.

CURRIE—ABRAM W. CURRIE, son of the late Adaline Whittaker and William C. Currie, died on September 27, 1889, at his residence, near San Paulo, Brazil. He was born in the State of Mississippi, March 18, 1838. The deceased had been afflicted with the disease which proved fatal many years ("torpidity of the liver").

His death is much to be deplored, as he leaves a devoted wife, three sons, besides sisters and other relations to mourn his untimely loss. But, thank God, we mourn not as those without hope! Now, let us who are left strive more earnestly to meet him in heaven, where all sufferings and sorrowful partings are over, and where we shall be washed in the blood of the Lamb.

A SISTER.

BURKS—The infant daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Burks was born December 25, 1889; died March 14, 1890. Weep not, dear parents; for little MAMIE wears a pair of bright wings and is happier in a land that is fairer than this. PASTOR.

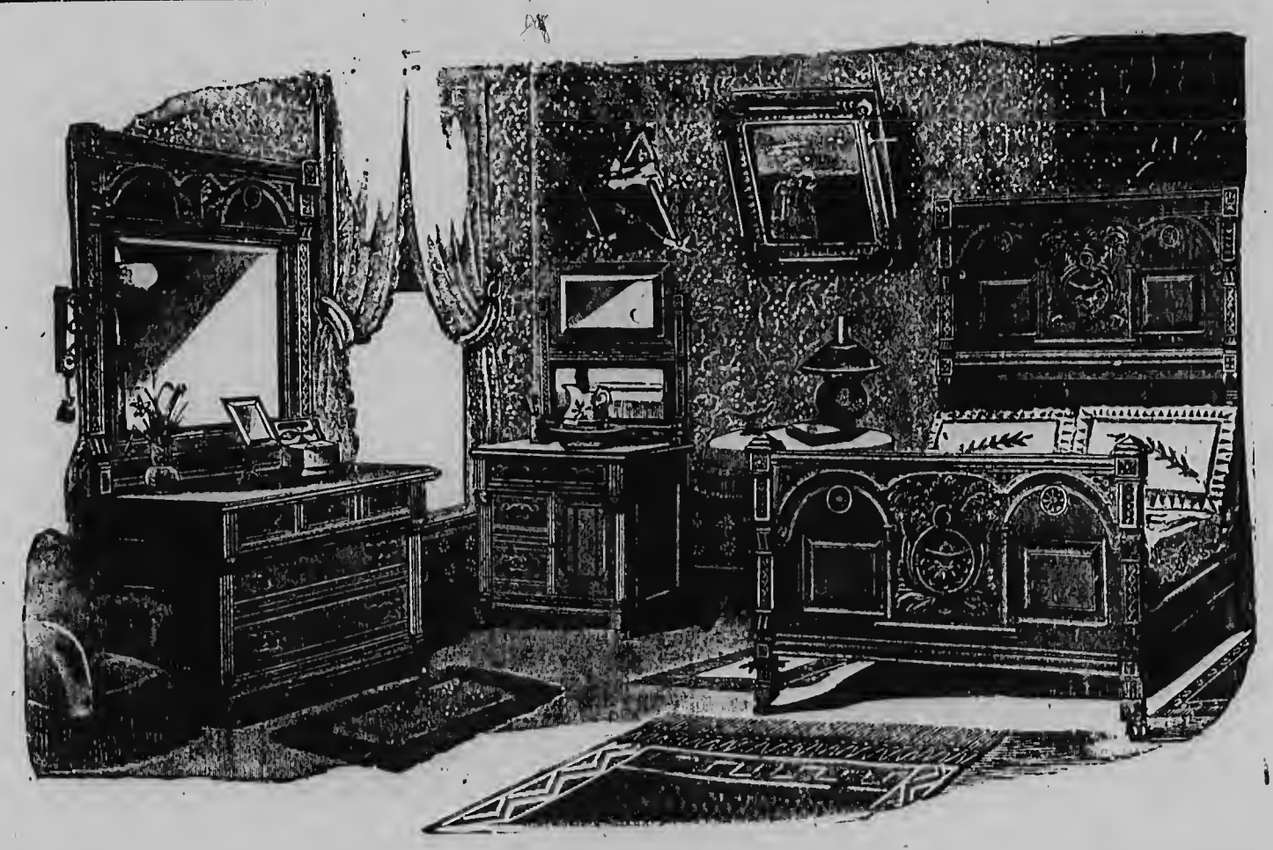
GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE,
at 44 and 46 Baronne St., into which I have recently moved, is one of the finest buildings in the city, with a floor space of over 25,000 square feet, and is fully equipped with all modern improvements. It is very centrally located, being only one block from Canal St., and I hope to be favored by a call from you when in the city.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

During the second day of the great levee convention at Vicksburg, Miss., May 1, the plans of the Mississippi River Commission were unanimously adopted, and the outlet theory was declared impracticable and destructive. It was resolved that the government should take national control of the levees, as of the seaboard.

American workmen inaugurated the eight-hour movement, on May 1, by orderly demonstrations in the leading cities. Boston, Detroit and Philadelphia carpenters have struck to enforce their demands.

The Board of Railroad Commissioners of Kansas has received petitions signed by 2,000 farmers of Central Kansas asking for lower rates to the Missouri river on farm products.

Senator James B. Beck, of Kentucky, dropped dead in the B. and O. railroad station, Washington, on May 3. In 1866, just as the war closed, Mr. Beck was sent to the House of Representatives for the Lexington District, and, except for a few months, he has ever since been a member of one of the two branches of Congress.

A crevasse has occurred at Hermitage and is spreading ruin and devastation to Pointe Coupee, West Baton Rouge and other parishes.

Acting Secretary Ramsey has issued orders for the squadron of evolution, last reported at Malta, to proceed to Brazil for duty on the South Atlantic station. While no explanation of the transfer is given, it is generally accepted to mean a decree on the part of the administration to foster and cement friendly relations with the South American republics.

A resolution appropriating $1,000,000 for the Mississippi river, to be immediately available, to be expended under the Mississippi River Commission, passed the House on May 3. It is to be charged up against the item of $2,000,000 for the river in the regular Rivers and Harbors bill.

Governor Stone, of Mississippi, has declined the assistance of the national government in aiding the flood sufferers of that State.

The distribution of federal rations to the overflowed sufferers is progressing finely and rapidly, but with sound discretion. Up to May 4, 258,500 rations have been purchased in New Orleans, and the most urgent calls from Arkansas and Louisiana have been answered. Besides these 107,000 rations have been purchased in Memphis and distributed in Tennessee where needed.

An unprecedented torrent is pouring down from Arkansas and Texas into the Red river, and thousands of acres in Louisiana have been inundated by the flood.

Several towns in Texas were visited by terrific storms on May 5. Crops were ruined by enormous hail-stones, several persons were killed and many wounded.

FOREIGN.

Labor Day, May 1, was celebrated in most of the leading cities of Europe. In Paris the police and crowds had the usual skirmishes, resulting in about 300 arrests. At Pesth a riot occurred, in which the mob was charged by the military and many of the rioters were stoned by bayonets. The workmen throughout Italy were prevented holding demonstrations by the interference of the police.

Mr. Gladstone has written a letter, in which he exhorts the working class to consider closely their present position. He says: "There may come a time when labor will prove too strong for capital and may use its strength unjustly, but capital will surely hold its own." In conclusion, he expresses a wish to see labor and art allied with the view of alleviating and adorning the life of man.

Nine thousand men were dismissed from employment in Hamburg, for being absent from work on May 1—Labor Day.

The strikers in Barcelona, Spain, had complete possession of that city on May 2. Bodies of strikers proceeded to the various printing offices throughout the city, and by threats compelled the compositors to leave their work. In consequence, no newspapers were published next day.

An orderly demonstration was made in Hyde Park, on May 4, by half a million of laborers. Noted speakers addressed the meeting, and an eight-hour day was demanded.

The British East Africa Company has issued a proclamation, which is indorsed by the native governor and elders, declaring that henceforth no natives of tribes connected by treaty with the British company will be recognized as slaves, and further that such natives will obtain their freedom without the payment of compensation.

It is stated that all misunderstandings between the German Emperor and Bismarck are being explained, and that a reconciliation is at hand.

Numerous complaints have been received by the authorities in Berlin regarding the severity of the new passport regulations in Russia. The regulations provide that the passports of all foreigners must state the religion of the bearers, who, in case of failure to comply with this provision, will be registered as Jews, and will not be allowed to travel anywhere except in the districts where Jews are permitted to reside.

The German government will ask the Reichstag at its coming session to grant a supplementary credit of 4 000,000 marks on account of the operations conducted in east Africa by Major Wissmann.

"Tired All the Time,"

Say many poor men and women, who seem overworked, or are debilitated by change of season, climate or life. If you could read the hundreds of letters praising Hood's Sarsaparilla which come from people whom it has restored to health, you would be convinced of its merits. As this is impossible, why not try Hood's Sarsaparilla yourself and thus realize its benefit? It will tone and build up your system, give you a good appetite, overcome that tired feeling and make you feel, as one woman expresses it, "like a new creature."

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

Has any Southern religious book ever sold like "The Man of Galilee?" Appeared May, 1889; the tenth thousand in press March, 1890. Sent postpaid for eighty cents to any address.

Camp Meeting.

The nineteenth annual camp meeting, on the Seashore Camp Grounds, will open on Friday evening, July 11, next, and continue for ten days. The trustees have made arrangements to provide ample accommodations for the increasing annual attendance. Eminent preachers will assist as heretofore in the public religious services. Steps have already been taken to secure reduced rates over the various connecting railroads. The camp grounds are located on the line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and are 78 miles distant from New Orleans, and 68 miles from Mobile. They have a width of 1,600 feet frontage on the Mississippi Sound. The sea bathing afforded here is unsurpassed. An abundance of fine shade trees provide shelter from the summer's sun; while pure refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stilling cities and interior towns.

Parties desiring to rent rooms before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address their communications to W. B. Thomson, Esq., 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. All inquiries regarding transportation should be sent to Capt. A. C. Danner, Mobile, Ala.

The Reception Committee, of which the president is chairman, will secure, as far as possible, lodging accommodations for all preachers free of charge, and tickets for meals at the restaurant at half-rates as heretofore. Private boarding-tents furnish accommodations to visitors at very moderate rates, in addition to those afforded by the trustees. A small gate-fee is charged for entering the grounds, which is employed towards defraying the expense of their care and improvement. The growing attractiveness of these grounds as a summer resting-place, and the experienced management of the public services, have advertised the place to thousands.

As the property of the Southern Methodist Church, only its members can own cottages or tents on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, subject to the rules, and are heartily welcome. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of precious souls. For a copy of the rules and other data apply to

Every Lady.

HER OWN PHYSICIAN.—A Lady who for many years suffered from Uterine Troubles—Falling, Displacements, Leucorrhœa and Irregularities—finally found remedies which completely CURED her. Any Lady can take the remedies and thus cure herself without the aid of a physician. The recipes with full directions and advice securely sealed, sent FREE to any sufferer. Address MRS. M. J. BRADIE, 252 So. 10th St., Philada., Pa. (Name this paper.)

Red-Hot Anti Literature!

A movement is now on foot to start a series of publications in New Orleans, to be known as the "Crescent City Anti Series." They are to be Anti-Lottery, Anti-Whisky, Anti-Monopoly, Anti-Sin, and Anti-Devil in character, and Red-Hot in disposition. No favors will be asked from the evils that threaten the speedy destruction of our social and religious systems, and none will be shown.

The first number of the series (to be out May 15) will be "Red-Hot Anti-Lottery." It will contain two addresses by the Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., with an addenda of facts, figures, home thrusts, etc., that will make it particularly interesting to the enemies of the La. S. L., and peculiarly horrifying to its friends. It will contain 100 12mo pages, sixteen full-page illustrations, novel and very striking.

The series will be issued quarterly, will be nearly uniform in style and size, and will be furnished to subscribers at $1 per year, or 25 cents a number.

Subscriptions should be sent at once, with cash; or they can be ordered through any preacher or newsdealer.

Mansfield Female College
Conservatory of Music and Art.
MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-sixth session opened September 11, 1889, and the Spring Term begins February 1, 1890, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technichnne are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this deparment beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED ANCIENT EDITION.

A so-called "Webster's Unabridged Dictionary" is being offered to the public at a very low price. The body of the book, from A to Z, is a cheap reprint, page for page, of the edition of 1847, which was in its day, a valuable book, but in the progress of language for over FORTY YEARS, has been completely superseded. It is now reproduced, broken type, errors and all, by photo-lithograph process, is printed on cheap paper and flimsily bound. A brief comparison, page by page, between the reprint and the latest and enlarged edition, will show the great superiority of the latter. These reprints are as out of date as a last year's almanac. No honorable dealer will allow the buyer of such to suppose that he is getting the Webster which to-day is accepted as the Standard and THE BEST,—every copy of which bears our imprint as given below.

AN ARAB SAYING.

Remember, three things come not back:
The arrow sent upon its track—
It will not swerve, it will not stay
Its speed; it flies to wound or slay.

The spoken word, so soon forgot
By thee; but it has perished not;
In other hearts 'tis living still,
And doing work for good or ill.

And the lost opportunity,
That cometh back no more to thee,
In vain thou weepest, in vain dost yearn,
Those three will nevermore return.

Proceedings of the General Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The eleventh Quadrennial Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, began its sessions at Centenary Church, St. Louis, Wednesday morning, May 7; Bishop John C. Keener, the senior Bishop of the church, presiding, and all the Bishops being present on the platform. At 9:15 Bishop Keener called the Conference to order, and announced the tenth hymn, at the same time calling upon Dr. Peterson to raise the tune. The hymn was read by the Bishop, and its opening words are:

"O thou, whom all thy saints adore,
We now with all thy saints agree."

After the singing Bishop Wilson led in prayer. Bishop Granbery read the sixty-second chapter of Isaiah. Bishop Hargrove read the second lesson from the first chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Colossians. Bishop Duncan announced the 206th hymn, beginning,

"Glorious things of thee are spoken," and the venerable Dr. Andrew Hunter, of Arkansas, closed the opening exercises with a second prayer, in which occurred the sentiment, "May we live for God, die happy in religion, and go home to glory." After several ballots Dr. W. F. Harrison, Book Editor, was elected secretary, and nominated as his assistants W. A. Candler, J. M. Mason, and J. J. Tigert, who were accordingly elected. Dr. Peterson, of Virginia, offered a resolution that a committee of five be appointed to report rules of order for the government of the body, and that in the meanwhile the Conference be governed by the rules of order of the last General Conference. Dr. Whitehead moved that the rules of the last General Conference be adopted as the rules for this body. After much discussion the former resolution was adopted. Dr. Peterson also offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the standing committees be composed of one delegate from each Annual Conference, named by respective delegations as follows: (1) Episcopacy, (2) Itinerancy, (3) Revisal, (4) Publishing Interest, (5) Education, (6) Missions, (7) Church Extension, (8) Sunday-schools, (9) Bouudaries, (10) Appeal, (11) Finance.

It was adopted.

The next order of business was an address of welcome read by Rev. John Mathews, and feliottously responded to by Bishop Keener. A standing committee on temporance was ordered, to be composed of one delegate from each Annual Conference; also a committee on the Bible cause, to be composed of nine persons, and a committee on the Sabbath question, to be composed of nine persons. The address of the Bishops, read by Bishop A. W. Wilson, followed, and is an able and exhaustive document. It will be published in full in the next issue of the ADVOCATE.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Religious services were conducted by Dr. Anson West, of the North Alabama Conference. The report of J. D. Barbee, Book Agent, was presented, and referred, without reading, to the Committee on Publishing Interests. A communication from J. D. Barbee, treasurer of the fund for defraying the expenses of the General Conference, asking instructions, was read, and referred to the Committee on Finance; after which the standing committees were announced, and the Conference adjourned.

The opening service of the General Conference, especially, was most solemn and impressive. The galleries of the spacious auditorium of Centenary Church were crowded with friendly and interested spectators, while the members of the body occupied the floor below, with visitors crowding the house to the doors. The pulpit and chancel were tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens; the word "Welcome," worked in red roses on a background of green, being conspicuous. The singing was inspiring, and during the prayers the presence and unction of the Holy Spirit was manifest.

The statistics of the Conferences represented show that there are in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1,177,150 members, which represents an increase during four years of 186,156. The missions in China and Brazil have been erected into Annual Conferences.

SECOND DAY.

Bishop Keener's gavel fell a few minutes past nine o'clock, and the exercises of the day began with the reading of the Scriptures by H. P. Walker, who selected for the morning lesson the second chapter of Philippians, which was followed by the singing of Hymn 42, beginning,

"Father, how wide thy glories shine," after which he led in prayer.

At the request of the secretary, the president directed the call of the roll for the purpose of perfecting the same.

On the motion of John J. Tigert, the calling of the roll, after the present session, was dispensed with.

A number of memorials and resolutions on various subjects were presented and referred, some of which will be heard of at a later period of the session. After some discussion involving the integrity of the Daily Advocate's reports of proceedings, Samuel Rodgers, of Baltimore Conference, offered a resolution authorizing the Publishing House to procure the necessary help to report the proceedings each day.

John W. Boswell: I favor the resolution. The proposition made by Dr. Andrews is the only method by which the Conference can get at the truth of the proceedings. We have tried to print the proceedings, and have succeeded, to some extent, in printing some things in the Daily Advocate. If the proposition of Dr. Andrews prevails, we can give you as near a perfect record as is possible under the circumstances; but we will be behind one day in printing the proceedings of the General Conference; but I think we had better be one day behind than always wrong.

John J. Lafferty: I want to stand up for the House. (Laughter.) If you carry out this policy, it will consume everything you have got. You will have to issue more bonds. I will state the reasons: In Washington there is just about this number of people in the lower House, and they publish the Congressional Record. Sometimes it contains fifty-two pages. They have five stenographers, at a salary of $5,000 a year each. These men relieve each other every ten minutes. They have a government printing office that you could hide our Publishing House in the cellar of, and you could not find it. (Laughter.) If you undertake to have full debates printed here, you will have to make the Daily Advocate about a twelve-page paper. It will take every cent of the "produce" of the House, and you will weep for the widows and orphans. (Laughter.) If this is carried out to its full measure, you will have to have five stenographers and extra presses. Now, then, you can just form your own opinion about it. Any member of the House of Congress has the privilege of examining his speech, and I reckon that's what we want. (Laughter.) A fellow gets tangled up and falls over himself. In the course of about ten or fifteen minutes he can have furnished him what he did say; but you never see that in print. He sets down and writes out what he wishes that he had said (Laughter.), and puts it in the Record next morning. Now, if we undertake that, we will have to have five stenographers, and we will all be in the back room writing for life, and this auditorium will be vacated, and there will be nobody but the Bishops left here. (Laughter.) Besides that, we will have to sell our watches, and I won't mention what else that Asbury sold to pay the expense. (Laughter.)

W. O. Gray, of Missouri Conference: I move that the substitute lay on the table.

The motion was carried.

The president: The original resolution is now before you.

O. R. Blue: I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion was carried, and the resolution was laid on the table.

T. J. Duncan presented the following resolution:

WORLDLY AMUSEMENTS.

Whereas, The Word of God forbids conformity to the world; And, whereas, The General Rules of our church inhibit the same, and the vows of membership assumed by all coming into her fold pledge them to its renunciation and obedience to her Discipline; And, whereas, Our Bishops, in their annual addresses, from time to time, emphasize these facts and the damage to the spirituality of the church on account of worldliness; And, whereas, As itinerant preachers, we promised "to keep and not to mend our rules," and in our ordination vows pledged ourselves to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to the Word of God; And, whereas, We regard theater-going, dancing and card-playing and the like, so often indulged in by many of our members, as in clear violation of their religious vows, and the failure of some of our pastors to notice their violation as inconsistent with ministerial vows; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we greatly deplore the danger that comes to the purity and power of our beloved church from this state of affairs.

Resolved, That we urge our pastors to give all diligence in warning our people against the danger of worldliness along the lines indicated, and to execute with love and fidelity the requirements of the Discipline in such cases.

Resolved, That we regard the impressions made on the minds of our young people by the use of such expressions as "reformed theaters," "legitimate drama" and the like, as misleading and dangerous, and the more so if they emanate from a preacher of the gospel, and we heartily condemn the use of these expressions by our preachers as hurtful to the cause.

B. F. HAYNES,
T. J. DUNCAN,
R. K. BROWN,
T. A. KERLEY,
J. M. WRIGHT.

The preamble and resolutions were discussed by T. J. Dunean, A. S. Andrews, and J. E. Edwards.

Pending the discussion of the resolution, Paul Whitehead moved to refer it to the Committee on Revisal. R. N. Price moved as a substitute, that it be adopted. It was moved that it be laid on the table, which motion did not prevail. J. R. Brooks moved that its consideration be postponed until Friday, May 9, at 12:30 o'clock, and that it be printed in the Daily Advocate. The previous question was ordered, upon the motion of J. R. Brooks, and upon the question being taken, the motion to postpone did not prevail. The question then recurring upon the motion of R. N. Price, the resolutions were adopted.

D. C. Kelley offered the following resolution, which elicited a lively debate:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this General Conference that lay members of this body are eligible to appointment on all of its committees.

T. A. KERLEY,
B. F. HAYNES,
D. C. KELLEY.

D. C. Kelley supported the resolution with much earnestness.

D. C. Kelley made a very strong and forcible speech in support of the resolution.

H. V. Philpott offered the following substitute:

That it is the sense of this body that laymen be appointed upon all the committees of this Conference except the Committee on Appeals.

H. V. PHILPOTT.

H. V. Philpott supported the substitute by a strong speech of some twenty minutes' duration. He was followed by Paul Whitehead, who spoke against the substitute very strongly, and in favor of the resolution.

A. C. Miller, of North Alabama, said, as a layman, he was opposed to the resolution offered by D. C. Kelley.

H. P. Walker opposed the resolution with great vigor.

THIRD DAY.*

The report of the Board of Church Extension shows the receipts to be $109,986 96, and the same amount was expended in donations to churches and other expenses.

A memorial from the Northwest Texas Conference called for sundry changes in the Discipline, one feature being a prohibition of licensing women to preach. No woman has ever been authorized to preach by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and there is little probability that one would be authorized, though the church has never made an utterance one way or the other regarding the matter.

The proceedings were interrupted by Bishop Granbery to introduce to the Conference Rev. David J. Waller, secretary of the British Wesleyan Conference, and Wesleyan Educational Department, Trinity College, Westminster, London, England, the first delegate ever sent to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from the mother Conference. Mr. Waller was received by the delegates standing. When they had resumed their seats he expressed his satisfaction at the completion of his journey. He said:

"I have traveled 4,000 miles to come to you and have realized that there was more than the broad Atlantic to cross in coming to you. I have also realized that while you have cities of magnificent distances, yours is a country of marvelous distances. I have adopted the American habit of traveling at night to reach you in season. At some future occasion I shall hope to lay before you the message I bring."

The debate on the question of admitting laymen on all committees was resumed. Mr. Brown, of the Little Rock Conference, said that be was Sanctification.

BY H. CARRADINE, D. D.

(Concluded.)

Sanctification is a blessing obtained by faith.

No man can create by any energy or power of his own a "pure heart." When David wanted that, he looked up. No man can evolve out of himself as beautiful and heavenly and blessed a thing as holiness. If he could do so, he would perform a greater work than Christ.

It is granted by all, that Christ pardons. But if a man can, by certain duties and religious performances, produce holiness of heart, he has outstripped Christ, for a holy man must certainly take rank over a simply pardoned man, both on earth and in heaven.

This being so, you would be entitled to greater praise and honor in heaven than the Son of God. The song you would sing about the throne would be, "He pardoned me, but I made myself holy." "Christ Jesus is made unto me wisdom and righteousness"—"but I am made unto myself sanctification."

See to what an absurdity of conclusion we are brought by starting out with the idea that holiness is obtained by the works of the law. "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you; having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?"

The writer has just been informed of a still more flagrant error. It was advanced from the pulpit by one of the leading ministers in our church. He said that holiness was obtained by meditation! The verse he quoted to prove his statement was Prov. xxiii, 7: "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Let the reader turn to the verse and read it in its connection, and then stand amazed at such an exposition and application of Scripture.

The brother's idea is not far from the East India conception of holiness. The pagan devotee sits down, crosses his feet, fixes his eyes upon them until they get crossed, falls into a brown study, and waits for holiness.

Certainly, that man knows nothing of the Bible and nothing of the truly religious life, if he has not discovered that all spiritual blessings come by pure faith.

It is through faith we are converted. It is through faith we have received ten thousand pardons and consolations and deliverances since that day. And it is through faith we come into the blessing and enjoyment of sanctification.

In proof we quote only three passages from the Word of God. The first is Gal. iii, 2, 3, and 14: "This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh; for the just shall live by faith. That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." The whole passage is overwhelming. But I call attention mainly to the last line. What is this promise of the Spirit that was to be had through faith but the blessing of sanctification, which Christ told his disciples to tarry for at Jerusalem. "Wait," he said, "for the promise of the Father." The second chapter of Acts tells us that they obtained it; and it came through faith.

Take another passage—this time in Acts xv, 8 and 9: "And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." Now, mark you, these italicized words were spoken of believers. This purification was a work subsequent to regeneration. It is identified with the blessing of Pentecost, and it was obtained by faith!

One more, and we conclude this point. Acts xxvi, 18: "Unto whom I now send thee to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me."

Reader, do you realize that this is Christ speaking to Paul; that it is Christ who presents here two classes in the spiritual life, the forgiven and the sanctified, and that he divides them clearly, not only by terms, but by the word "and," which we have italicized? And do you notice that he says that this second class had been sanctified by faith in him? This verse, to my mind, is unanswerable.

If, as I have shown by God's Word, that the blessing of a holy heart can be secured instantaneously, and is to be obtained through faith, why not have the pearl of great price right now? Why not believe and be filled now with all "the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ!"

Sanctification is a state or condition witnessed to by the Holy Ghost.

Had you thought that the Holy Ghost witnesses to every state in the spiritual life? Every sinner that lives has the witness of condemnation. The Spirit bears witness with his spirit, that he is a child of sin and Satan, and on the road to everlasting death.

Moreover, the Spirit bears witness to grades to sinful life and character. The Holy Ghost has long ago told the wicked man how corrupt and perverse and abandoned he was, and how he was surpassing others in iniquity.

Again, the Holy Ghost bore witness to your conversion. He declared to you, indescribably, that you were a child of God, pardoned of your sins, and washed from your personal guilt and transgressions.

Again, he brought from the Trinity your call to preach, and bore witness to it. And on a certain occasion of the past, after you had been agonizing in prayer for days, respecting the salvation of some dear one, he bore witness to your spirit, that the prayer was heard, and that the answer would come in due time. Do you remember how you arose instantly from your knees without another doubt, and how silly your confidence seemed to outsiders, but how precious to yourself?

Moreover, the Spirit has borne witness to your spirit of inbred sin, convicting you afresh, as he did Isaiah, of inward uncleanness. You have felt it on sudden calls of responsible religious duty, unexpected calls to preach, or to pray with the dying, or to direct a penitent sinner to Christ, or you have been made powerfully to feel it under a sermon on holiness, or when you were a very sick man, with little hope of recovery. These are the favorite times of the Spirit to tell the Christian he has something wrong in him.

Finally, when you fully and forever consecrated yourself to God, and trusted Christ for sanctification, the Holy Ghost bore witness to the blessed work done in the soul.

The fact, that you can not grasp now or understand this witness, does not affect or alter the matter a particle. A man of the world can not comprehend the Spirit's witness to conversion; a Christian layman can not take in the Spirit's call to the ministry, and a regenerated man can not realize how the Holy Ghost can witness to any state or experience different from the one he enjoys.

I certainly can not be expected to know how a place looks until I see it. Do you remember your disappointment and surprises on this line? Nor can I know a book until I read it, or have a satisfactory idea how certain fruit tastes until I eat it. A blind man has no conception of colors, and though you may pile description upon description of this world, he has a most confused and incorrect notion of what nature is, and, if his sight is restored, is amazed at what he beholds.

It is exactly so in the spiritual life; the things of God have to be experienced in order to be understood. And this law prevails in all the ascending and successive steps of religious experience. The higher experience yet to come is like an undiscovered land to me until I go through. Of necessity, it is a mystery until my experience of the grace solves and clears it up. I may even believe there is such a grace and witness; but until that grace has become mine, and I have heard the Spirit saying to my heart, "Child, you are clean," how can I speak intelligently and explain the work and word satisfactorily to others? There may be a road leading to a distant city; but until I have traveled that road, and, in a sense, made it mine, it is bound to be an unknown thoroughfare to me. But, mark you, although strange to me, it may be thoroughly known to others.

Hence it is that the scoff and denial of the experience and witness of sanctification comes with a poor grace from one who confesses he has never sought or obtained the blessing. This is tantamount to saying that he does not believe in the existence of London because he has never been there, or he doubts that Jenny Lind had a voice because he never heard her sing; or, closer still, that he heard her sing one song, but does not believe that she ever sung another song in a different key.

The denial of the witness of sanctification when sifted down merely means that the brother who denies it has simply never had the witness himself. He thinks that the Spirit has but one song for the soul, and speaks in one key, and testifies to but one fact.

Such a man denies the existence of a sensation or emotion or experience because he has never had his intellect or sensibilities stirred in that direction. He demands to understand a thing before complying with conditions, the observance of which alone can bring one into the knowledge and experience of the thing itself.

Such a principle adopted and applied in life would stop every wheel, revolutionize and reverse the working of the greatest laws in the kingdom of nature and grace.

Suppose an unconverted man should say to a Christian: "I do not believe that the Spirit of God witnesses to your pardon; I can't understand it, have never felt it myself, and don't believe a word of it," what, think you, would be the feeling of that regenerated man? Would there not be a half sad, half amused stirring of the heart? Do you think he would agree with the unconverted man and give up his experience because of the ignorance of the other? and what would he reply? He would unquestionably say that he doubted not that his unbelieving friend was sincere, and that to him there was no witness of pardon; but that, nevertheless, there was such an experience, and it would come to all who complied with the conditions laid down in the Bible of repentance and faith.

So the skeptical smile and word turned on the man enjoying the blessing of sanctification does not in the least wise disconcert him, or cause him to doubt the experience of purity and the voice of the Spirit declaring the fact to him continually. Nor is he puzzled to understand the secret of the unbelief of his brother in regard to the witness and the life of sanctification. He knows that the blessing simply has not come to him that the voice of the Holy Ghost that has said many blessed things to him, has not yet uttered the thrilling words: "Child, you are clean; I have made your heart pure; I have sanctified you wholly." And he knows that when the conditions of a perfect consecration and a perfect faith are complied with, then will the experience be set up, and the witness come, and not till then.

My beloved reader, let me ask, Shall the Holy Spirit be kept to one string on the golden harp of redemption, confined and kept down to one note, made to testify to just a single fact all through the changing life of a Christian, and that fact, his pardon? Is there no such thing as purity and holiness in the dispensation of the Holy Ghost? Can't he produce these conditions? And if he does, will he not witness to his work, and let a man know that he has a pure heart and is now sanctified?

Your reply is, that you can see in the Bible where the witness to pardon and conversion is taught, but not where the witness to sanctification appears.

Suppose you turn to I. Cor. ii, 12: "Now we have received not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." Is not purity and holiness one of the works of God? If we obtain it, this verse says that the Spirit will let us know.

Now turn to Acts xv, 8, and read: "And God which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost." The verse that follows tells what had happened, that God had purified their hearts by faith. And now he sends the Holy Ghost to bear witness to the purity imparted.

Now let the reader turn to Hebrews x, 14, and see the fact stated clearly and unanswerably: "For by one offering he hath forever perfected them that are sanctified, whereof the Holy Ghost is also a witness to us."

God made both tears and laughter, and both for kind purposes; for as laughter enables mirth and surprise to breathe freely, so tears enable sorrow to vent itself patiently. Tears hinder sorrow from becoming despair and madness, and laughter is one of the very privileges of reason, being confined to the human species.—Anon.

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1890.

HE CHOSE THIS PATH FOR THEE.

He chose this path for thee.
No fickle chance nor hard relentless fate,
But love, his love, hath placed thy footsteps here.
He knew the way was rough and desolate;
Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear,
Yet tenderly he whispered, "Child, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee,
Though well he knew sharp thorns would pierce thy feet.
Knew how the brambles would obstruct the way,
Knew all the hidden dangers thou would'st meet,
Knew how thy faith would falter day by day;
And still the whisper echoed, "Yes, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee;
And well he knew that thou must tread alone
Its gloomy vales, and ford each flowing stream;
Knew how thy bleeding heart would sobbing moan,
"Dear Lord, to wake and find it all a dream"
Love scanned it all, yet still could say, "I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee;
E'en while he knew the fearful midnight gloom
Thy timid, shrinking soul must travel through;
How towering rocks would oft before thee loom,
And phantoms grim would meet thy frightened view;
Still comes the whisper, "My beloved, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee.
What need'st thou more? This sweeter truth to know,
That all along these strange, bewildering ways,
O'er rocky steeps and where dark rivers flow,
His loving arms will bear thee "all the days."
A few steps more, and thou thyself shalt see
This path is best for thee.

Woman's Work for Woman.

BY MRS. S. R. EVANS.

(Address before the Woman's Missionary Society of Winona district, North Mississippi Conference.)

I have been requested, by our president, to tell somewhat of my interest in the missionary cause, especially that department of the work which now calls us together—"Woman's Work for Woman." This can best be done by giving briefly my views of the grandeur of the work, its magnitude, and the necessity for such labor.

This is no threadbare subject, no hackneyed story of which the world is weary. It is the grandest theme that engages the tongue or enlists the heart of woman.

The noblest act one can perform is leading the blind to light and causing erring ones to "behold the Lamb of God." Indeed, my interest in this movement grows with the passing years, and success in any of its borders fills my heart with grateful joy.

Nearly two thousand years ago, while shepherds watched their flocks by night, there appeared unto them a company of angels, singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men;" "for unto you is born this day in Bethlehem a Savior." Yes, none other than Jesus the Christ, your Savior and mine. Not ours only; the Savior of the whole world; to whom all may come, as he declared by the mouth of one of the holy prophets—"Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." "Look unto me," is the command, or, rather, the condition of salvation. All are to believe on him; yet how shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without instruction. We are told by those who know, that there are in the world, at least, 1,200,000,000 people that know nothing of the pure gospel. Now, it becomes our duty to teach them. From his own lips came the sacred charge, adown the ages it has flown, and, with unabated power and pathos, its divine Author says unto us: "Go ye into all the world and teach all nations." God does not require us all to go in person; we are not all expected to toil directly in a mission field. Some of our sisters have laid their all upon this altar, have gone from home and loved ones to spend their lives in this grand work. Shall we, with folded hands and hearts unmoved, look idly on?

Perhaps, some think this great commission is for men alone.

Hear the words of that grand old missionary, Paul, the apostle, to the Gentiles—and never fell words of fuller import: "Help those women." What women? "Those who labor with me in the gospel." In other words: "All those who are in any way aiding the advance of the glorious work of evangelizing the world. Who shall help? To me it seems to demand service from everyone. Yes, friends, there is something for each of us to do. While we are not all required to go in person, we can virtually obey the divine command by sending those who can go. By forming auxiliary societies our work may be systematized, and by joining our efforts together every energy, every talent may be utilized.

Asks anyone whether the heathen desire help? Do you doubt it? Read what is written by those who know. They long, they watch, they cry with eager pleading: "Christian women, give us the gospel! Tell us, oh, tell us of Jesus! Our idols can neither hear nor help us. Teach us of your God who is able to pardon and to save." Have you not read of the dying heathen, by whose side a Christian woman watched? Hear her last prayer:

"Far across the waste of waters,
Christians live who love the Lord;
Send oh, send them to my sisters,
That they, too, may learn thy word.

"Send them quickly, for they're dying;
Those for whom the Christ hath died;
Worthless idols long they've worshiped;
They know nothing else beside.

"Hear, oh, blessed Savior, hear me!
Bid them hasten with all speed,
To the Christless millions dying—
Dying full of sin and need."

Do not our hearts burn within us? Does not every fibre of our being vibrate with emotion, begotten of desire to send the help so much needed? Shall we disregard such appeals; nay, can we, and be guiltless?

Excuses, whose name is legion, clamor for a hearing; but the light of the Bible dispels each one like mists before the morning sun. When souls are hungering, starving, dying for want of the bread of life, shall we not do what we can to supply it?

We can do a little; we may, by God's help, accomplish much. Is it not worth the effort? "Know ye not that no labor of love for the Master, done earnestly, honestly, and to the best of our ability, can be absolutely without result. They may be delayed, but the results will surely come, owned and crowned by the Lord of heaven and earth. Then, too, as we journey by the way we have the sweet assurance of his approval who said: 'I am with you alway, even to the end of the world.'"

Having no Woman's Missionary Auxiliary here, it is thought best to leave off the regular, formal address of welcome and response. Yet, in behalf of the ladies of Vaiden, I extend to our sisters of the Winona District Missionary Society a most cordial greeting. We rejoice to meet you, and heartily wish you God-speed in the noble work in which you are engaged. May your brief sojourn among us prove a pleasure and a blessing! May our labors be wisely ordered and zealously pursued, that at his coming we may be ready, with gathered sheaves, to lay at the Master's feet! Again, we bid you welcome to our hearts and homes.

Finney's Autobiography.

During Sam Jones' meetings in New Orleans, he several times referred to the great revivalist, Charles G. Finney. On one occasion he remarked that a young preacher had better live on bread and water till he had saved money enough to buy Finney's Autobiography. On this hint, some one ordered the book through Van Valkenburgh, and it finally fell into my hands. Since I read Wesley's Journal no such book has come before me.

Mr. Finney was born in 1792, and was brought up in the wilds of Western New York at a time when there were few schools and fewer churches in that country. Picking up a little education, he went East and attended better schools until he was able to take up the study of law, in which profession he was licensed to practice, and had begun his professional career when he was converted to Christ and immediately began to preach. Being a member of the Presbyterian Church, he studied theology with his pastor for two years in Adams, New York, and was then ordained in the ministry. He always regarded himself as fortunate in not having gone to Princeton, and was never doctrinated into the creed of Calvinism. In fact, he began his work by preaching free salvation and immediate acceptance of the truth as a duty first to be performed by the sinner instead of waiting for the evidence of a new heart. He repudiated the doctrine of original sin, and held that human depravity is altogether voluntary and unnecessary.

The most wonderful effects began to follow his exhortations from the first, and the town where he lived was almost entirely converted before he was made a regular preacher. Soon his services were in demand, and he went to many places to hold revival meetings. This was his special work for many years, and the interest of his life consists in the details of many of these revivals, first in country places, and afterward in the larger towns and cities during a period of nearly fifty years. He preached in Buffalo, Rochester, Boston, New York and Philadelphia with almost equal effect as in the country. Finally he was called to Europe, and made two visits to England and Scotland, where enormous crowds attended his ministry.

Meantime he became one of the founders of Oberlin University, Ohio, and for some thirty years held the chair of pastoral theology in the theological departments. By special arrangement he still gave half his time to evangelistic work; and this book tells of numberless instances of successful effort, giving names and facts of the most particular description in his methods of working. The power of prayer and of preaching have never been more demonstrated in this country than in the labors of Charles G. Finney. The book is modest, and written in a style as clear as daylight, so that the reader is never mistaken in the author's meaning. Moreover, he experienced the blessing of perfect love, and gives a vivid picture, both of this and his conversion. Every preacher should have this book.

F. M. GHACK.

Bro. A. D. Miller and the Presiding Elder.

I am sorry Bro. Miller is having trouble with his presiding elder. Only once, in a ministry of two decades, have I met with a Board of Stewards who complained because the presiding elder got more money than their preacher. I have some knowledge of the immense amount of work that the presiding elder of Brandon district has to do, and, while I have a work that will not pay probably over one-half the amount assessed that presiding elder, I would not exchange places with him. We are thankful that the district stewards of Brandon district have larger views of the office and work of the presiding elder than those stewards of whom Bro. Miller writes.

Mr. Editor, let me exhort our good brother to look after his Indian mission. We are with him in this; but do not hedge up the way of a faithful presiding elder.

CIRCUIT RIDER.

Oxford Church.

It will be gratifying to the friends of Methodism and all true lovers of Christ to know that Bro. Long is succeeding in his efforts to rebuild our church at Oxford, Miss. Still he ought to succeed better than he is doing. We ought to have a ten-thousand-dollar church at Oxford. To do this Bro. Long must have two thousand dollars more than he now has. If every pastoral charge will do just a little, the amount can be easily raised. So far we have done but little at West Point, but we hope to do more. Let all those who have subscribed send the amounts to Bro. Long at once, and let others who have not subscribed send in the cash. Come, brethren, let us relieve our brother of the burden upon his heart, and restore his usually cheerful face, which is now longer than his name, to its normal state. You may have a burnt church and parsonage some day, and then "you will know how it is yourself."

J. D. CAMERON.

WEST POINT, MISS.

Notice.

The Rev. Sam P. Jones has promised to hold a meeting in West Point, Miss., between the fifth and fifteenth of August; and we have about a dozen committees, composed of members of all denominations in town, and some who are not members of any church at all, organized and at work with wonderful unanimity and enthusiasm. As West Point is made so accessible by the crossing of three railroads, we are going to prepare for ten or fifteen thousand people. Let all Christians pray for the success of the meeting.

WEST POINT, MISS.

District Conference Notice.

The Opelousas District Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene at Pattersonville, La., June 26, 1890, at nine o'clock A. M. The preachers will please be prepared with full reports to date. Please, brethren, see that your recording stewards bring up their records.

JNO. A. MILLER, P. E.

NEW IBERIA, LA.

Notice.

Our people of Water Valley will be very glad, indeed, to entertain the next session of the North Mississippi Conference. We need it; we want it; we earnestly ask the presiding elders and Bishop for it. It has been eleven years since one was held here.

J. M. WYATT.

WATER VALLEY, MISS.

From the Work.

BRANDON, MISS.

I preached my first sermon last Sunday for this year. Not being able still to go on foot, I had to preach sitting, which, of course, to me was awkward. But I do feel very thankful to God, however, that I am able to leave my room again, and that I am permitted even to preach his Word sitting. All praise to him for esteeming me worthy to enter his training-school, through which it is so essential to pass in order to a full Christian development and a thorough Christian training.

My stewards met immediately after the last session of our Annual Conference, and raised my assessment $100 above what it was last year. They have been paying me monthly, although prostrated for four months and unable to preach a sermon.

Our Conference collections are very much in arrears up to date; but this is due to my being unable to see after them, as I would have done had I not been afflicted.

Our prayer meeting and Sunday-school have been, and are still kept, in a good working condition.

While my affliction was at its worst, and to me there was little prospect of my being able to resume my pastoral duties soon, I informed some of the brethren of my intention to seek a release from this charge, because I feared it was suffering for the proper care of a pastor; but they would not consent to such a procedure, declaring that they preferred to support me prostrated the whole year, rather than that I should give up the work entirely.

May God continue to bless this work, for we are moving upward spiritually as well as financially! Pray for us.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

ARCADIA, LA.

Truly our little town, Arcadia, is turned upside down. Two weeks ago, Bro. H. O. White, our pastor, commenced a meeting which has grown in interest with each service, until all these people are drawn to the house of worship. The members of the church, in the main, are so much moved as to have gone to work; the cold, formal, dead professors are loud with their confessions and prayers; reclamations of some almost abandoned ones, with the conversion of some thirty or forty souls, furnish us with a spirit of rejoicing, while the crowded altar, with fifty or sixty penitents, burthens our hearts with agonizing prayer. Truly it has not been thus in Arcadia in years. Some twenty have applied for membership in our church, and eight or ten have applied to join the Baptist Church, and still the interest does not abate! Oh, the good that will go out from this meeting! Our schools are receiving a wonderful baptism—so many noble young men and women being converted. Bro. White has done the preaching mainly; and what wonderful preaching! He is so much after Bro. Cravens' style of other days; truly his sermons are powerful! If I could, I should be glad to give your readers his sermon on, "When he came to himself." The effect of the Word is most powerful, and this comes through the Holy Ghost. And to God be all the glory! Understand, the right side of our town is up now. Oh, that we may continue in a sound mind, that we may wisely live!

The Lottery.

Meeting of the Anti-Lottery League.

The following synopsis of Dr. Markham's address at Grunewald Parlors, Monday night, has been furnished the ADVOCATE by the secretary of the meeting, Mr. G. W. Young:

Dr. Markham, referring to the chairman's suggestion as to the value of the public meetings of the League, stated that the impression produced on him last Monday evening, at Grunewald Hall, was such, that he wished every citizen of the State could have enjoyed with him the supreme satisfaction of those two hours.

The able argument and telling statistics of Mr. Parker; the lucid exposition and the clear, comprehensive and conclusive discussion of Mr. Miller; the fine Philippic of Mr. McConnell, with its wealth of satire and sarcasm, so given as to be level to the apprehension of all, an address that would prove most effective if spoken to the practical working-men of the city, and the whole capped by the fiery and flashing appeal of Dr. Bruns. It was a four-sided picture, as complete in its showing, if we may compare secular things with sacred, as that four-sided presentation given by the four evangelists of him who was the lover of his land, and the doer, not of evil, but of good to man.

Dr. Markham added that he hoped that next Monday evening every member of the League would be there, and with them their wives and daughters. Let them give their presence and influence. There was a special need for this, because this Louisiana Lottery was attacking the community at its citadel. Other gambling attracts men, and, alas! draws youths into its snares; but this attracts the women and the girls. And, as the very sanctuary of morality is in the hearts of the true and good women of the land, when these are affected, the very fountain from which all good and true and pure influences flow is defiled. Invite them to come and make, with us, their protest, and exert their power in this great work.

Why the Question Should Not Be Submitted to the People.

It is argued by some that the Legislature should submit the question of extending the charter of the Louisiana Lottery Company to the people for the reason that the people are capable of settling the question for themselves; and the further reason, that if the people desire the Lottery to continue to ply its vocation, it should be permitted to do so. The charter of the Lottery can be renewed only by submitting an amendment to the Constitution of the State to the people, and by the people ratifying the amendment by a popular vote.

Under our theory of government the will of the people is theoretically supposed to be supreme, and under ordinary circumstances it would be difficult to mention objections to submitting questions of this character to the will of the people. But under the peculiar condition of affairs which exist in Louisiana, we do not think the Legislature should, under any circumstances, submit this question to the people. It is well known that the majority of the voters of the State are ignorant negroes. The white people of the State do not propose that these ignorant voters shall control the policy of our local government. They are not permitted to choose our governors, judges, legislators, and other officers, and no amount of argument could convince the white people of Louisiana that they should do so. It is equally as important that this class of voters should not control the policy of the State in matters as important as that of choosing officials. And to submit the Lottery question to a popular vote would be virtually saying that the negroes can control the policy of the State in this matter. The white people would be divided, and the decision of the question would be in the hands of the ignorant colored voters. With millions of money at its disposal, the Lottery Company would control the colored voters almost solidly, and in this way fix the Lottery upon the State against the wishes of a majority of the intelligent and tax-paying citizens of the State. What, then, would become of white supremacy? The Legislature can not afford to submit this question. It will not do.

We know of nothing which would do more to disrupt and disintegrate the Democratic party in Louisiana than for a Democratic Legislature to submit this Lottery question to a popular vote.—Louisiana Journal.

Strictly Business.

The advocates of rechartering the Lottery say that the offer of John A. Morris to pay the State a half a million annually for the charter, is a strictly business proposition, and should be considered as such. Well, suppose we consider it as such, and strip the question of all higher considerations than dollars and cents. When we do this, we will find that it is greatly to the interest of Mr. Morris for his proposition to be accepted, for the reason that by paying the State a half a million annually he is placed in a position to make seven or eight millions every year. The investment is evidently a very profitable one for Mr. Morris and the stockholders in his gambling corporation; but we fail to see the fine business tact which the State would exhibit by consenting to turn over such a bonanza to Mr. Morris, or any other individual or corporation. The State can make as much money out of a lottery as a private individual; and if we have reached such a wretched and chronic stage of poverty as to be forced to ignore all considerations of morality, of integrity, of political purity, and of honor, and go in for the almighty dollar at all hazards and at any cost, why not the State own and operate the Lottery as a State institution, and reap the entire harvest of gold which it would annually produce? In this way the State would receive seven or eight millions every year more than Mr. Morris proposes to pay into the State treasury. We do not see why those who advocate chartering a lottery as a purely business matter—for revenue only—do not advocate a State lottery, which will give us money enough to build our levees, run the public schools, and provide for all of our charities. It is just as easy to make seven or eight millions annually out of the Lottery by operating it as a State institution, as to permit an individual to do it and pay the State only half a million.

We do not think that the State can afford to embark in such a business, and we are opposed to a lottery of any kind; but we can as well afford a State lottery as a John A. Morris lottery, and the former would be decidedly more business-like. We are surprised that the strictly business advocates of the Lottery do not see it in this light, and advocate a State lottery instead of a Morris lottery. If we are going into the lottery business for the sake of revenue, let the State, and not the individuals, get the revenue.—Louisiana Journal.

The Lottery's Offer.

The Donaldsonville Chief says:

The Chief coincides heartily with the expression of opinion which concludes the foregoing communication, and unhesitatingly avows its belief that the best interests of the State demand that the magnificent bribe which Mr. Morris proposes to offer the people of Louisiana, as the price of further besmirching the reputation of their commonwealth, should be promptly and firmly rejected.

The tremendous force of public opinion which demolished the lottery scheme in Dakota, and overawed its advocates when they had victory well-nigh in their grasp, should secure a like result in Louisiana. The bait is a tempting one, and immense benefits would be derived from the expenditure of such a large sum annually in the directions proposed; but these would not compensate us for the sacrifice of our self-respect and of the good opinions of the rest of the country. Poverty should not be made a cloak for dishonor. The solemn declaration in the Constitution of 1879 that no lotteries shall be permitted in this State after 1895, must be adhered to if Louisiana would hold up her head as an honorable member of our glorious sisterhood of States.

The American, of Lake Charles, says:

With the light of the present day before us on gambling and lotteries, and especially the light that has been turned on this bogus Louisiana Lottery monopoly, we can but enter our earnest protest against it obtaining a new lease of life. An institution branded as a "national scourge," the State of Louisiana a "disgraced State for harboring it," and such expressions, are not meaningless. An institution recognized as the worst form of gambling, because of its monopoly, having an income of $28,000,000 annually, is to be dreaded not only by this State, but by the whole nation. This gigantic affair is considered a breeder of embezzlements, defalcations, breaches of trust, robbery, suicide and murder. We can not clasp hands, nor compromise in any way with an institution of such magnitude and such acknowledged corrupting power.

Yea, we are opposed to the existence of a lottery, even though John A. Morris should pave the streets of every city in this State, and change the offer of half a million to five hundred million dollars. The existence of the Lottery means a continuation of a corrupt power in politics. It means political slavery to every citizen in the State. If it gains a new lease of life and power, it will be done by corruption. Its corrupting power in the politics of our State is enough to damn it in the minds of all right-thinking men. It is undermining to the fundamental principles of good government.

The Louisiana Journal, Homer, La., says:

We are opposed to the acceptance of this proposition. It would unquestionably be a good thing for the Lottery, for the reason that it would make millions annually above all expenses out of the franchise. It would be a bad thing for the State, for the reason that such an institution will produce a condition of constant moral and financial demoralization, and the very fact that the State gives a lottery its permission and sanction to ply its vocation will, of itself, prove a great drawback to its progress and development.

A lottery, if chartered by the State, will, in the very nature of things, become a factor, and a powerful factor in our politics. It will be forced to control politics to preserve its own existence, and the result will be that the Lottery will dominate and control the politics of the entire State. This is, perhaps, the strongest objection to the Lottery.

The Louisiana Lottery.

Where does this unscrupulous institution get its millions? It can make contributions to carry out political bargains, offer millions as bribes to legislators, subsidize any number of venal newspapers (that are ever in the market for sale), and, so far as money can accomplish results, do whatsoever else it will. Where does it get such enormous treasure? From cozening and corrupting the people. The enormity of its offending may be determined by considering the magnitude of the bribes it can afford to offer to secure a continuance of its iniquity.

One of the most alarming features of the case is the manifest purpose of the Lottery to take a hand in politics. A few weeks ago its corrupt connection with the last national campaign was exposed. It was shown that it contributed heavily to campaign funds, and was to receive as a consideration for its money a charter from North Dakota. Failing there, it turns attention again to Louisiana. When such deeds are done matters have come to such a pass that the State must destroy the Lottery, or be destroyed by it. Lottery politics can not be endured for one day.

The United Press Association recently sent out from New Orleans the following dispatch: "The Louisiana Lottery Company is making a desperate effort to retain its corporate life. It has failed to secure a charter from North Dakota, and its next move, it is said, will be an enormous bribe to the Louisiana Legislature for a renewal of its present charter, which will expire two years hence. Its proposition will be to pay the entire State debt, amounting to from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000." A more infamous and impudent offer than this we do not remember to have heard of in the history of States. It deserves to be rejected with a scorching indignation.

That two Confederate generals can be found who will sell to such a shameless corporation the fame won by them in war, is a humiliation to the entire South. How the imperial spirit of Jackson would scorn such conduct! How the unpurchasable soul of Lee would loathe it! Every "old Confederate" owes it to himself and to the cause for which he suffered to hold in utter contempt such base betrayal of the otherwise stainless reputation of Southern soldiers. It is unspeakably mean to compromise the good name of Southern veterans by lending the honor won through them in war to the vile uses of a corporation of blacklegs. Fall of man can not be further than to fall from the leadership of chivalric hosts of Southern heroes to become the plaup of a lottery, which for unholy gains will corrupt a national election, poison an infant State, or barter away the political purity of an old commonwealth.

Dollars and Cents.

The Lottery Company will soon be before the Legislature of Louisiana, for an extension of its charter. It is well known to have a large fund for use in the influencing of legislation. When this matter comes up, then will there be means of knowing the corrupt from the pure: the black sheep from the white. Legislators will be found, no doubt, to favor continuation of this swindling scheme, assigning, or attempting to assign, a dozen and one reasons. Our citizens all, however, will not be blind to the real motive power in the matter. They will not fail to estimate properly those representatives who are prepared to re-impose upon their fellow-citizens of Louisiana this institution, which is at once robbing and debauching our populace, and making of our once honorable State a gambling hell.

It will prove a vain task, on the part of those intending to favor our Louisiana Robbery Co., to endeavor to persuade the world that they have not made merchandise of their votes. All know that this Company has a market in this connection; and when they witness delivery, they will presume, also, a price. If any man now holding legislative office wishes to blacken his reputation for all time, to make of his memory a reproach to his children and to their children, let him prove, during the approaching crisis, false to the cause of honor and morality.—Holy Family, N. O.

LESSON VIII.—May 25.

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY.
Luke x, 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.—Luke x, 11.

TIME.—A. D. 29 or 30; possibly a month or two before the death of our Savior.

PLACE.—Perea.

1. After these things—That is, after finally leaving Galilee, and starting on his great Perean progress. The Lord appointed other seventy also—The number had evident reference to the elders of Moses; the Sanhedrin; and the Jewish belief (derived from Gen. x) as to the number of the nations of the world. This mission of the seventy is in Luke only. He says nothing of its geographic locality, nor of its duration, nor of the place where they found Jesus and made their report. But it manifestly followed the important change in the locality of Christ's mission work, spoken of. But this district into which he sent the seventy was (probably) along his contemplated route to Jerusalem, and therefore, presumably, in the densely peopled district of Perea, east of the Jordan—a route frequently taken from Galileo to Jerusaleu. Two and two—The same merciful provision that we see in the brother-pairs of the twelve. Into every city and place, whither he himself would come—In Galilee, Christ himself preached in the cities and the apostles in the towns and villages. In Perea, presumably, the seventy preached both in the cities and unwalled towns, Christ following with his personal ministry chiefly in the former. In this respect our age is better than theirs, that Christ is always with his ministers, and that their work is always to prepare for his personal coming. This mission may have been all the more necessary because hitherto the Lord had worked less in the trans-Jordanic regions.

2. The harvest truly is great—We have here, as in the Sermons on the Mount and on the Plain, an example of our Lord's repeating the expression of the same thought in nearly the same language. There it was the first occurrence in the record of the first three Gospels of the figure which was afterward to be expanded in the two parables of the sower and the tares, and to re-appear in the visions of the apocalypse. We find, however, from the Gospel of St. John—which here, as so often elsewhere, supplies missing links and the germs of thoughts afterward developed—that it was not a new similitude in our Lord's teaching. Once before, among the alien Samaritans, he had seen the fields white as for the spiritual harvest of the souls of men, and had spoken of him that soweth and him that reapeth.

4. Salute no man by the way—The direction, Salute no man by the way, is peculiar to Luke. It is said that a complete formal salutation between two Orientals may consume from one to three hours. The disciples were not to stop by the way for these elaborate formal and insincere salutations. The immediate lesson to them was that their time was short and their business urgent.

5. Peace be to this house—God's messengers should begin first with prayers for peace, not with objurgations.

6. If the son of peace be there—That is, if the people respond in the spirit of your salutation, making your mission welcome, then let your blessing rest there. If not, your prayer shall return into your own bosom.

7. And in the same house remain—The purpose of the rule was (1) to guard against fickleness, as in itself an evil, and (2) against the tendency to go from one house to another according to the advantages which were offered to the guest. The laborer is worthy of his hire—The exact reproduction of the words by St. Paul, in 1. Tim. v, 18, as a citation from "the Scriptures," is every way interesting. The apostle could scarcely have failed to have become acquainted, during his long companionship with St. Luke, with the materials which the evangelist was collecting for his great work. We can hardly doubt, accordingly, that he quotes this as one of the sayings of the Lord Jesus, as he quotes another in Acts xx, 35, and clothes it with the same authority as the older Scripture. On this assumption, the Gospel of St. Luke must have been, in part, at least, written and recognized at the time when the pastoral epistles were written.

9. Heal the sick—These miracles were in part the credentials of their divine mission, foreshadowing the analogous spiritual blessings which their great Master was coming to confer.

11. Even the very dust of your city—The act was a familiar symbol of the sense of indignation, as in the case of St. Paul (Acts xiii, 51) at Antioch in Pisidia. It was a protest in act, declaring (as our Lord declares in words) that the city or house which did not receive the messengers of the Christ was below the level even of the Gentiles.

12. The cities that stood out, in the history of the world, as the most conspicuous for their infamy, were yet less guilty (as sinning less against light and knowledge) than those who rejected the messengers of the King.

13. Woe unto thee, Chorazin! Bethsaida—These fearful denunciations against those cities where most of his miracles had been wrought, but where their testimony had been discredited and Jesus himself dishonored and utterly repelled, rests on the righteous principle that guilt is measured in degree by the amount of light sinned against. Tyre and Sidon had lain under comparative darkness, and, therefore, their guilt was comparatively small. With the same light which Capernaum, Chorazin, and Bethsaida had resisted they would have long ago repented.

14. More tolerable....at the judgment—A very important verse, as proving the "intermediate state" (hades) of human souls. The guilty inhabitants of these cities had received their temporal punishment; but the final judgment was yet to come. Men are judged not only according to what they have done, but according to what they might or would have done under other circumstances and conditions of life. In other words, they are judged according to their opportunities.

15. And thou, Capernaum—This city had already witnessed more of our Lord's recorded wonders than any other. That of the nobleman's son, of the demoniac, of the man sick of the palsy, of Peter's wife's mother and the many works that followed, of the woman with the issue of blood, of Jairus daughter, and of the centurion's servant, had all been wrought there, besides the unrecorded miracles implied in Luke iv, 23. In this sense, and not in any outward prosperity, had Capernaum been "exalted unto heaven." All this, however, had been in vain, and, therefore, the sentence was passed on it that it should be "brought down to hell," that is, to hades, the grave, not to Gehenna. The words point, as the next verse shows, to the ultimate abasement of the guilty citizens in the day of judgment, but the words have had an almost literal fulfillment. A few ruins, conjecturally identified, mark the site of Capernaum. Not one stone is left upon the other in Chorazin and Bethsaida.

Missionary.

Our Greatest Need.

"What do you consider the greatest need of our mission work?" The question was asked by a sincere and active friend of missions. We replied, "The greatest need of our mission work is earnest and persistent prayer." The answer was not on the line of our brother's thoughts. "What do you think the General Conference ought to do to give efficiency to the administration, to secure larger collections at home and greater efficiency in the field?" He referred to several suggestions which he had seen in the church papers or were being discussed among the brethren. We do not depreciate the importance of wise legislation. The suggestion of plans for General Conference action is one of the most encouraging "signs of the times." They reveal the growing interest on the part of the church in mission work. The conscience of the church is being quickened. The command of the Master is sounding through pulpit and press, and the feeling is growing stronger every day that the church has been "playing at missions" while work must be done. We welcome every plan as proof that the church is bestirring itself, and that a new and brighter day is about to break on the ripening fields of missionary enterprise.

Yet prayer is the great need of our mission work. The plans the church may adopt will be wise in proportion as they inspire prayer in the church. Christ recognized the importance of prayer. He surveyed the field, and said: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." A plenteous harvest with but few laborers in the field, in the judgment of Christ, rendered the call for prayer imperative.

"The harvest is plenteous" in our day. A recent estimate furnishes the following figures: Heathen, 856,000,000; Mohammedan, 175,000,000; total non-Christian, 1,181,000,000; Catholic countries, 150,000,000. This estimate does not include the Greek Church or the Jews, but other fields in which missions are being established.

"The laborers are few." In 1886 this estimate gives to the mission field 2,975 ordained Protestant missionaries. This gives one missionary to every 413,478 human souls. The population of the United States is set down in round numbers at 60,000,000. Total Protestant ministers (1886) 79,032, or one minister to every 769 souls. This gives a proportion of home to foreign ministers of 500 to 1. Again: The total Protestant Christian workers in the United States are estimated as follows: ordained ministers, 79,032; lay preachers, 33,950; Sunday-school teachers, 1,107,170; total, 1,220,152. Were we to include the vast army of faithful women who are doing efficient service, tho force at home would be over 1,300,000. This gives at home one Christian worker for every 45 souls. Total Protestant Christian workers in the foreign field: ordained ministers, 2,975; lay workers, 732; women, 2,420; ordained natives, 3,068; all other workers, 28,642. Total, 37,837, or 1 Christian worker to each 32,270 souls. This gives a proportion of home to foreign Christian workers of 709 to 1. Were the ordained ministers of the United States reduced to the proportion of the ordained missionaries for the foreign field, it would give us 151 to preach the gospel from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This would be less than the effective preachers in the Tennessee Conference.

Never since the days of Christ has the call for laborers been greater than at the present time. The world is open to the gospel. Lands closed against the missionary fifty years ago are now wide open. The call for reinforcements comes from every mission. New doors are opening to every church. Our own church could greatly enlarge its work without entering another field. Yet the call for enlargement comes to us from this continent. Cuba is waiting for the gospel. Central America should be occupied. The barriers in Venezuela are breaking down. The railroad will ere long open a path for the missionary down the Isthmus of Darien across to the head-waters of the Amazon to the Argentine Republic. Japan calls anew for help. China, after waiting so long for the church to fill up her broken ranks, feels that she can wait no longer. The estimates that have reached us look for enlargement in every field.

Where are the men? where is the money? Laborers are needed; money is needed with which to send them. Prayer is needed; the Lord of the harvest is listening. Shall prayer ascend from every pulpit, prayer meeting and family altar in the land?—Missionary Reporter.

A Curious Thing.

It is a curious thing, the criticism made by intelligent foreigners upon Americans. For instance, a Japanese prince now in this country said lately in conversation: "Do you know, I think America has less religion than any other civilized country." When asked what he meant by such an unheard-of announcement he went on to say: "I have been so fortunate as to visit almost every portion of your wonderful country. I have seen what I consider the most delightful society in the world; have been entertained by public committees, and private individuals; they have shown me magnificent state houses, and libraries, and private residences; they have set before me the richest food and rarest wines; they have introduced me at magnificent balls, entertained me in sumptuous yachts, and whirled me through beautiful valleys in coaches four-in-hand; and yet no one wishing to show me the glories of his city, has ever yet asked me to visit his church. You Americans rejoice in your triumphs of art, literature, society, and commerce, and are glad to exhibit them to foreigners, but really you seem to think that your religion is not worth exhibiting." Several of the Pan-American delegates have made similar comments. The leading men of the nation with whom they are associated are nearly all church members, but in relation to the Deity they worship, it would seem as if their motto is, "We never mention him." This naturally leads clear-headed foreigners, who know that we give large sums to build up Christianity in their native homes, to think that, as the Japanese said, "We imagine that America gives money for missions without much care as to the possible results. We can not help thinking, in short, that your religion is mostly a matter of dollars and cents." Surely there is material for sober and sad reflection in this statement, and possibly at no epoch in our national history could this criticism have been made with so much justice. Our fabulous growth in all material resources seems to have put the leadership of the nation into the attitude of the man with the muck rake. How long shall these things be?—Union Signal.

Temperance.

Woman and Drink.

Drunkenness is the vice of men rather than of women.

But since the Civil War there has been an alarming increase of drinking in American society. And the cumulative testimony of physicians, clergymen, dealers and the press confirm the vague statement that it is gaining among women. Not alone among the foreign-born and the low, but among women of wealth, fashion and elegant leisure. The same sad story is vouched for by reliable authority concerning English and Continental women, especially in the great and gay capitals of Europe.

Women have always been the greatest sufferers from the drunkenness of men. Neglected, defrauded of love, protection and happiness, the victims of cruelty and undeserved ill-will, there are no more wretched objects than the wife and daughter of a drunkard. For their grievous wrongs there is neither consolation nor redress.

There is, therefore, eminent fitness in the fact that the women of to-day, not alone in America, but almost throughout the world, are entering the lists against this foe of the race and this destroyer of their happiness. The organizations of Woman's Christian Temperance Unions in England and America have attained immense proportions, and have aroused both Church and State to unwonted activity or hostility. They are great propagandists, and have agents in the field to organize and to belt the earth with temperance missionary work. They fling down the gauntlet of criticism to legislators, politicians, parties and sects, and can not be induced to lower their demand for prohibition of the liquor traffic. They demand that children in all schools shall be taught the physiological effects of alcoholic liquors, and be trained to its disuse. In short, they wage war upon the liquor traffic from every point of vantage ground, and in the most uncompromising manner. Their day of patient endurance is over, and they move on to hostilities against their world-wide foe to the sound of "the bugle that never calls retreat." They are reinforced by an increasing host of men, whose consciences compel their co-operation. Ultimate victory is as surely theirs as is to-morrow of the rising sun!—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, in The Better Day.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1890.

News from the General Conference has been very slow to reach this office, and hence we have been compelled, in a measure, to fill up with editorial matter.

Editorial Correspondence.

Dear Advocate:

The terrible rain-storm of last Monday did not hinder our departure from the Crescent City for the seat of the General Conference, though at one time I was apprehensive that we would be compelled to wait over until next day. By the use of umbrellas, overshoes and overcoats we reached the depot in a tolerably dry condition. We left on time on the Illinois Central train on the Queen and Crescent road. We had all the Louisiana delegation aboard, except one, and one of the Mississippi delegates. Our trip was a very comfortable one and made in good time. After we got to Jackson, Miss., we began to pick up other delegates from Mississippi and North Mississippi until we had nearly the whole of the three delegations, with a good sprinkle of bona fide visitors going up to take a look at our great quadrennial convocation. The principal points noted en route was in about this order: Breakfast at Holly Springs, dinner at Cairo, supper at St. Louis.

At the union depot we were met by Rev. Dr. Finney and his attentive assistants, and were soon whirled by omnibus to our respective homes for the session. I am quartered with Dr. Walker at the Rozier Hotel, corner of Olive and 13th streets. The larger number of the delegates are homed at the principal hotels of the city. Our hotel is quite convenient, being only four blocks from Centenary Church, where the Conference sessions are held, and just across the street from the building where the committees meet. So you see the Committee of Arrangements has done a special favor for Louisiana's two old men.

THE CONFERENCE.

At nine o'clock Wednesday morning, Bishop Keener's gavel called a noisy body of men to order, and the Conference was opened with these exercises: Bishop Keener read and the brethren sang, with "the spirit and understanding," hymn number ten, after which Bishop Wilson offered a most fervent prayer. Bishop Granbery then read the sixty-second chapter of Isaiah, Bishop Hargrove read the first chapter of Colossians, Bishop Duncan read and the congregation sang, with great fervor, hymn number 206, after which the venerable Andrew Hunter, of the Little Rock Conference, led in prayer. Dr. Hunter is the link, and the only link, that connects this Conference with the celebrated Conference of 1844 in New York City. The roll was called by Dr. Vincil, one of the assistant secretaries of the last General Conference, and 220 delegates answered to their names. Several nominations were made for secretary, and when the vote was taken, Dr. W. P. Harrison, the Book Editor, was elected. He selected as his assistants W. A. Candler, of Georgia; J. M. Mason, of Alabama, and J. J. Tigert, of Louisville Conference. The Rules of the last General Conference were adopted for the government of the body during the present session.

At this point in the proceedings our old friend, Rev. John Mathews, appeared as the spokesman of St. Louis Methodism to welcome the Conference to the hospitalities of this great and growing city of the West. "Uncle John" was in his best vein, and gave us a welcome in words and voice and manner and heart that made every man of us feel that we were at home. Bishop Keener replied to this address in a very felicitous style, in the course of his remarks giving a brief, but most interesting summary of the history of Methodism in St. Louis.

The quadrennial address of the Bishops was read by Bishop Wilson. It was an able paper, setting forth in graphic language the progress of our church during the last four years, pointing out the perils that surround us and the dangers to be avoided, and making wise suggestions to guide the Conference in its actions. The address recommends a strengthening of all our great departments of work, especially the missionary, church extension and Sunday-school work. An additional man each for church extension and Sunday-school work, and two missionary secretaries are recommended. The readers of the ADVOCATE will recollect that this is precisely what we recommended in this paper three weeks ago. This is evidence that even our Bishops read the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and wisely adopt its suggestions. The Bishops also think that their own body should be strengthened by the election of one new Bishop.

An evening session was held for the purpose of constituting the standing committees. These committees are twelve in number, viz.: Episcopacy, Itinerancy, Revisal, Publishing Interests, Education, Missions, Church Extension, Sunday-schools, Boundaries, Appeals, Colportage, and Temperance. They are made up of one man from each delegation. Thus every Conference and every section of the church are represented in these committees. During the making up of these committees, a very large question was sprung upon the body, which afforded opportunity for quite a fusilade of cross-firing from various parts of the house. It was finally determined that the matter involved more than we could dispose of, so it was wisely determined to defer further debate until to-morrow.

So ended the first day's session. C. W. C.

ST. LOUIS, May 7.

The second day of the Conference was spent in receiving appeals, memorials and resolutions. Quite a number of these were presented and referred to appropriate committees.

A resolution, to the effect that the laymen in the General Conference were competent to sit in committees which had charge of matters pertaining to ministerial character and relations, raised a debate which consumed about half the morning session, and was then made the order of the day for to-morrow.

Several delegates arrived and took their places. In the evening the various committees met and organized, but as no matters had been presented from Conference, no work was done.

Thus ended the second day.

The third day witnessed the pouring upon the secretary's table of a great number of resolutions, memorials and petitions, all of which were referred to appropriate committees. This presentation of these matters furnished material for the work of committees.

The question in reference to the admission of laymen on all the committees was debated ably and thoroughly during the two days it was before the Conference. The debate was a spirited one, and participated in by Dr. Kelley, of Tennessee; Dr. H. C. Walker, of Kentucky; Dr. Whitehead and Dr. Peterson, of Virginia, and other ministerial and lay members. It was determined, by a large vote, that the laymen have a right to sit in all the committees of the General Conference.

In the afternoon the various committees went vigorously to work, cutting out and preparing material for the Conference to exercise its wisdom upon. Great care is taken, and a thorough investigation as to the nature and effect of all proposed changes in the law is made, so that whenever a measure is adopted, it has generally been searched through and through. There is no haste to rush things through in the committee-room.

Thus ended the third day.

ST. LOUIS, May 10.

The Logic of Missions.

The gospel of missions, as propounded by the Savior of the world, was an explicit unfolding of the science of reasoning by induction fifteen hundred years before Lord Bacon, its reputed founder, lived. To go from a mass of particulars, intensive in their character, to a vague general, which is somehow contained in them in a more vital sense than it contains them, is what the risen Messiah required the apostles to do in publishing the symphonic message which he gave to them in its completed form from the Mount of Ascension. The great Englishman demonstrated his philosophy of reasoning by geometrical figures representing spheres, semi-spheres, and the infinite subdivisions of each; but the greater Philosopher needed no scaffolding of scientific terms either to aid his thought or to facilitate human comprehension of it, and said simply: "When the gospel shall be preached in all the world then shall the end come."

The gospel, which the latest science exhibits as the highest statement of logical truth, conceives of humanity as a sphere, and of the individuals that compose it as its integral parts, whose life is bound up with the former no more mysteriously than is that of the atoms with the grosser sphere beneath. As the latter is the complement of each of its cosmic parts, so the former sphere is complemental to its individuals in a higher sense-union, and as each of the dense atoms of the material sphere reach out in every direction to establish by ecstatic contact its dumb environment, so the happiness of the human atomies of the higher subject is only completed by magnetic thrills which come to them from each of its pulse-bearing members. A man's felicity, then, even as a thing's, is not in that which is within it, but it is in that which is without it, for much more is the whole than its parts, or any part of the whole than that which is less than it. The Son of God was inhumanized (in one view) to show that the world was worth dying for, and to be the first of a succession of magnificent sacrifices whose blood should be shed to bring it nearer to God and to bring its parts nearer to each other; and, therefore, St. John accordantly exclaims: "Brethren, if Christ laid down his life for us, ought we not to lay down our lives for the brethren?" There could be no happiness to a living body if chained to a dead body, or to a living organism if forced to tabernacle with rotting corpses, as the author of these lines tested by actual experience during the night which succeeded bloody Shiloh. And the Savior requires of us not more for humanity's sake, which is a sentiment to which very few are equal at rare seasons, than for our own sake to lift up with unselfish hands the old shattered wreck of humanity and present it to him as an offering which must precede any thought of our own admission to a reconstructed macrocosm. He whose love not only reached to the chief of sinners and to the chief of demoniacs, but which penetrated the dark penumbra beyond, and held the kingdoms of the dead in a warm embrace, will assuredly be satisfied with nothing less than a regenerated sphere as an offering from his deeply obligated disciples. There is nothing that holds together so tenaciously as the parts of gospel logic, unless it be the precious life of humanity which it defends; and to illustrate this proposition we need hardly say, in conclusion, that the way of truth is the way of duty, and that the path of safety is that in which the veiled form of happiness walks. In order to his translation, there is a crucifixion for every member of Christ's body, and differing nothing in character from His, only in the instance of the latter, it stood like a criminal badge at the close of his dying life, and of the former, its thorns and nails and heart-fracture are felt as soon as feared, and the dark form of the cross looms like a veritable gate of Inferno across the path of the pilgrim.

The Lottery Come to Judgment!

An almanac recently published in this city in the interest of the Louisiana State Lottery, purports to give the genesis of the Lottery, and claims for it a scriptural origin. It is, indeed, named for Lot, of whom vagabondage can be predicated more certainly than any other character in Bible history, not even excepting his cousin, Ishmael, or his more distant relative, the hairy Esau. He it was who was mean enough to take the choice of all the land from his magnanimous and aged kinsman when it was offered to him; who suffered his daughters to marry the wicked Sodomites; who ignobly took up his own slumbers in the abodes of those sons of Beelzebub, having suffered the choice of all the land to evaporate in the wages of idleness; who begged the little city of Zoar for a habitation when the goodness of God sought to lead him to repentance by the tempest of fire, while his later life was quite unutterably wicked, and soils the page of inspiration as does no other subject. Lot, indeed, was the most distinguished of ancient beggars, as the Lottery is of modern, and, like it, he would be satisfied with nothing less than an empire, if we except the memorable occasion when he was running for his life, when he consented to receive a city. Lot took all that he could get allotted to him, and so does the Lottery. But if the name is disreputable, the thing is infinitely more so, for lottery is sorcery or sortilege, and who the father of this wickedness is we need not stop to inquire. Who in this civilized country and age is unaware of the fact that the 'god of chance has horns and hoofs, and is not perfectly convinced, if we could say it without perpetrating a pun, that the man who plays the Lottery, plays the devil. The apologist of the almanac assevers that it is a political machine which the countries of Christendom do not hesitate to employ in retrenchment of their finances; but there must be some mistake about this, as a careful canvass of the European continent and of North America, where all the great governments are situated, reveals no example of such pernicious practice in high places, if we except poor Louisiana; and when he asserts that George Washington was once sponsor for a lottery, the object of which was to build a country road, he is speaking of an age of the republic that was almost devoid of moral teaching of any kind, and whose character is sufficiently declared by the statement that it could give birth to such a monster as Tom Paine in one department of morals, and as Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr in another. But if this be not a slander, it is the only mean thing that is recorded of a patriot so pure that he would not receive honest pay for patriotic services from his country's treasury, and of a man so stainless that he would not touch in friendship the hand that had been soiled with either bribe-giving or bribe-taking, and for that infamy, if no other, the Lottery deserves, at least, as many deaths as lie concealed in the infant art of electrocution.

But it is asserted that the Lottery is generous. Is generous, in what?—bribes? How many millions has the Lottery given to poor debt-burdened Louisiana? How many levees has it built to save her inundated soil. How much has it given to take care of her destitute insane? How many public buildings erected for the metropolis that suffers its spoliations? When did the Lottery donate anything of consequence to anybody until it was driven to the wall? What would a petty million be to this cormorant; and yet it doles out thousands to drowning and starving Louisianians in distress whom it has sytematically robbed for a score of years or more. "You give me that which is mine," said Alexander to a prostrate foe who offered to enrich him. Did not the buccaneers shower gold upon their captors, and was not Lafitte foremost among the patriots when the galleys of the great commodore menaced him?

But Louisianians at this critical period of the history of their country, have not to decide between riches and poverty, (and may it not be that we are coming forward to that period of the great nation when scorn of riches will prove a common virtue?) but between God and Baal, and in view of the white-hot issue, in addressing them, we can but employ the impassioned challenge of the prophet: "How long halt ye between two opinions?"

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House on Thursday, May 1, 1890; Hon. Enoch L. Fancher, LL.D., president, in the chair.

Among the communications from foreign lands presented to the Board were letters from Mr. Bowen, in Egypt, in March; from Mr. Milne, describing his journey over the Andes from Buenos Ayres to Valparaiso, and thence to Callao, in February and March; from Mr. Bingham, in Honolulu, announcing that he had on April 11 completed the translation of the entire Bible into the language of the Gilbert Islanders; from Mr. Loomis and other gentlemen in Japan, reporting progress in arrangements for unifying the Bible work under the care of the three foreign Bible societies; from Mr. Carrington, in Bangkok, with plans for work he is commencing in Siam; from Mr. Emerson, of Honolulu, with a statement of what is being done for the spread of the Scriptures in the Sandwich Islands; from Mr. Scudder of the Arcot Mission, Mr. Gulick of the Spanish Mission, and Mr. Dardier of the Evangelical Society of Geneva, with reports of the work of the last year; from Mr. Kilbon of the Zulu Mission, Mr. Clark of the Austria Mission, and Mr. Prince of St. Petersburg, and numerous other correspondents.

Grants of books were made for gratuitous distribution to the value of about $4,123, including consignments to the society's Brazil and Siam agencies. Appropriations of funds were also made amounting in the aggregate to $23,767 20, including a grant to the Reformed Board for its Arcot Mission; to the American Board, for Bible work in Spain; to the Evangelical Society of Geneva, for work in France; and to the society's Cuba, La Plata, Siam, and Persia agencies.

One auxiliary society was recognized in Alabama, and one in Missouri.

The issues from the Bible House during the month of April were 78,239 volumes.

In the Austin Deutche Zeitung we find the following anecdote of General Early and the Lottery. One of the General's old soldiers sent him a dollar with instruction to invest in a Louisiana Lottery ticket, at the same time assuring him that he had followed him during the war until he had not clothing enough left to make wadding for his gun. The ex-reb commander replied promptly, returning the uninvested dollar and the following piece of advice, for which no charge was made: "If you follow the Lottery as long as you followed me, you will not have clothing enough left to make wadding for a toy shooter."

Notes.

The spokes keep up with the hub.

The man who thinks for himself is rarely solicited to think for others.

The best men of all religions and no religion are opposed to the Lottery.

The man who can do one thing distinguishedly is not insipid, and it is insipidity that bores.

The man who saves the four cents a week that would buy his church paper economizes backward.

Modesty is a good trait in any sort of an officer, but it is a fatal objection to any sort of a candidate.

Where the church paper does not circulate there are torpid extremities which no heart-beat can affect.

The merchant who has not faith enough in the future of his business to employ clerks can not expect custom.

In this as in other General Conferences it may be that the radicals will prove the conservatives, and the conservatives the radicals.

If we could but raise a contingent from our army of evangelists for China or Japan, a long-felt want would be met on both continents.

Let not the open door of Japan be closed by dissensions about union. It was the cackling of geese without, and not within, that saved Rome.

We admire the talents of Dr. T. D. Talmage, which are extraordinary; but we have two principal objections to the gospel he dispenses, viz: (1) gush, (2) mush.

We have infinite charity for sinning men, but none for the great passionless machine that destroys human life and property because it has been created to do it.

In less than one year after the Emperor Dom Pedro placed an interdict upon our Southern Methodist school in Piracicaba, he was a wanderer through Europe, crownless and homeless.

It is to be hoped that our legislative body, now in session, will not tinker with the Ritual, which is not a confession of faith, nor mend the General Rules, which the wise framers declared were made to be kept.

The man who wants any office wants little more than the man who wants an office. At the risk of offending the majority, we feel called upon to advise the electors of the church to sacrifice both to the good of a cause infinitely dearer than men.

The State of Louisiana, in spite of her patriotic governor, appealed to the god of chance from the God of providence, and lo! the Almighty "thundered from the heavens." "He wearied them with his thick cloud," and he divided the waters unto them by lot.

Let us increase our missionary army not by retrenchment, such as the diversion of money from other sacred funds, or entrenchment, such as the building of universities for the training of the barbarian intellect, but by giving five dollars where we now give one for the conversion of the world.

The brother who was successful in manipulating the votes of the Annual Conference will make himself felt as an electoral factor in the higher body. Look out for him under a number of aliases. When upon two recent occasions the General Conference elected Bishops from the ranks, it did both magnanimously and magnificently.

If we add the $500,000, with which the Lottery seeks to publicly bribe her citizens, to the $500,000, with which it seeks privately to bribe those who will swear upon their sacred honor to be true to her honor in framing laws for her welfare, we shall have a round million, which is many times less than the aggregate of its enormous tax steal. And where is the profit?

Mrs. King and Miss Riggs have long since redeemed their pledge to organize a Parsonage Extension Society in every church in New Orleans—eleven in number. All honor to them as true disciples of him "who went about doing good." If the brethren and sisters in the country will get themselves in the way or out of the way, they will do as much for the church in the regions beyond.

The names of our three clerical delegates to the General Conference—Carter, Walker and Sawyer—end in "er," and also the names of our two alternates—Parker and Harper—have a similar ending. That is er-coincidence or er-string of coincidences which we defy any sober man to match. We trust that our brethren of the great Sanhedrin will be kind to these er-ring ones.

Which is more sublime—St. Paul en route to bonds and imprisonment, and pathetically saying to the Ephesian elders, "What mean ye to weep and break my heart," or Bishop Coke, in tears before the Wesleyan Conference, and professing to his brethren that they would "break his heart" if they denied his request to go to India, and to contribute his fortune to the conversion of that heathen land?

Proceedings of the General Conference.

there as the peer of any man on the floor. The laity were in the Conference the equals of the clergy, numerically and otherwise. They were ardent in their support of the church, and earnest in promoting its interests. They had never been charged with doing aught else. The lay representation in the General Conference contained lawyers, whose training and whose business made them competent to weigh and sift testimony. The Committee on Appeals did not try preachers: it sifted the testimony already submitted and passed upon the law. In such a committee lawyers were the most efficient members.

Dr. Peterson, who was a member of the Conference in 1866, in which laymen were admitted to representation, said that prior to the creation of the Committee of Appeals (in 1874), trials were before the whole General Conference. Even since 1866 laymen had been members of the Committee on Episcopacy.

The motion was put and Dr. Kelley's resolution admitting laymen to membership on all committees was carried by an overwhelming majority.

Until the vote no one seemed to know how the matter would go. The laity had expected a defeat and were very agreeably surprised. They regard their victory as of prime importance, for though they have never been restricted heretofore in their connection with the General Conference, they feared that a limiting of their rights at this time would be but the beginning of the revival of an opposition to lay representation, and would lead to greater restriction.

FOURTH DAY.*

Bishop Hargrove in the chair.

A resolution was introduced by the Louisiana delegation condemning lotteries, and particularly the one now seeking a franchise in Louisiana. It was unanimously adopted.

Mr. E. H. East, of Tennessee, introduced a resolution condemning traffic in and the use of intoxicating liquors, and holding that total prohibition is the duty of the government. Mr. East said that all laws for the regulation and control of the liquor traffic were of no avail at all, and were but attempts to compromise with evil.

Mr. Paul Whitehead, of Virginia, opposed the resolution. He said:

"We are in great danger of violating the fundamental principles of the church. We have no right under the law and constitution of the church of Jesus Christ to take any position in regard to civil law. While I am a temperance man as firm in my belief in temperance as any man, I do not believe, as a church, we have any right to make any utterance on the subject; we might as well nominate a candidate for the Presidency of the United States as attempt to indorse any plan of civil legislation."

Mr. H. V. Philpott, of Texas, called attention to the fact that the resolution on lotteries, which had been adopted without opposition or objection, was open to the same objections. The matter of the resolution was not wholly legal, but was a moral question. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Temperance.

A South Carolina delegate introduced a resolution calling on the government to stop delivering and carrying mails on Sunday.

A delegate from Mississippi introduced a memorial for deaconesses in connection with the work of the Board of Missions.

A delegate suggested reference of the memorial to the Committee on Itinerancy, and having made the suggestion stuck to it. He was not supported by the Conference, and the memorial went to the Committee on Revisal.

Though there has been and is a strong sentiment in the church against the admission of women to preach, women have, for a long time, been engaged in missionary work. A woman is at the head of an important branch of this work, and it is believed that the authorization of an order of deaconesses will be agreed to. It was thought when the Conference decided yesterday to admit lay delegates to membership on all committees that the fight against the rights of laymen was over.

However, an innocent resolution, which went to the Committee on Revisal, is calculated to reopen the question in another form. The resolution proposes to amend the Discipline by adding the following words:

"The lay representatives shall have the right to participate in all the business of the Conference except that which involves ministerial character."

In the opposition of the ministers to lay representation on all committees they held that laymen should not be admitted to the Committees on Appeals or Episcopacy, which have to do altogether with the clergy.

The chair appointed the following committee on fraternal correspondence: S. B. Jones, of South Carolina; W. B. Murray, of North Mississippi; C. W. Carter, of Louisiana; H. W. Lightfoot, of North Texas, and W. J. Sandford, of Alabama. Adjourned until Monday morning.

*From the Times-Democrat.

The following were the appointments for the Bishops on last Sunday at St. Louis: Bishop J. C. Keener, morning, at St. John's; Bishop A. W. Wilson, morning, at Lafayette, evening, at St. John's; Bishop Galloway, morning, at First Church, evening, at Cook Ave.; Bishop Key, morning, at Centenary, evening, at Carondolet; Bishop Duncan, morning, at St. Paul's, evening, at Centenary; Bishop Hargrove, morning, at Kirkwood, evening, at Benton; Bishop Granbery, morning, at Clayton. Bishop Hendrix had not arrived.

Everyone interested in the missionary movement of this age should read "The Coming Kingdom," by Rev. W. W. Wadsworth; sent by mail, prepaid, for $1. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp St.

Personal and Otherwise.

Dr. F. M. Grace, just returned from a steamboat excursion through the overflowed districts of Southern Louisiana, called on us Wednesday with a genial account of his trip. He leaves this week for East Tennessee.

Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens, editor of Familienfreund, and member of former General Conferences, left on Tuesday, last, for St. Louis, where he will note impressions of the laboring Sanhedrin.

Bros. Chauvers, Adams and Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, made pleasant calls at the ADVOCATE office during the week, en route to the Seashore District Conference, at Pearlington, Miss.

Rev. John Foster, of the Simsport work, is drowned out by the overflow, but finds a warm welcome and congenial work in his native city.

Rev. J. J. Ransom writes to the Nashville Advocate of a communication that he has received from Mrs. Mary A. Vogt, donating $2,500 to the erection of a Southern Methodist Church in the city of Havana, Cuba.

Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., will preach the commencement sermon for Port Gibson Female College, June 15, next.

The Daily Caucasian publishes a long anti-Lottery address to the Senator and Representatives from Caddo, and signed by from three to four hundred of the most influential names of that populous city and parish. This is the sort of work that tells. Let every parish circulate its petition, publish its address and hold its mass meetings.

The Caligraph, of May 8, gives two columns to the anti-Lottery mass meeting held there May 3. An enthusiastic league was organized, and stirring resolutions adopted.

If you want to contribute money to the anti-Lottery campaign, subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Books.

LETTERS FROM THE ORIENT. By Mrs. A. W. Wilson. Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. With an Introduction by Rev. Samuel Rodgers.

The ADVOCATE has received with pleasure this anticipated volume. It is charming in its physical make-up, but much more so in its breathing contents. It is a book with a soul, and that, too, regenerated and aglow with the spirit of the mighty Leader, who is still lifting up his eyes unto the whitened fields. We learned to admire the author's literary style, as well as the evangelistic trend of her thought, during her now famous tour through the East accompanying the Bishop and gleaning, like another Ruth, in his footsteps; but we were hardly prepared for this delightful book. It is scenic, graphic, soul-stirring, and will be worth many thousands to the missionary treasury. That a woman, sharp-eyed and cultivated, should have looked upon the modern "abomination of desolation" at the chief seats of its ignorance and misery, and then have written down her impressions in thrilling sentences, would be epochal in the history of the church; but the present volume has a much greater significance and should circulate everywhere. Next to its piety, that which impresses us most is its literary perfection. The illustrations are numerous, and both illustrate and narrate. It is a marvel for cheapness—the price being one dollar; but we apprehend for quite other reasons than the last mentioned that the book will have a great sale.

SOME ACCOUNT OF MR. MARK BEATLY AND HIS FAMILY. By Rev. Samuel Rodgers, D. D., with an Introduction by Bishop Wilson. Price, fifty cents.

The contents of this little book first appeared in the form of a series of anonymous contributions in the Nashville Advocate, where they met the warmest indorsement of the public and repeated calls from influential persons for publication in book form. The work, as it now appears, is both a literary gem and a household necessity. It furnishes in brief space the crystallized wisdom on all subjects referring to the Christian government of a family, of a wise and good man during the period of his life-time. It is specially adapted to young families, but indispensable for all. The Publishing House has done excellent work in its mechanical outfit, and it will make a beautiful gift book.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. H. O. White reports from Arcadia, La.: "I closed a meeting here last Sunday night (May 4) of eighteen days' duration. Result: 30 accessions by application, 3 by letter, and about 50 conversions, and, of course, the church is greatly revived. Our house was too small to hold the immense crowds of earnest men, women and children that came, especially at night. I had Bros. R. A. Davis and C. F. Staples with me part of the time. 'The Lord has been good to us.'"

—Rev. R. M. Blocker, Rayne, La., writes: "Large rice crop planted and being planted in this parish. Much rain of late. Prof. R. H. Bagby has a booming school at this place. Our church has purchased a new organ (from Mr. Werlein) which helps our music greatly. Bro. W. C. Chevis has a fine Sunday-school, and every Sunday-school on the work is doing well. Bro. Manly and his wife are with us now, and he is giving our folks good gospel at different points on the circuit."

—Rev. J. H. Callaway writes from Eden, La.: "We are moving on nicely. Have had some successful meetings. The Lord has been good to me. Bro. R. M. Walker has been doing some powerful preaching for us. He is one of the best preachers, for a young man, I ever heard. God bless our dear Bro. Walker! We do love him. He is here now because his (Black River) circuit is overflowed. Well, I believe most of the people or quite all of them are against the Lottery. I have found but two or three Lottery men, though there may be more. God bless the ADVOCATE!"

The Anti-Lottery League of Louisiana.

We publish, with cordial indorsement, the following extracts from the address of the Anti-Lottery League:

The Anti-Lottery League of Louisiana is an organization of citizens of Louisiana, the central body of which holds sessions in the city of New Orleans, with auxillary Leagues throughout the State.

The undersigned are a special committee of the central body of the League, and they are directed to correspond on the subject of federal legislation against the Louisiana Lottery Company.

As to the pernicious effects of lotteries and the debasement of public and private morals resulting from them, we deem it all-sufficient to quote the following language of the Supreme Court of the United States: "Experience has shown that the common forms of gambling are comparatively innocuous when placed in contrast with the wide-spread pestilence of lotteries. The former are confined to a few persons and places, but the latter infest the whole community; it enters every dwelling; it reaches every class; it preys upon the hard earnings of the poor; and it plunders the ignorant and simple." (Justice Grier, in 8 How., 163.) And also: "They" (lotteries) "are a species of gambling, and wrong in their influences. They disturb the checks and balances of a well-ordered community. Society built on such a foundation would almost of necessity bring forth a population of speculators and gamblers, living on the expectation of what by the casting of lots, or by lot, 'chance or otherwise,' might be 'awarded' to them from the accumulations of others." (Chief Justice Waite in 101 U. S. Repts., 821.)

The Louisiana Lottery Company was chartered by the Legislature of this State in 1868 for 25 years, from January 1, 1869, its charter expiring, therefore, December 31, 1893.

It is not a State institution, except as it may be improperly so called from the fact that it received its charter from the State. It is a private corporation carried on for the benefit of its stockholders, who are believed to be virtually less than twenty in number. About five of them control a very large majority of the stock. All the corporate proceedings of the Lottery Company, the roll of its stockholders, the numbers of shares held by each of them, the dividends paid, the expenses incurred and the objects of those expenses—in short, all its internal workings are carefully concealed from the public, and information concerning the same is denied to anyone who is not a stockholder. The 10,000 shares of the stock of the Lottery Company—none of which is on the market—are quoted as worth over twelve millions of dollars. The face value of the stock is $100 per share, and it is quoted as worth over $1,200 per share.

We have reason to believe that certain preferred stockholders, who are very few in number, take one-half of the net profits and then share the other half with the ordinary stockholders. We believe that for a number of years past the annual dividends, in which the ordinary stockholders share, have largely exceeded 100 per cent. on the face value of the stock, reaching in the year 1889, 170 per cent. We also believe that the semi-annual dividend paid in January, 1890, amounted to 115 per cent. on the face value. These dividends represent one-half of the declared profits. For instance, the 170 per cent. dividend for 1889 was distributed to the stockholders after the preferred stockholders had received a similar dividend of 170 per cent., making, therefore, a total distribution to the stockholders of declared profits of $3,400,000 for the single year 1889—after payment of all expenses and the setting aside of an enormous reserve fund which, doubtless, amounts to millions of dollars.

The Lottery Company has never paid a cent of taxes. Taxes, on the quoted value of its stock alone, would amount to about $360,000 each year. The only revenue which the State derives from it is an annual payment of $40,000.

It is manifest from the above statements that a perilous crisis is now upon us. The vital question whether this State is to be placed under the sway of the Lottery Company for the next quarter of a century, and probably for ever, must be decided in the next two years.

We are convinced that it behooves every citizen of Louisiana who cherishes civil liberty and who wishes to uphold public morality, to bend his every energy to the defeat of the Lottery Company.

We are fully conscious and deeply concerned that the Louisiana Lottery Company causes most serious injury not only to our own State, but also to the people of the other States of the Union, and we seek no evasion of our grave responsibility to the nation.

The Lottery Company declares that only 3 per cent. of its enormous revenue comes from the people of Louisiana. If this, its own statement, be true, then the people of the other States of the Union are made tributary to the Lottery Company in a sum amounting to millions of dollars each year.

Therefore, the Louisiana Lottery Company, besides being the bane of our own State, has long since attained the full proportions of a national evil. We understand that that fact does not relieve the people of Louisiana from the duty of using every means in their power to destroy it. But we believe that our responsibility must be shared by the national government in the power of which it lies to deal the Lottery Company its death blow by the enactment of a single law.

If the Lottery Company's statement that only a small percentage of its receipts comes from Louisiana be true, then a federal law depriving it of the means of continuing to collect tribute from the other States of the Union would so minimize its revenue that a new charter from this State would be worthless.

The main object of this communication is to appeal to you with all the earnestness of men who realize that a great peril is impending over their State, to assist us by every means in your power and especially to use your best efforts to arouse national sentiment on this subject and to press upon Congress the fact that the federal government must bear the greater share of responsibility for the evils resulting from the Louisiana Lottery Company.

We appeal to you to lend your aid and influence to secure the enactment by Congress, at its present session, of a law which will effectually close the mails against the Louisiana Lottery Company. We are informed that several bills to that effect are now pending before Congress. We urge your assistance in securing and expediting their passage. We beg leave to press upon you the great importance of immediate action.

The people of Louisiana are aroused on this momentous subject. Anti-Lottery Leagues are springing up all over this State. No effort will be spared to prevent the perpetuation of the Lottery Company. But we have a right to the powerful assistance of the national government which can, if it will, annihilate the Louisiana Lottery Company at one blow.

Advertising is evidently becoming an art, and its development may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which if used judiciously has returned a large interest to the investor. One feature of the advertisements of to-day forms an agreeable contrast to the advertisements of a generation ago. It is the evident sincerity in which they are written and the consequently greater confidence the searcher after information can repose in them. That the advertising page is becoming one of the most interesting pages of the daily newspaper is one of the striking proofs of the growth of intelligence and refinement among the people.—Philadelphia Press.

"Advertising is to a genuine article what manure is to land—it largely increases the product. Thousands of persons may be reading your advertisement while you are eating or sleeping or attending to your business; hence, public attention is attracted, now customers come to you, and if you render them a satisfactory equivalent for their money they continue to patronize you and recommend you to their friends."—P. T. Barnum.

BIRDS-EYE VIEW OF THE SEA SHORE CAMP GROUNDS, NEAR BILOXI MISS

CAMP MEETING.

The Nineteenth Annual Camp Meeting on the SEASHORE CAMP GROUND will open JULY 11TH, next, and continue for ten days.

Eminent preachers will assist in conducting the religious services, as heretofore.

Ample accommodations will be provided for all visitors.

Two commodious bath-houses render the finest salt-water bathing on the coast accessible to all.

The Grounds are 78 miles from New Orleans, immediately fronting the beach, and on the line of the L. and N. railroad. All trains stop at the station during the meeting, landing visitors within 100 yards of the enclosure.

Reduced fares will be in force over all connecting roads for the meeting.

The gate fee for entrance into the Grounds is 50 cents for the season, or 25 cents for the day. The revenue thus obtained is used for improving the Grounds.

Preachers will be furnished sleeping accommodation free of charge, and tickets for meals at the restaurant at half rates, as heretofore.

Our Young People.

"JUST LIKE A COMET."

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

A little maid, so wondrous wise
With speech, and with observing eyes,
Was wakened at the early morn,
And to an eastern window borne,
That she might see the comet bright,
And never more forget the sight.

The shining star was pointed out,
Its head with splendor rayed about,
And then, outspreading like a dress,
Its train of dazzling loveliness,
And all the points that made it far
More beautiful than any star.

This little maiden gazed and gazed;
At such a wonder much amazed;
And never had she seen before
The morning sky so spangled o'er,
Or fancied that the silver moon
Staid out so late, or rose so soon.

The stars kept winking overhead,
As if they longed to be in bed,
And two bright orbs in mama's lap
Were closed to finish out their nap,
While still the comet swept the skies,
The marvel of admiring eyes.

Next day within the nursery
The little maiden chanced to be,
When baby was on dress parade,
Its pretty finery well displayed,
As high in nurse's arms 'twas held
With all its frowns and fears dispelled,

Its flaxen head, with aureole bright,
Its lengthy train of dazzling white,
Were noted by the maid so wise,
Who stood, with widely opened eyes,
And said, "It looks"—her speech was slow—
"Just like a comet!" And 'twas so.

How Shall We Save Them?

Dear Children: I told you in a former letter of a little boy in the Kentucky mountains who had never heard of God, and who was such a heathen he knew no better than to kill his own dear little baby-sister. Now I read in the paper of a little boy in Iowa, about the same age—twelve years old—who not only killed his little sister while she was sleeping sweetly, but—this seems too terrible to tell—he killed his mother. O children, what can we do to save the children of our own country from such wickedness? The only way to save them is to preach the gospel to them; for the Bible says the name of Jesus is the only name given under heaven whereby men must be saved. But you can not preach the gospel to sinners; you are too small. What can you do, then, to save the children in your own country from such wickedness and from eternal death? You must do something; for Jesus, who has promised you a home in heaven, says you must try to save others. What can you do, then, children? What are you doing? Helping to build homes for the preachers—yes, and that is doing a great deal; for sometimes the preacher is sent to a place where there is no house for him to live in. He and his family can not stay in the street, you know. He will have to go away and leave the people there without anyone to tell the story of Jesus. But if you build him a house to live in, he can stay and try to save the children from sin. So, when you help to build homes for the preachers you make it possible for them to stay every place you build one. You see you are helping in a very important way to save the children in this country from becoming as wicked as some we read about.

Continue doing all you can, and God will bless you for it.

Your friend,

LUCINDA B. HELM.

Dr. Alexander Duff.

Alexander Duff was born April 25, 1806, in Auchuatoyle, Scotland. His parents were poor but godly, and he was early taught the Word of God and early learned to love and serve the Savior. He had three books that he loved to read and study while a boy. They were the Bible, "Paradise Lost" and the poetical works of Dugald Buchanan.

At the age of fifteen years he was presented with $100 by his father toward his education at the university, and from that time he was dependent upon his own exertions for means to finish his education and to care for himself.

When but twenty-three years of age he secured an appointment as a missionary to India, and on August 12, 1829, he was ordained. Soon afterward he was married to a Miss Drysdale, and on October 14, 1829, he and his wife sailed from England, the first missionaries sent to India by the Church of Scotland.

On the way they were shipwrecked twice, and it was eight months before they reached Calcutta.

On the 12th of July, 1830, he commenced a school in Calcutta, which, from a beginning of five scholars, became finally a missionary college attended by 800 natives of different castes. For thirty-four years he was a leader in missionary matters in India, and then returned to Scotland, where he was made the Convener of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Free Church of Scotland and a professor in the Edinburgh University. He died February 12, 1878. His name will always be cherished as one of the noble band of missionary heroes whose words and example greatly blessed the heathen world and inspired the church at home. —Gospel in All Lands.

MR. EDITOR: I am a boy thirteen years old, and am going to school at Centenary College. I like the school very much. We have a good Sunday-school here, too. I belong to Mrs. Schwing's class. I always enjoy reading the little cousins' letters. Whenever I take up the dear old CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the first thing I look for is the little cousins' letters. Mr. Editor, we ought to be very thankful to you for letting us have a column or two in your paper. I will close by answering one of the little cousin's questions: The shortest verse in the Bible is found in St. John xi, 35. Hoping this will not reach the waste-basket, I will close, wishing you much success.

Your true friend,

ABRAHAM FOSTER.

JACKSON, La.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written a letter to our dear paper in some time, I thought I would write and ask the little friends a question: Who was Moses' mother, and whose daughter was she? I have been attending school this session. Miss Mattie Harbison is my teacher; and, oh! she is so good and sweet. Our school closes in a week, and then she is going to her home in Kentucky; but we are going to get her to come back next Fall. I have one brother and one sister, and we have fine times fishing and riding our pony. All of us get on and go over to grandmother's, on Saturday. I am nine years old. Hoping to see this in print, I am,

Your little friend.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from the little folks here, I thought I would write. I am eleven years of age. I am going to school. My teacher's name is Miss Allie Barnes. I like her very much; she is so kind and faithful. We have Sunday-school every Sunday. I hope this will be printed, as I wish mama to see it. She does not know I am writing.

BLANCHE PHILLIPS.

HELEN, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a farmer's daughter. I am nine years old. I have two brothers and three sisters. Now, I want to ask the little cousins, Where in the New Testament is "brass" found? I will tell Myra Kellogg that "Jesus wept" is the shortest verse in the Bible. For pets I have a dog. I will close.

That tired feeling, so subtle and yet so overpowering, is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones and strengthens the system and gives a good appetite. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla. "100 Doses One Dollar" is true only of this peculiar medicine.

It is not hasty reading, but seriously meditating, upon holy and heavenly truths, that makes them prove sweet and profitable to the soul. It is not the bee's touching on the flowers that gathers honey, but her abiding for a time upon them and drawing out the sweet. Economical Purchasing.

There are two golden rules in buying. The first is familiar: "Do not buy a thing because it is cheap." This is applicable in more ways than one, but I would place beside it another: "Do not buy a thing because it is high-priced." The sum of both rules is: Be guided by quality and not by price. Cheap goods are, as a general rule, of poor quality. Let the shopper remember always she can not get "something for nothing." To be sure, there are quite often bargains in goods, and it is a part of art in shopping to look out for these, but one must be wary and use careful judgment here. If one be not sure of herself, she would better avoid them altogether.

It is poor policy to buy things that will look shabby. Better have one dress of good quality than two of poor quality. It is bad economy also, and worse taste, to buy cheap imitation of costly goods. Better buy a good wool dress than a cheap silk. Better buy no embroidery at all than that which is coarse and on poor material. It will add no beauty to the garment on which it is placed, and it certainly will not be durable.

Again, high-priced goods are not always the most serviceable. Dress goods at $1 50 per yard are often no more durable, and sometimes less so, than those at $1. The extra price is often charged for fineness in finish or novelty in style. This is especially true, also, with reference to shoes, hose, handkerchiefs, etc. If one can afford to pay the extra price in finish or style, no doubt she will take pleasure in so doing, but we are now considering the subject of economical buying for a family. If one is in the habit of buying expensive goods, only such one will be shown her by the clerks, who know her taste; but no false pride should prevent her from asking to see the cheaper articles.

The habit of rapid calculation is valuable in shopping. For example, we are shown a piece of goods at $1, and another at $1 25 per yard, the difference in quality being slightly in favor of the latter. If no calculation in the matter is used, probably the first piece would be taken, the difference in quality not covering the difference in price; but when we stop to consider that the first is only 36 inches wide, and that will require 12 yards, the second piece is 44 inches wide, and only nine yards will be required. Thus it is really cheaper to buy the latter piece.

A Lady's Reasons for Not Dancing.

1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2. Dancing will lead me into very close contact with pernicious company; and evil communication corrupts good manners.

3. Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, of which I should be heartily ashamed, and which I believe to be wrong.

4. My parents and friends would be anxious about me if I were out late, keeping company with they knew not whom.

5. Ministers and good people generally disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not safe to set myself up against them. If a thing be even looked upon as doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side.

6. Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure and lovely and of good report.

7. Dancing is generally accompanied with drinking, and I see drinking produces most of the evils of the present time.

8. I am told that drinking is a very great temptation and snare to young men, and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

9. Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer, and I mean to do nothing to estrange me from my God and Savior.—Central Baptist.

For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

The Speed of Fishes.

The speed of fishes is almost an unknown quantity, being, as Prof. G. Brown Goode says, very difficult to measure. "If you could get a fish," said Prof. Goode to a Post reporter, "and put him in a trough of water 1,000 feet long, and start him from one end and make him swim to the other without stopping, the information could be easily obtained; but fish are unintelligent and they won't do this. Estimates of the speed of fish consequently are only approximated, and more or less founded on guessing. You can tell, however, at a glance whether a fish is built for speed or not. A fast fish looks trim and pointed, like a yacht. Its head is conical shaped, and its fins fit down close to its body, like a knife blade into its handle. Fish with large heads bigger than their bodies, and with short, stubby fins, are built for slow motion."

"What are the fastest fishes?"

"The predatory fish, those which live on prey, are the fastest swimmers. The food fishes are generally among the slowest, and are consequently easily captured. Their loss is recompensed, however, by the natural law which makes them very prolific in reproduction. Dolphins have been known to swim around an ocean steamer, and it is quite safe to say their speed is twenty miles an hour, but it may be twice as much. The bonito is a fast swimming fish. Just what its speed is I do not know. The head of the goose-fish is very large—twenty times as big as its body. It moves about very little, and swims at the bottom of the ocean. The Spanish mackerel is one of the fastest of the food fishes. Its body is cone-shaped and as smooth as burnished metal. Its speed is as matchless as the dolphin, and in motion it cuts the water like a yacht.—Washington Post.

Railway Notes.

There are 150,600 miles of railway in the United States—about one-half of the mileage of the world; they cost $9,000,000,000; employ more than 1,000,000 persons; fastest running time of any train, 92 miles in 93 minutes—one mile being made in 46 seconds—on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad; an 18-wheel, high-class passenger locomotive costs about $8,500; a "palace" sleeping car costs $15,000, or, if vestibuled, $17,000; the longest mileage operated by a single system—the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe—about 8,000 miles; the longest span of a railway bridge is the cantilever in the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) bridge, 548 feet; the highest railroad bridge in the United States, 305 feet; Peter Cooper built the first locomotive in the United States; the Manhattan elevated railroad in New York carries the largest number of passengers—525,000 a day, or 191,625,000 yearly; average daily earning of an American locomotive, about $100; the longest American railway tunnel is the Hoosac, on the Fitchburg (Mass.) Railway—4¾ miles; average cost of constructing a mile of railway at present, about $30,000; the highest railroad in the United States is over the Marshall Pass, on the Denver and Rio Grande Road, 10,852 feet; one person in 10,000,000 is killed while traveling on railways; the Canadian Pacific Railway, running from Quebec to the Pacific Ocean, extends farthest east and west, nearly 5,000 miles; with average wear a steel rail will last 18 years; Illinois Central Road carries the largest number of commutors—4,828,128 in 1887; fastest time between Jersey City, N. J., and San Francisco, special theatrical train in June, 1886—3 days, 7 hours, 39 minutes and 16 seconds.—Scribner's Magazine.

Last summer, the proprietor of a large building being erected in Omaha, had a large tank filled each morning with iced oatmeal water for the use of workmen during the day. The men testified that while they worked there they had no desire for beer or whisky, the oatmeal water satisfying them, and they could walk right by saloons without feeling tempted to enter them. Here is a chance for practical temperance work by builders; the workmen will not be the only ones benefited by this oatmeal water tank; keeping men out of saloons will help contractors to fill their contracts on time.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE

Much unbelief is done in the treatment of constipation. The common opinion is that all requirements are fulfilled if the medicine forces unloading of the bowels. A great error. Medicine simply purgative, corrects no morbid condition, consequently their use is followed by greater costiveness. A remedy, to be effectual and permanent, must be composed of tonic, alterative, corrective and cathartic properties. These are admirably combined in Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills. They will, in a short time, cure all the sufferings that result from inactive bowels. They give tone to the intestines, stimulate the secretions, and correct imperfect functional action of the stomach and liver.

DUBOSE—THOMAS W. DUBOSE, son of Rev. H. and Amanda DuBose, was born on January 14, 1851, and departed this life on October 22, 1889, aged thirty-eight years ten months and two days.

His father stated to me that Thomas was a good boy, and that he never gave him any trouble in his raising, and that he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the town of Waynesboro, Miss., when young, and lived so consistent that he had a good influence among those with whom he associated. The writer became acquainted with Bro. T. W. DuBose in the year 1875, and loved him because he was so consistent and good.

He died with that dreadful disease—consumption. He was confined to his bed for several months. The writer visited him about two weeks before he died, and, while with him, he requested me to preach for him, and I complied with his request, and took for my text, "Thou, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus." (II. Timothy ii, 1). He was greatly strengthened by grace after preaching. I talked with him in regard to departing this life, and he said to me that he was ready to die. He said: "I feel that I have a clear record. I feel a clear conscience between me and my heavenly Father." When I parted with him he said to me, "Bro. Holland, I will meet you in heaven." He leaves behind a devoted father and mother, five brothers and six sisters. He has one brother preaching in California, Rev. H. M. DuBose. Look up, father, mother, brothers and sisters; Thomas is not dead; he is at the beautiful gate, waiting and watching for you. J. H. HOLLAND.

SIMPSON—Sister ANN SIMPSON was born in Georgia, February 22, 1818, and died March 8, 1890, aged seventy-two years. In childhood, with her parents, she immigrated to Mississippi, where she passed her early years. In 1837 she married Mr. J. J. Simpson. In 1842, with her husband and father's family, she immigrated to Caddo parish, La. They were among those first substantial, religious families that settled in Caddo, by whom the religious tone and moral character were inducted into the society of that region of country, which remains till this day. Sister Simpson was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when twelve years old, and lived and died a Methodist. Sister Simpson had the courage freely to express her religious feelings and opinions. A brother still living says the first time he saw her she was shouting and praising God, which was fifty-eight years ago.

For sixty years she witnessed for Jesus. She was emphatically the preacher's friend; ever able and ready to help him. Many a time on leaving her home, the good-by was accompanied with a sum of money.

Her last illness was protracted and painful. She said to her son during her sickness she was going to die and go to heaven; her peace was made with God, and her way was bright. She lived and acted her part well on the theater of time; then, like the patriarchs of old, fell on sleep. Her children and the church are poorer by reason of her daily prayers not being offered for them. J. P.

FARMER—Mrs. MARY JANE FARMER, daughter of Randolph and Elizabeth Hester, was born in Alabama in 1834, and departed this life near Downsville, La., March 22, 1890. On account of parental training, Sister Farmer early learned to love her Savior, and while quite young joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived and labored through life. Her parents moved to Louisiana in 1848 and settled in Union parish, near Downsville. In 1850 she was married to Mr. B. F. Farmer, with whom she lived happily until, in answer to the call of his country in 1861, he bade wife and little ones adieu to engage in war; during which engagement in 1862, while away from loved ones, he died, leaving his companion with five little children to struggle against the ravages of war and the hardships of life, which she did most successfully. She taught her children to serve God and to love and respect her, which training they most affectionately demonstrated even to the last.

Her suffering, which was caused by pneumonia, was very severe for two weeks, but the writer always found her patient and submissive. Upon my last visit, after invoking God's mercies and blessings upon the sufferer, and realizing that the thread of life was nearing its last tension, I inquired of her with reference to the future, when she said, "I am ready any time."

May the Lord comfort the bereaved friends and relatives, and help them to ever be ready for the summons!

W. J. PORTER.
